Texas Pep Rally Set Tonight; New Card Stunts Are Planned

Station WDUK Will Present Rally on Air

The first pre-game pep rally of the season will rock the campus tonight to the tune of "Beat Texas!"

Head Cheerleader Norm Sper and his well-trained squad will lead grid-happy Tar Heels in all the old songs and yells and will rehearse a number of new ones.

Radio station WDUK in Durham will broadcast the rally from Memorial hall for 15 minutes beginning at 8 o'clock.

A featured performer at the pep rally and on the air tonight will be Norman Cordon, Metropolitan opera singer and member of the University staff this year. The Sigma Chi sextet and the University band will also be present to provide entertainment.

The Memorial hall congregation will move down Cameron avenue and invade Emerson field at 8:30 where the strains of "Hark the Sound" will intrude upon the repose of the slumbering Tar Heel team.

The Coed ball will follow the pep rally at Woollen gymnasium.

Women Visiting In Fraternities Must Be Approved

Women visitors may be entertained this weekend during specified hours in certain fraternity houses, provided that the following conditions are met:

1. Chaperones must be present.
2. The chaperones must be approved by the dean of women. Fraternity presidents are asked to see the dean today after 10 o'clock.
3. The hours in which women may visit fraternity houses will be announced in Saturday's newspaper.
4. The fraternities which may entertain women will be announced in Saturday's newspaper.
5. There shall be no drinking in the presence of women in fraternity houses. Social conditions shall be the same as announced in last year's House Privileges board agreement.

Women of the University, if they care to be guests of fraternities at any time during the weekend, are expected to be familiar with last year's House Privileges board visiting agreement. They are expected to assume all responsibilities therein contained.

This is a temporary arrangement, and is applicable to this weekend only. The House Privileges board visiting agreement is now in process of being drafted. The action announced was instituted by the Interfraternity council and approved by the Women's Interdormitory council and by the office of the dean of students.

Double Barrelled

Residents of "C" dormitory held their ears and waited for the explosion this week.

In room 208, a former chairman of the Student party and a former chairman of the University party found themselves roomates.

Charlie Long, the former, and Miles Smith, the latter, both declared yesterday they were framed by the housing office.

But the explosion was due to be double-barrelled. What the innocent bystanders of "C" did not know was that Long is a Republican and Smith is a Democrat.

DEAN FRED WEAVER

BILL FRIDAY

Weaver Is New Dean Replacing E. L. Mackie

Students returning to school this year will be greeted by new Dean of Students Fred H. Weaver who replaced Dean E. L. Mackie on Sept. 1.

Dean Weaver was a student leader during his academic career at the University. His predecessor, Dean E. L. Mackie, will be the new Dean of Student Awards and Distinctions.

Before Weaver took his new job he was Dean of Men. He has also served as Director of Graham Memorial.

Weaver's assistant will be Bill Friday, a former prominent member of the University Law school. Friday served in the Navy as an ordance officer and attended Wake Forest and N. C. State college.

While he was in law school here, he was elected president of the University Law association. Last June he was tapped as a member of the Order of the Golden Fleece.

Weaver said he felt Friday will be "close to the student and really mean something to the student body in that there will be a closer tie between the administration and the students."

Friday's chief concern will be with student organizations and the student government.

Merchants Greet Freshmen Aides

The Chapel Hill-Carrboro Merchants' association last night entertained members of the campus Orientation committee and orientation freshman counselors in the new Danziger rathskeller.

Association President Vic Huggins yesterday pointed out other aids to orientation workers and freshmen during the past week.

Huggins said some 1,400 freshmen had received envelopes from the association containing shopping information and coupons to and in purchases made from certain Chapel Hill and Carrboro merchants.

Last Friday night, the association provided refreshments following the first meeting of orien-

2,185 Students To Participate In Card Stunts

By Wuff Newell

A technicolor team of some 2,185 students will take part in the latest Tar Heel halftime spectacle tomorrow afternoon at Kenan stadium when Cheerleader Norm Sper introduces colorcard displays for the first time in a season game.

Brought from the west coast by Sper, the stunt was used here at the Blue-White game last spring. Color cards were originated 25 years ago at UCLA, although at first the pictures were made with only one movement, about eight years ago the Californians began doing animated one.

According to Sper, the stunts were successful last spring and will continue to be bigger and better as the season gets farther along. The head cheerleader gave special credit to artist Bill Harrison, who is doing the drawing for the pictures.

Students in the cheering section between the 20 and the 40-yard lines will compose the card section. They will make a total of 13 pictures in eight colors. On the program for tomorrow are monograms of both schools, three-dimensional pictures, and one animated one.

So that everyone may see how the stunts look, Thursday and Friday following each home game the Carolina theater will show movies of the pictures. A Daily Tar Heel photographer will take pictures of each stunt. These will be available for everyone to see.

Sper has asked that everyone wear white clothes to the game. Although no one will know ahead of time if he is in the card section, everyone should come prepared. Students in the section will be given four cards and an individual direction card. If each person will follow the directions on his own card and, the directions of the leader, Sper says the pictures will be successful.

In case of heavy rain the stunts will not be used. If there is only a light drizzle, however, the pictures will be on the program as scheduled.

Roads Resurfaced In Chapel Hill Over the Summer

Town Manager Gilbert Ray yesterday announced the completion of an estimated $23,000 paving project which was carried on in Chapel Hill during the summer.

Five streets were paved and 14 streets were re-surfaced or partly re-surfaced by the town. The State Highway department re-surfaced all or parts of 12 Chapel Hill streets.

Ray also announced that the sewage extension project is now getting underway. Last year's bond election provided for a new plant as a supplement to the old one.

The town manager said that excavation work has already begun on the new plan. Lines have been cleaned and several new pipes have been laid in the northwest section of town.

A new land-fill disposal system is now being used in place of the old incinerator system. Ray said, "Burying of garbage instead of burning it was begun Wednesday."

"This is the most modern disposal method. Burlington, Raleigh, Wilson, Salisbury are just a few cities that have adopted the new method," Ray explained.

UNC Band Aspirants Auditioning Now

University Band Director Earl Slocum said yesterday that tryouts are now being held for anyone interested in joining the band.

Prospective members are urged to report to Hill hall, room 105, for auditions. There are still quite a few openings available, Slocum said.

Dedmond Says Two Ticket Booths Are Credit to Student Government

"A victory for student government" is the way President Jess Dedmond yesterday described the opening of two new student ticket booths for home football games.

The new booths were set up at gate five, the regular student gate, and increase the total number of ticket boxes to five.

Athletic Business Manager Vernon Crook said yesterday that the new booths will speed up ticket lines "from 40 to 50 per cent." And Dedmond said the project was "evidence of what student government can do when it sets out to do it."

The new booths were arranged for by Dedmond and Ed Tenney, representing the Coalition cabinet.

The two booths nearest gate four, on the downhill side, will be used solely for students who wish to sit in the stunt card section, Dedmond explained. He asked that students get in the correct lines to avoid confusion if they wish to participate in the stunts.

Graham Back

President Frank Porter Graham of the Greater University returned yesterday from a five-day trip to Washington, D. C., and Atlantic City, N. J., where he addressed the American Medical society convention.

A member of the advisory committee of the American Red Cross, he attended a meeting of that organization while in Washington.

In Atlantic City, Dr. Graham spoke on "Cooperation of Educational Institutions and Hospitals with Public Health Activities."

Army Will Require 15,000 More Men By This December

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23—(UP)—The Army yesterday called on Selective Service for 15,000 additional draftees in December, making a total of 25,000 young men to be inducted by the end of this year under the new peacetime draft law.

The December draftees will be called up during the first 20 days of the month to avoid inductions during the Christmas holidays. They will be drawn almost entirely from the pool of 24 and 23-year-olds who have registered for military service, roughly half from each age group.

The Army previously had asked Selective Service for 10,000 inductees to be put into uniform in November. Of these, about 7,000 will be 25-year-olds—the top age bracket in the draft—and 3,000 in the 24-year group.

Army spokesmen said selective service boards have been notified that the Army will be ready to begin physical examinations of the potential draftees Oct. 4.

Neither the Navy nor the Air Force has asked Selective Service for any men thus far. They expect to fill their manpower needs by enlistments, at least until next summer.

The Army plans to raise its monthly draft quotas to about 25,000 men in January and continue at or above that level until it reaches the maximum strength sanctioned by Congress.

The Army now has approximately 540,000 officers and men.

Students who have failed to register for selective service may do so in room 208 South building.

This service is also made available to students who will reach their 18th birthday by Sept. 30, and an additional week will be allowed after the 30th. This is a special service offered to University students and will enable them to register without leaving Chapel Hill.

POSTAL REQUEST

Chapel Hill post office officials requested yesterday that all students send home their correct address and have it placed on all incoming mail. Also, students were asked to notify the post office of any change in address.

On the Campus Code

In beginning this fall quarter we would like to remind the old students and warn the new ones of several practices which have existed on the campus in the past. These practices are definitely contrary to the Campus Code and the Carolina way of student self government.

Students guilty of drunken and disorderly conduct at games violate the Campus Code. The Athletic department will follow the policy that any student in possession of intoxicating beverages will not be admitted to the game.

Scalping by students and trafficking in parley sheets are also violations of the Campus Code. All offenders apprehended will be subject to action by the Honor councils.

Since student athletic fees are not considered as an admission fee, but instead as a guarantee for the budget of the athletic program, it is not considered within our right to transfer them to any other person. The athletic fee amounts to $10 per year or $3.33 per quarter which is only 65 cents per game. The name of any student whose pass book is taken at the gate will be forwarded to the Honor council for action.

We expect your aid in eliminating these practices and we know that you will cooperate fully with us.

JESS DEDMOND, President of the Student Body

Final Figures May Increase Registration Total To 7,500

Convertibles, Coeds Welcome Airborne Longhorn Footballers

By Tom Kerr

Nine colorful convertibles left the campus early yesterday afternoon to give the Texas team a Carolina welcome when they landed at the Raleigh-Durham airport.

Crowded with representative coed beauties waving pompoms, the cars lined up as the husky Texans lumbered off the plane. A cheer went up for the visitors followed by four verses of "Deep in the Heart of Texas."

Bobby Lee and Bill Allen, two of the Texas great, said the trip was perfect with "not a bump" and the weather was "ok." But George Petrovich did them one better. When asked if this was fine football weather, he answered with a smile, "Better than Texas." The Braniff stewardess enthusiastically chimed in that the boys were "wonderful and perfect gentlemen."

The team piled into the buses and followed the noisy caravan back to the Washington-Duke hotel, headquarters for their week-end visit. Head Cheerleader Norm Sper again led the Carolina crew in a closing cheer as the visitors entered the hotel lobby.

After a little trouble with redlight-enforcing Durham police the parade of honking hornes and smiling coeds wound through the Duke campus and headed home, after giving the Texas Longhornes a real serving of Southern hospitality and Carolina spirit.

Late Signers May Register Until Tuesday

By Margaret Gaston

Approximately 7,000 students, including those pre-registered, completed their registration by the end of the second day at Woollen gymnasium, Roy Armstrong, director of admissions, said yesterday.

He added that facilities for registering 8,000 students have been provided, but he estimates the total enrollment at 7,500.

Regular registration began last Monday and ended yesterday, but late registration runs through Tuesday at 5 o'clock. Students registering late will pay a $5 fee.

Registration this year is basically the same as 1947. Those students not pre-registered were given appointment cards, alleviating much lost time standing in line.

Ed Lanier, who heads the registration program, reported that cooperation from students this year was very good. He said this year's registration reminded him of pre-war years in that most new students came directly out of high schools, and that fewer veterans were registering.

Two years ago plans were drawn up for the present system of registration. Prior to this students did not register by scheduled appointments, but stood in line and waited their turn. Mass confusion and loss of time resulted.

Approximately 4,000 students were pre-registered for the fall quarter. During Monday's registration an estimated 1,400 new students were registered, and Tuesday's number approached 900, according to Armstrong.

Latest Dog Dictates Received by Village

By Lincoln Kan

Dog-owning residents of Victory Village still kept their canines as classes opened today, but the latest regulations set up by the Village council and approved by Dean Fred Weaver's office prohibited any new animals from moving into the veterans' family housing area.

The regulations were presented to Dean Weaver for approval to be put in use for a one-year trial period. The recommendations were signed by Village Mayor William M. Goulding for the council.

The new regulations read:

1. Residents of Victory Village who do not own pets are forbidden to acquire them.
2. Residents who now own pets may keep them if they:
   a. Register them with the Village rental office by Aug. 23.
   b. Manage them in conformity with health regulations and Village council rulings.
   c. Female animals must be kept inside or boarded out during breeding periods.
   d. Female dogs can only give birth to young on the premises of their owners. The young must be disposed of within 12 weeks.
   e. All pets must be confined inside their owners' homes between 9 p.m. and 6 a.m.
3. Incoming tenants may not bring in new pets.
4. Residents now owning pets may not acquire any more.

The recommendations signed by Goulding also requested that action be taken concerning stray dogs in Chapel Hill. The suggestion was referred to other agencies and officials in town.

In other cases such as the trailer courts, and Abernathy hall, the decision was left up to the residents involved. All other areas such as dormitories have always been prohibited from keeping dogs.

This summer, the canine bone of contention resulted in the establishment of the Carolina Dog foundation.

Judge Whitfield Surprises All In Heavy Docket

Judge Henry Whitfield and Chapel Hill recorder's court officials breathed a sigh of relief yesterday over finishing up a 52-case court session which started Tuesday.

It was the first session here in six weeks, and court officials moaned, "We'll never catch up," and complained, "We'll be holding court the rest of our lives."

But the powers of justice were underestimated. A total of 52 cases involving more than 25 different charges were disposed of in less than 12 hours of court sessions.

Clerk of Court M. W. Durham said the docket included September cases and back cases which had not been disposed of. Durham said that out of 52 cases being tried only eight were acquitted by the state.

Judge Whitfield levied 39 fines, suspended three driver's liscenses, sent four men to the county jail for terms varying from three to twelve months and jailed one man for contempt of court.

Plaintiffs and defendants, whites and negroes packed the steaming courtroom during the hot two-day session. Defendents represented 10 different North Carolina towns exclusive of Chapel Hill. These towns were Clinton, Durham, Nashville, Burlington, Greensboro, Charlotte, Sanford, Pittsboro, and Carrboro.

Windshield Tags Musts for Autos

Car-owning Carolinians will be sporting a new University license windshield sticker this year. Students living inside an administration-defined area will display blue stickers while those Tar Heels odinarily driving to classes will be the owners of red tags.

Cars with red stickers will be allowed to park in the parking lots behind the Y building, behind Phillips hall, behind Caldwell hall and on the east side of Steele dormitory. Cars with blue stickers may park anyplace on campus except the four lots named.

Students who failed to register their cars with the University during registration must report to 206 South building.

The area in which blue stickers will be issued is bounded by Rosemary street on the north, Mallette, Ransom and Oranson streets on the west, Raleigh road, University drive and Vance street on the south, and Country Club road and Boundary street on the east.

Staff Meeting

This issue marks the 57th year of publication for the Daily Tar Heel, although for many years after its birth it was not published daily and was far smaller that its present size.

"The Oldest College Daily in the South" is published Tuesday through Sunday of each week.

Staff members are needed to help perform the tremendous job which the publication of a daily newspaper is. All old staff members of the Daily Tar Heel, all persons who have applied for staff positions and all others interested must attend a staff meeting Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Daily Tar Heel offices, second floor Graham Memorial.

Former President of Texas Tech To Replace Henderson as Math Head

Former President William Marvin Whyburn of Texas Technical College began his first day today as head of the University Mathematics department, replacing Archibald Henderson who retired last spring after 50 years with the University.

For the past four years, 47-year-old Dr. Whyburn was the president of Texas Tech, after having spent 16 years at the University of California. He received his degree at the University of Texas; AB in 1922, MA in 1923 and PhD in 1927.

Dr. Whyburn is a member of the American Mathematical society, the Mathematical Association of America in which he served as first vice-president in 1943, and the Philosophical Society of Texas.

During the war he was educational supervisor of engineering, science and management in war training programs and became chief of operations for the analysis section of the third Air Force.

London, Sept. 23.—(UP)—A note pinned to the door of number 10 Downing street by some unknown person today said, "Stassen is bluffing."

NROTC Cruisers Back from Tour Of Naval Ports

A large number of University NROTC students rolled into class today with sea legs that brought back memories of Hawaiian music, slapping waves and bos'n's mate's curses on the west coast training cruises held during the summer.

Ports of call for the students-turned-sailors during their eight-week naval careers were Victoria, San Francisco, Long Beach, San Diego, Seattle and Pearl Harbor. The eager midshipmen went aboard at embarkation centers in San Francisco and Alameda on June 26. The bulk of them rolled off shipboard Aug. 21 at the same ports.

Although the Navy used a total of seven ships to train middies in the program, North Carolina university students were to be found only on board the light cruisers Astoria and Duluth and the carrier Princeton.

Those aboard the Duluth, classified as "contract men," had only a three-week cruise. They left the other ships at Seattle, went on to British Columbia and Long Beach and returned to San Francisco.

University juniors sailed on the Princeton, while the seniors and sophomores were aboard the Astoria. The juniors were given training in flight operations as well as in shipboard routine.

Each junior was required to make at least one flight from the carrier, but most found it an enjoyable enough experience to go aloft at every opportunity.

Aboard the Astoria, elemental principles of gunnery, engineering, shipboard operations and deck watch standing clained the training limelight.

Did the University middies enjoy the cruise? One of the eight-week salts summed it up in one sentence yesterday:

"It was work at sea, but ah that liberty!"

Familiar Face Missing From Campus; Dan The Dog Buried In Wiley Backyard

By Chuck Hauser

A familiar face was missing from the campus today as thousands of returning Tar Heels and confused freshmen began their first day of classes.

A pedigreed English setter who in his lifetime became the mascot of every outdoor sport sponsored at the University was dead.

On a dreary Tuesday morning late in July, Bowler Boy's Danny, better known to the student body as "Dan the Dog" was laid to rest in the shady backyard of his owners' home in Chapel Hill.

Dr. and Mrs. Lee Wiley, however, would be the first to admit that Dan belonged not only to them, but to a student body which numbered 7,500 last year. The Wileys were not present for the funeral. They were in Europe for the summer while Dan vacationed with farmer and family-friend Jack Hogan on his peaceful, lake-dotted property several miles west of Chapel Hill.

"I buried him with his head pointed north," Hogan said. "The grave probably should have been east and west, but he just wouldn't fit that way."

Dan, described by Hogan as "a good watchdog, and a kind, gentle friend," was born in the spring of 1937. Before he reached his third birthday he reportedly had attended more classes at the University than any student enrolled.

The large-boned black and white setter was usually seen sleeping beside his student-friends in their classrooms, under a table in a downtown beer joint, or dozing in the the sun before South building.

Cross-country coach Dale Ransom once said that Dan was the fastest runner he had on his squad. And coach Bob Fetzer welcomed Dan to give his boys a little competition during track season.

Year after year Dan was as much a campus landmark as the Old Well or Davie Poplar. Last fall, he disappeared, and all 7,500 of his owners worried about the old dog who could truly claim the title of friend of all the students.

After a wide-spread search Dan was located in Charleston, S. C. A kindly dog-lover in the port city was sharing his food and his home with the old setter. But he reported his new-found friend to the Wileys, whose ownership was recorded on Dan's brass-studded collar.

Eastern airlines offered to fly the aged canine home to Chapel Hill. Other offers of aid and transportation came from friends in both the Carolinas. Finally Capt. Don Loomis of the University NROTC drove Dan home after a business trip to Charleston.

Dan was never quite the same after he returned from South Carolina. He maneuvered a series of short disappearances from then on, always returning to the college community in a few weeks.

Finally, tired and very old, Dan retired from active life to the Hogan farm to rest out his declining days.

Farmer Hogan said the end came unexpectedly, as Bowler Boy's Danny lay asleep, possibly dreaming of better days to come.

BOWLER BOY'S DANNY, better known to University students as "Dan the Dog," was laid to rest this summer after a full 11 years as campus mascot and pet. The hand shown in the picture belongs to Cross-country Coach Dale Ransom, who once said Dan was the fastest runner on his team.

Episcopal Treasurer Has Article Printed

Louis deRosset MacMillan, member of the Duke university faculty and treasurer of the Chapel Hill Episcopal church, this month had an article published in the Journal of Accountancy.

MacMillan stated in his article that church financial affairs badly need the assistance of competant accountants. He explained how volunteer asistance by trained public accountants would materially help churches in the conduct of their affairs.

The writer, a certified public accountant on the Duke faculty, added that church religious and spiritual life "is definitely affected by its financial ability."

"Local services, foreign missions and clergy, and all the supplementary necessities to its existence depend on finances," MacMillan continued.

First SP Meeting Slated for Monday

The Student party will hold its first meeting of the fall quarter next Monday night at 9 o'clock in Roland Parker lounge 3 of Graham Memorial, Ed Tenney, chairman of the group, announced.

Tenney stated that the executive council would meet in the same room one hour before the meeting took place.

"The Student party meetings are open to every student on the campus and all who are interested are invited to attend," announced the SP head.

Chapel Hill Police Gets Radio System

The Chapel Hill Police department recently installed a new radio system, Chief W. T. Sloan reported yesterday.

According to Sloan, the apparatus is incomplete since there is no sending set connected, only receiving.

State calls from Raleigh and other headquarters in the state can be received to aid in the trapping of criminals from other counties.

Sloan said that the receiving set is a great asset to the local department. He added that he expects to have a two-way system set-up in all his cars as soon as the equipment arrives.

By Spring?

The John Motley Morehead planetarium and art gallery will probably reach completion by next spring, University authorities said yesterday.

Officials said, however, that the building schedule was approximately two months behind, and much interior work remained to be done before students would have the opportunity to glimpse the universe in action.

A director for the two-million dollar astronomical laboratory has not yet been found, Controller W. D. Carmichael, Jr., stated.

-Draft-

Its manpower ceiling is 900,000, but spokesmen said its available funds for the current fiscal year will be sufficient for a top limit of only 790,000 men.

Highly Eligible Non-Veterans In New Draft

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23. — (UP)— Selective service headquarters revealed today that one-fourth of the draft registrants reported to date are in the highly eligible category, "single, non-veterans, non-fathers."

With 11 states still unreported, 5,208,663 men 18 through 25 have been enrolled for the peacetime draft, officials said. State and local boards said 1,364,401 of them are single, non-veterans and non-fathers.

Selective Service officials previously said this group will supply the approximately 250,000 men expected to be drafted for the Army.

Many of the men will be exempt or deferred on other grounds. Essential workers, students, clergymen and the physically disabled are examples.

Some of the most heavily populated states have not reported registration figures. They include California, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Ohio, Michigan, Louisiana, North Carolina and Texas.

When their reports are in, the total registration is expected to reach nearly 9,600,000.

Registration of men 18 through 25 was conducted by age groups from Aug. 30 to Sept. 18. Henceforth, registrations will be confined to men turning 18.

Men 19 through 25 are eligible for induction for 21 months service.

Postmaster Hogan Says Need Great For Post Office

What is the most congested building in Chapel Hill today? One of the answers stands on the corner of Franklin and Henderson streets—the post office.

Postmasted W. S. Hogan said yesterday that students will not get the good postal service they would get "if the University had its own post office."

Commenting on present plans for a campus branch, Hogan said, "Nothing can be done until the University provides the quarters." He added that present mail facilities in the town are "highly inadequate."

The jostmaster said that he recently was forced to return some 500 subsistence checks because the veterans didn't have boxes and the government forbids forwarding of the checks. Hogan explained, "If the University had its own post office, these veterans would have had their own box and the check would have been placed there until they got back."

However, Hogan said that at present there aren't enough boxes to supply the town people, much less all the students that need them.

According to Hogan, he has been workin toward a post office branch on University property for four or five years. "All the University has to do is furnish the building, the Post Office department will take care of the rest. Complete facilities would be set up and identical service with the main branch would be offered." But Hogan went on to say he is powerless to act until the University supplies the building.

"If I am given a chance, I'll certainly recommend to the Post Office department in Washington that the branch be established on an equal footing with the one we have now."

Hogan went on to say that no action can be taken until the University provides the building. He remarked, "So far, the administration has made no effort to provide quarters for the branch as far as I know. I'm sure it would be a great advantage to everyone."

Pointing out the piles of undelivered parcel post, Hogan commented that the present delivery service is nothing like the service that could be provided with a branch on University property.

"If the University could get it in their building program it would certainly relieve the situation. We could even use a temporary building at first until a more permanent structure could be provided."

Hogan said he would cooperate in any way possible to alleviate the present burden on the post office. He said, "I'll do anything I can, but it'll have to come from the students and the administration."

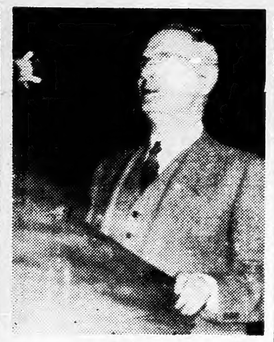
Orientation Programs Carried On This Week For Freshman Men, Coeds

CHANCELLOR ROBERT B. HOUSE GREETS a freshman at the president's and chancellor's reception held in Graham Memorial on Sunday. The neophyte Tar Heel is Jimmy Evans of Goldsboro.

Neophyte Coeds Begin New Life At Chapel Hill

When a new woman undergraduate arrived at Chapel Hill Saturday for the week of orientation planned for new coeds, she was met at the bus station by a town girl who helped her get started on her way to her dormitory and her new life at the University of North Carolina.



This was only the beginning of a carefully planned program which lasted through today and encompassed an introduction to all phases of campus life.

This week was planned by an orientation committee composed of women students under the chairmanship of Miss Helen Bouldin of Clarksdale, Miss., and executed by a group of 46 student advisers under the leadership of Miss Katherine Royall of Goldsboro.

Each residence hall was organized under a dormitory student adviser chairman, and each of her advisers has from four to six girls whom she will guide through their first week and throughout the year.

These advisers were chosen from a group selected by their dormitory hostess, assistant hostess, and last year's dormitory adviser chairman. Last spring they attended several classes on advising to prepare them for this position.

Orientation Counselors Get Works As Bewildered Frosh Thumbs 3 Blocks

An unidentified orientation counselor did his bit for the program last week when he picked up two freshmen who were standing across from the Carolina Inn with their thumbs in the air hitch-hiking "to town."

Other duties performed by the 55 men who guided groups of from 30 to 50 new students through meetings, lectures, tours, and examinations were less picturesque. But the work of the counselors was good enough to draw praise from administration officials and an expression of "deep appreciation and gratitude" from Bill Miller, chairman of the Orientation committee.

The counseling group included: Ted Leonard, Stuart Bondurant, Basil Sherrill, Jim Godwin, Monroe Landreth, Ted Fussell, Nemo Nearman, Scotty Venable, Marshall Pinnix, Dick Gordon.

Wayne Brenengen, Kelly Turner, Dan Breedon, Charlie Vance, Jack Worsham, Bob Coulter, Bill Mackie, Thurman Williams, Don Hames, Sam Magill, Miles Smith, Joe Leary, Kyle Barnes, Charles Vache, Jim Southerland.

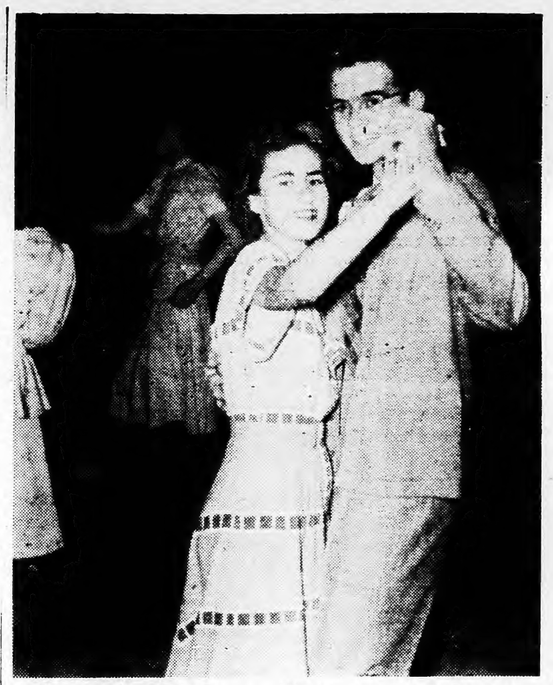
Campus Life, Hill Doings In Programs

Today marks the official end of an orientation which has seen 1,500 new Carolina gentlemen heard addresses by Alumni secreing that evening, and an all-day of church affairs.

Last saturday, the first day in Chapel Hill for the 1,000 of the new men who are freshmen, saw them given a welcome by Chancellor Robert B. House, and a few words of encouragement from President Frank Graham.

Since then, a round of tests, social affairs, meetings, and speeches kept the new men as busy as a week of classes would have done.



Saturday night, the freshmen heard adresses by Alumni secretary Maryon "Spike" Saunders, William D. Carmichael Sr., president of the Old Students club, and Dr. I. G. Greer, director of the business foundation. After the program, they attended a square dance in the Y court.

Sunday's activities featured an afternoon welcome meeting for the transfer students, the traditional student government meeting that evening, and all-day of church affairs.

Top-billed events through the rest of the week included speeches by representatives of all student organizations at the tranfer's activities night Monday, Monogram night on Wednesday, and a Sound and Fury production, "Inside UNC" presented last night.

Elsewhere during the week, the new men found time to attend an open house in the women's dorms, tour the library and booketeria, inspect the Monogram club's new circus bar, take a physical examination, and register.

At the end of this evening,

DOING A LITTLE ROUND DANCING at the Saturday night square dance in Y court are new students Peggy Law of Atlanta, Ga., and Griggs Dickson of Garner.

Rendezvous Room Opens Tomorrow With Gala Floor Show to Start Year

The Rendezvous room, campus night club, will hang the "open for business' sign on its door tomorrow night in Graham Memorial. University student union building.

Manager Arnold Wilson said yesterday a special floor show will feature a "galaxy of local talent including a comedian, singers, a pianist and Jim Geiger as master of ceremonies."

The opening will begin the fall season for the Rendezvous room, which was closed most of the summer because of the polio epidemic. It will open at 2 o'clock each afternoon and close at coed curfew time.

The student union has redecorated the room in traditional blue and white, with soft blue lights on the walls. The snack bar has been enlarged, and colonial pillars erected around the stage-bandstand.

Wilson said the Rendezvous room offered "the most comfortable and enjoyable place in town to bring a date for some dancing and relaxation."

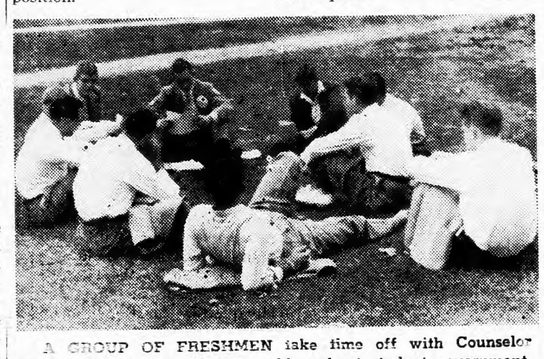
He said plans were being formed to offer weekly bingo games, floor shows and dance classes in the room. The dance instruction, to begin Tuesday, will be under the direction of Lib Stoney.

Orientation Chairman Bill Miller announced that the committee will close the program, but committee members will study the answers to a questionnaire distributed to the freshman with a view towards improving future programs.

Alleged Racket Head Out on Bond

Asheville, Sept. 23—(UP)—Asheville's alleged rackets king relaxed at home today under $15,000 bond and faced a federal government suit claiming he owes nearly $1,500,000 in income taxes—more than Al Capone was indicted for in 1928.

Vaughn Cannon, dapper son of a Georgia farm family, surrendered to sheriff's officers yesterday, reporting that he had been vacationing in Canada since before Superior Judge Zeb V. Nettles threw the full weight of the courts into a crusade against rackets.



During his absence witnesses at John Doe hearings had linked Cannon with two firms which they said distributed illicit gambling equipment in several counties of the Western Carolina mountain land.

Judge Nettles issued bench warrants charging Cannon and his brother Fred, who is still sought, with illegal operation of gambling devices and a conspiracy.

The U. S. Treasury department followed through, slapping three tax liens against Cannon which total more than those which finally tripped Chicago's Al Capone. The federals claimed Cannon owed $1,451,972 in income taxes for the years 1942-47. Capone was indicted in 1928 on income tax evasion charges of $1,000,000.

No criminal action has yet been filed against Cannon, but Treasury agents reportedly conferred with him yesterday after the surrender. Meanwhile, agents continued to filter through papers found in safes seized last month at Cannon's two firms, the Tri-State Distributing Co. and Pennies, Inc.

A special prosecutor reported that Cannon moved to Asheville about 1942 from his home at Tiger, Ga. Since then he has bought valuable real estate here, including six cafes which Judge Nettles ordered padlocked.

S and F Season Opens With Show for Frosh

Sound and Fury opened its new season with its annual Freshman Night show last night in Memorial hall. Director-Author Pete Strader said that it was just the beginning for a "bigger and better year."

The first meeting of the group will be held in Memorial hall Tuesday night, at which time all new students and old members are invited to attend. Plans for the fall show to be presented in early November will be announced. President Jerry Weiss said, "We don't want you to be professionals, but just interested. The group welcomes plenty of hard workers."

New Hurricane

HAMILTON, BERMUDA, Sept. 23.—(UP)—Bermudians braced themselves today for their second hurricane in 10 days.

Hurricane warnings were posted and U. S. army and navy bases were alerted as the weather bureau forecast that the center of the disturbance will pass about 150 miles north of Bermuda at 1 a.m. tomorrow, with gale winds prevailing on the island. It was the same storm which caused heavy damage in Florida Tuesday.

A ten-mile square area of Southern California grows 352,000 crates of oranges per year, 10 percent of the nation's total.

The size of Valencia oranges is going to be the smallest yet, it is reported by the rachers.

Orientation That Orients

Odds are being quoted at two to one on the bet that when tonight's coed ball winds up the first day of fall classes and the Hill begins to settle down to the regular scholastic routine, new students on campus will know the Carolina score better than half the old timers.

Tipping the scales in favor of this bet is the intensive, week-long orientation program which has been operating at high speed since last Saturday night, dishing out information to the newcomers on every conceivable question. Each year before, an attempt has been made at orientation. The women have usually come up with a creditably comprehensive and efficient program, but never before has the program for male students been so carefully planned and so thoroughly executed. Under leadership of Bill Miller and Helen Bouldin, ten orientation committee members and 45 counselers for the men and 46 coed advisers for the women have introduced approximately 1,800 new students to University life. Tours, lectures, discussions, introductions, entertainment have been included in a program that has been conducted with groups small enough to allow a large measure of personal contact between advisers and adviserees.

Chancellor Robert House, Dean of Students Fred Weaver and other administration officials who watched and cooperated with the program, and Student Body President Jess Dedmond, who worked closely with it, have been high in their praise of the way in which it was carried out. Judgment of the success of the program rests wholely upon its value to the new students, and an indication of this can be gathered from talking to those who went through the orientation. Asked if he had any unanswered questions, one freshman replied: "They answered every question I ever had about Carolina, and if I think of any new ones, my counseler has told me where to get the answers."

That reply should be praise enough for the students who gave generously of time and effort to produce an orientation program that really orients.

Take One, Sample All

One of the first people many freshmen encounter at the University is Pete Mullis of the physical education department, and sooner or later during his course Pete gives them all the same advice. It goes something like this: "We don't care why you came here, just so long as you get what you came for. Your old man is paying good money to send you here, so be sure you get his money's worth. If you came for grades, make Phi Bete; if you came for sports, be the best in your line; and if you came up here to have a good time, then aye gad, be the best party boy on the Hill—you may not stay very long, but get your money's worth while you're here."

Pete is a great guy and his advice is sound, but there should be more to it; for the student who gets only what he comes for, who never samples the other ingredients of the University is like a man who eats one course at a banquet and thinks he knows the flavor of all the dishes. The University offers so many things that a person can not afford to take away only what he comes for.

Here in Chapel Hill to know and to learn from are some of the finest educators n the world: Dr. Frank Graham, one of the few truly great men many of us will ever have the privilege of meeting; Archibald Henderson of the Math department, biographer of George Bernard Shaw, who whistles through his teeth as he talks and is reputed to shoot ducks by mathematical formula and to understand Einstein; E. J. Woodhouse of political science, who will talk for hours on the beauties of democracy if he can get a single listener and a cup of coffee; George Coffin Taylor, with a scholar's love for Shakespeare so intense that it is sometimes ridiculous; J. C. Sitterson of history, who, with a sarcastic deadpan expression, will relate the facts and tables and humor of history, paint the United States as the blackest villain among nations, and yet manage to leave the impression that he still believes it is the greatest country in the world. There are scores of others, some known, some unknown, but all willing to give as much of their specialty as a student will take.

And then there are football games, basketball games, and all the rest of the sports; student government, campus politics, and half a hundred student organizations; prominent speakers and an excellent library; dances at the gym, parties in dormitories and fraternity houses, picnics in Teenie's meadow, swimming in Hogan's lake, dates anywhere, friends everywhere, beer and pretzels and bull sessions, and above all ideas. All of this is here for the taking, and if a student misses any of it he has missed a part of Carolina. A person could spend a lifetime here and never exhaust the possibilities for exploring into new and interesting facets of the University—and most of us must pack it all into two or three or four years.

It is good that a student come to Carolina knowing what he wants from the University, and it is good that he should not let the other things distract him from getting it; but if, when he leaves the University, he takes with him only that for which he came and nothing more, he might as well never have come, for he is a plain damn fool.

Odds And Ends

BY Rita Adams

HERE ARE just a few lines—NO, NO, never do we want to hear that word again! So let's start all over again.

HERE ARE just a few words about what's happening on:

CAMPUS: Counselor Tom Wharton can't stop laughing about his two freshmen who popped the questions of the week. When given his Yack picture appointment and told to wear a nice, fresh, white shirt, one asked, "Will it be O. K. if I wear a striped undershirt that sorta' shows through?" Then popped up another one a minute later, "What kind of degrees do we receive at the end of our freshman year?" Stick around a few more years, fellow. You may at least get off your English 1 requirement.

AND, SAY, those red and white poles you've seen men carrying around with them really aren't traveling barber shops. They're some sort of survey equipment that only a graduate of Moo Institute in Raleigh could explain. Just wait a few days, and you can jam your head into that fit-anybody-and-everybody bowl in Graham Memorial's special delux barbershop. No business from the girls, though—not with those shingle jobs like Ferne Hughe's.

JOE JOHNSON, we hear, has found the infalable method for slowing down this fighting-like-fire Carolina pace. All you need to do, Joe says, is to have your appendix out and come back to the Hill two weeks later taped up like a band box. 'Course these mushy walks with their truck loads of gravel don't help walking matters too much—specially as far as new coeds and new spike heels are concerned. Maybe next year the student advisors can talk the new girls into bringing heaps and heaps of black FLATS.

MAYBE, TOO, those advisers—hostesses, their signs call them at the parties and receptions—will pick up another lesson. Gayle Hancock offers the advice, "Never get sorry for a long line outside Graham Memorial and start stuffing them with cookies to keep their energy up! They might do like freshman Jimmy (Alfalfa) Mills and get so choked on them that they won't be able to say howyadosir to Chancellor House."

CAROLINA STYLES have taken on a gay flash of color this fall because of painting going on here, there, and everywhere. Fact is, there are rumors of such folks as Weddy Thorp, George Rodman, and Thurmond Williams forming a UNC painters' guild. That is, if such people as Billy Carmichael and little Ann Cook don't foul up the works with their water pistols.

AND IN TOWN:

IT'S SO GOOD to see 'Alec" scooting around town again with bits of sad, happy, and just indifferent bits of news from Western Union. Fact is, the village looks pretty good on general principles. Could be because we've missed this dear ol' place so much this summer. Then, on the other hand, it could be because of the various and sundry somethings new that have been added. Fr'instance, there's the very special display in Huggins Hardware store, and also the Varsity's display featuring flags of the schools Carolina will play this year.

BIG NEW ADDITIONS that were waiting for the wave that hit town this past week were Steve Stephanou's new—what shall we call that fabulous thing?—bar, nightclub, or just plain place—and Danziger's Rathskeller.

EMILE SALEEBY must have too much Wilmington sun, or maybe a politicial hangover from last spring. Anyhoo, we're awfully sorry to hear he's flat on his back. Likewise for Ted Hazlewood.

These Days

The 1948 Campaign Is On

By George E. Sokolsky

Now that the candidates are actually on their trains, chasing about the country, showing themselves at every whistle stop, calling remembered strangers by thir first names, pronouncing brilliantly and learnedly on all subjects, the campaign is truly on.

It is a pity that this must be so because the wear and tear on the candidates add little to their stature, and they, as busy men, are forced to leave important work, Truman, as President of the United States, Dewey, as Governor of the State of New York, Warren, as Governor of California. One would imagine that radio and television would have saved these men and the country, from this ordeal. However, they will travel more this year and make more speeches than ever. It is easy for Henry Wallace because he has nothing else to do, but that is only one reason why he will not be elected.

The British get queer notions of our methods. I was reading a piece in the London "Economist" in which this bit of wisdom appears:

"The defeat of the Old Guard was, in fact, more decisive this year than in 1944. At that time, Mr. Dewey was saddled with Mr. John Bricker to keep him company. . . the attempts of the isolationists to capture the Vice-Presidency were shattered by the indignation of the delegates and the choice of Mr. Warren, the Governor of California, was received with enthusiasm by the convention. . ."

Actually, this never happened. There was no "Old Guard" at the Republican Convention in any proportions that might be called significant. The nomination of Dewey and Warren was fairly predicated in advance, although there was some doubt as to whether Governor Warren would accept for personal rather than political reasons which he made clear when he was offered the nomination. The protagonists of Harold Stassen and Senator Vandenberg hoped, at best, that they could produce a "Stop-Dewey" movement in their interest, and having discovered that that was impossible, after the second ballot, they produced a united front in a high manner and in a good spirit.

As for the Republican vice-presidential candidacy, there was never a question of "Old Guard" or "isolationists" or "internationalists. "Warren was the logical choice, no matter who was nominated for the Presidency, except himself. Had he, for some reason, been given the presidential nomination, it would have been quite a task to choose a vice-president, and it might have been Harold Stassen or John Bricker, neither of whom would have been happy about it.

I make this point because British publications, even when they publish articles "From our US Editorial Staff," often get quite twisted, particularly when they are obsessed by such words as "isolationist" and "Old Guard."

Another indication of their lack of understanding is such a statement:

"The organising genius was Mr. Herbert Brownell, a ruthless political scientist in a position where tradition expects the false bonhomie of a hard-drinking ward-heeler. Mr. Brownell uses threats where Jim Farley would have used promises. There was, perhaps, some unconscious symbolism in the fact that refrigerators were given away in the Dewey headquarters—not cigars."

BOUQUETS & BRICKBATS—

Here's to Bill Miller, Helen Bouldin, and all their orientutors for a thorough job of adapting new students to Hill-life . . . Whassamatter this year? The University catalogue is coming out six months late. Could it be that the trustees held up publication of the traditional school syllabus because of indecision about Saturday classes? . . . Robinson Crusoe and Sherlock Holmes themselves could not have found more capable selections for assistant dean of students and Graham Memorial director, respectively, than Bill Friday and Bob Watson . . . Where are all our dogs? Look around and see if there are enough hounds left to run out on the field tomorrow so that the Texas game will be official. . . . The "Y" 's wise Mr. Shotts has returned from a summer of social work in Berlin. He brought back the excellent suggestion that the campus WSSFolks should plan financially to bring a German student here among us in '50 to UNSee the advantages of American education. . . Missing and missed is Tenn Mason, Tri Delt and Yack beauty of last year who may recover from polio in time to start the spring quarter. . . Wallace an egg at whoever ordained that only new coeds can attend the Coed Ball tonight. The only seniors who will be welcome, it seems, are hostesses; and they will not be allowed to dance until after intermission. Why 14 to 1? Whistles there a man who thinks these fresh women are not attractive enough to make out under the old 7 to 1 ratio? Fa'instance, Ann Lywellyn, Mischa Eute, and Gene Hines. And the latest in Betty Smiths has nothing to do with Brooklyn trees.

SIGHTS & OVERSIGHTS —

Freshmen who happened to cut the YMCA pre-school conference at Camp Nawakwa have already flunked out on fun. . . The housing office has helped politics make strange bedfellows if the third floor of "C" dormitory becomes the sparring ring for roommates Charlie Long and Miles Smith. Bring an ex-SP head and an ex-UP head together and there had better be another head nearby. . . Over in Mangum one room on the third floor might well be a convalescence annex to the infirmary. When the two freshman roommates there shook hands, there was a cast on Bill Hogshead's right arm and a crutch beside Forrest Ader's right leg. . . Why Ferne Hughes's barber went mad: too many Ingrid Bergman movies. . . Another cheering novelty will be Sperheaded at tomorrow's game when special blue and white rooters' caps are introduced. The reversible caps to make uniformly colorful backgrounds for card stunts are being sold by all CH clothing merchants. Listen for the introduction of a sure-hit pep song about why "They Had to Carry Harry to the Ferry.". . . Is there really still a rooming shortage when one townsman has to walk around the "Y" court with a sign pinned to his hat that reads "Rent"?

DILLIES IN OUR ALLEYS—

Two Obviously unoriented freshmen, thumbing towards Franklin Street on the Scuttlebutt corner opposite the Carolina Inn: "Town? Town?". . . Rita Adams, looking over the new society space added to the DTH office: "So this is going to be the women's room, eh?" . . . "With the traffic problem here it is easy to see why you begin to spell 'Carolina' with 'c-a-r-'". . . Dortch Warriner, eyeing the rather dried-up looking liver a Lenior Hall waitress tried to serve him: "Whose liver was that?" Best answer: "The Foology department's".

Welcome To The Hill

To All Students:

Welcome to Chapel Hill. The charm of our beloved old campus, the color of early fall, and the tolling of South building's bell all combine in welcoming our students, new and old, to Carolina. To that I add my personal joy at having all of you with us. It is a pleasure to know that we shall soon have again the activities which make Chapel Hill the interesting place it is.

It is my wish that this year will be filled with success, high educational attainment, and wholesome pleasures for all of us. May our lives together in the Carolina spirit and under the Honor and Campus codes be living exemplifications of the fulfillment of our responsibilities to ourselves and to our institution. Thus may we truly earn the title of Carolina ladies and gentlemen.

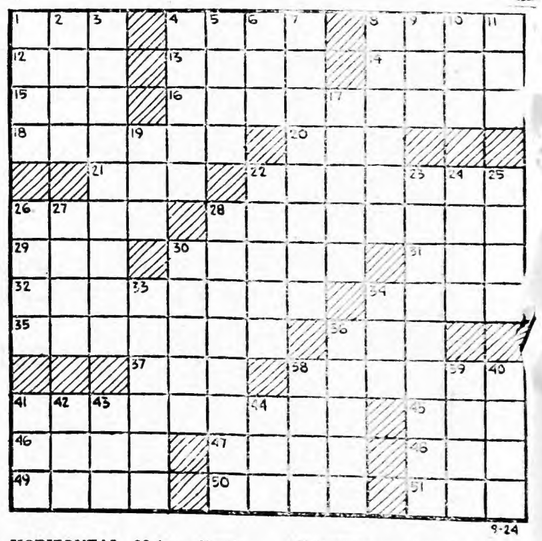
Last Word For Dan

(The moving finger writes; and, having writ, moves on: and a new student population replaces the old. There are many here now who never knew Bowler Boy's Danny, better known as Dan the Dog, the proud English setter who was recognized by generations of students as a first citizen of the University. There are even more who never knew Jud Kinburg, one of the better DTH columnists of two years back, who became the Runyonesque mouthpiece for Dan's piquant observations on campus life. But for those who remember, here is Jud's last tribute to his friend Dan.)

By Jud Kinberg

Life in New York runs and jumps in a most petty pace. There is little time for sentiment and I have known more than one bright-young-thing who could fracture a reputation in a quick wink of a Martini. They tell you New York has a heart. Don't let them fool you.



New York is a town of "kept" dogs. They pander their slobbering affection upon apartment-living masters with a servility especially appalling when one remembers the proud independence of the Chapel Hill breed. I was thinking of the Chapel Hill classroom invaders and expecially my beer-drinking buddy Dan the Dog when the postcard came. It was typed with a nice regard for margins and a nicer one for sentiment.

"Dan the Dog was destroyed this week," it read. "Why don't you write a final column, or have you forgotten your pal?" Forget Dan? How in hell could you once you'd smelled him? If there ever was a free soul, an uncaptive spirit, it rested in that ill-kept frame of Dan's. Last fall, when we had stopped writing our columns together, Dan took up with a saucy South Carolina gal and went adventuring with her. How many New York dogs would even change fire plugs without direct commands from their masters?

No, Dan and his lower quad companions are dogs of a far different breed. They dreamed the big dreams of college days. In my lengthy discussions with Dan, some of which emerged in 3.2 type of the DTH, he always had a bright scheme for the future, a way to catch the world by its tail. No matter that the daring plans might have failed in execution. The important thing was his steadfast belief in them. Tomorrow, with a deep bow to Betty Smith, was going to be right fine and so there was little sense in worrying about today. The result was a happy absorption (both literally and figuratively) in an evening's fling at Jeff's, a quick sortie to Woman's College or a warm afternoon spent on the hard wood benches of Kenan stadium with a Carolina football team on the field.

When I finally used up my GI Bill and Uncle Sam sent me forth into the cruel world, I approached Dan about accompanying me north to the Big City. With the true art of a huckster, I

New Girls Will Take Two Dates To Annual Coed Ball Tonight

The grind of informative orientation meetings will mellow into something of a gala spirit tonight at 9 o'clock for new coeds at the annual Coed Ball in Woollen Gymtasium. Johnny Satterfield and his orchestra will play for the semi-formal occasion.

The newly oriented girls will be escorted by two dates, selected by a system set up by the Coed Senate, sponsors of the ball. During the past week triplicate bids, with blanks for name, age, height, and address, were filled out by the girls. After considerable juggling of inches and age, Kit Finney, in cooperation with the men's orientation committee, selected the dates. Hostesses stressed the point that all men students are invited to the dance.

Following a moonlight on the water theme, Senate members will use as a central decoration a large, revolving, crystal ball which will throw colored reflections on the wall of the gym.

At the end of a lucky number dance, some coed will receive an orchid, and her date will be presented with two tickets to the Carolina-William and Mary football game. During this special dance the orchestra will play while Jess Dedmond, president of the student body, calls out 50 numbeds. When the remaining couples have left the dance floor, the numbers will be reduced to that of the couple receiving the awards.

Chaperons for the dance will be Dr. and Mrs Frank P. Graham, Chancellor and Mrs. Robert B. House, Dean and Mrs. Ernest Mackie, Miss Katherine Carmichael, Miss Audrey Branch, and Mrs. Robert Swain.

Refreshments will be served on the terrace during intermission.

Tests for Production 'I Remember Mama'

Tryouts for the Playmaker production of "I Remember Mama" will be held in the Playmaker theater next Wednesday at 4 and 7:30, announced John Van Druten. There will be parts for 25 actors.

Selections for the cast will not be limited to the student body but will also include townspeople.

The rest of the Playmaker plans for the season will be announced at the theater Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock when Sam Selden, head of the dramatic art department, will give an illustrated lecture on "Adventures in Playmaking."

All dramatic art students and anyone else interested in the program are invited to attend. There will be no admission charge.

SHOWN AFTER THE WEDDING are the former Miss Patsy Ruth Andrews of Carrboro and Mike Rubish of Weirton, W. Va. They were married Aug. 22 at the Carrboro Baptist church.

Football Star Mike Rubish Marries Patsy Ruth Andrews

Patsy Ruth Andrews, former University student, and Mike Rubish, senior and varsity football squad member, became Mr. and Mrs. Rubish at the Carrboro Baptist church Aug. 22, and are now living here while Mike continues his classroom and football work.

Mrs. Rubish is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Andrews of Carrboro, and Mike is the son of Mrs. John Rubish and the late Mr. Rubish of Weirton, W. Va. The dougle ring ceremony was used at the wedding and the Rev Thomas Bland officiated.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Raymond L. Andrews. Miss Wilda Andrews and Mrs. L. F. Mitchell attended their sister as maid and matron of honor.

The bridesmaids were Miss Claudia Canada and Mrs. R. L. Andrews of Carrboro, Miss Boots McGirt of Chapel Hill and Mrs. Dan Bullard, III, of Macon, Ga.

Philip Rubish, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man and the ushers included Robert Andrews, brother of the bride, University football end Art Weiner of Newark, N. J., Charles Ives, Jr., of Bethel, Carl Pridgen of Beaufort and James Gallion of Richmond, Va.

A reception was held immediately after the wedding at Graham Memorial on the campus.

Window Displays Being Readied

Local merchants are getting their window displays set-up for the Texas-Carolina clash.

The most elaborate is the Huggins Hardware window. Vic Huggins has a longhorn, borrowed from a Richmond, Virginia sporting goods concern which measures 15 feet from tip to tip. It's the largest set of horns this side of Austin.Huggins smiled.

His display is built around this set of horns and includes a cowhide cut into the shape of the map of Texas with a pair of eyes in the middle. The inscription, Yes you guessed it—"The eyes of Texas are Upon You, Charlie."

Huggins, who is president of the local Merchants association, yesterday urged all merchants to prepare some sort of display for the game.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23—(UP)—Theodore Steelman, 39, was painting the capitol dome 175 feet above the ground today when a 300-pound decoration gave way and toppled him off the ladder.

He dropped 16 feet to a narrow ledge around the base of the dome. The next stop, the roof, was another 100 feet below.

Steelman climbed back up the ladder and resumed painting.

First Grail Dance Features Roy Cole

The Order of the Grail's first dance of the year will feature Roy Cole and his 15-piece campus orchestra in Woollen gymnasium from 9 until 12 o'clock tomorrow night.

Sharing the social spotlight for the Texas weekend with the Coed Ball tonight, the Grail dance will be a semi-formal affair open to the campus. Admission at the door will be a dollar for couples or stags.

The Grail, honorary male service organization composed of outstanding campus leaders, will add proceeds from this dance to its scholarship fund to assist needy students in financing their education at the University.

Similar Grail dances for later football weekends are yet to be announced. However, several nationally-known bands will soon be contracted for Friday and Saturday night dance and Saturafternoon concert series here. The German Club, an interfraternity group, will also present one dance set this fall.

The Cole orchestra which will play for the dance tomorrow night is one of the oldest and largest student bands on campus. Veteran performers on college campuses and at beach nightclubs throughout the State, the Cole aggregation features its own arrangements of the latest popular music.

Health Department Lists 17 New Cases

...RALEIGH, N. C., Sept 23—(UP)—The State Health Department today reported 17 new cases of infantile paralysis in North Carolina, making a total of 2,138 cases this year.

Guilford County led the list with five cases, and Durham and Rockingham counties reported two each. One case each was reported from Buncombe, Burke, Catawba, Cleveland, Johnston, Mecklenburg, New Hanover, and Person counties.

Ex-Band Member Carl J. Bell Dies on July 4 This Summer

While here, Bell served as a member of the University varsity band and also played saxaphone and clarinet with the Dream Serenaders and Stormy Weathers. "Music was his life," said Mrs. Bell of her son.

Bell, a friendly good-natured student roomed in Alexander and Old West dorms. He attended the Baptist church here and was a member of the First Baptist church in Gastonia.

Funeral services were held July 5 at the First Baptist church in Gastonia with interment in Gastonia memorial park on New Hope road. Dr. V. Ward Bar officated and was assisted by Dr. J. L. Vipperman, Long Creek Baptist church of Dallas, N. C., and Rev. T. L. Cashwell, East Baptist church of Gastonia.

The deceased was the son of Carl J. Bell, Sr., and Mrs. Lola Beattie Bell of Gastonia. Other survivors included brothers Douglas, David and Danny and sisters Shirley, Nancy Jane and Kathy Lou; W. Grier Beattie, a grandfather; Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Bell of Dallas, N. C.

Fifty Attend YMCA Camp

Approximately 50 people attended the University YMCA freshman conference at Camp Nawakwa outside Asheboro Sept. 15 to 17 for a pre-school program of fellowship, guest speakers, group discussions, and religious guidance.

"The freshmen camp," according to John Brockman, chairman of the Y committee responsible for the outing, "was designated to bring a select group of new students together as a nucleus for future leadership in the class of '52. The accent was on explanations for pertinent problems facing the Carolina newcomers most particularly difficulties in scholastic, social, and religious adjustment. An effort was made to allow the freshmen themselves to talk over their own questions about campus life."

Upperclassman counsellors, YMCA directors, University officials, and prominent townspeople were presented throughout the three-day program. A smaller group of YWCA members and new coeds joined the YMCA after cancelling plans for a similar meeting for women students at Camp Betty Hastings.

Features of the program included speeches by Chancellor Robert B. House and Fred Weaver, new dean of students. Nora Sper, head cheerleader, with Durwood Jones as his assistant staged a pep rally to introduce Tar Heel yells and explain animated card stunts. The reverend Charles M. Jones, B. V. Munger and Brooks Patton conducted devotional periods.

Stunt night, square dancing and facilities for swimming and boating highlighted the recreation.

Carolina To Meet Longhorns In Opening Game Saturday

Carolina Seeking To Avenge Defeat In Tilt Last Year

By Dick Jenrette

Carolina's Tar Heels, already billed as the South's top grid outfit and a leading contender for national honors, find themselves in the unusual position of underdogs tomorrow when they open their season against the Texas Longhorns in Kenan Stadium.

Carolina has ranked anywhere from third to ninth in pre-season polls on the nation's top teams, but despite this rating Texas has been installed as a two-touchdown favorite. The Longhorns routed the Tar Heels, 34-0, last year in Austin and already hold a 33-0 decision over LSU this season.

Past records of the two teams show that Texas always manages to come up with a smooth-working machine in early season games, while Coach Carl Snavely's Tar Heels, for the past two years at least, haven't appropriated their peak until near mid-season.

No Quarter

But Carolina students, alumni, and supporters are conceding the Longhorns no quarter. They feel that the Tar Heels' strong revenge motive, fostered in last year's defeat, plus the fact that the game will be played in Chapel Hill point to a Carolina victory.

Those favoring the Tar Heels to win remember the rush with which the locals ended their 1947 season—with seven straight victories. While a number of key players from last year's club are not back this year, the nucleus of another strong outfit remains.

But whether the Tar Heels can pick up where they left off last year remains to be seen. The final three games of 1947 saw Carolina wreck State, 41-6; Duke 21-0 and Virginia, 40-7.

Equally Potent

The current Texas outfit appears equally as potent as the 1947 edition. Bobby Layne, the All-American quarterback and superlative passer of last year, is missing. But his loss didn't seem to bother the Texans against Louisiana State last week. Paul Campbell has replaced him. Campbell and the other Texas backs were able to complete ten of 19 passes attempted against LSU for a total of 185 yards.

Texas fans aren't relying entirely on their backfield to outscore the locals. The Longhorns boast a hefty line which possesses a surprising amount of speed considering it is composed of husky 200-pounders. The line averages 213 pounds.

Dick Harris, an All-American of last season, will man the center post for Texas with Bobby Rowan providing capable relief. Center, along with end, is supposed to be the strong point of the forward wall.

Good Ends

At end Coach Blair Cherry can call on five lettermen. The two men are Lewis Holder, who scored two touchdowns in the Sugar Bowl, and "Durable Dale" Schwartzkopf. Other leading flankmen are Benny Blount, George McCall, and Jimmie Watson. All are tall and capable of reaching high to pull in passes.

Other standouts in the Longhorn line are Tackles George Petrovich, Ed Kelley, and Charley Tatom, and Guard Vic Vasicek.

(See FOOTBALL, page 8)

Here's Carolina's Board Of Football Strategy

LARGELY RESPONSIBLE FOR THE SUCCESS of Carolina's football teams for the past two years is Carolina's coaching staff, headed by Coach Carl Snavely. Snavely's teams have won 16 games and lost but three contests in the past two seasons. Left to right the coaches are Jim Gill, Max Reed, Snavely, and Russ Murphy.

Texas, Wake Forest Victories Mean Hard Year for Carolina

If the results of this past weekend's initial football games may be taken as a criterion, Carolina's Tar Heels are in for a couple o rough weekends when they open their schedule against Texas here on Saturday.

For the Longhorns from the Lone Star state demonstrated their ability conclusively with a 33-0 thumping of LSU, a school which usually turns out good football teams. The current Texas team appears on an equal par with last year's outfit, which rampled Carolina, 34-0.

Paul Campbell, Texas' quarterback who succeeds All-American Bobby Layne, proved that he will be able to fill Layne's shoes capably. Texas, with Campbell doing most of the passing, completed ten of 19 aerials attempted against LSU for 185 yards.

Scatbacks

Moreover, Byron Gillory and Billy Pyle, a couple of pint-sized halfbacks, demonstrated they haven't lost any of their speed, which last year played a major role in Carolina's loss to Texas. The pair specialize in sweeping end runs and punt returns. Pyle's running was one of the features in the LSU game.

The big Texan line also showed up well, yielding only 38 yards to LSU on rushing plays.

Wake Forest, another of Carolina's 1948 opponents, started its season with a 27-13 victory over George Washington, a team that had not been highly regarded in pre-season prognostications. The Deacs employed the T-formation in that game for the first time in that school's grid history, and as a result many mistakes were made.

The Deacons fumbled frequently and fell victims of the ancient "sleeping end" play, yet still had enough power to win.

Wake Forest showed considerable promise of developing into a better club than last year's outfit, which beat Carolina, 19-7.

Seixas Honored

Vic Seixas, member of the U.S. Davis Cup squad and University net star, was awarded the William M. Johnston sportsmanship cup for 1948 as the player who contributed most to amateur tennis during the year.

The award, presented annually to an outstanding amateur who has exhibited good sportsmanship, was given to Seixas at the conclusion of the National tournament in Forest Hills, New York.

Seixas was eliminated from Nationals play in the fourth round when he was defeated by the French star Drobney.

MANAGERS NEEDED

Coach Crowell Little has requested that all boys interested in becoming a freshman football manager contact K. P. Lindsay at Woollen Gym as soon as possible. No managers have been selected yet and a number are needed. The first freshmen practice will be held at 4 p.m. this afternoon and managers will be needed for the issuing of equipment at 3 p.m.

Freshmen Practice First Time Today; Slate Five Games

Freshman Football Coach Crowell Little announced yesterday that all first-year men interested in playing with the frosh team should report to Woolen Gym at 3 p.m. this afternoon to check out equipment and be ready for initial practice by 4. Freshman Manager K. P. Lindsay will be on hand to issue equipment to all boys who present their registration certificate showing that they have been given a thorough physical check-up by a University physician. No equipment will be issued without the registration card.

Coach Little said yesterday that he expects "around 125 boys" to report for duty with the Tar Babies. Little stated that he is "looking forward to having a good freshman team," and added that, barring injuries to key men, "we should have a good season."

It was also announced yesterday that there would be no junior varsity team this year. The jayvees will continue working with the varsity for the remainder of the season with the exception of a single game to be played against the Naval Academy junior varsity at Annapolis, Md. on Thanksgiving Day, November 25. The only other junior varsity game of the season was played on September 11 in High Point. The jayvees tied the powerful High Point in that one, 7-7.

Little named his entire freshman staff in an interview yesterday. The staff will include Walt Pupa, regular fullback last season and now a full-time coach; Emmett Cheek, guard on last season's team now doing graduate work;

Eleven Lettermen Report For Drills Of Soccer Outfit

With 11 lettermen present from the squad that won six of its nine games last year, the 1948 Carolina soccer team started practice early this week for its season opener against Navy at Annapolis on October 6.

Although several letterwinners from last year's varsity will be absent from the roster, some newcomers and holdovers from last year should fill the few gaps.

The schedule for the forthcoming campaign is virtually the same as last year with Washington and Lee the only addition to the card. The Tar Heels will play two games apiece with High Point college, Duke, and the Generals and single encounters with Navy, Loyola, Virginia, and Roanoke.

Three Defeats

Loyola, Navy and Duke were the only schools to hang defeats on the Tar Heels, but the local booters also hold one decision over the Blue Devils.

Carolina's first home contest will not be until the 15th of next month when Loyola comes into Chapel Hill to engage the Blue and White booters. Loyola defeated Carolina, 4-0, a year ago.

The Tar Heels will be out to reverse a losing decision against Navy also. The Middies took a 2-1 overtime decision last year.

Gus Johnston, co-captain of last years squad and a member of the team selected for the Southern Olympic tryouts, heads the list of returnees along with co-captain and goalie Al Williams. Frank Nelson, who made third-string All-American last year will be in his familiar fullback post, for the afternoon workouts.

Bach Back

Joe Bach, one of the high scorers from the 1947 Tar Heels, will be back in harness as will Jesse Greenbaum, Mac Hagaman, Bill Moore, Dave Ferebee, Jack Pfautz, Tom Williams, and Duncan McCalman.

In addition, Bob Plumb and Wally Freeland, both members of the squad last season, appear ready to play important roles on the Tar Heel eleven.

Pete Hexner and Tom Jordan are two neophytes who have been showing promise during the week's workouts.

Jackson Not Out

Basil Jackson, who broke his leg last season, is enrolled in school but will be unable to compete. He still has to wear a brace on his injured limb.

About 40 men, including candidates for the freshman eleven, have reported already for the two-a-day workouts and more are expected later. The call for freshman booters will go out sometime next week.

Beginning this afternoon, drills will be held at 4 in the afternoon with a morning practice slated for Saturday.

Anyone, who is anxious to try out for the squad should report for the afternoon workouts.

Bill Pritchard, another letterman from last season doing grad work; and Harry Furman, a letterman at Cornell University last season now doing graduate work here.

Plans for Banner Sports Year Made by Mural Committee

By Frank Allston

"We hope to enlarge the scope of the overall program by adding activities in the individual sports," Walter Rabb, director of University intramural athletics, announced this week.

According to Rabb, the Intramural Department is preparing for a large participation in murals following a record season last year. 3,538 Carolina students took part in the mural department's program over the three quarters.

Figures released by the department showed that 1,219 participated in tag football; 1,241 played basketball, and 998 played softball. Volleyball, wrestling, tennis, and soccer were also high on the list.

The first event on the 1948-49 program is the annual Fall tennis tournament which is scheduled to get under way on October 7. Tag football starts for the fraternity division on October 7 and for the dormitory division on October 11. Entires for the tennis tourney will close on September 21 and for tag football on September 28.

Enter Early

Rabb emphasized filing entries for the tennis tournament at the earliest possible date. Entry blanks may be obtained at the tennis courts, at the Scuttlebutt, and at Woollen gymnasium.

The campus intramural program will be run this year the some way that it has been in the past. There will be two divisions, dormitory and fraternity. The two divisions will play separate schedules and the winners of each division will meet at the end of the regular season and play for the campus championship.

Team point scores are kept in each sport with the exception of tennis, badminton, archery, and bait-casting. Points are given on the basis of final standing and the team with the highest point total is awarded the team championship.

Campus programs, which will not count in the team point standings, will be carried out for interested persons in badminton, archery, and bait-casting. These programs will be carried out in the same manner as the tennis tournament.

Open Houses

Sports other than those already set up by the Mural department will be added if sufficient interest is shown and of the Intramural Council decides that a program embracing that sport would be beneficiary.

Also on the agenda for this fall are Woollen gym open houses. These weekly open houses will be held at the gym every Monday evening starting October 11. The gym will be open to all students, men and women, and to members of the faculty. Facilities for badminton, handball, table tennis, squash and volleyball will be made available.

All students are urged to visit the Mural Department in room 311, Woollen gymnasium, if they have any questions concerning the University intramural program.

Chapel Hill Plays

Chapel Hill high school's football team, fresh from last week's opening victory over Methodist Orphange in Raleigh, will appear in its first home game of the season against Oxford high school today at Emerson stadium.

An admission fee of 65 cents will be charged, game time is slated for three o'clock.

In last week's opener in Raleigh, the Chapel Hill crew won a decisive 31-25 victory over the Orphange. It marked the first time that the Chapel Hillians had defeated the Orphange on their home field.

Loss of Veterans Weakens Harriers For This Season

By Larry Fox

Athough only four men from last year's cross country outfit, which was undefeated in dual meet competition, were missing from the group which reported for pre-season workouts early in the week, Coach Dale Ranson will have a big job of rebuilding to do if the current cross country crew is to add to its streak of 17 straight wins.

The big two in Carolina distance running for the past few years, Jack Milne and Jimmy Miller, will be among the missing as will two other mainstays of the 1947 team, Chuch Herty and Alvin Smith. Milne is the defending NCAA Cross country champion.

Number one man for the Ransonmen this year will probably be Sam Magill, one of the six lettermen who have already reported at Fetzer field. Julian MacKenzie, Halstead Holden, Mark Burnham, and Jim Hunt some of the top letter winners.

Frank Hooper, a sophmore this season, showed great promise last year as a freshman. John Hoots, the final Monogrammer, was injured early last year and didn't have much of an opportunity to compete.

Second Year Men

Norm Barringer is another second-year man on the roster while Percy Flowers, who ran the 440 this past spring, and middle distance man Bob Black are newcomers on the squad.

George Harris, who was a promising youngster in 1945, is back in school and may be a valuable addition to the Tar Heel tracksters.

A schedule of six dual meets has already been prepared for this season with another in the tentative stage.

The Tar Heels open their season at home against VPI October 11 and meet Navy the following week at Annapolis. Duke is the next rival, although a definite date for the meet hasn't been set and then the Blue and White harriers travel out to Knoxville to engage the Tennessee Vols on November 1.

N. C. State will be the next team to face Carolina, but that date is also undecided. The Conference meet, slated for College Park, Md., is next on the agenda followed by the season's finale against Virginia at Charlottesville November 27.

There is also a possibility that the local harriers may face Georgia Tech at the Engineers' home grounds sometime during the season.

A freshman team will also compete this year and meets with Virginia and N. C. State are already on the schedule.

Freshman and anyone else interested in trying out for the team can report to Coach Ranson any afternoon at the track from 3 to 4.

Carmichael Lists Staff Aims, Rules For Sports Pages

During the coming year the Daily Tar Heel sports staff will endeavour to adhere to the following sports policy:

1. To report and comment upon the Carolina sporting scene in a full and unbaised manner, giving the reader an honest and complete picture of Tar Heel athletics.

2. To give the reader a fuller look at the sports picture outside of the University as space allows. In accord with this, the National and American league standings as well as scores, will appear daily.

3. To abolish the galaxy of nicknames that are used for Carolina athletic teams such as "White Phantoms" and "Blue Dolphins" and return to exclusive use of "Tar Heels," the official nickname of the school.

4. To encourage participation of readers in the sports page through letters-to-the-sports editor to be published each week as a feature entitled, "The Crowd Roars".

5. To strive for a fuller athletic program with greater student participation to give Carolina the foremost varsity and intramural program in the nation.

Billy Carmichael III
Sports editor

Grid Officials Needed By Mural Department

All students on the campus who are interested in officiating tag football contests are urged to contact the Intramural Department Athletics, Room 311, Woollen gymnasium on or before September 29. There will also be a meeting of those interested in officiating the tag football games at 4 p.m. in Room 302, Woollen on September 29.

There will also be a fall quarter intramural manager's meeting on October 5 in 304 Woollen gymnasium at 7 p.m. It is urgent that a representative of each organization be present.

NO MONOGRAMS

All freshman are reminded that a University rule prohibits the wearing of high school and prep school monograms by students on the campus.

Much Ado About Something

THE MAN ON THE STREET is doing a lot of worrying these days. Not as much about the topic of a hot and cold running war with Russia as one would think; but instead, suffering the annual anguish of a coming football season. Local people are no exception, for the truth of the matter is that Tar Heel fans seem to have enough of a team to worry about.

That's what the preseason poopsters would have you believe. Just loot the local newsstand of their assortment of sporting publications and you can spend a quiet evening at home with the Tar Heels in anywhere from third (Pic) to 11th (Williamson) in the dreams of the nation's sports writers. The worriers are the searchers for truth in the matter. A not so fond recollection drags to mind a similiar preseason billing before a 1947 season that rocked like the Frisco quake before settling down to a diabolical winning way for the Tar Heels.

Which proves nothing except that you can't believe everything you read, a not too difficult or novel idea. After all, soft soap is reputedly 90 per cent lye and the sports page is no exception. But looking a little behind and around the scene, the cautious observer can come bubbling up with a few slight observations on the 1948 Carolina football and its chances for success and national recognition:

(1) The Tar Heels seem much farther advanced in their class and field work this season than they did last year at this time. The tedious and time-taking task of building from the basement up found necessary last year was unnecessary when the grand heired man of Carolina football issued his first call for recruits September first. Experimenting for the most part had been done in the spring and at the cost of games in the past, and the coming of anotoher sunny autumn found the Tar Heels with at least most of the counted noses and heads above the water level.

(2) The spirit of the footballing group impresses a constant Carolina follower as the best since the coming of the New Deal. The true fault of early-season failures last year—has been corrected to a great extent. Which leaves the Tar Heels with the necessary energy and incentive to play football when Texas time arrives tomorrow.

(3) Injuries have, and most probably will, continue to hamper the Tar Heels to a great extent. If the string, tape, and bailing wire holds out, the Carolinians may be able to field their eleven best men each Saturday. Injuries can easily cripple the Home Team at the tackles, guards and fullback. Snavely teams have never kept any creditble company with Lady Luck. A winning team always gets a breadwinner's share of the breaks and Carolina will certainly need them this year to be a winner.

(4) Hosea Rodgers seems to be the man who can deliver the Tar Heels from the ranks of a good team to the ranks of the great. Rodgers, bench and bad-ridden by an assortment of maladies last season, has shaken all but one of these, a bad knee, that won't stand too much shaking itself. Bill Hayes, the understudy who may have to take the feature role at any play, is a comer, but lacks the finish that comes only by playing. He bears watching, booth by fans and opponents alike.

(5) Carolina faces its toughest schedule, not withoutstanding a few complaints from the old grads, in the history of said University. Breather is a forgotten word in the Tar Heel football dictionary. There's Texas to play and then the high jinxed tasks of beating Georgia and Tennessee in their own elements. The other seven teams merely draw additional shutters.

(6) Charlie Justice continues to be a great football player and the drive shaft of the Carolina grid machine. He is a back of all trades any may be headed for his greatest season—as well as the school's.

(7) Carolina hasn't had an undefeated season in 56 years. Injuries, breaks, spirit, schedule all considered, they're due. So goes the football outlook of the Tar Heel sporting picture. One can drew his own conclusions, add his own assumptions, but the play is the pay off, for the proof of the pudding is in the competing.

The Spirit ns Moved

THE SPIRIT HAS BEEN MOVED and even animated. There may or may not be a New Look in Carolina football on the playing fields of Kenan this season, but there certainly promises to be one among the Tar Heel fans in the stands. It seems the hoop and holler boys are not satisfied to have one merely shout his head off for the old school and wear the old school tie. Now they supplement these gesticulations and orations with something new — color card displays

The truth of the matter is that Norm Sper, head cheerleader and aquabatic star on the swimming team, has developed the greatest shot in the arm since penicillin. It is a wonderful display of organization work and cooperation — over two thousand students obeying a single command and it isn't that much like the Army. Tomorrow, Sper's animated cheers get their first public showing after a sneak preview last Spring. It will be first night performance for the California yell leader and his 2,200 odd helpers, most of unprepared students.

But there are to be no fears, say Sper, for everything has been designed for simplicity — it's as easy as eating out of can. Sper like Duz, does everything. Everybody can get into the act. Everybody can be a card. And the success or failure of picturesque project is in the hands of the students and the cards they will hold. The only instructions — don't hurry, don't worry.

A Lot is a Lot is a Lot

SUMMER IS GONE AND WITH IT a lot of newspaper copy about a lot of Tar Heels winning a lot of honors in a lot of different places. All of which proves a number of things, the most modest estimation being that at Carolina the emphasis is on all sports instead of one or two. Which makes for good publicity and a well-rounded sports program that can satisfy even men of distinction.

Which proves that Tar Heels are game for most anything, even Texas.

Simmons, Seixas Keep Chapel Hill In National News

By Buddy Vaden

Many Carolina athletes, although not officially representing the University, kept Chapel Hill in the news this past summer by participating in some of the outstanding athletic events of the summer season.

Floyd (Chunk) Simmons, former Tar Heel track and field star, was entered in the London Olympics and captured third place in the decathlon, one of the most trying of Olympic events. Simmons was leading after the first seven events, but finished third behind Bob Mathias, the boy wonder, and a French star when the tenth event was over late in the evening of the second day. He was running under the colors of the Los Angeles Athletic club.

Sper Misses Olympics

Norm Sper, Southern conference diving champion and head cheerleader, missed the American Olympic squad by a mere .29 of a point. He finished fourth in the trials at Detroit, with the top three divers being selected to represent the United States in that event.

Jim Thomas and Randy Hudson also tried out for the Olympic swimming team, but failed to qualify.

Vic Seixas, mainstay of last year's Tar Heel tennis team, played the summer circuit and came very close to winning several state and national championships. Seeded number one in the NCAA tourney in California, he reached the finals where he was upset by Harry Likas in four sets. He went to the third round of the Pennsylvania mens' championships where he was knocked out of further play by Bill Vogt. He had previously held the Pennsylvania title for two years. Although he failed to reach the finals of the championships at Forest Hills, New York, he was appointed to the American Davis Cup team.

Clark Taylor, Seixas' doubles partner and members two man on the Tar Heel team last year, also saw action during the summer. He was knocked out of the National clay courts championships in Chicago in the second round.

Baseballers Active

Harvie Ward, Carolina's pride and joy on the golf links, reached the semi-finals of the Carolinas Amateur Golf championship before he was downed by Jimmy McNair, four and three.

In baseball, Coach Bunn Hearn's NCAA District three champions reached the Eastern Division playoffs in Winston-Salem before they were downed by Yale. The Tar Heel nine finished third in the Eastern division.

Vinnie Dilorenzo, ace southpaw on last year's squad, has signed with the New York Giants farm club in Trenton, New Jersey. The Trenton club is in the Class B Interstate league.

Another Tar Heel moundsman, Frank Robinson, signed with Buffalo of the International league. He was optioned to Goldsboro of the Coastal Plain League and turned in a creditable record there.

A third Tar Heel baseball player—Jim Kelly—also turned pro, signing with the Charlotte Hornets, a Class B outfit. Jim was the regular leftfielder for the Hornets.

–Tar Heels–

Tar Heel hopes and the eyes of most of the local fans will be focused on Charlie Justice, Carolina's triple-threat All-American tailback. He was stopped cold by the Longhorns in last season's game and many Texas fans couldn't understand his All-American rating. The Carolina Choo-Choo, whose ability is recognized everywhere in these parts, will be out to prove his worth to the Texans.

One-Two Punch

Speedy Hosea Rodgers, whose running from the fullback slot should give the Tar Heels something of Army's old Blanchard-Davis punch, is the other Carolina back being relied upon to split the Texas defense. Other backfield starters probably will be John Clements, wingback, and Don Hartig, blocking back.

Carolina again will be strong at end this season. Returning to the fold are Art Weiner, Ken Powell, Bob Cox, Mike Rubish, Max Cooke, and Fred Bauer, along with newcomer Ed Washington. Versatile Joe Romano, who performs at nearly every line position, also will see service at the end position.

Tackle is also fairly well-fortified, despite the fact that Haywood Fowle has a broken nose and Ted Hazelwood only recently was released from the infirmary. Others at this post are veteran Chan Highsmith, Stan Marczyk, and Len Szafaryn.

With Dan Steigman back at center, the pivot position in the Carolina line should be strong. Highsmith may see action at this spot, and there are Al Bernot and Irv Holdash as reserves.

Defensive Backs

Top reserve backs on the team are Billy Hayes, first-line replacement at fullback; Fred Sherman, Bill Flamisch, Billy Britt, Bob Kennedy, Dick Bunting, Bill Maceyko, and Bobby Weant. Some of these will see service as defensive backs only.

The heavy work for the Tar Heels prior to the game is over and the squad has been pronounced ready for the game. Carolina met South Carolina, which used the T-formation that Texas employs, twice in practice games. So that formation should be familiar to the locals.

At any rate, 42,000 fans will jam Kenan Stadium for the colorful spectacle, and most of them will be pulling for the Tar Heels. The Carolina cheering section will make public its much-publicized color cards, and Cheerleader Norm Sper has some excellent plans for the half-time feature. The Carolina band will be on hand, and Texas' Governor Beauford Jester will be there. It all points to a great day.

spoke of dog biscuits every day, streets teeming with members of the canine fair sex, double features and cars with shining hubcaps, cocktail lounges and penthouse living. In his consumate wisdom, he es-chewed all of the temptations and elected to spend his final months in Chapel Hill. It broke up a column-combination that probably could have written a bold finis to many an established prattler.

Dan wanted it that way, and now that he's licking his chops and guzzling nectar instead of suds, he seems to have done most right. For there is in Chapel Hill, even with its 7,000 students and its crowded campus, a way of living far wiser than what they've fabricated in New York City. Up here, everybody's running and most of the time on a treadmill. You rarely step off long enough to look around and do any growing. At Chapel Hill, there is time for that very important process. And, where else could a man and a dog get away with the columns Dan and I wrote?

This pun is for my erstwhile companion. (Fair warning to all of you.) One check for a short bier.

Tar Heels Tangle With Texas In Kenan Today

Probably No Saturday Classes Until Fall Of 1949--House

May Start Extra Day Next Year

An official statement concerning the long-rumored Saturday classes was released by Chancellor Robert House yesterday. The statement disclosed that there is little chance of Saturday classes being instituted here in the 1948-49 academic year but that a five and one-half class week is almost a certainly for next September.

Desperate need for classroom space, which would be increased under a semester system, may be the determining factor in the final decision, the statement indicated.

At present the University is studying the situation and will make a report to the mid-winter meeting of the board of trustees.

Complete text of House's statement follows:

"At the June meeting of the Board of Trustees a resolution was passed that the Administration "set in motion immediately a plan looking toward the resumption of Saturday classes as early as practicable.

"The academic deans of the University began immediately to study the question and to call faculty and students in to consultation. Sentiment and opinion here overwhelmingly favored the 5-day week. Moreover, the question arose whether the trustees had issued a mandate to students and faculty to resume Saturday classes.

"Mr. William Horner, the mover of the resolution, was consulted on this question. He stated that he had no intention of moving a mandatory resolution. What he wanted, he stated, was recognition by students and faculty of the fact that the 5-day week plan was in question in the Board of Trustees, and a serious study and plan to be initiated by the students and faculty to resume the 5½ day plan.

"At the meeting of the Executive committee of the Board of Trustees on September 17, President Graham reported that the studies were going forward and would be a matter of faculty business in the fall quarter. In discussion of the report the sentiment of the board for resumption of Saturday classes was emphasized. At the same time it

Cheering Students Stage First Rally For Snavely, Team

By Herb Nachman

Carolina spirit flamed through Memorial hall last night and followed more than 4,000 cheering students to Fetzer Field where Carl Snavely and his mighty eleven told them what they wanted to know.

It came from Charlie Justice who said to a hushed crowd, "I haven't got a prepared speech, but tomorrow afternoon you're going to see this football team up here, go out and beat Texas!"

A short talk by Coach Snavely, Joe Romano, Hosea Rodgers and others put the finishing touches to a pep rally that shook Memorial hall to the rafters and broughts students to sit in windows and bulge out through the doors of the over-crowded auditorium.

Head Cheerleader Norm Sper rallied the thousands from the first yell and kept spirits high for over an hour and a half with cheers and songs, old and new.

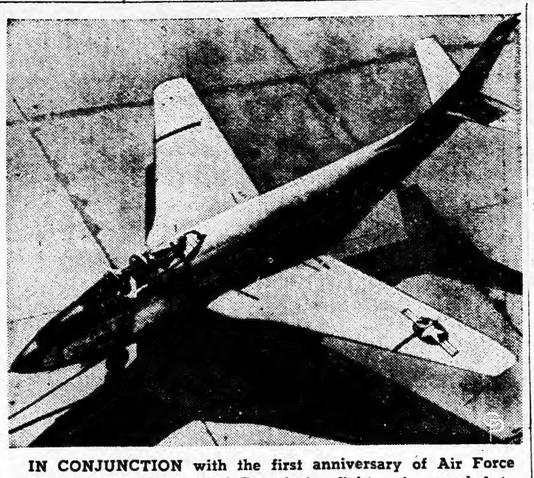
The program in Memorial hall included the appearance of Norman Cordon Metropolitan Opera star, who led the singing of "The Eyes of Texas Are Upon You," and "Hark the Sound."

Vic Huggins, who led the University's cheering section in 1925, brought the entire student body to its feet with a yell in tribute to Sper. Frank Matthews, music student, introduced a new fight song to the crowd.

The highlight of the entertainment program was the Sigma Chi sextette in their singing of "Tradition" with words by Hank Beebe.

Sper introduced a new yell to the students called "Yackety Yack" which he said had been worked out for the squad by Kay Kyser. Sper described the cheer as a "talking yell."

The University band provided background for all the cheers and songs which rocked the auditorium. Earl Slocum directed the band in a novelty number entitled "The Swing Blues."



Familiar sounds of "Ca-ro-li-na," "Blue and White," "Let's Go Carolina," "We Want Snavely!" and "Here Comes Carolinalina" rounded out the program that makes any pep rally a success.

Group Is Accepting Tryout Manuscripts

Manuscripts are now being accepted by Chi Delta Phi, honorary literary sorority, as tryouts in its fall membership drive.

Short stories, poems, plays, essays, and other forms of creative writing may be turned in at the information office at Graham Memorial by any woman student interested in joining this national group.

Present members of the sorority will hold their first fall meeting Oct. 5 at 8 o'clock in the Grail room of Graham Memorial.

IN CONJUNCTION with the first anniversary of Air Force day, the XF-88, new U.S.A.F. twin-jet fighter, is revealed to the public for the first time at the Muroc air base, Cal. The sleek, swept-back wing craft has a wing-span of 40 feet and is about 55 feet long. The plane is designed as a "penetration" fighter, capable of operating deep inside enemy territory.

Grail Dance Scheduled In Gymnasium Tonight

By Charlie Gibson

Most important of the organized post-Texas game celebrations on campus tonight will have Woollen gymnasium nvaded by Tar Heels tapping their heels from 9 o'clock till midnight to music by Roy Cole and his 15-piece orchestra.

The initial Grail dance of the '48-'49 school year will be a semi-formal affair, all men being required to wear coats and ties. Admission will be open to the student body at large.

Tickets were on sale in the court yesterday and will be sold again tonight at the door for $$1 each to couples and stags alike. Proceeds will be added to a scholarship fund with which the Order of the Grail, honorary serviec organization of annually chosen student leaders, assists needy University enrollees in financing their education here.

Cole has the oldest of the campus orchestras now in operation. Original arrangements of the latest in popular music has won the Cole clan a wide following due to appearances on various college campuses and at beach nightclubs throughout the Carolinas and Virginia.

Nationally known "name bands" to appear here for Friday and Saturday night dances and afternoon concerts are yet to be announced.

Inspection Lane

University and Chapel Hill car-owners may have their automobiles inspected by the state inspection lane on Cameron avenue through next Wednesday.

....All jalopies and limousines of vintage 1937 and 1946 must be inspected by the end of September. The deadline for models 1938, 1939, 1943, 1944 and 1945 must be inspected before the end of October.

Building Tumbles Burying Sixteen

CHARLOTTE, Sept. 24.—(UP)—Nine persons were injured today, three women seriously, when the third floor of the American Trust Co. building tumbled in and buried 16 employes under timbers and plaster.

Doctors said Julia Ann Proctor and Mrs. Muriel R. Summerville received broken backs and Mrs. Louise Clontz' face was crushed.

The collapse occurred shortly after employes came to work. Assistant Manager E. C. Sullivan blamed it on heavy air conditioning equipment being installed on the floor above during remodeling of the building.

Firemen said only the desks in the second-floor room kept the employes from being crushed to death.

The other six injured were reported in good condition.

YMCA Cabinet

The YMCA cabinet will hold its first meeting of this school year Monday night at 7 o'clock in the Y building, Pete Burks announced yesterday. Refreshfreshments will be served, and important plans for the present quarter will be discussed.

YW Begins Yearly Membership Drive To Enlist Coeds in Varied Program

Under the direction of co-chairman Patsy McNutt and Jean McKeithan, the fall membership drive of the YWCA began officially Thursday night in women's dormitories.

Membership cards were distributed and explanations of the work of the Y were given by cabinet members at house meetings. Cards should be filled out by both new and old students and returned to cabinet members or the Y office by Tuesday. In the sorority houses the drive will be conducted the week of Oct. 3.

Offered in the program this year are nearly 15 committees with a variety of activities. Among new groups are the campus affairs committee, of which Anne Wells is chairman, which plans investigation and discussion of campus politics, adminstration procedures, and other matters of student interest; and

Highway Patrol Expects Crowd Of 50,000 Here

RALEIGH, N. C., Sept. 24—(UP)—Football fans who don't want to be late for one of the major games tomorrow were advised by the State Highway Patrol today to remain a discreet distance behind the car ahead.

Patrol officials said they expected a crowd of 59,000 at Chapel Hill for the North Carolina-Texas game and an additional 20,000 at Raleigh for the Duke-North Carolina State conference tilt.

Patrol Commander H. J. Hatcher said 90 highway patrolmen will be on hand to direct traffic at Chapel Hill. He said there would be oneway traffic east and west of Chapel Hill before and after the game.

Thirty patrolmen were scheduled to direct trafifc at Raleigh.

Hatcher said intricate parking plans had been worked out for crowds going to both games. He said if the fans would cooperate there would be few if any traffic jams after the games.

Cost of Living Rising Steadily

CHICAGO, Sept. 24—(UP)—The government reported a new high in the cost of living today while farmers bushed to protect themselves against an expected drop in grain prices.

The Labor department said the cost of living last month hit 74.5 per cent over the 1935-1939 average. Food costs fell one-tenth of one per cent, but other items in the home budget, including rent, rose.

The Agriculture department said that farmers are asking for government price support loans in what is growing into a record rush. There are bumper crops again this year after a long stretch of rich harvests, experts said, and farmers are recalling the depression after World War I.

FORMER DEAN of Students E. L. Mackie has taken over the position of Dean of Student Awards and Distinctions. His position as Dean of Students was taken over by former Dean of Men Fred Weaver. Bill Friday, a former prominent member of the University Law School has filled the position vacated by Weaver.

Draft Violator Is Given Chance To Think it Over

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—(UP)—An 18-year-old draft violator was chided by a judge today and told he was "too young to have ideas."

Stuart Perkoff, New York's first violator of the peacetime draft, was given a week to reconsider his stand as a conscientious objector. He failed to register last Saturday and surrendered to the FBI.

"He's too young to have ideas—He's only a baby," said judge Edward A. Conger. He added that "Those men going away are babies too."

"It's not up to you and me to make up our minds as to what we would do," Conger said. "The country may be in peril. I do not think I would be too proud if my boy had the same idea."

Assistant U. S. Atty. William Koerner said he would delay seeking an indictment because he wanted Perkoff to think over the seriousness of draft evasion.

Dedmond; Godwin Take Offices In Regional N.S.A. Organization

Student Body President Jess Dedmond and Vice-President Jim Godwin were elected president and secretary-treasurer respectively of the Virginia-Carolina regional organization of the National Students Association at the annual Congress held in Madison, Wisconsin this summer.

Attended by over 1,000 students representing 500 American colleges and universities, the the NSA conference was held at the University of Wisconsin from August 23 to the 28th. Dedmond, Godwin and Al Lowenstein represented the University.

The Virginia-Carolina regional organization, set upas a geographical unit of the NSA, is comprised of member colleges in West Virginia, Virginia, North Carolina, and South Carolina. Dedmond announced yesterday that a regional assembly will be held late in November with dele-

Five Students Escape Injury In Two-Automobile Collision

Two Sigma Chi's and three freshmen quonset hutters narnowly escaped serious injury yesterday afternoon when their two automobiles collided on the Booker Creek bridge about two miles east of Chapel Hill on highway 15.

The automobiles were a 1948 maroon Chrysler club-coupe driven by University freshman John Bond of Los Angeles, Cal., and a 1939 green Dodge sedan driven by Carol Fisher of Greenville, N. C.

Here's how the wreck occured: Fisher was coming toward the bridge heading east. Bond was on the bridge coming in the opposite direction. Fisher said, "When I saw the other car on the bridge, I swerved to give him more room, I was caught by the soft shoulders and the car went out of control."

Bond said that when he saw Fisher begin skidding he also swerved to get out of his way and they collided about 25 feet past the bridge. Bond then went over the 20-foot embankment on his side of the road and almost overturned. Fisher's vehicle continued to skid until it came to a halt just past the bridge. Fisher said he was thrown clear of the car when he was on the bridge but was uninjured.

The two drivers agreed that the wreck was unavoidable and both breathed a sigh of relief when they found no one was

Progressive Party Ballot Petition Blocked by Illinois Supreme Court

CHICAGO, Sept. 24—(UP)—The Progressive party was rebuffed by the Illinois Supreme court today in one attempt to get on the state ballot, while it launched another try in Federal District court.

At Springfield, the high court denied a petition for permission to file a mandamus action to put Henry A. Wallace and Glen Taylor on the ballot.

The Supreme court earlier refused to review an action of the State Election commission in banning all progressive candidates from the state ballot, except local candidates in Cook county (Chicago).

The Election commission had ruled that petitions for a place on the ballot were invalid because some of the signers had voted for another party in the Illinois primary last April.

Card Schedule Lists 13 Stunts In Game Today

Today is C-day. For this afternoon during halftime at Kenan stadium, the long-awaited Carolina color cards will be unveiled to northside spectators and neck craners on the southside too.

Thirteen stunts will be used and the animated activity will get underway right at halftime with the University band slated to play a strong supporting role.

Forming the pictures is easy, according to Cheerleader Norm Sper, and none of the participants has a thing to worry about —except the fact that they can't see the spectacle.

Although only two sections of students will take part in the performance, Sper has asked that everyone sitting in student seats wear either white or a light color.

Rules for forming the pictures are:

1. No one in the card section may leave the stands at halftime.
2. Everyone should check his seat and row numbers with the seat and row numbers on his instruction card.
3. Each person must have four color cards and an individual instruction card.
4. Everyone should follow the instructions on his own card and not worry about what those near him are doing.
5. Everyone must follow the leader.

Truman Restored To Ballot in La.

BATON ROUGE, La., Sept. 24.—(UP)—The House of Representatives unanimously agreed today that President Truman's name should be restored to the November ballot in Louisiana but it specifically forbade that he be called any variety of Democrat.

The House passed, 89 to 0, in five minutes a bill that would permit President Truman's name to be put back on the ballot if 100 voters sign a petition. The bill was sent on to the Senate, where final passage was expected Sunday night.

The bill said the president could not have his name under the picture of the roster that is the traditional Democratic party symbol in Louisiana. Nor can electors for Mr. Truman and Sen Alben W. Barkley, his running mate, be listed under a party name "Similar to that of the Democratic party."

Legislators who wrote this provision said it was specifically designed to keep Mr. Truman's electors from calling themselves crats." They said Truman-Barkley electors could not refer to themselves as Democrats in any fashion.

Texas Rated Slight Edge Over Locals

By Dick Jenrette

Twelve months of waiting comes to an end for Carolina's grid Tar Heels at 2:30 today, but whether they get revenge for last season's 34-0 shellacking administered by the Texas Longhorns remains to be seen. The experts pick the Longhorns by a single touchdown, but the 42,000 fans expected for the game won't be satisfied with anything less than a Carolina victory.

Both teams are primed for the game and in good physical condition. One Texas player, center Dick Harris, probably will miss out on the action because of a bad knee, but the Longhorns have a capable replacement in Dick Rowan. Harris, an All-American prospect, is particularly adept on defense. Rowan appears his equal on defense however.

Largely responsible for Texas' pre-game rating as favorite is the 33-0 triumph the Longhorns recorded over LSU last week. Coach Blair Cherry's boys gave convincing evidence that this current Texas team is on a par with last year's outfit.

Opening Test

Moreover, today's encounter will be the first test of the season for Carolina. Although Coach Carl Snavely has an ample supply of veterans from last year's outfit, the team can't be expected to function with the finesse which the 1947 eleven exhibited near the close of the season.

Yet no one is mourning in the Tar Heel camp, unless it is Coach Snavely, who possesses the typical coaches' pessimism. Pre-season predictions have the Tar Heels rated as high as third in the nation—ahead of Texas—and no worse than ninth in any selection. Chalie Justice heads a talented contingent of 34 lettermen who romped through their last seven opponents in '47.

Carolina is considered a match for the Longhorns on power plays through the line, but can't equal the Texans' speed. In Byron Gillory, Billy Pyle, and Perry Samuels the Longhorns have three of the fastest backs in collegiate football. Both teams have good kickers. Carolina's Justice has an established reputation and Texas' Frank Guess can boot with the best.

Pole Asks Refuge From Police State

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—(UP)—The Polish military attache who broke with the Communist-dominated government yesterday probably will get sanctuary in the United States for himself and his family as soon as he asks for it, diplomatic sources said today.

These informants said the attache, Lt. Gen. Izydor Modelski, has not notified the State department officially that he is severing his connections with the Warsaw government.

The department had no comment but it was recalled that President Truman and Secretary

Spanish Club

The Spanish club will have its first meeting of the fall quarter Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock in room 3 of Caldwell Y, according to an announcement today from Tom Cunningham, president of the language group. All interested persons who speak Spanish are invited to attend this meeting, Cunningham said.

The Friendly Gesture

One of the best examples of cooperation between town merchants and University students that has been seen here in a long time was exhibited by the Chapel Hill Merchants Association and Chamber of Commerce this week. It began when 65 students cut their vacation period a week short to return to Chapel Hill as leaders in the program for orientation of new students. They arrived at their first meeting last Friday to find that Vic Huggins, president of the merchants association had provided buffet refreshments and cold drinks for them. Thereafter at each meeting of the orientation counselors, coca-colas were furnished at the expense of the merchants.

This was only the beginning. For many years Carrington Smith, former president of the merchants association and operator of the Carolina and Pick Theatres, has presented a complimentary theatre ticket to each new student. This year, however, almost all of the merchants in town joined in distributing to the new students envelopes containing ash trays, blotters, and coupons for merchandise at the various stores. In addition, a representative of the chamber of commerce began making personal visits to the homes of married students.

Climax of this friendly gesture of the merchants toward the students came Thursday night in the form of a banquet for all orientation counsellors and other student leaders in Danziger's new rathskeller, followed by a movie at the Carolina theatre. In order to hold the banquet as scheduled, Danziger speeded up preparations for the opening of his new establishment—and he served an excellent meal.

In past years the merchants have claimed—and with some reason that blame for almost every student gripe has been laid upon them and the Umstead act, but this friendly gesture on the part of the merchants association, and especially of its president Vic Huggins, points toward an era of closer cooperation and better relations between students and the business operators of Chapel Hill.

To Think Or Not?

The United States is supposedly a free country, and people in a free country are supposed to be able to think for themselves. This should be especially true of college students. We sincerely hope that it is, for in the coming months there will appear on this page of the Daily Tar Heel a wide variety of columns and editorials, and it will take a discriminating reader to know what he is reading.

The writers of these columns will be, like most of their readers, college students. As a group they will be no wiser and no dumber than the average of their fellows. They may not be the most capable ones for the job, but at least they will not be afraid to write what they think and sign their names to it. Some of the articles will be intended only to entertain, others only to give information. But there will be many which will express all shades of opinion on highly controversial subjects. Of these there will be those that are carefully thought out, logical analyses, there will be those that are pure propaganda in varying degrees of camouflage, and there will be those that are nothing but so much poppycock. The Daily Tar Heel will furnish no labels to say which are which—to decide that will be the job of the reader.

With most of the opinions the reader will probably disagree. Why not? The columnists will disagree among themselves and the editor will probably disagree with all of them. In his disagreeing, however, we ask that the reader not merely discard the idea or opinion as so much tommyrot expounded by a stupid ass, but examine the reasoning of his disagreement—that he take the idea out of the column and weigh it carefully. He may find one worth accepting. And if, after considering the subject, he thinks he has a better idea, he is invited to set it forth on this page in a letter to the editor.

This university is renowned as a liberal institution, and the meaning of that word "liberal" is that the University not only allows but encourages its students to examine new ideas and philosophies and to re-examine old ones, to think for themselves and to form their own opinions even though no one else in the world agrees with them.

At a time when the actions of governments and the pressure of public opinion are pushing people toward unquestioning acceptance of established doctrines it is well that we remember that two of the elements which have made America great are a scientific curiosity and the ability of the individual American to think for himself.

Odds And Ends

ON CAMPUS: Pansies to the Orientation committee! (Never let it be said what we are victims of cliche'-itis.) We may be at each other's throats about politics, both national and campus variety, but we are all agreed that this year's orientation program clicked with the perfection of a met performance. The only advice offered for future counselors is that the information tables offer more than "simple advice". Leave us hope that statement is no reflection on the minds of the noble souls who gave their all in service to the new-comers. Even the coed freshman who balked at the idea of taking her physical with the 30 boys in her counselor's group is finally settled down happily into Carolina life. Why, the dogs themselves look pleased about the matter. (At this point somebody is going to accuse us of turning the whole orientation story into a shaggy dog tale.)

SPEAKING OF performances and animals, we are reminded of the many comments that are circulating about the Monogram club's new Circus Room. Folks seem to have taken to that place like ducks to water. So be sure to drop in to see the Hill's nearest facsimile to a circus parade, excluding the "Y" court, and then rest your weary bones on one of the comfortable chairs in the lounge. Within the next few days you should be able to break into "Animal Crackers in My Soup" and have a few meals in the downstairs cafeteria.

TOM KERR wishes to bring to the student body's attention that that expedition to the Raleigh-Durham airport cost a little more than gas and oil—the last two cars of the caravan whizzed home to the tune of $14. Just too bad that stop light turned red—but even worse that Durham has such an efficient police force.

FACES TURNED red for a group of so-called campus wheels early this week. They were celebrating their return to school over bumpers of beer amid much mirth. When a mocking laugh arose from a nearby table of high school students, the big shots went over to set things straight. The high school students turned out to be UNC freshmen—and at least one of the wheels was wearing the circular badge denoting "freshman's friend".

THIS YEAR'S freshman class must be bulging to their fingertips with talent. At least that's the way it sounds around Graham Memorial these days, what with the piano going in the main lounge from 8 in the morning until ???? (those coed closing hours keep us from hearing the finale) at night. How 'bout dropping in to hear the concerts and maybe working into the bridge tournament if you happen to be there Tuesday night.

IN TOWN: Mrs. F. F. Bradshaw has done her share of orientating new-comers among the townspeople with her chats and visits, sponsored by the Merchant's association. At latest report her score was 25 personal calls, several of which were on wives of students.

STUDENTS will be given opportunity to keep in closer touch with the town this year through the Chapel Hill Weekly. Special student subscription rates for 9 months are $1.50 this year. In addition, copies of the paper will be on sale in the "Y" and the lobby of Lenoir.

IN THE INFIRMARY are Mary Louise Tomlin, June A. Cairn, Carolyn E. McElveen, Lloyd A. Bell, Emile Saleeby, Alvin Bernot, Ben M. Jones, Kenneth Strayhorn, Dean Mathews, Luther Trexler, Julius Culp, George F. Wooten, Irving Goodwin, Rodney Leonard, David Issac, and William Henderson. We don't know them all, but that's a darn good football center, the president of the senior class, a passel of friends, and we hope they're all out by the time this column appears again.

These Days

Fie Upon You, Mr. Truman

By George E. Sokolsky

Mr. Truman has missed the tone of the hour. This is not the time to "give them hell." It is a time for a serious and sober discussion of national affairs. It is not a time for a McKinley-Bryan campaign, nor even for a Roosevelt-Wilkie campaign. It is a time for Lincoln-Douglas debates.

Let me cite one reason:

At the moment that Mr. Truman is giving them hell—as he put it—American delegates are meeting with delegations of all nations to continue efforts to reach a peace. It is three years since the war ended but there is no peace. In fact, we may be very close to a fighting war. The Russians may decide to push us out of Berlin at any moment and should they do it, we shall either have to fight or suffer defeat and one is as bad as the other. It is a very sobering thought that we are, in this September, 1948, at the climatic moment of World War II.

Under our constitution, we have to hold a general election this year, to choose a President, the whole body of the House of Representatives and one-third of the Senate. No election could have been held at a worse time. But there it is and decent men make the most of it without degrading themselves or their country. Unfortunately, year after year, the elections become more vaudevillian. There are many explanations for this trend but the trend itself is too obvious not to cause distress.

Earl Warren, the Republican candidate for vice-president, set the high note for this campaign when he recognized that while the two-party system is essential to the American political structure, it must be recognized that there is good in both parties, that both have served America well. He did not attack President Truman; he did not vituperate. He was calm, dignified and statesmanlike. He followed the course set by Governor Dewey and so ably pursued by Harold Stassen in his Detroit speech. It was an encouraging tone and gave some hope of a campaign on issues not on wisecracks.

It would be to the best interests of the United States if President Truman adopted a similar lofty approach to his compaign. After all, America is, at this moment in human history, the central nation of the world, and Harry Truman is its President. True, he is also a candidate, but as President, he must uphold the dignity of his office and of his nation.

Truman's divisive tactics are bad for America. I believe that they are also bad for Truman, as they will disgust many sober, thoughtful Americans, as they already have such men as Jesse Jones, Dean Alfange and others who are announcing against him. But that is his business. Mine and yours is the broader issue that his vituperation, his "give them hell" attitude, hurts America because it degenerates America. It gives the impression of political immaturity, of schoolboys sticking out their tongues at each other. All that may be funny—but we do not like to see our President imitating Milton Berle.

This Changing World

The System Is At Fault

By Bill Robertson

In the autobiography of Lincoln Steffens there is a chapter entitled "Preparing For College." We should like to quote a paragragh from it, which will no doubt have a familiar ring to the overwhelming majority of our student body. It runs as follows:

The elect were for the most part boys who had been brought up to do their duty. They memorized whatever their teachers told them to learn. Whether they wanted to know it, whether they understood it or no, they could remember and recite it. Their own driving motives were, so far as I could make out, not curiosity; they rarely talked about our studies, and if I spoke of the implications of something we had read or heard, they looked dazed or indifferent . . . . .

It is shockingly unpleasant to begin our first article of the year with such a quotation, but our purpose is not to increase the cynicism that exists among the students but to point to the causes of this condition described so well by Lincoln Steffens.

In the first place, our higher educational system is built upon a dog-eat-dog social system in which I get ahead only at the expense of someone else. The "Yankee swap" is traditional in our country, and, if my swap is clever enough, I shall end up becoming a Wall Street financier. For this an education is not necessary-so why take an interest in learning?

Further, our educational system is built upon a social system in which planning for the future is utterly impossible. (What will you be doing this time next year?) Aside from the fact that a terrible economic crisis is approaching in our country, which will increase unemployment and bring untold suffering to millions, the future is one of uncertainty and instability for the great majority of our students. This state of affairs is accompanied by all sorts of psychological problems if one begins to think. It is best to continue to memorize mechanically, and not to try to figure out what makes our society tick.

Lastly, our society, by its very nature, can not allow its young people to figure out the true and basic causes of the evils, the "crying injustices" in it, which are obvious to all students. The result would be a growing revolt against the "status quo". For this reason there is a deliberate perversion of the educational system to suit the needs of the profit system, in order to produce intellectual robots — and, in case these robots should begin to think, there are available preachers who preach the kind of despair and cynicism which gripped the feudal nobility before the French Revolution.

The corruption and decay of our educational system is contained in the corruption and decay of our social system. But an honest study of dying capitalism should give our student body no cause for despair. Rather it should give us greater cause to put forth our best efforts. Something is dying-but something is also being born.

It is our duty as American students to preserve our intellectual integrity in this time of crisis.

A Freshman Speaks

Editor:

As a freshman I would like to express in deepest sincerity my feeling of gratitude toward the orientation program and the fine job it has done here at Carolina. I believe that all freshmen, as myself, after arriving here only a few hours, were made to feel at home.

Charlie Loudermilk, counselor of team six, as well as all counselors have filled that gap of being a student of the University and just being here.

Even during the short time that I have been here I have grown to love Carolina, its traditions, and all the honor and decency it stands for and has stood for, for the past 155 years.

The freshmen and newcomers that I have met all have this feeling in common, and I do not believe that this would have been accomplished so soon if it had not been for the orientation committee and its work.

I firmly believe that I can say this in behalf of all freshmen: Gentleman, we are proud to be a part of Carolina and proud that it is going to be a part of us. However, all we can say at the present moment is, "Thanks, men, and we won't let you down".

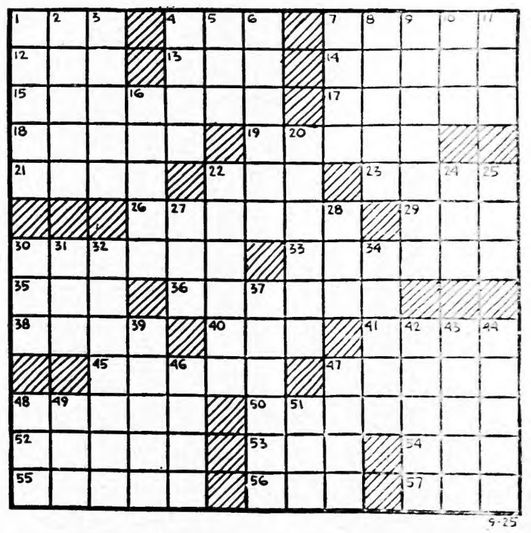
Forum Fills A Need

By Bill Buchan

One of Carolina's most active and newest organizations is the Carolina Forum which was formed last spring by the Student Legislature for the unenviable task of securing speakers for the campus.

Under the direction of Chubby Cholly Long, the group has obtained acceptances from several senators, chairmen of strategic government agencies and other current important Americans.



Among the speakers listed for appearance here during the coming year are Senator Owen Brewster of Maine, scheduled for February; Marriner Eccles, vice-chairman of the Federal Reserve system on October 15; Earle Bunting, chairman of the National Association of Manufacturers for the fall; and Judge T. Allen Goldsborough, John L. Lewis's court buddy, for December.

Long listed other notables who have been contacted and have given tenative nods toward an appearance here, however their names will not be published until their appearance is definately set. Among these men are high ranking candidates for political offices this fall.

The Forum chairman did state, however, that President Truman, Governor Warren and Governor Thurmond had been invited. A definite yes or no reply hasn't been received from any of these candidates yet. Henry Wallace turned down an invitation for another appearance in North Carolina. (And who could blame him?)

Long stated that the Carolina Forum is anxious to assist any organization on the campus in securing speakers for any program they have planned. The membership of the forum is made up of representatives from leading forensic and political campus groups. The officers for the coming year are Charlie Long, representing the Di Senate, chairman; Herb Alexander, representing the Carolina Political Union, vice-chairman; Peter Gerns, representing the Phi Assembly, treasurer; Edie Knight, representing the Collegiate Council for United Nations, chairman in charge of arrangements; Herb Mitchell, representing the Student Legislature, publicity chairman; Banks Talley, representing the International Relations Club, secretary and Jake Wicker, representing the Student Body president, co-ordinator.

The Carolina Forum, long needed on the campus, will eliminate the former constant problem of conflicting speaker programs that were presented by various organizations. The group is composed of some of our most capable, sincere leaders and results can be expected of them. They're certainly off to a good start and are to be commended for the schedule of speakers lined up for this school term.

By BILLY CARMICHAEL III

The Thundering Herd

A THUNDERING HERD OF TEXAS LONGHORNS will bull [illegible] way into Kenan stadium this afternoon to do what many Texans and numerous bookies alike would call somewhat dubious battle. The dubious part seems to center around the football team University of North Carolina who are said to need a seven to 21 point handicap to even enter the playing field.

With the Texans a greater part of all this pre-game patter is primarily state pride, since down in the Lone Star areas, Texas is next to cleanliness. But the bookies are something to think about with the utmost intensity before choosing between school and poverty. The Wizards of Odds have never played for the love of the game.

A contradictory chorus chimes in from the Tar Heel side of the field with a Gregorian chant of "The bigger the pride, the harder they fall." Seems the local lads are not to frightened by rotogravure reputations. They remember what Bill Southworth told the Cards one recent year in the World Series against the Yankees: "Don't let them scare you, boys, they put their pants on the same way you do—one leg at a time." The Texans, say an observer, also follow this practice.

Somebody's Wrong

THUS DEVELOPED IS A CONFLICT of ideas—Texas thinks they'll romp over the Tar Heels while the Carolina team is not yet ready to burn Atlanta. The truth of the matter is that neither team is weak at doing most anything. They were both built to be the nation's best and both, the Longhorns with Cherry on top and the Tar Heels with Snavely at the helm, have achieved most of their purpose.

Texas sports what many consider the biggest and fastest line in the country, together with a herd of cow pony backs that don't have much trouble keeping up with the big boys in front. Yet, besides the fact that this team won nine of ten games last year, averaged 28 points a game, stomped Alabama in the Sugar Bowl and creamed LSU last week, they haven't been too impressive.

The Tar Heels, on the other hand, don't claim much weight or much speed. In fact, they're yet to make a claim, preferring to wait and take their chances on staking out a few in the Texas end zone this afternoon.

T Against Singlewing

THE GAME WILL ALSO OFFER an interesting contrast of offenses. A great T-team against a possibly great single-wing team. The Texas and their T will depend primarily on speed and deception with hand-offs and pitch-outs that make you think a fellow going to steal second base when he makes a sudden break for center field. Power in the T is secondary. It will be primary in the single-wing attack of the locals, where the object is to put the maxium number of blockers in front of the ball carrier. This power will be used to move heavier Texans, who brought their own beef with them—built in. And there is at least enough deception in the single-wing to fool some of the people, some of the time.

A lackadaisical conclusion is that defense will take a back seat throughout most of the afternoon, a statement that will bring denials of emphasis from both sides. The question is "When will the boys have time for it?", and the professional leagues long ago proved that defense football without help from the elements can not hold its own against a modern day offense.

A Gallant Try

ALL OF WHICH LEAVES NOTHING TO DO but pick the winner. The Daily Tar Heel's latest board of psuedo-second guessers have returned a split verdict in the case. Jake Wade, Tar Heel tub thumper, and Dick Jenrette, who covers the Tar Heels, pick Carolina. Orville Champbell, the publisher of the DTH likes Texas, while Jeff of the local emporium of Jeff's crawls far out on the limb to call a tie.

As for the Faithful Scribe, torn between love of school and devotion to duty, a firm clutch on the old school tie and a quiet vote for the Tar Heels. The difference—Charlie Justice—tipping the scales to a Carolina victory—it says here. . .

For the Justice is ready for his greatest go with the Tar Heels. With two years experience behind him in the Snavely system, he has learned to pass and defend to supplement his tremendous offense talent as a climax runner. He is now a back of all trades and the potential brightest star in Carolina Constellation.

Francis Bacon, a veritible unknown to the sports world, had the right idea when he said. . ."Revenge is wild Justice. . . ." 'Tis the day to bring home Bacon.

More Than 42,000 Expected to Jam Stands at Kenan

Passing could very well decide the game. Last year it was Bobby Layne's aerials that were largely responsible for the crushing Carolina deteat, but Layne has graduated. Thus the burden of passing has fallen to Layne's replacement, Paul Campbell. Observers close to the Texas team report Campbell a match for Layne in ball-handling, but he can't match his predecessor's passing.

If Campbell has a bad day—and Texas finds the need of going through the air-lanes—reserve Quarterback Bill Allen may be called in. Although only a sophomore, Allen completed seven of ten tosses against LSU last week, and once connected on ten straight passes thrown against the first string in a practice session. Tar Heel fans should watch him closely.

With Charlie Justice and Hosea Rodgers doing the hurling, Carolina may unveil a passing attack which will cause the visitors plenty of trouble. In addition, Carolina has a capable crew of receivers in Ken Powell, Art Weiner, Bob Cox, and Mike Rubish.

Lineup Changes

Coach Cherry has elected to make two late changes in the Texas starting lineup. Regular Fullback Tom Landry sustained a charley horse last week in practice and won't be ready to open the game. In his place will be Ray Borneman, a hard-bucking 202-pounder. He will vie with the Tar Heels' Rodgers as the top fullback.

The other change will be at right end, the post usually held down by Dale Schwartzkopf. Schwartzkopf has a injured foot, and Cherry expects to start Gorgeous George McCall, a handsome lad rated as a better pass receiver than Schwartzkopf.

Carolina's starting lineup may not be determined until game time, as the Tar Heels again will empty the two-team system for offense and defense. However, this mass substitution will be used more sparingly this year because of graduation and invasion from pro ranks.

The starting unit likely will be composed of Don Hartig, Johnny Clements, Justice, and Rodgers in the backfield; and Art Weiner and Bob Cox, ends; Ted Hazelwood and Chan Highsmith, tackles; Bob Mitten and Sid Varney, guards; and Dan Steigman, center. Hazelwood has been bothered by injuries recently but appears ready to go.

Thoughts of Texas Must Inspire These Frowns

WHEN THE PHOTOGRAPHER asked Don Hartig, left, and Hosea Rodgers to pose before the camera with a grim look, he probably encountered little difficulty in getting the two to comply. All Hartig and Rodgers had to do for inspiration was to remember last season's Carolina-Texas game, which the Longhorns copped, 34-0. Hartig will open at blocking back and Rodgers, at fullback when the Tar Heels make their revenge attempt today.

Chapel Hill Downs Oxford High Eleven, 13-6

Chapel Hill high school's Wildcats turned in their second straight win of the infant football season on Friday afternoon in Emerson Stadium by edging Oxford high, 13-7.

Tailback Collier Hill scored Chapel Hill's first touchdown with a 12-yard sweep around end after the 'Cats had driven 53 yards in seven plays. Hill's kick was blocked for the extra point.

The Chapel Hill offense, which collected 108 yards on the ground and 63 yards via the air lanes, was sparked mainly by Hill and fullback Bill Butler. Oxford was able to pick up 119 yards rushing and 62 passing.

The second score for the locals came in the final period when Hill tossed a perfect strike to Rus Perry, lanky end. The scoring play covered 30 yards. Although deflected by an Oxford lineman, Hill's kick for the point was good.

Nat Burwell, flashy Oxford halfback, tallied the lone T-D on a cross-buck from the three in the last quarter. The invaders threw several desperation passes in the closing minutes, but a timely interception by Butler stymied any further Oxford scoring ideas.

In the first down department, however, Oxford held a 7-5 edge. The local club tried nine passes and completed four while Oxford attempted seven and completed three.

Chapel Hill journeys to Mebane next week to engage the Mebane high eleven in a North Central conference contest.

Big Grid Battles Scheduled Today Throughout U. S.

Today is the big day as far as King Football is concerned. All over the South, and the entire nation, eager fans will get their first glimpse of the country's top teams when almost all the major elevens swing into action this afternoon or tonight.

Besides the nation's headliner, between Carl Snavely's Tar Heels and Blair Cherry's powerful Texas Longhorns, there will be several other top-flight battles in the South.

Sharing the spotlight with Carolina and Texas, the Duke-State game is expected to be one of the hottest of the campaign. The Dookmen came out on top, 7-0, last year in Durham, with an intercepted pass being the deciding factor in a hard-fought contest.

Wallace Wade's experienced Blue Devils will hold a slight edge over the Wolfpack when the two teams tangle in Raleigh this afternoon, partly because they reportedly trounced William and Mary's highly-rated eleven last week in a secret scrimmage.

Another game attracting much attention is the Davidson-William and Mary tilt in Charlotte tonight. The Indians, led by Jolting Jack Cloud, one of the best backs in Dixie, are not expected to have too much trouble with the Wildcats.

In the Southeastern Conference it's Georgia Tech versus Vanderblit in the loop's outstanding opener. The Techmen, highly favored to cop the conference title, are being given the nod over Vandy's eleven. Alabama's Crimson Tide, defending champions of the Southeastern circuit, are expected to stop the Green Wave of Tulane.

Led by All-American Doak Walker, the strong Southern Methodist gridders, defending champions of the Southwestern Conference, tackle Pittsburgh in a non-conference game. TCU opens against Oklahoma A and M in a conference argument.

In the Midwest the big game is the Purdue-Notre Dame scrap. The Boilmakers are expected to make a strong bid for the Big Nine title which leads to a Rose Bowl invitation, while the Fighting Irish are [illegible] strong. Indiana plays Wisconsin in a Big Nine affair.

USHERS AND GATEMEN

All students working at Kenan stadium as ushers or gatemen for the Texas game are asked to report to gate 7 at 11:30 on Saturday morning.

Seven Lives Lost In Chattanooga Mountain Feud

DAISY, Tenn., Sept. 24—(UP)—The Daisy mountain feud claimed its seventh casualty today.

Joe Coleman was shot and seriously wounded on the mountain 30 miles northwest of Chattanooga where periodic volleys fro mambush have kept the hill families on edge for the last year.

Deputy Sheriff Scott Swafford of Chattanooga said he had no details of the Coleman shooting except that it apparently was connected with the feud.

Only last Sunday Samuel D. Wilcox, 26-year-old war veteran, was shot and killed as he drove his car along Poe road in the town of Daily. Wilcox survived and earlier attempt on his life.

Wilcox's mother told Hamilton county authorities that she had a good idea who fired the shots and "you'd better get the ones that did it or I'm going to get them myself," Deputy Swafford said.

The feud in the rugged east Tennessee mountains goes back to last January when John Landgraf, an aged rural mail carrier, was found shot to death in his cabin on the Daisy ridge. Willie Lee Harris, 21, and three other mountain boys were arrested for the slaying but were acquitted in May.

was emphasized that the administration, faculty, and students were desired to take the initiative in the matter. It was decided that a report of study and plans be made to the mid-winter meeting of the Board of Trustees so that final action could be embodied in the next catalogue. This means that the present plan will continue through the academic year 1948-1949.

"While opinion differed as to the educational advantages of the 5-day week and the 5½ day week it has become clear that the 5½ day week makes a more efficient use of classroom space. And, since class-room space is one of the University's chief needs, this advantage of the 5½ -day may prove decisive.

"But, actual plans now await faculty study in the fall quarter."

TAR HEELS BRAND LONGHORNS, 34-7

Scalpers Net $30 For 50-Yard Seats, $100 For Passbooks

CHARLIE JUSTICE, CAROLINA'S GREAT TAILBACK, didn't make much of an impression on the Texas Longhorns last season. But it was a different story yesterday, as the Choo Choo tallied twice to spark the Tar Heel offense which smashed Texas to the tune of 34-7. In this photo Charlie is seen taking a short wade through the Texas line for seven yards. A screaming crowd of 43,500 football enthusiasts witnessed the spectacle. (Staff photo by Jim Mills)

Ducats Move In Fast Order On Franklin St.

By Tom Kerr and Bob Hennessee

The ticket black market hit an all-time high yesterday with a single 50-yard-line seat selling for $30 and unsigned student athletic passbooks quoted at $100.

University students, both male and female, Texans and local monogram wearers joined professional scalpers in a fluctuating market which ranged from $6 for an end-zone seat to the high of $30 and more for good singles.

While average ducats changed hands for $15, non-transferable student athletic passbooks were selling for "not a cent under $100," as one scalper with a stack of the restricted, student-issued books put it.

Pedestrians found it difficult to push through the mobs of eager opportunists who jammed the sidewalks of Chapel Hill, concentrated near Jeff's and the Village theater.

Trading began as early as 9 o'clock yesterday morning and the market fluctuated only slightly in the five and one-half hours before game time. One scalper, however, remarked, "I'm tired of peddling. They were going for $30, but I'll let them go for $15."

A small crowd in the entrance of Berman's department store saw a block of nine tickets change hands for $67.50. They were quickly resold for $10 and $12.50 in singles and doubles.

Cigar - smoking manipulators flashed $10 bills and choice 40-yard-line tickets, buying cardboards with one hand, upping the price, and reselling them with the other hand. Bidding was open with little under-cover trading until a Daily Tar Heel photographer was spotted attempting to take pictures of the transactions. Then dealing went from pocket to pocket instead of from hand to hand.

Many of the amateur scalpers felt obligated to give excuses for peddling their wares. One of the conversations ran this way:

"My mother bought these from a scalper. I'm just trying to get her money back."

"I don't care about the story. How much?"

"Fifteen bucks."

Carolina alumni appeared to take the lead in peddling the hot tickets, however university monogram wearers were seen involved in many of the deals. Texas students were also known to have taken part in the trading.

The market was open to everyone, as Carolina gentlemen dug up tickets for their dates, and one coed opened a loaded wallet to bid $12 but was refused.

Symphony Files Lost During Game

A bag was reported stolen yesterday from a parked car in front of 216 E. Rosemary St. The bag and most of its contents are not of particular value, but the owner asks that some papers, the files of the Charlotte symphony, which were in the bag please be returned to Business Manager, Charlotte symphony orchestra, 1215 S. Caldwell St., Charlotte. These papers are of real value to their owner, and their quick return is requested.

Georgia Trips For Sale Here

Tickets for the special football train to Athens, Ga., are now on sale in the travel agency on second floor Graham Memorial. The train, which will carry the Tar Heel team, will leave Raleigh at 9:30 at night October 1 and arrive in Athens at 7:15 the next morning.

Listing on the round-trip fare for coach, first-class, lower and upper berths, compartments, and rooms may be found in the travel agency. There are ample pullman and coach accommodations for all students interested in attending the game.

For further information, students are asked to telephone, wire, or write the Seaboard reservation bureau, 922 Insurance building, Raleigh.

Royall Calls Win 'Great Victory'

University alumnus Kenneth C. Royall, Secretary of the Army, whooped it up with the rest of the grid-happy Tar Heels yesterday afternoon as he sauntered out of Kenan stadium completely void of diplomatic suavity.

"I feel as if I were back in college again," the secretary said. "Never has an old Carolina man seen such a truly great victory over such a great team."

Distinguished Guests Pleased With Carolina's Football Victory

By Lincoln Kan

Top University alumni and present students were pleased with the Texas steak cutting yesterday afternoon.

J. M. Broughton, North State senatorial nominee, said before the game, "I'm looking for a Carolina sweep." His former senatorial opponent, William B. Umstead, just smiled and said, "first time I've agreed with a rival."

Phi Beta Kappa Jim Webb, director of the United States budget said, "This is the happiest I've ever been. If we have men fighting for college spirit like this we have nothing to worry about as far as the world situation is concerned."

Chancellor House was more than happy. "I said we were going to win, and we did." Another member of the Greater University, Chancellor Jackson of Woman's college, remarked, "It's just good old Carolina!"

The University had another visitor. He was from out of state. A gentleman from Oklahoma, a member of the national board of the American Red Cross said before the game, "I'm going to see the greatest team on the East coast; however, we think we have a pretty good ball club at Oklahoma." The prognosticator was Paul W. Updergraff.

Other University personnel besides the obvious members on the field and in the stands such as Controller W. D. Carmichael, Jr. Dean Mackie and Dean Weaver here were a host of Carolina's greats who cheered heartedly for the team.

Their cheers must have helped! The score was 34 to 7 in favor of the Tar Heels.

Majorette Martha Is Happy Tar Heel

Pretty Carolina Drum Majorette Martha Manning was a very happy girl yesterday.

She was happy because she recovered her lost pocketbook containing two Texas-Carolina football tickets and $20 cash.

Martha paid a visit to the DTH night office Friday night pleading for help to recover her purse which she lost in Memorial hall during the pep rally. To make matters worse, Martha said her folks were coming up for the game and those were the tickets they were to use.

The little notice on the back page did the trick. Martha got her pocketbook, her tickets, the money, and best of all, her smile back again.

Everybody Happy Over Color Cards

By Wuff Newell

T day is over, and those Longhornes just ain't on top no more. What do we care if they did make a touchdown? we scored 34 points, and that's all they did last year.

Everybody's happy, and no one is more excited then Norm Sper. He remarked yesterday we have the greatest team and the greatest spirit in the history of the school. Who are we to argue?

Everybody said the color cards were terrific, and agreed that they ought to do more to keep Carolina spirit than anything else—except possibly the rootin' cheerleaders headed by Sper. If he can't make everybody Tar Heel happy, no one can.

Only the bucking bronco didn't turn out just right. Sper had an answer for this also. This was the first time the cards were synchronized with the band.

A misunderstanding occurred at the beginning of the game, when some 50 students were told to go to the wrong section. Too many people wanted to be in the card section and too many tickets were given out for it, but by the end of the girst quarter no one cared where he was. Our team was winning. What else could we want?

One more word about the cards. If anyone has any suggestions as to how the working and timing of the stunts can be improved, he can write them down and put them in a box in the Y court. In fact, any suggestions as to how our spirit can be improved can be put in the box. The cheerleaders are anxious to do all they can to make this the greatest year in Carolina's history.

Those Texans must have really felt at home when the cheerleaders came riding out on horseback. Wonder why after they had ridden off the field someone remarked that the Longhorns had already left their mark. Are horses longhorns?

Everybody was at the game. Some even came in ambulances. At the time, he said, Harris sold Mr. and Mrs. Theodore (Pap) Parker a piece of property, to which Parker later claimed there was no clear title.

Both Harris and Parker have been the targets for ambush shootings in recent months, as have a number of others.

Raging Tennessee Feud Continues With Three Arrested, One Hunted

DAISY, Tenn., Sept. 25—(UP)—The Daisy mountain feud still raged today with three men under arrest, one other being hunted by police and two more suffering from wounds received in the latest outbreak of backwoods violence.

The latest victims were Joe Coleman, who was struck in the head and neck by buckshot, and his stepson, Ralph Hatfield, 16, who was grazed by a bullet.

Francis Payne, a third man riding in a car with them Friday, was not wounded.

Held by police for the shooting were George Trusley, Carl Smith and Jack Pasco. Officers said they still were looking for Willie Lee Harris, 26, in connection with the crime.

Harris was riding in a car last Sunday with Samuel D. Wilcox, 26-year-old war veteran, when Wilcox was shot and killed from ambush while visiting his parents from his Detroit, Mich., home.

Smith already was free on bond in connection with the ambush wounding of Mrs. Theodore Parker several weeks ago.

Deputy Sheriff Scott Swafford said the modern version of the Hatfield-McCoy feud of past Kentucky mountain fame apparently started about a year ago in a dispute over a property sale.

Vaughn Cannon, Alleged Racketeer Finds His Tax Troubles Mounting

ASHEVILLE, Sept. 25—(UP)—Tax troubles mounted today for Vaughn J. Cannon, defendant in a probe of Asheville gambling and illicit liquor sales.

A fourth federal income tax lien was filed against him yesterday at Spartanburg, S. C., where treasury agents claimed he owed $175,000 in unpaid taxes. Added to three other liens filed in North Carolina, that made a total of $1,626,972 which the federal government claimed Cannon owed.

But he had more worries from the state of North Carolina. Assistant State Atty.-Gen. Peyton Cam Abbott spent yesterday in Asheville with other state revenue officials.

Abbott said investigation showed Cannon "is indebted to the state for unpaid taxes . . . and a claim will be filed as soon as it can be prepared."

TarnationOpen-House Slated for Tomorrow

With big plans for this year Tarnation Co-Editors Bob Smith and Tom Wharton extends the hearty handshake to all new and old students who even think they have magazine talent.

To get the year started the welcome mat will be laid out in front of the Tarnation office, in Graham Memorial basement across from the men's room, tomorrow night. A general open-house is planned from 8 o'clock on, at which time anyone interested in writing, cartooning, layout, or what-have-you may come in to talk things over.

Early Scores Prove Margin For Local Win

By Dick Jenrette

Carolina's Tar Heels, pregame underdogs by seven points, provided a glorious opening to their 1948 grid year by burying the University of Texas, 34-7, before a jubilent audience of 43,500 in Kenan Stadium yesterday.

The game probably will go down in the record books as the greatest opening game in Tar Heel history. The team was difinitely in mid-season form, and Coach Carl Snavely deserves a great hand for his tutoring. Texas, it will be remembered, had smashed LSU, 33-0, last week in its first game.

With memories of last season's 34-0 loss to Texas in Austin, the Tar Heels went into the game with revenge on their minds—and got just that. The team swept the Longhorns off their feet with three quick touchdowns in the opening quarter. Bedlam broke loose in the Carolina cheering section, and most of the students had yelled themselves hoarse before ten minutes of playing time had elapsed.

Texas could never make a comeback after those three scores, and the closest the Longhorns came to the Tar Heels was 21-7 with a score just before halftime.

Tops, It Says Here

No national grid ratings can give an accurate picture of the best in collegiate circles after only one game, but Carolina should rank at the top on the basis of its work yesterday. Notre Dame, last year's top team in the country, encountered rocky going in its game with Purdue before winning 28-27.

The game had everything that a fan could desire from a football game—that is if he were a Carolina man. The weather was ideal, the stands were jammed, spirit was high, and most of all the touchdowns scored were of the spectacular variety. Norm Sper, Carolina cheerleader, picked up where the gridders left off at half and delighted those sitting in the North stands with his color card display.

Coach Snavely substituted frequently, employing his two-team system to telling advantage. The constant mass substitutions possibly may have had some psychological effect on the Texans.

Toughest Opponent

The game was completely a team victory. All the boys knew they were facing their toughest opponent of the season, and they were equal to the occasion. It's bad luck to mention an undefeated season with nine tough opponents left on the schedule—but the biggest obstacle has been passed. The next objective is Georgia, in another intersectional encounter in Athens, Ga., next Saturday.

When issuing laurels for the victory, one has to give most of the credit to that big, aggresive Tar Heel line. Texas simply

Writer Battles Magicians But Hopes To Keep Shirt

By Harman W. Nichols

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25—(UP) If you see me walking down Main Street minus a shirt the next few days you can blame Mr. Karrell Fox of Detroit. Mr. Fox, I ought to add, is a magician.

Across the years I have conquered—and have been conquered — by many an expert at sleight of hand.

I once got the best of Arnold Furst of Hollywood, who goes around the country in the company of Oscar, a white habbit with pink eyes. Oscar has come out of more hats than most any other bunny.

HA, HA!

One time Arnold was getting ready to do his stuff at a magic show in St. Louis when I sneaked into his dressing room and stole Oscar. I finally let Arnold find his cottontail under MY hat. Everybody laughed but Arnold.

A couple of years later, I met my match in Miss Dell O'Dell, who calls herself the "Queen of Magic." I interviewed her in her room in the Morrison hotel in Chicago. Mama was waiting for me in the lobby. Dell showed me a magic trick or two. I took some notes and then took the elevator to the lobby.

Fancy Oysters

Mama said,, "Lordy, Lordy! You're not going to take me to dinner in the swanky oyster bar without a tie, are you?"

The clever Dell had lifted my cravat!

But we're getting away from Mr. Fox, a ruffle-haired youth of 21 who is billed as "The King of Korn." Our man is in Washington to attend a taffy pull staged by the magicians alliance of eastern states. I went over to see him.

That "King or Korn" comes from such patter as:

"I can't bear to saw ladies in half. I've got too much respect for my half-sisters."

And:

From Hunger, Yet

"I never suspend a woman in mid-air like other magicians. Think I wanta be sued for non-support?"

Getting down to business, he fanned out a stiff new card pack—

"Think of a number from one to 10," he said, "and divide it by two."

I've got the guy, I thought, quietly picking number seven.

Mr. Fox snapped his index against the box of cards, reached in and pulled out the three of hearts and a half a buck—three and one-half.

"Take a card," he said.

I did.

"What is it?"

"Queen of spades."

Ace in the Hole

It was, too, until Mr. Fox grabbed it, back side to me, and turned it around. The ace of dia-

"Let that be a lesson to you, sir," he said. "Don't play cards with me. You'll lose your shirt!"

Whereupon, he grabbed the back of my collar, gave it a gentle little tug and I could feel my shirttail sliding up front over the bulge.

There I was. Nice blue suit. Underwear. Tie, still knotted and neck-tight. But no shirt.

Don't ask me how he did it!

WHEN THIS PHOTO WAS MADE 70-mile-per-hour winds were whipping heavy seas over the breakwater at Biscayne Bay, near Miami, Fla. This was a mere preliminary to the tropical hurricane, blowing at 125 miles an hour, which hit the Florida mainland. Miami escaped the full brunt of the winds. Key West, 175 miles to the south, was raked by gusts of 160 miles an hour. There were at least two deaths reported. (International)

Inflation Has Reached Dangerous Stage Warns National Life Insurance Company

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 25—(UP)—An insurance company warned today that inflation in the U. S. has reached the "dangerous" stage, and urged joint action by the federal government and by the people to whip it.

A study of rising prices, released by the Family Economics bureau of the Northwestern National Life Insurance Co., said the first step in licking inflation is teaching the public its causes.

"The figures indicate our national financial policies have been responsible for about two-thirds of our currency inflation to date," the report said, "but the greatest upward force on prices today is our general scramble to take things away from each other."

The study suggested that the government take four steps to combat inflation:

1. Restrict bank and consumer credit.
2. Economize on governmental operation.
3. Reduce the federal debt.
4. Adopt sound taxation policies.

The public can aid, the study said, by trimming down individual demand to fit the supplies available—in other words, a program of self-denial.

"Unless we do these things voluntarily," said the study, "price inflation will force it gradually by exhausting the buying power of more and more people: this process already is going on."

It warned that "otherwise, our inflationary boom is increasingly likely to blow up in our faces with disastrous resulting depression."

Quiz Crackdown Draws Protest

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—(UP)—The National Association of Broadcasters said today that the government would be guilty of "Censorship" and "interference with free speech" if it carries out threats to crack down on "Giveaway" programs.

The broadcasters' organization, in a brief filed with the Federal Communications commission, said programs the FCC has called "Lotteries" are "not in fact illegal" under federal statues.

It argued that the FCC has no authority to regulate specific programs as it has indicated it may do. The association asked a chance to argue its case before the comission.

The FCC last month proposed a set of rules for governing "jackpot" and cash-and-gift "giveaway' shows. It gave interested parties a limited time in which to answer. The federal agency threatened to rule off the air programs it found guilty of violating the lottery section of the Communications act.

Many of the nation's 40-odd network "giveaway" programs would come under the FCC's definition of a lottery.

Judges Foxed As Hound Dog Takes Honors

COLUMBIA, S. C., Sept. 25—(UP)—O. Henry would have gotten a kick out of the way this story ended—the story of a little boy with his arm in a sling, leading a hound dog into a dog show.

It took all Skeeter Gibbons' strength to hang on to the flop-eared hound he led into the Earlewood park show.

There just wasn't any class open for hound dogs. But other boys feeling sorry for Skeeter, persuaded the judges to set up a new class.

Mrs. Margaret Folk remarked she felt so sorry for the little boy, "bringing that big dog to the show, even with his little arm broken."

And Skeeter grinned his appreciation when his hound won a quarter prize for being the most useful animal entered.

The other boys appreciated it, too—the ones who had borrowed the hound dog, and wrapped up Skeeter's little arm to fool the judges.

'Five Pecks,' Candy Bar Get More Than Money

By Frank Eleazer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—(UP)—You go to Germany with the best of intentions and right away you find yourself in the black market.

I saw how it works during a 13-day trip to Germany to see Operation Vittles, the airlift to blockaded Berlin.

You start out to buy a few beer mugs and things to take home to your wife. This takes marks. You have dollars.

Take Two, They're Small

The official rate of exchange, you discover, is three marks for one dollar. What a bargain, you think. You'll take some.

But not so fast. An anxious friend at your side lets drop the information that the price is much better outside. In fact, 16 marks for the dollar.

How honest can a man get?

There's still the cigarette gimmick.

"Five Pecks"

It isn't really your fault. The stubborn old German just won't sell his beer mug any other way. To you "five pecks" is the price.

You get your ration card—it's good for a carton and two packs per week—and hasten to the PX. Five packs it is, and cheap at the price.

But what's this about candy? It's rationed at the PX too? No fooling, it's rationed too. All you can get at a PX in Germany is 34 5-cent bars per week.

Better get 'em now, too. No telling when the hunger may seize you. Also, you learn, a candy bar is a nice thing to have around in case other Germans are stubborn.

Be Nice to 'Em

And if you can't eat it all. Other people can. Some of the natives probably need extra food. If they want to pay one mark per bar for some candy, why shouldn't you give them a break?

It's all illegal. The sign in the PX says that "anyone apprehended reselling, trading or bartering post exchange merchandise will be subject to disciplinary action."

Seashells

CHARLESTON, S. C., Sept. 25.—(UP)—George Norwig, sports announcer at Charleston's radio station WCSC, probably was out practicing "gathering seashells by the seashore today after that broadcast last night.

It all started because the sponsor's name was supposed to come, cheerily, like this: "Johnson and Coffey trailer sales present...."

It came out, of course, "Johnson and Trailer Coffee Sales present...."

Johnson Denied Spot on Ballot

HOUSTON, Tex., Sept. 25.—(UP)—U. S. District Judge Joseph C. Hutcheson, Jr., refused last night to suspend an injunction which is keeping Rep. Lyndon B. Johnson's name off the November ballot as Democratic nominee for Texas senator.

Johnson won a runoff election for the Democratic senatorial nomination last month by just 87 votes.

His opponent, Former Governor Coke. R. Stevenson, charged that vote frauds in three counties defeated him. Stevenson got a federal district court injunction to prevent election officials from placing Johnson's name on the ballot.

Johnson appealed to the 5th circuit court of appeals and Hutchenson heard the case as a member of that court last night. Hutcheson refused to do anything about the case, however, on grounds that the entire court had to act.

'Young' Henry . . . . . . Rakes It In

Ford Assets Soar To Billion Bracket

DETROIT, Sept. 26—(UP)—Henry Ford II turned his fourth year as head of the huge Ford Motor company this week and marked the occasion with the announcement that Ford now is a billion-dollar firm.

The youthful president of the family-owned project reported to the Massachusetts State tax commissioner that the four assets totalled $1,025,733,000 as of Dec. 31, 1947.

It was the high point of the fortunes of the unique company, which is controlled by one family. Long-range policies are determined by periodic family conferences.

Stamp of Success

It put the stamp of success on the efforts of "Young Henry, so called in automotive circle to distinguish him from his grandfather and founder of the company.

Only twice before in the history of the company has Ford surpassed the billion mark in its assets, and those times were handily normal. Assets crept over a billion in 1943 and 1944, but dropped again after the war.

Only Report

The report made to the Massachusetts commission is the only one that Ford is required to make and is the only available indication of the company's condition. No Ford stock is on the open market, and Ford therefore makes no report of its profit or losses.

Before "Young" Ford took over on Sept. 21 1945, it was doubtful if the Fords themselves knew how much money they were making, and it has been speculated that Ford died in 1945 without knowing exactly how much he was worth.

No Accounting

There was no cost-accounting in the elder Ford's day. Ford would make a profit. It usually did.

Only in 1921, 1930 and 1931 did Ford feel a financial punch. The company neared the rocks in 1921 but pulled itself out with a bond issue and the conversion of stock into cash. The depression hit Ford in 1930 and 1931.

By making and selling an inexpensive, mass-produced car for nearly all of its 45-year history, Ford maintained a stable level of production and profit even while ignoring standard business methods.

Thing of Past

ROANOKE, Va., Sept. 25—(UP)—Nightshirts are a thing of the past, Pullman Company Agent A. R. Lieben reported today.

Lieben, whose job includes trying to match up Pullman passengers with the articles they leave in berths and washrooms, says he doesn't find any nightshirts these days.

Just brilliant-colored pajamas.

Plea For Faith

Each time we have sought advice from people who are supposed to know, about a philosophy of life, we have been answered by "We must have a new spiritual faith."

We don't intend to be preachy, but a sentence like "We must have faith and belief" does not satisfy us, because it is not concrete.

Faith to us nowadays . . . are not the incantations of the faithful pew-fillers enough? Are not the gestures and lip-services of our fellow men enough?

To us it is not.

We feel that the advice given about a search for a more enlightened truth is right. We know we lack conviction of spirit.

But what we want to know is where is the practical strength for us to hold onto? What about the mess made by our predecessors who have brought nothing but a problem unsolved . . . death and pestilence in World War II and a dreary future ahead?

These are times for doubts. There is nothing but confusion and unrest in all the world. A world of suspicion and cold hate which at any moment may erupt into a hot lava of destruction. This is a world of drafts and impressed military service, because we have no other defense.

Somehow we must have something that all young people look to in order that we may preserve our sanity. This something is like a new star born with new brilliance. It is like our true idealism warmed and covered by tolerance and practicality. It is believed that we young people still have a voice in this world and that we have strength enough to carry out our beliefs.

It will not be easy to believe in our friends', brothers', and fellow mankind's worth. There are only deeds of the past to substantiate our judgment.

Despite all the obstacles, we must have above all a sincere belief that our dreams may do something good in this world. We must forget our cells within our flesh to remember the entire body of the world.

Our faith and our spiritual strength must come through knowledge and the use of that knowledge which we may gain. We can only do our best for ourselves and our world if we seek and learn the wisdom of the past which we in our turn can transform into modern today's philosophy by living and knowing today.

Perhaps thus we all may reach the life for which we are preparing!—L.K.

Cars and More Cars

We have been informed that an unusually large number of new students have come to Carolina this fall, many of whom have brought with them vehicles of all descriptions and sorts.

We welcome you all; however, we feel that a plea to you is in order, especially to you who have motors.

Chapel Hill car owners have two problems. They are, the parking problem and the fender problem resulting from over eager drivers and careless drivers. The people and students of the University and Chapel Hill who do not own cars have their problems too. They are obvious problems of life and limb and general nervous disorders resulting from speeding cars and loud signalling devices.

There must be a happy medium between the pedestrian and car-owners problems. We think that we can reach a comparative middle road if everyone cooperates.

To the motorist, we plead with you that if you can afford to walk a few blocks to classes, please leave your cars where they are parked by and near your residences. Also have a little regard for your fellow student's life and limb by driving carefully and slowly through Franklin street and all streets near the campus, as well as on the roads when you go on a weekend trip. Please use your brakes instead of your horns, whenever possible.

To the pedestrians, we ask that you look to your own safety and your fellow students welfare by not jaywalking whenever you feel you are in a hurry.

And girls please start back to the dorms early so that your boy-friend doesn't have to be a speed demon if he is to get you back in time before the dorms close.—L.K.

Odds And Ends

By Rita Adams

ON CAMPUS: Jack McKeel has analyzed this year's fashion parade with the insight of a true dyed-in-the-wood politician. "All that Confederate grey you've been seeing is a sign of folks' anticipation of a Thurmond victory." And Jack even goes so far as to add that the absence of red clothes (with the exception of Betty Houston's corduroy skirt) is equally significant in regard to the Progressive party.

YOU KNOW, these professors must get awfully exasperated when they start calling the roll for their first few days of class. Fr'instance, there sits "Monk" Pegram chatting away gayly as her prof loses one lung shouting, "Miss MARY Pegram." Just not used to all this formality, huh, Monk? To clutter matters up even more, the gestapo at some point in the registration line demanded that every person put his full name on every single one of his blue cards. Can't you see some poor got-a-darned-cute date-in-mind Carolina gentleman struggling through all sorts of unfamiliar names in the student directory, then finally giving up in desperation and taking off for Harry's?

IT WAS a mighty searching, supercilious look that Miles Smith had on his face as he scanned the troops on the steps of South Friday morning. Just wonder if he found the right people to whom he could deliver some political oration. But let's not be too hard on all our budding presidents. We are reminded of Jess Dedmond's remark, "I don't have to worry anymore about shaking hands with people with shades of ulterior motives in my mind. I can do it with all sincerity this year!"

IT'S SURPRISING that Edie Knight and Mary Ann Happer aren't carrying calico cats around campus with them, in keeping with the gingham-looking rims on their glasses. Come to think of it, have you ever noticed any cats in this town—the kind with whiskers, that is?

POLITICAL SCIENCE prof Fraser was in keeping with the spirit of the times when he told his new clas, "If you don't like my class, you can leave and join the Dixiecrats!"

REPORTS ON DOGVILLE: Glade Flake complains that he'd give his admission to law school, if he had as many friends as his dog, Dixie. You know Dixie—she's the shiney Irish setter who eats up the petting on the men's low quad. And Lincoln Kan adds that he's had to take Frisky out of circulation 'cause he was a bad boy in Burnesville, N. C. and lost his collar.

IN TOWN: Jean and George Sparger (for anyone who has spent the past two years hibernating around the South Pole, George is our team's former co-captain) are about to get the dishes straightened out in their new apartment. So let's all drop around for a steak supper one of these days.

WHAT WITH King White's blush over his recent episode with a swing in the vicinity of the bus station, Chapel Hill no longer needs its stop lights. Besides, that new one on the McIver dorm corner is the bane of every old student's existence. Just can't get used to its being there.

JIMMY FARLOW looks mighty proud of his new office in the Field building. Fact is, the whole Farlow family seems to be in the spotlight this fall, what with Sarah Jane and Ray adding their spirit to Norm Sper's new cheerleaders.

SPEAKING OF JIMMIES, we expect to see Jimmy at the University meeting the guests at the door in black bow-tie and tails. That boy has more hopes for the future and ambition than all the business school students in New York.

These Days

Danger To Free Education

By George E. Sokolsky

Some years ago, a movement was started to increase the contact of parents and teachers. Associations were organized in schools and meetings have been held at stated periods. Obviously, the experts, namely, the teachers and educational administrators, do most of the talking because they are experts. Most parents are busy maintaining a family, keeping house and few have read all the books on haw to rear children and what to do about education; therefore, they cannot talk back when the expert explains that this new method of teaching spelling does not teach the child how to spell but will make the child more fit to live in one world or something.

Nevertheless under our system of life, the child remains the responsibility of the parent. Nor has the parent transferred to the State or to a Board of Education the moral obligation of child-raising. The State has the legal authority to insist upon compulsory school attendance, and in recent years, educational administrators have succeeded in obtaining powers to enforce a minimum qualification for all schools, but the State has no right to determine to what kind of school the child shall be sent.

The danger to both child and parent lies in the huge cost of education operations. In short, as local taxes do not meet budgetary requirements, first a demand is made for state aid and then for federal aid. As the state and then the federal administration set up funds for local schooling, they also are bound to set up conditions which can be expanded ultimately until local supervision disappears.

New York State has insisted upon increasing the taxing power of local communities so that they may meet this problem. It's Governor said of this:

". . . the people of our communities are expecting higher and higher standards of service from local government. Without close correlation between the spending of public money and the responsibility for collecting it through taxes, local responsibility for government will degenerate rapidly and we shall have an allpowerful, centralized government. That prospect is a grave threat to free government today."

He has particularly emphasized the need for increasing local revenue for school purposes and has recommended that local communities, with certain exceptions, be given the right to impose special taxes.

Few communities have availed themselves of these privileges because it is easier for school administrators and local politicians to get state aid—but parents ought to study this problem from the standpoint of their participation in the education of their own children.

YWCA Leads Co-ed Affairs

Lincoln S. H. Kan

As the title suggests, this column will cover a multitude of organizations and off-beat happenings that go to make up what we know as Carolina.

Originally, the idea for this column arose from the lack of understanding on the part of many people as to the meaning of the numerous institutions on this campus. If I recall correctly, a news story back in the spring of 1947 started with a lead sentence something like this: "Making its appearance among the many organizations on the campus, the newly formed Association for the Study of World Affairs informs us that they will attempt to bring to the student body a study of all the important world happenings and issues so that the students may have a better understanding of the problems before the world."

Probably I have misquoted, but be it as it may, most readers of the above paragraph were a little confused as to just what the new organization was and what it would do. That is the task which this column will try to accomplish . . . a concise review of our many campus organizations. At this point, a warning is in order that this column will not arbitrarily give free publicity to the various groups, but rather will welcome information from the various publicity directors and then correlate the information received.

Of paramount concern to all of us is the touchy subject — women and their activities. So I felt dutybound to attend a YWCA program given for the benefit of our new coed crop and presented by our fair leaders of the Y movement from last year.

As soon as I arrived at Playmakers theater where the meeting was held, I was drafted to make an appearance on the stage. As Sally Woodhull, chairwoman of the World Student Service Fund Drive under the Y, and our new Campus editor on the DTH said "we are supposed to give a representative picture of the Y, but how can we do this if we don't have a few boys on the stage? "So Herb Nachman, Rex Kennedy an I gave in blushingly. The play must go on.

If I were ignorant of the varied activities of the YW, I soon learned of them after the many scenes that followed: Those folks went from political discussion groups to baby sitting services. As the spotlight fell on each little group, the participants pantomined what they did. There were skits presenting the committees on Public Affairs, Race Relations, Publicity Social Services, Music, Careers, Y-Teens, Campus Affairs and last of all the driving motif behind all the activities — a Christian spirit exemplfied by an active faith.

As the curtain drew open slowly for the last scene, a soft hum accompanied the introductory words read by the authoress of the script, Miss Anne Wells. Behind a converted bridge table covered by a white cloth, the girls gathered in little groups dressed in an assortment of nighties, housecoats and peejays.

AT the table one of the girls began reading a prayer by the ilght of a lone candle. There was complete silence in the theater as well as back-stage. Although it was obvious the skit had been rehearsed, the reading of the prayer seem to hold even more significance. The girls were really serious in their faith which kept them at the betterment of themselves and their sisters . . . the American college girl.

It is a credit to our University, that we have girls like "Butchie" Daniel as the YW president, co-chairwomen for the religious "Spark Plug" like Sue Stokes and "Teenie" Royall. And this columnist will have a fair critic in the chairwoman of the Campus Affairs committee, Anne Welles, as well as, the head of the Public Affairs committee, Emily Baker. Good luck to you girls in the YW. "Bunnie", Faith, Merrily, Emily Osburne and all the rest.

See you at the Y!

(Publicity and Information directors of the various campus organizations are welcomed to send in any material they desire for use in future columns of THIS IS CAROLINA.)

Write Away

Memorial For Dan

Dear friends and fellow colleagues
this tale is filled with dread,
And t'will be no joy in Cheppel Collitch
'cause Dan the Dog is dead.

Yea, Dan was buried tother night when everything was still.
But he made his friends readily and I guess he always will.

Dan was more than just a dog-
he was a little human too.
And he had that "Carolina Spirit"
—more than some of you.

In '39 he was the football mascot:
drudged to practice every day;
When that team got too cocky
Ole Dan just shied away.

The team was Rose-Bowl-Bound that year—
in fact they seemed a cinch,
But when Ole Dan disappeared
they sorta sensed the pinch.

The game at Dook was wild and loud
Dan alone was void of glee
Somehow he knew we'd lose the game.
(T'was thirteen to three.)

Dan took up with the "Harriers" and ran the country miles.
When they won the Southern Conference
he got his share of smiles.

Dan became nationally famous when he marched with Pre-Flight.
Made P. M. and other mags
but smelled and looked a sight.

I remember the only bath
I ever saw him get
He sure did look right pretty—white fur and spots of jet.

When he was retired to pasture.

By BILLY CARMICHAEL III

Believe It or Not

THE GREATEST THING SINCE RADIO was unveiled in Kenan stadium yesterday to the startled delight of some 43,500 football infected fans. The experts, it seems, had given the majority of these onlookers a bum steer in the nature of the Longhorns of Texas, who were hardly recognizable without constant reference to the program.

The Tar Heels, with little apparent regard for the comfort and safety of their visitors, hit the Texans before they were quite out of their corner and then branded the Steers for fourteen more points while the iron was still hot. The effect was like coming home some night and finding your Quonset hut burned to the ground; the Longhorns couldn't believe it.

The Texans never quite regained their footing after being downed for the count of seven three times. Their highly-touted speed never got a chance to attain full power with Tar Heel linemen putting into use the old adage of stopping the train before it left the station. On the airways, the Texans' Hooperating was nothing to brag about. Many of their passes were badly thrown, many were badly fielded and many weren't.

A Double Blood Letting

THE TEXANS, FOR THE RECORD, drew blood only twice in the ball game. They scored once in the first quarter either from force of habit or for the benefit of the photographers at the west end of the field. They drew blood again late in the game when big Ed Kelley hit Bill Wardle in his unprepared face, a very unfortunate incident that did not go unpunished.

The Tar Heels, on the other hand, unstoppably went for fourth and fifth blood later in the game. They got a little help in their efforts for both of these scores from the Texans, who by this time, were throwing the ball at anything that moved. Interceptions by Bill Flamisch and Fred Sherman played first act roles in each of these performances. The Texans by now had, without benefit of coaching from the sidelines, learned the Tar Heels were not to be played with.

With or Without Onions

IT IS HARD TO DECIDE which was more enjoyable to watch—the Tar Heels on offense or the Tar Heels on defense. It is like choosing between a Cadillac and a Lincoln Continental. They both run rather smoothly.

The offensive power of the locals was like a pneumatic drill with its punching effect on what was billed as the greatest line in the nation. Tar Heel backs, notably Charlie Justice and Hosea Rodgers, found safe passage awaiting them on many a guided tour through the Longhorn forward wall. And at times, the boys even plowed their own holes.

In the passing department, the Snavely charges had seemingly regular flights leaving for the Texas secondary throughout the ball game. Justice improves as a passer everytime he throws the ball. The most underrated department of the Tar Heel offense for the past few years has been passing, for the locals are really quite an air-minded bunch.

The rest of the Tar Heel backs did creditably in their roles varying from walk-ons to running parts. Bill Hayes is a definite comer and a goer to boot. Wingbacks Johnny Clements and Fred Sherman also looked thoroughly at home in their element.

Putting It on the Line

ON THE DEFENSIVE SIDE OF THE PICTURE there was no less of the rendering unto Texas that which was Texas. The end men turned in rousing performances with Mike Rubish gaining the most notoriety with his barefoot boy routine of kicking off in stocking foot, toes retracted. Art Weiner, Bob Cox, and Ken Powell handled passes with the ease of Mae West.

At the tackles was where the Tar Heels really put it on the line. Chan Highsmith, Ted Hazelwood, Haywood Fowle and Len Szafaryn had no mercy for the Longhorns and their clippings respectively. Guards were as equally well situated on the proverbial ball with Bill (Let me at him) Wardle, Bob Mitten, Sid Varney and Larry Klosterman choosing up regularly for the honor of being the fifth man in the Longhorn backfield.

If there were defensive standouts for the Tar Heels, they were the boys who presently back the greatest line show in the nation. Dan Stiegman and Irv Holdash diagnosed plays like a couple of Mayo surgeons while everywhere that Texas went, Bobby Weant too. Those Texans lucky enough to reach the secondary found their luck soon changing.

What Was Learned

THE GAME AS A WHOLE proved several other things besides the fact that North Carolina has a better football team than Texas. The Tar Heels have strength and depth—if the tape and baling wire holds out. They have profited by two hard years of experience and training in the Snavely system. They have gained the necessary self-assurance needed to be a great team by a great victory over an exceptional opponent.

The real sore thumb, though, that catches the eye is that Charlie Justice should be a choo in for All-American honors. If he doesn't make it this year, then there just ain't no Justice anyhow.

'Twas a wonderful day dream come true—the Texas game, but a win that leaves the Tar Heels in unenviable position as the team at the top of the ladder. There isn't but one way you can go from here and that's down. Which means nine more tough weeks ahead.

Ah, but can't you hear the Sighs of Texas echoing in the distance?

couldn't gain on the ground and had to resort to passes for its only score and the few other threats it offered.

In short it was a sparkling performance and the team deserves every word of praise it will receive this week.

With Johnny Clements, who played the best game of his career showing the way, the Tar Heels wasted no time in racking up their first touchdown. Texas won the toss and elected to receive the opening kick. Mike Rubish, kicking without a shoe, booted to Billy Pyle on the ten, with Pyle returning the ball to the Texas 23 before Ken Powell hit him.

Three running plays failed to gain, and Frank Guess kicked to Justice on the Carolina 21. The Tar Heel tailback faked a reverse to Clements and streaked down his right sideline to the Texas 40. Charlie threw an unsuccessful pass to Cox on first down, and Clements broke into the secondary on a reverse to reach the Texas 20 before he was hit.

Justice then fired a flat pass to Art Weiner on the eight, and the Tar Heel end dived into the end zone for the first score after 3:30. Bob Cox converted.

Lightening Strikes Again

Lightening struck again after the ensuing kickoff. With Texas holding the ball on its own 12, a lateral from Campbell to Landry was recovered by Clements on the five. Hosea Rodgers picked up two at center, and Justice made the remaining yardage on an off-tackle slant. Cox converted at 4:30 of the first quarter to build the score to 14-0, Carolina.

An exchange of punts later in the opening quarter gave Carolina the ball on its own 43. Justice lofted a pass to Bill Flamisch on the Texas 43. Rodgers hit right guard for six to the 37. Flamisch went all the way to the 24 on a reverse, and Weiner gathered in a Rodger's aerial on the 12, going to the five. After a running play failed to score, Justice passed to Cox for a touchdown. The crowd went wild and Texans in the stands had a confounded expression on their faces.

But Blair Cherry's Longhorns didn't give up, scoring the next time they got the ball. Gillory returned the kickoff to his own 30. Campbell arched a pass to towering Peppy Blount, who got to the Carolina 40. Another pass from Campbell fell into Proctor's hands on the four, and the big Texan loped over the goal. Guess' extra point closed out a thrilling first quarter, with Carolina leading 21-7.

'47 Total Duplicated

The second and third quarters were docile, and neither team could muster up a score. But in the final quarter, the determined Tar Heels, seeking to duplicate the 34 points Texas scored against them last year, ran up two more scores to equal this quota.

Capitalizing on Texas mistakes, Flamisch intercepted a Longhorn pass on the Texas 30 and ran to the 15. Rodgers bulled his way down to the four for a first down. Hosey failed to score on two more bucks, so he turned his attention to blocking. He removed the last Texas defender on the next play to permit Justice to scamper over for a TD. Cox's extra point made it, 28-7, after 6:15.

Carolina struck again soon—in a series of plays marred by the bad sportsmanship of Texas' Tackle Ed Kelly, who hit Bill Wardle. Kelly left the game amid jeers and boos. He apoligized to the Carolina team in the dressing room after the game.

Hayes Scores Finale

The final Blue and White score, completing the Texas humiliation came as a result of an interception by Fred Sherman on the Carolina. Fred raced down to the Texas 30. When Kelly hit Wardle, Texas was penalized to the 15. Hayes got five at center to the ten. Justice ran to the three, and then to the one on another try. Hayes made the final yard on a line buck. Faithful Bob Cox finally missed the extra point. But no one minded at all—and Carolina had won, 34-7.

Szafaryn, Weiner, and Powell were mentioned by many as the best linesmen of the day, but this statement surely omits many other stars. Everyone was, in fact.

'Twas a Big Day at Kenan and This Texan Didn't Go Far

TEXAS LONGHORNS DIDN'T have much luck in stopping the thrusts of Carolina at the goal yesterday, but in this particular play Billy Pyle speared an intercepted pass to stop one Tar Heel thrust. Pyle grabbed the ball on the ten yard line but was soon downed by Carolina's Ken Powell. The interception halted the locals only temporarily, and they scored the next time they got the ball to make the final score read, Carolina 34, Texas 7. —Staff Photo by Mills

Everyone's Happy Following Revenge Victory

By Zane Robbins

A week's tention and a year's waiting was brought to a triumphant climax yesterday afternoon in Kenan Stadium when North Carolina's Tar Heels stampeded past the Texas Longhorns to claim a 34-7 revenge victory.

All the action was not confined to the field, however, as Kenan Stadium rocked from stem to stern with victory chants, yells from semi-conscious drunks, and occasional brawls. On the other hand, the brawls weren't confined entirely to the stands. Ed Kelly, big Texas tackle took a poke at Tar Heel Bill Wardle after one play that proved to be particularly distasteful to Longhorn players. A near-riot followed and Kelly was booted out of the game before the blow was returned by a Tar Heel. This particular Longhorn turned out to be more of a jackass than anything else. The fans booed long and loud as the ungentlemanly Texan was ushered from the field.

After the first period everything was anti-climax. The Tar Heels rammed across two quick tallies to break the scoring ice and the Longhorns' hearts, and then coasted to a victory that was much sweeter to Carolina men the country over than their after-dinner dessert. The raucous Texas fans scattered through the stadium then swallowed hard and found no other occasion for shouting save their short-lived second quarter burst of joy when their "almighty Cowboys" finally managed to penetrate the Carolina end zone.

Half-time brought a splurge of betting to Kenan as the odds shifted heavily in favor of Carolina and enthusiastic rooters offered 10-1 odds that U.N.C. would paste the Texans by fourty points by the time the final gun sounded. A few drunks threw money wildly about the stands on foolish wagers and others threw hats upon the field in fits of joy. At the same time, still others rose gallantly, though somewhat clumsily, to their feet and threw fists at one another.

Near the end of the game a report came in from Raleigh and enthusiasm once again swept through the stands when it was learned that State tied Dook, 0-0. By the time the final gun sounded the few hundred Texans that had roared into town the night before were well into South Carolina. As each one filed past it was the same old question, "How am I gonna explain to the folks back home?"

Well, now we're even. We got the '34" this time. The worm has turned.

Georgia Looks Bad In Taking Victory FromChattanooga

ATHENS, Ga., Sept. 25—(UP)—A lack-luster, dyspeptic Georgia team twiddled its thumbs for three quarters and finally mustered a two-touchdown scoring punch in the final period today to beat Chattanooga, 14-7, before 12,000 disgruntled fans.

For 45 minutes, Georgia was the most miserable eleven to appear under Coach Wally Butts since he took over ten years ago. Only some sharp late running and several key pass interceptions produced the victory.

A minute and a half after the fourth quarter opened, Halfback Joe Geri took a lateral from Quarterback Johnny Rauch at the Chattanooga six, dodged Ralph Hutchinson, and barreled through Jack Hoover for the tally.

Just nine plays later, Rauch had picked off Flankman Bob Walston in the clear at the 15-yard-line and Walston proceeded untouched. The played was good for 44 yards.

Coach Scrappy Moore's determined line, outcharging Georgia on every play, recovered a pair of Georgia fumbles in the first half and once marched to the Georgia 24 before losing the ball on a fumble.

It was left to the visitors to furnish the game's biggest thrill. In the waning moments Rauch fired a pass straight into the hands of Chattanooga line-backer Gordon Atchley, who bucked through the entire Georgia team and raced 30 yards to score.

UCLA ROUTED

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 25—(UP)—Northwestern, again demonstrating the Big Nine Conference superiority over Pacific Coast teams, soundly drubbed the University of California at Los Angeles, 19-0, today in a game far more one-sided than the score indicated.

Putting on a brilliant defensive show and scoring when the opportunity to do so presented itself, the Wildcats left 55,156 Memorial Coliseum spectators dumbfounded over the astounding difference in the brand of football as played in the Midwest and out here.

ARMY WINS

State, Duke In 0-0 Tie; Notre Dame Edges Purdue, 28-27

Sloppy Play Mars Campaign Opener Of Local Schools

RALEIGH, Sept. 25—(UP)—North Carolina State college and Duke university left their steam in the lockers today and stumbled to a scoreless tie before 20,000 chilly fans in Riddick stadium. Neither club broke loose with any kind of punch until the last of the fourth period, and then both attacks petered out within the 10-yard line.

North Carolina State's Wolfpack started with their backs to the wall when tailback Fred Fletcher took the kickoff on his own four. From there, Fletcher punched to his own 13 before he quick-kicked out of danger.

Duke did no better and kicked three plays later and State college took over again on their own 49. Duke wingback Tommy Hughes hauled in one of Fletcher's passes and the game teetered back to the Duke hands.

When the quarter ended, Duke, powered by fullback Paul Stopanz, was on the enemy's 10, but the three-cylindered attack petered out after four plays ended still on the 10.

Kicks Again

Fletcher kicked out of danger and a few plays later snagged a Duke pass and got to the Blue Devils' 34, but a clipping penalty sent the home team back to their own 49.

A brief driver brought State to the Duke 22 yard line behind the running of fullback Bob Smith and wingback Oscar Bozeman, but Duke took over again.

Fred Folger, Jr., and Stephanz almost staged a drive but discouraged fans saw it bog on State's 36 and the half ended as State's Fletcher kicked out on the Duke six-inch line—A 28-yard precision boot.

The third period was a repeat with the ball changing hands but picking up no speed in either camp.

State Drive

State's best drive came in the final period when reserve blocking Harry McLeod broke to his own 34. Two plays later tailback Bill Thompson hit Bozeman with a 20-yard heave to the Duke 46 and plunged for a first down at the 41. Thompson passed another 10 yards to end Roland Simon who took it and was neared. The ground attack then ended on the Duke 26 when Duke recovered a fumble.

Duke's Stephanz, fullback Jack Mounie and tailback Roland Hodges ground to the State 27, but the game ended as Hodges was nailed five yards behind the line of scrimmage.

Neither team lived up to advance billing with ragged line and flank play keeping both backfields helpless.

Tennessee Beaten By Maroons, 21-6, In Knoxville Tilt

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 25—(UP)—Mississippi State's one-two punch—Tom McWilliams and Harper Davis—passed and ran the Maroons out of a hole today and then played cat and mouse with Tennessee the rest of the way for a decisive 21-6 victory before 35,000 fans.

Tennessee elected to shelve its traditional running game for a passing attack. But except for the first period, when it paid off, McWilliams with his bullseye passes and Davis with his wigglehips had matters their own way. After the first stanza, the Maroons rolled up a touchdown in each succeeding period.

With a pass defense tighter than a Gay Nineties girdle, the Maroons secondary bottled up Tennessee Captain Jim Powell to dash the Vols' hopes for a winning overhead game. The rest of the time McWilliams kept the Vols at bay with lofty punts averaging better than 40 yards.

Shivering Tennessee partisan fans got a lift in the first period when the Vols rolled 67 yards for their first score. Six pass plays, with J. B. Proctor on the business end, and five through the line put the Vols deep in scoring territory. State's line braced momentarily but seconds later Fullback George Balitsaris hurled across from the two. Powell's kick was wide.

Then the Maroons came alive. After the kickoff the Vols never laid their hands on the ball, and McWilliams had his mates to the Tennessee nine before the Vols knew what had hit them. Three plays afterward, Quarterback Truitt Smith rammed over from the two, and Jim Bledsoe's kick was true.

McWilliams suffered a knee injury midway in the fourth period. But Davis was right there when Tennessee sub Tailback W. C. Cooper let one go toward Powell and it landed in Davis' arms. He had a clear field from the Tennessee 27 to a touchdown. Once more, Bledsoe's conversion was good.

California Takes Win from Middies In Rose Bowl Bid

BALTIMORE, Sept. 25—(UP)—California's Golden Bears, belatedly aroused to a fighting fury, started on the long road they hope will lead to the Rose Bowl today with a 21-7 victory over the Navy Midshipmen before 39,000 fans at Babe Ruth Stadium.

Coach Lynn (Pappy) Waldorf's Californians, generally considered to be the top team on the Pacific Coast, made quite an impression on the other side of the nation.

The defeat spoiled the coaching debut of Navy's George Sauer, who came from the University of Kansas, hopeful of reestablishing the Midshipmen as one of the more eminent gridiron powers after two dismal seasons in which they won only two games.

For a time it looked as if the Bears never would come out of hibernation. That was through most of the first half when Navy fought the favored Westerners to a 7-7 tie.

But at the start of the third period, California marched 83 yards for a touchdown which came when Staten Webster burst through center for 26 yards.

Chuck Sarver gave California an insurance touchdown in the fourth period, scoring on the second play after the teams switched goals. He plunged across from three yards out.

Navy looked the winner in the opening minutes of the game, ripping off six first downs in 13 plays to score in just five minutes and nine seconds.

Reaves Baysinger sparked the attack, whipping a pass to Al McCully for ten yards and another to Phil Ryan for 12. Bill Hawkins picked up six on a line buck and another pass put the ball on the two. Al McCully taking it over on the next play. Jim Wills kicked the extra point.

Texas Mentor Has No Alibis; Barefoot Rubish Is Sensational

By Buddy Vaden

Coach Carl Snavely, grinning from goal line to goal line, had little to say about the Texas rout, except that "We got 'em before they even knew they were in a game. Our boys were 'up' and played real team ball and I'm proud of them."

About the once potent Longhornes he said, "They have a fine passing team and their timing and speed was tops, but they seemed to be too complacent. Undoubtedly the boys can't help it, but its fatal when things get that way."

Blair Cherry, Texas coach, offered no alibis, but praised the smooth-running Tar Heels. "Carolina was great out there. We weren't sharp enough to take care of them. We made too many mistakes and our boys just weren't 'up'," he said following the game.

Weiner Comments

In the dressing room after the game the Carolina crew was in high spirits and had much to say concerning the game. Art Weiner, who still had memories of the long ride home from Austin last year said, "That long ride home works both ways. I hope we don't lose steam now just because we had an easy team to start with."

Charlie Justice, one of the finest sportsmen ever to grace the University campus, had nothing but praises for his teammates especially the line. Said he, "Our line played one hell of a game. They charged hard and blocked superbly. They really wanted to win and deserved the victory."

Mike Rubish, who was quite a sensation with the fans because he kicked off barefooted, explained that he could get kicks higher and get more yardage out of the ball without his shoe. In case the feminine fans are worrying about his toes, Mike explains, "I don't really kick that ball hard, but when I get it just right it'll go for yardage."

Szafaryn Praises Texas

Possibly the outstanding lineman of the day, Len Szafaryn, seemed to think much of the Longhorn foreward wall. "They held exceedingly well on passes and never let up. But nobody could have beat us today. We were up for the game and just had to win."

Johnny Clements, who was out of the game several times with minor injuries but who always managed to bounce back, agreed with the rest, that "The line played the best I've ever seen them play. Our line whipped them, not us."

Long-faced Bully Gilstrap, assistant to Coach Cherry, seemed to voice the opinion of the majority of the Texas team when he said "Those Tar Heels were darn good, and they just gave us a sound whipping."

Luck Helps Irish To Score Victory In Real Thriller

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Sept. 25—(UP)—Notre Dame's supposedly mighty Irish needed all the fight and spirit and luck at their command today to pass the first and perhaps sternest test in their quest for another national football championship, barely defeating Purdue, 28-27, in a thriller that ranked with the best games of all time.

In the final analysis they won by out-lucking Purdue before a record crowd of 59,353 in Notre Dame Stadium.

The Irish piled up the points on the breaks, and Purdue, mighty shaky at times, furnished them plenty of opportunity. But for 60 minutes it was a tough, hard-fought ball game between two rugged teams, and neither club showed any mercy in the clinches.

Purdue, beaten by Notre Dame last year by 22-7, had nearly the same club today. At times the Purdue line completely outclassed the Irish forwards. But in the fourth period Notre Dame's superior manpower began to tell and it punched over ten points to clinch the victory.

Notre Dame started in the first period when Norb Adams of Purdue fumbled the first punt of the game and Bill Walsh recovered for Notre Dame on the Purdue 40. From there it took only eight plays for a score. Next period George Punzelt got off a poor six-yard punt which went out of bounds on Purdue's 36. So the Irish romped for a score in five plays.

Then Purdue rallied. The boilermakers drove to the Notre Dame five before Frank Spaniel intercepted Bob Demoss' pass in the end zone. The Irish quarterback, Frank Tripucka, tried a first down pass from behind his goal, and Adams picked it out of the air on the Irish 35.

CHARLOTTE, Sept. 25—(UP)—William and Mary's smooth-working football squad, holding back for the clash with Wake Forest next week, sailed to a 14-6 win over Davidson tonight with the reserves carrying the action after the first period. Some 10,000 chilled fans watched the William and Mary workout.

No Bare, Grey Walls . . . . . At Steve Stefanou's

That 'Old College Atmosphere'

By Lincoln Kan

Have you ever wanted a place to date in relative quiet, without having to look at grease-filmed counters and bare, grey walls?

One Carolina student, who dreamed of a place with such atmosphere and where a beer was a beer—did something about his ambitions. Steve Stefanou combined his ideas and talent with the sweat of several friends and came up with the new Cafe Seville.

The student body quickly shortened the name of Cafe Seville to just plain "Steve's."

"Rah-Rah" Atmosphere

Cafe Seville is a happy combination of the good old college "rah-rah" atmosphere and a smoke-filled Greenwich village nightclub.

Dates will be pleased since Steve's wife has looked out for the girls by over-ruling red and green lighting which make those dream outfits resemble the shades of Hades.

Decorations are simple at Steve's. As you enter the cafe you are greeted by two silent, black leopard statuettes. On the back wall, the leopard motif is repeated in a blue and black mural painted by John F. Mamby, a University art student.

STEVE STEFANOU

Irish Bartender

Along the moulding above the pine walls, the animal theme is continued by minature heads spaced at intervals.

The cafe boasts a typical Irish bartender, complete with short white jacket and hiding hefty shoulders which can go into action to dismiss any misbehaving rowdy. He pours out the stuff in glasses, pitchers or the conventional brown bottle, "Brands for the asking."

The astounding thing about Cafe Seville is that Carolina ladies and gentlemen are treated like Carolina ladies and gentlemen. Steve says his watchword is "courtesy." So smiling Steve himeslf is always on hand to give the refined and courteous atmosphere which he says is due Carolina students.

New Parking Regulations Released to Ease Problem

Assistant Dean of Students Bill Friday yesterday released special traffic regulations in order to make parking facilities available to commuting and physically handicapped students and the faculty, staff and employees of the University.

The regulations are divided into eight specific regulations. Friday said that the regulations were released in order to alleviate the congested traffic condition in many parking areas.

The eight new regulations are as follows:

1. All students having cars are required to obtain a sticker and those not doing so during registration should call at 206 South building.

2. Members of the faculty, staff and University employees may obtain their stickers at the information desk in South building from Monday, Sept. 27 through Sauturday, Oct. 2.

3. The regulations provide that cars with red stickers will be allowed to park in the parking lots behind Y building, behind Phillips hall, behind Caldwell hall, and on the east side of Steele dormitory. Cars with blue stickers may park at any authorized parking place on the campus except the four lots named.

4. The area in which blue stickers will be issued is bounded by Rosemary street on the north, Mallette, Ranson and Oransom streets on the west, Raleigh road, University drive and Vance street on the south, and the Country Club road and Boundary street on the east.

5. Obtaining a red sticker will not assure a parking place. It only makes the holder thereof eligible to park in restricted areas.

Another set of three regulations was announced to promote better traffic conditions on the campus. The regulations are:

1. That holders of blue stickers leave their cars at their residences.

2. That holders of red stickers try to avoid moving their cars from one area to another during class changes.

3. That the speed limits be observed.

CPU Schedules Business Meet

Herb Alexander, chairman of the Carolina Political union, announced yesterday that a special business meeting for all members of the CPU will be held at 8 o'clock tonight in the Grail room of Graham Memorial.

Detailed plans for the coming year's activities in roundtable discussions, radio forums, presentations of prominent public speakers, and increased membership for the union will be discussed.

The first of the regular Sunday-evening roundtable discussions, which are open to all students and visitors throughout the school year, will be held next Sunday evening at 8 o'clock in the Grail room of Graham Memorial.

GM Darkroom

Graham Memorial's photo darkroom is now open to those students who have membership cards. Office hours have been listed as 7 until 8 o'clock Monday through Friday nights.

Any student who does not have a membership card and desires one is asked to see Hank Hickman, darkroom manager, between tomorrow and Friday of this week. He will be in the office of Graham Memorial from 7 to 8 o'clock.

Informal Meet, Tryouts Slated By Playmakers

An informal meeting of all students interested in working with the Carolina Playmakers during the coming season will be held Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock in the Playmaker theater and public tryouts for "I Remember Mama," a two-act play by John Van Druten which is to be the first Playmaker production this year will be held Wednesday afternoon and evening.

An illustrated lecture, "Adventures in Playmaking," By Dramatic Art department Head Samuel Selden will be featured at the Tuesday meeting.

Tryouts for "I Remember Mama" will be conducted by Lynn Gault, technical director of the Playmakers, who is to direct the production. Twenty-five roles will be cast.

Gault pointed out yesterday that "tryouts are open to all students and townspeople, and everyone is cordially invited to attend."

He explained that the Carolina Playmakers is a community theater as well as the producing agency for the Dramatic department, and that students do not have to be members of the department in order to participate in the plays.

"We have placed copies of the play in the reserve room of the library," Gault said, "So that interested students can study the script before tryouts."

One-Man War

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Sept. 25 — (UP) — Charlotte police thought today they knew the source of a one-man war on parking laws.

They hauled in a car for parking on the wrong side of the street. In the glove compartment they found 20 parking tickets—12 from Charlotte, two each from Winston-Salem, Greensboro and Fayetteville, and one each from High Point and Durham.

Tillie, the Tiger, Isn't Interested in Boys Yet

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., Sept. 25.—(UP)—Note to Knoxville, Chicago, Indianapolis and Sanford: You can't have Tillie.

Animal-Lover John R. Hopkins, whose pet tigress escaped and gave this city an anxious week before she was recaptured, has other plans for the young jungle beast.

After Tillie was caught, the city ordered Hopkins to get rid of the aimal. And fast.

Several towns, unwilling to profit by West Palm Beach's experience, offered to give her a home.

Zoos in Knoxville, Indianapolis and Sanford specifically asked for Tillie and a man in Chicago said he had a boy tiger that was lonely.

"Thanks for all the offers," Hopkins said today, "but arrangements have already been completed for giving Tillie a happy home." He refused to say where.

The wealthy importer expressed sympathy for the Chicago man with the lonely boy tiger, but he added:

"I don't think tillie has started to notice boys yet."

Pseudo-Thief, Real One Meet As Each Raids 'A' Dormitory

DTH Reporter's Publicity Stunt Boomerangs Into Actual Robbery

By Charlie Gibson

This story is being written on a stolen typewriter—a typewriter I would have stolen myself from room 321, "A" dormitory, during the Texas game as part of a complex publicity stunt. "Would have stolen," I say, because I was beaten to that particular unlocked door by a real thief.

At 2:32 Saturday, two minutes after kick-off time, I walked across the deserted campus with a suitcase. Everything was on schedule: I thought I had missed no details of my stunt to alarm students about the dangers of leaving rooms unlocked. Within an hour I would have that suitcase filled with valuables I had lifted easily from two dormitories—"A" and Stacy.

Plans for Pillage

To avoid all-out confusion, I had informed the proper University and police officials ahead of time about what I planned to do. To appease the student who fell victim to my idea, I had even intended asking a local merchant to donate suggestive padlocks for those whose goods I would return tonight.

Dormitory Entered

Yet I did definitely overlook a major possibility.

By 2.36 there had been a noisy eruption from Kenan stadium. At that time I was headed for "A" dormitory. the new dorm right on the Raleigh highway opposite Woollen gymnasium. Carrying the suitcase openly, I strolled across a new yard naked of grass through the back door at the eastern end of "A" dorm.

My first step was to have been finding a witness within the dormitory who could vouch for the accuracy of my itemized list of loot. I walked along the hall and saw no one until I reached the telephone booth in the middle of the first floor.

There I met the would-be thief informally.

Conversation with Thief

"Do you know the taxi number?" asked a boy who stuck his head out of the phone booth. Immediately I noticed a deformed lobe on his right ear. Later I was able to add to his description that he had blond, kinky hair: that he was approximately my own height and age—6 feet tall and 21; and that he wore a light blue, pin-striped suit and sunglasses.

No, I didn't know the cab number. He went back into the phone booth and I went on down the hall towards the western end of the building. Then in the center of the floor before the last exit facing the highway, I noticed this typewriter—so obviously placed that it seemed like a gift to start me on my pilfering career.

Boomerang Suspicion

I realized that somehow the guy in the phone booth had not looked like the trustworthy sort I was seeking as a reliable witness. I waited with the typewriter until he had finished whatever phone call he was making. At the time I had no idea whether he was merely calling a taxi or whether he had been alling accomplices in other dormitories to come pick up his haul when he peered out of the telephone booth to see who was coming.

Shortly he came back to the end of the building with me, and the two of us carried on a 10-minute tete-a-tete over the typewriter. After a spur-of-the-moment decision not to reveal my own mission there, I pretended to him that I had had to stay away from the football game

Students Here Receive Blame For Vandalism

Testudo the Terrapin, metal mascot of the University of Maryland, has been stolen, and students from this school have been accused of the theft, Jess Dedmond said yesterday.

Dedmond, president of the student body, received a letter from Louis Eisenhauer, president of the student government association at Maryland, in which the accusation was made.

The letter read, in part, "Our massive mascot Testudo the Terrapin has been abducted. His kidnapping a few mornings ago has excited a considerable concern on our part for his safety, and far more important, for the questionable conduct inherent in such an action. We have reason to believe that he was removed from his pedestal by members of your student body and our administrative officials have asked me to appeal to you for help in returning him."

Persons who have seen Testudo at the home games of Maryland said yesterday that it takes four men to carry him onto the field, and that it seems improbable that the Terrapin could be stolen and brought to North Carolina without being detected.

In reply to the charges Dedmond said, "This student government has no knowledge of any such action. I have written to Mr. Eisenhauer requesting specific information concerning the charges. I have explained to him clearly the theft would be a violation of our Campus Code and that the standard penalty for vandalism is suspension from school."

First Freshman Assembly To Be Held This Morning

By Bill Buchan

Student Body President Jess Dedmond's pet project and a main plank in his pre-election platform becomes a reality this morning when the new freshman class meets in Memorial Hall at 11 o'clock for the first in a series of 16 freshman assemblies.

The program, planned and approved by student government and a committee of University deans, will present opportunities for new students to hear outstanding administration and faculty leaders discuss various aspects of the Carolina way of life, as well as several programs on, student government. University comptroller William D. Carmichael, II, will be the first assembly speaker.

Other programs planned include a student activities program, with short talks by leaders in forensics, publications, politics. and other student activities. Dean C. P. Spruill of the general college will conduct a program on the work and problems of his school and Chancellor R. B. House and Dr. Frank Graham are also expected to address the future student leaders.

Convocations

Two University convocations, at which all students will be invited to attend, will be included as part of the 16 assemblies. The annual University day will be held October 12 and Dr. John Mosely, president of the University of Nevada and one of the nations foremost authorities on fraternity life will address the second convocation.

The assembly will fill a long-noted need in the orientation of freshman students by allowing them to meet together over a period of time and enabling them to become acquainted with more members of their class than they would under ordinary circumstances.

"Opportunity"

Dean of Students Fred H. Weaver, in discussing the new project, said, "The freshman assembly program twice weekly during the fall term will afford the opportunity to present notable speakers from within the University ranks and from outside. Also it will furnish badly needed continuation of orientation through the first weeks of the college year. With the aid and advice of the President of Student Government and our student orientation committee, we expect to provide programs of legitimate interest and value."

All another students are invited to attend the assemblies if they have a free period at 11 o'clock. Orientation Chairman Bill Miller urged that all freshman counselors attend the meetings if possible.

Hygiene Switch

The time arrangement for the assemblies was solved when officials found it possible to schedule hygiene classes on Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 11 o'clock, thereby leaving the necessary Tuesday and Thursday hours vacant for all freshmen.

Every freshman who entered the University either in June or in September will be required to attend the assemblies. No unexcused absences will be accepted and students with such an absence against their record are subject to dismissal from the University.

Election Plans

One of the most praiseworthy aspects of the new chapel series is the plan for the election of freshman class officers. After

Secretary of Army Royall Says Possible War In Distant Future

By Lincoln Kan

"I am an optimist in the matter of war and peace," said Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall in an exclusive interview Saturday, before the Carolina Texas game.

Secretary Royall, who was commissioned a second lieutenant in the same company as University Veterans Advisor Col. F. Carlyle Shepard and was right guide because of his six feet four stature went on to say that "A possible war is still distant: however, the recent action of the Russians may mean that war is necessary.

"Announces"

"What the Russians have been doing so far have been annoyances, rather than deliberate provocations of a conflict. The ack-ack fire reported may mean another annoyance. Yet we can't be too sure!"

When asked about the status of the college men who are still in the reserves, Secretary Royall spread his hands expressfully and said, "There is nothing to be worried about. There is no fear of re-call now unless war is declared or a greater emergency than now exists comes about!" He added with a smile, "We do need men, especially in the junior grades, and we will welcome all who desire extended duty because positions are ready for them."

"More Power"

On the question of the present United Nations session now in progress at Paris, he said "The United Nations has made progress, and I am hopeful that it will continue to function with more power to preserve peace. Yet we must recognize that a few large recalcitrant nations could destroy the usefulness of the U.N which we need so much today!"

He declined to comment on the present Palestine question and added that it was not in his province to discuss that or the possibility of a United Nations force to be created.

Will Take Time

As to the formerly intense rivalry between the various branches of the armed forces, Secretary Royall was precise in his statement. "Our services are not yet completely unified, but good progress has been made. Actually the finding out of the problems and difficulties of a traditionally separated armed

Solid South Is Subject of Talk By Alben Barkley

ASHEVILLE, Sept. 27—(UP)—The Democratic nominee for vice-president and the secretary of agriculture dipped briefly into Dixie today to warn the South to stay solid for the Democratic party.

Sen. Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky told a party rally here tonight a break in the "partnership" between the Democratic party and the South would be a "tragic thing."

Secretary of Agriculture Chas. F. Brannan, the other half of a double-header attraction kicking off the Democratic campaign in North Carolina, said the South would become an "exploited colony" under Republican leadership. Brannan spoke today at Monroe.

Barkley said destroying the traditional Democratic solidity of Dixie would leave the South "without effective means of promoting its own high aspirations" and without a voice in the national government.

The Kentucky senator called splinter parties "a threat to the United States' world leadership." Both he and Brannan said a vote for the Progressive party or the States' Rights Demorats would be a vote for the Republican nominee.

Truman to Visit Governor Cherry

RALEIGH, Sept. 27—(UP)—President Truman will be the guest of Gov. Gregg Cherry at a luncheon in the executive mansion here Oct. 19, Cherry announced today.

Mr. Truman is scheduled to speak here Oct. 19 to a promised crowd of 50,000 attending the opening of the state fair. and to speak at the unveiling of a statue on the capitol grounds honoring North Carolina's three presidents, Andrew Jackson, Andrew Johnson and James K. Polk.

Cherry said President Truman wired his acceptance of the luncheon invitation last night from San Antonio, Tex.

The telegram said:

"I am honored to accept your kind invitation and to be your guest at the executive mansion and to have luncheon with you during my visit to Raleigh on Oct. 19. I shall look forward to seeing you with a great deal of pleasure."

Thoughtful

GASTONIA, Sept. 27—(UP)—Gastonia Negro Thomas McKeeson is a cautious man, but he still ended up under a 60-day suspended road sentence today.

McKeeson's wife had him hauled into court on an assault charge claiming he slapped her once in the face. She was asked by an observant solicitor if McKeeson had broken her glasses.

"No," she replied thoughtfully. "He took them off first."

Phi Will Install Officers Tonight In First Meeting

In a formal inauguration ceremony tonight at 7:30 in New East, officers of the Philanthropic Literary society will be installed by retiring Speaker Ernest House.

Beginning its 155th year on campus. the society will have as officers this quarter Robert Coulter, speaker; Herman Seiber, speaker pro-tem; Fred Newton, sergeant-at-arms; Fred Newton, treasurer; Ernest House, Critic; Page Dees. clerk, and Pete Gerns, parliamentarian.

All students are invited to attend the ceremony and the reception which will follow. Members and former members are particularly urged to be present.

Coates Articles Being Published

"The Pay of Legislators" 'is the title of the first of a series of articles on four proposed amendments to the North Carolina constitution which has been released from the Institute of Government.

Albert Coates, nationally-known director of the institute, is author of the pieces, which will appear in Sunday papers throughout the state for the next three weeks.

In the initial story, Mr. Coates discusses the proposal which would double the salaries of members of the General Assembly. Speaker and lieutenant governor. The present pay of $600 for members and $700 for presiding officers per session is considered inadequate. The new proposal, if passed, would boost pay to $1,200 and $1,500 respectively.

The first article will be reprinted in the October issue of "Popular Government," monthly magazine of the institute.

Playmaker Meeting

"Adventures in Playmaking," an illustrated talk by Dramatic Art department head Samuel Selden, will be featured at an informal meeting of all students and townspeople who are interested in working with the Carolina Playmakers during the coming season. The meeting will be held tonight at 8 o'clock in the Playmaker theater.

Director Selden's talk will cover the history of the Carolina Playmakers from the personal and human interest angle. A slide projector will be used with photographs covering the thirty years of Playmaker activities.

All students who are registered in the department of dramatic art are expected to attend, and other students or townspeople are cordially invited to the meeting.

Mrs. Irene Lee Leaves Spencer After 23 Years as Dorm Hostess

By Margaret Gaston

Mrs. Irene Lee, who for 23 years served as hostess of Spencer dormitory, the oldest woman's dormitory on the campus, retired September 15. While at the University she acted as advisor and friend to an estimated 4,500 women students.

Spencer was offically opened during the fall of 1925, and the following winter Mrs. Lee arrived on campus to take up her duties which then entailed operating the dining room, assigning girls to rooms, decorating the dormitory, and acting as general handy-woman to 48 new girls. Since fall of 1944 Miss Willie Ames has been in charge of the dining room.

23-Year Task

Armed with ideas which later grew into Spencer traditions, Mrs. Lee undertook her 23-year task. Since then every Wednesday during the regular school year is "tea day." And during summer session after-dinner coffee is served on the porch or lawn to a group of Spencer girls. Another ritual observed in the dorm is the annual May Morning breakfast, which is scheduled for the first Sunday in May. At this time Spencer girls are entertained with a lawn party.

Many students, townspeople, and visitors who may not have known Mrs. Lee, have admired her handiwork. She planned and cultivated the large flower garden located on the south side of Spencer next to Coker arboretum.

Mrs. Gold in Carr

Mrs. Lee was replaced in Spencer by Mrs. Bessie Buchanan. formerly hostess in Carr dormitory since February, 1946, when the residence hall was transformed from a men's to a women's dormitory. Mrs. Sedalia Gold, formerly hostess in the Pi Beta Phi sorority house, replaced Mrs. Buchanan as hostess in Carr.

Last month Miss Katherine Carmichael, dean of women, entertained for Mrs. Lee in the faculty dining room of the Carolina Inn. Present were 17 guests, including the former Dean of Women, Mrs. Stacy. At the lunch-

Chidnoff Studio Already Taking Yack Photographs

Individual pictures for the 1949 Yackety Yack are being taken every day from 9 o'clock until 6 o'clock by Chidnoff studios of New York, Editor Bill Duncan announced yesterday.

He reminded all students who made appointments when they registered to be sure to keep them, as Yack deadlines must be met. Bill said that 192 pictures must be taken daily to insure meetings the deadline. He requested that boys wear coats and ties, while the girls should wear white blouses.

Bill said he was anxious to meet all students interested in campus photography. Applicants interested may bring negatives and final prints of their work to the Yack office in Graham Memorial today at 3 o'clock.

Any students who can type and are interested in helping out the photographers may contact Bert Kaplan at 34 Alderman.

2,174 Cases

RALEIGH, Sept. 17—(UP)—The number of polio cases for the month reached 230 today with reports to the State Department of Health of 10 new cases, half the number reported Saturday.

Health officials said the total for the year was 2,174.

Two cases were reported in Bladen county and one each reported from Columbus, Forsyth, Haywood, Irdell, Johnston, Mecklenburg, Richmond, and Rowan counties.

Shepard Expects Veterans' Checks Here in October

Veterans' Advisor F. Carlyle Shepard today warned that veterans who attended the second session summer school should not worry if their checks are less than $75.

The check which is due on or before Oct. 1 will be for the leave period subsistance due the veteran if he went to the second session of summer school. The subsistance check for the perjod after veterans have re-entered this fall will be the full amount for the month of September and may possibly arrive a little late.

Shepard also said veterans who have not turned in their certificate of eligibility should do so as soon as possible to room 315 South building.

Veterans are still eligible to reinstate their service insurance; however, it is required that they take a phisical examination now.

"The veterans are getting along all right so far, although we are having a little difficulty in straightening out the problems of the few transfers. We are doing everything we can," said Advisor Shepard. He suggested also that veterans check their subsistance form 7-506 which will give them much of the information they desire and save themselves a trip to South Building.

House to Speak

Chancellor R. B. House will speak to the Episcopal Canterbury club at 6 o'clock tonight at the Episcopal church annex on Franklin Street. Yesterday the chancellor was in Asheville, addressing the Junior Farmers of America and their parents. He took his harmonica.

Georgia Loosens Ballot Strings

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 27—(UP)—Georgia's famed feuding legislators, who raged through the battle of the two governors last year, clicked through a harmonious session today as the first step in allowing "a free choice" in the coming presidential election.

A measure loosening restrictions on the qualification of presidential electors and permitting voters to split party tickets was read for the first time in the state senate and approved unanimously by committee.

Adherents of both Gov. M. E. Thompson and Gov. Nominate Herman Talmadge, the state's "double governors" for 67 tumultous days in early 1947, appeared in accord on the need to open Georgia's presidential ballot to all parties, particularly the States' Rights Democrats.

The solons wrangled long and loudly last session over the legislative election of Talmadge to the state's highest office. They subsided, on the surface, only after the state supreme court ruled in favor of Lt. Gov. Thompson's claim to the executive chair.

Police Headquarters to Have Two-Way Radio Transmitter

The Chapel Hill Police department is in the first stage of getting their long-awaited sending and receiving radio system.

Al Bainhill from Greenville, N. C., is assembling a complete transmitter in police headquarters. Bainhill is a member of the Swain hall technician staff and is a radio ham operator.

The special Farnsworth receiving-transmitter set-up will be a narrow-band FM outfit with special antennas installed in the cars and on the roof of headquarters. Bainhill says the range of the system will be a radius of about 50 miles. The system has a power of 50 watts.

"The equipment for the cars is ready to be installed, but there are certain adjustments which will have to made in the assembly before it can be set-up properly," Bainhill said.

Police Chief W. T. Sloan said yesterday that the outfit should be a great asset to the local force. He said that up to now there has been no method of communication between headquarters and cars. "Police protection should be greatly improved when the new system is completely installed."

According to Bainhill, state police calls will still be received over the transmitter along with local calls. "A larger antenna will be needed to replace the makeshift one of the roof of headquarters," he said.

Bainhill is in the College of Arts and Sciences and says he plans to go into pre-med next fall. "I have always been interested in radio. I have my own 450 watt set at home and am now a licensed amateur."

Freshman Dance at Woman's College Is Scheduled for Saturday Evening

Girls in the freshman class at Woman's college in Greensboro will act as hostesses to University Freshmen Saturday night at a dance in the Woman's college

Open only to freshmen here the dance will begin at 8 o'clock, and there will be no admission charge. Music will be furnished by an orchestra.

Men attending must wear their name tags, received during orientation week, as identification for admission. Any freshman who has lost his tag may secure an identification certificate at the travel agency on Graham Memorial's second floor.

Special buses will leave from Graham Memorial Saturday evening at 6 o'clock, making the round trip for those who do not have a rides. Tickets will be sold at cost, and must be purchased by Wednesday at the travel agency.

First affair of its kind this year, the dance is being sponsored by the orientation committee in cooperation with Graham Memorial.

Town Men's Association Will Meet To Discuss Membership Drive Today

The first meeting of the Town Men's association for the fall term will be held this afternoon at 4:30 in Horace Williams lounge of Graham Memorial, yesterday announced John Van Hecke, president.

Van Hecke especially urged all officers and members of the TMA executive committee to attend the meeting as a fall membership drive will be planned.

The Town Men's association was organized last spring in an effort to organize all men, both fraternity and non-fraternity who live off campus in private residences. The group is a brother organization to the Town Girls' group which has long been one of the most active coed clubs at Carolina. TMA will have representation on campus for all town men.

All new students and any old students who have moved off campus during the summer are invited to attend the meeting and join the group if the desire.

Spearman to Speak

New members will be informed on the national set-up, history and local organization of the American Veterans committee at a meeting tonight at 7:30 in the Presbyterian church.

Walter Spearman, former member of the group's national policy committee and professor in the journalism department, will speak on the national organization. J. Ben Rouzie will discuss the history of the group and Johan P. Van De Velde will speak on the local set-up. Both of the latter have served as chairmen of the local group.

Committee reports on the long range program for this fall will also be given. Chapter elections will be held at the Oct. 12 meeting.

Better System Needed

It is time now for the administration to rectify the inferior advisory service offered new students and bring it to the level of excellence attained by the orientation program.

At present, the new student is given but a few hurried minutes of the adviser's time in the gymnasium before being rushed to the next stage. As a result, many students are forced to change subjects, involving the complicated red tape of drops and adds. Many of those who have to make course changes do so because their adviser was too pressed to give them a carefully considered program. Some do not realize until later in the quarter, or even later in the year, that they have missed a requirement which may result in an overload or elimination of electives they desire.

The situation, as it is, results from the large number of students to be processed for admission in a relatively short space of time. There must be a solution that will enable the new students to get sufficient attention and allow them to ask questions pertaining to scholastic matters not included in the orientation program.

Several colleges in the country now offer such a solution. They have new students meet their advisers before registration and plan a two-year course that satisfies the requirements and permits them to learn the essential scholastic information. This could be done here, if the advisers returned early, as the orientation personnel have done. During the three or four days preceding registration, new students could have appointments worked into their orientation schedule, giving them at least a quarter-hour apiece with an adviser.

The student body has done its part in the greeting and indoctrination of our new students and the administration should try, at least, to keep up with them. —B.L.

Open House For Thieves

Unless something is done before Carolina plays host to State in three weeks, many University students will carry hospitality too far and carelessly stage open houses for thieves.

A boomerang experiment described on the front page today proves beyond doubt that while the Tar Heel eleven is in action, Chapel Hill proper is as deserted as a hypothetical Harry's with all delicatessen and no beer. Almost all students and townspeople old enough to walk and still young enough to yell congregate in Kenan stadium among thousands of visitors.

Since it is all the inadequate Chapel Hill police force can do to man the stadium itself with enough uniforms to insure order there, the campus itself is left so unguarded that theft reaches practically give-away proportions.

The logical solution lies with dormitory residents themselves and their special dormitory managers and their special dormitory council. There are three possible game-time larceny cures. (1) Those who for some reason are unable to attend the game can volunteer as watchmen for their dormmates. (2) In case of 100 per cent gridiron following, a straw-drawing system can be devised to recruit a few watchmen fairly for the benefit of all. (3) All residents of a particular dormitory can agree to allow their manager to lock their entire dorm for the duration of the game.

To handle the theft situation at all times, there is another dual choice of alternatives for the campus at large. (1) Self-made Carolina Cassandras can warn and rewarn their fellow dormitory residents about locking their doors whenever they leave their rooms at any time. (2) There is the attitude some take that "The fool who leaves his room unlocked should lose his shirt and accessories, but I myself know better!"

And what happens when the fool in question happens to be the very roommate with whom you forgot to talk over the advantages of merely twisting a key in the lock on your door?—G.C.

Odds And Ends

By Rita Adams

ON CAMPUS: Here's one more line of the Charlie Long-Miles Smith one room situation. This time it's a line right down the middle of the room so each can hold his own and keep to himself. There's one question left in our minds, though: Just where does the third man—namely, Lee Harrell, fit into this triumvirate?

THERE MAY BE cracks we haven't even used yet about old maid school teachers; but if Carolina's education department continues to dish out graduates like Ben Beale, Maggie Taylor, and Lloyd Craddock, we may never use these cracks. All three girls, in case you've been missing their beaming faces, are teachers of the first order this year. And we can betcha the football players taking such subjects as senior English in Asheville and Winston-Salem are doing anything but crying in their beer about the situation. Lloyd hit the jack pot at Blackstone Junior College in Ole Virginny with a couple of classes in chemistry and biology.

HATE TO SAY it, but we're afraid Ed Smith spent last Saturday night patching the pants he's bound to have ripped climbing the barbed wire fence around Kenan Stadium. Life would be rosier on football week-ends, Ed, if you'd drop by the editor's office of the Daily Tar Heel and pick up your athletic ticket book. It's been tempting the staff for lo these many days.

THERE HAVE BEEN enough flowers thrown to the orientation committee to smell this place up for the next six years. Now we wanna throw some eggs, if you please. The seafood plates at the Pines may be good, but dogone if they're good enough to wait 35 minutes for! O.K. we'll go hook our little red wagon to the end of Wallace's next motorcade for our mud-slinging.

TEXAS TACKS: Did anybody ever take the Texan up who wanted to bet an oil well on the game? Just hope he saved a few drops of that oil to grease him some lightning to skid home on. Then, there was the Carolina student who asked a couple from Texas if they came all the way up here just to get licked. "Why, shore, we've rid further than that rite in Texas to git beat!" Guess those ten gallon hats are leaking tears now.

IN TOWN: Here's a note of interest to any would-be dancers—both students and town folks. Foster Fitzsimmons has sent out a call for volunteers in his new dance group which meets on Tuesday, and Thursdays from 4 to 6 p.m. and on Saturday from 10 to 12 p.m. With Emily Pollard as godmother, the group is planning two ballets for the year. They now have openings for people interested in ballet, or any other type of dancing.

ANYBODY INTERESTED in giving Eleanor McNeil a few driving lessons? You might end up getting her to let you use that new Ford she brought back from Lumberton last week.

MANY THANKS to the Camel folks for the free cigarettes at the Texas game. They popped up at a much more appreciate time than at the end of last year's registration line.

AND IN THE INFIRMARY: We find, to our regret, the following folks flat on their backs: Rodney Leonard, David Isaacs, Sam Stallard, Don Skakle, Jane Evans, George Wooten, Wilburn Loee, James Lindsay, Lloyd Bell, Will Thurmond, Davis Wiley, Rufus Hayworth, Emile Saleeby, Al Bernot, Robert Gaines, and Nancy Curtis.

These Days

Newsprint And Cold Cash

By George E. Sokolsky

The British, while short of newsprint, are long on idle facilities to manufacture newsprint. These facilities are not being used because the British do not choose to expend their dollars to import wood pulp. That is their choice and has nothing to do with us, except as they use American dollars, obtained through ERP (now called ECA) which means that the American taxpayer provides the British with the wherewithal to purchase newsprint in competition with American newspapers which do not receive money from their own government as a gift but have to earn it.

Authur Sulzberger, publisher of The New York Times, had this to say on the subject:

"In my judgment, a loss of freedom in Britain would all too quickly be reflected here by comparable curtailment of liberty. We will stand or fall together, and of course it's 'stand' that we intend to do.

"To assist in that purpose, if the British Government will allocate the dollars and the supply of newsprint remains short, we on The New York Times are prepared to give up a percentage of our raw material for British use if other American publishers will do the same."

Cranston Williams of the American Newspaper Publishers association replied to Mr. Sulzberger's proposal as follows:

"Whenever the British Government wants to authorize use of dollars required by Canada and Newfoundland it is my understanding that newsprint for Britain is available upon receipt of that hard money to care for contracts already existing.

"Further, when the British Government sees fit to authorize use of hard money there is pulpwood in Newfoundland available for manufacturing newsprint in Britain."

Mr. Sulzberger was undoubtedly responsive to some of the British criticism of the huge daily and Sunday editions of The New York Times while they suffer from newsprint starvation. The fact is that the British press does not need to suffer this starvation if their socialist government will permit them to buy what they wish. The reason that Mr. Sulzberger's proposal was not accepted enthusiastically in London is obvious: the British would still have to purchase the relinquished newsprint. They are willing to take from ERP or ECA, but they are unwilling to pay in U. S. or Canadian dollars. The American publisher does not want his taxes to compete against him in the purchase of Canadian newsprint which is already at a fabulous price.

In 1941, The New York Times consumed approximately 90,000 tons of newsprint. It is estimated that this year they will use about 144,000 tons, a rise of about 60 percent. The average rise for all American newspapers is about 29 percent. Maybe the British publishers find these figures hard to take in veiw of their own shortages, but our newspapers pay their own way and so ought the British newspapers. All this talk about maintaining freedom of the press by a handout of newsprint is unsound, because no handout ever won freedom for anybody. Mr. Sulzberger's proposal is charitable but it will not solve Great Britain's newsprint problem any more than the original British loan solved her problem of productivity. Socialism needs to re-learn the lesson that the prosperity of a nation depends upon its ability to produce goods and services, not upon its propagandistic ability to create an attitude favorable to granting loans.

Freedom of the press has existed only in countries where the press has been entirely self-supporting. It has not existed in countries where the government owned or subsidized the press or where its publishers were dependent upon subsidies from political parties. As a matter of fact, as long as the British press is dependent upon its own government or ours for its newsprint, it will not be free. Even British newspapers which own their own forests or mills in Canada may not use them to provide British newspapers because of the policy of their government to restrict their operations.

Mr. Sulzberger seems to hold somewhat to this view, for he added:

". . . If there is blame, let it rest squarely on government which does not seem to recognize the full importance of information, or, as some suggest, is prone to look the other way because too frequently it dislikes the news that is published."

HPB--Perennial Problem

By Jess Dedmond

The perennial problem of the House Privileges Board agreement has again raised its head. Now as in the past fraternity leaders face the task of answering to their fellows the unanswerable question of what is to be done. Why? Why is it necessary at the beginning of each term for long delays to occur and some tempers to flare both in South Building and in the houses? The answer seems simple. The Administration and fraternity leaders have not in my memory been able to agree upon standards and terms. The result is and has been that the President of the Student Body and the President of Interfraternity Council constantly find themselves in the role of buffers between the two. Now is the time to face up.

Facing up is not easy for either side perhaps, but it is necessary. The Administration needs badly to recognize fraternities as organs whose energies can be constructively directed toward a better campus life. Fraternities need equally as badly to face up to their own responsibilities both in the improvement of campus life and in the enforcement of the solemn agreements entered into. Now is the time for both.

All thinking fraternity men should see that the developments of the late Spring Quarter call for a serious consideration of their role in campus affairs. The Administration should also recognize that those developments are a result of failure to accept fraternities in a practical and realistic way. I now call for both to look up—to look to a better future.

The IFC should be strengthened. Both sides should look toward a solution which will permit the HPB agreement to be in effect on the day classes begin. As a part of the improved understanding both sides will have to give and take. With a view toward arriving at a realistic understanding I have asked for the faculty, the the Faculty Committee on Fraternities, and fraternity leaders chosen by myself and Jack Thompson to begin discussions within three weeks with the firm intention of clarifying our mutual problems. Only with understanding can we solve them. We must have understanding.

From Joyner's Corner

Just Call It 'Tex'

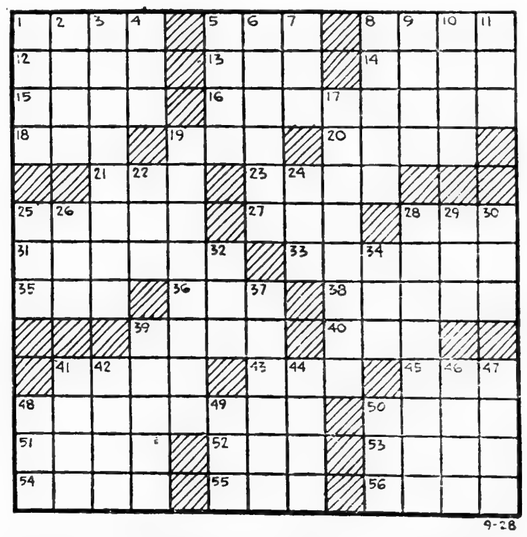
By Charlie Joyner

After a wonderful week-end in which the Texas Longhorns definitely came out at the short end of the horn, the new year goes into full swing this week. Party boy Al Moore aptly summed up the football game when he said, "They'll have to call the state "Tex" from now on because they lost their other end." From this corner, it's really great to be back and to see so many familiar faces, as well as so many new faces that we'd like to become familiar with. Classes got underway with a bang last Friday with everybody running around trying to find out where they were supposed to be and when. The old students who pre-registered last year were able to pick up their class tickets with almost no trouble at all, and the old problem of standing in line seems to be at an absolute minimum under the new system. All I had to do to get my class cards Thursday morning was to find them (in some other guy's envelope) and prove they were mine.

The first day of classes is always different from any other day, so we decided to go and size up our instructors. In psychology class the professor wanted to know our classification for some odd reason. "4-F," I told him meekly, although I couldn't see that it was any of his business. That must not have been what he wanted, however, since he told me that even the thickest person in the room would know what he was talking about. As I've only got a 29 inch waist, that couldn't apply to me, could it? Then I understood him to tell the class that the lavatory was at the end of the hall, but we would only go there on Tuesdays. A most unusual man.

At our next class the instructor informed us that we would be graded on the curve, which is known as the "tall man's" or "T. S." system.

I think that philosophy is going to be my most interesting class, though. At first I thought I was in the wrong room, because the prof was defining logic, and he said, "Logic is the study of dis course." I could see English wasn't, and I thought perhaps philosophy wasn't either, but he finally got me straightened out. When we started talking about philosophy he told us all the old saws about "It's either raining or it isn't" and "Which come first, the hen or the egg?" I still don't know, but I hope it was the egg. I'd hate to think the first egg came into the world as a result of fowl play. Then he wanted to know if any two people in New York had the same number of hairs on their head. I said yes, two bald headed men would have, but I guess that was the wrong answer. Philosophy makes you think and reason, but sometimes when you look out of the window you think of the oddest things. I got to thinking, so I wrote a poem and here it is:

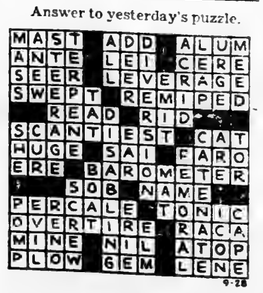


TWINKLE, TWINKLE, LITTLE STAR HOW I WONDER IF YOU ARE

Did you ever stop to think
As you looked up at the blink
Of a star up in the air
That perhaps it isn't there?

For when you stop to ponder
As you look at it up yonder,
That star must be some few light years away.

And, although you see it glow,
That light left some time ago—
And the star perhaps has fallen
While the light was on its way.



So we come to this conclusion—
Though it adds to the confusion—
While it will be here tomorrow
It is really gone today.

Gridders Resume Drills For Georgia Tilt

By BILLY CARMICHAEL III

The Slightly Forgotten Man

THERE WAS A SLIGHTLY FORGOTTEN MAN in Kenan stadium on Saturday afternoon, a little fellow who did his job with such prepared precision, that for the most part, he went unnoticed. One didn't see his name in the blazing Sunday morning headlines and about the only pictures he appeared in were ones where he was on the ground, having escorted some unruly Longhorn to a comfortable seat on the Kenan turf.

This is not a prelude to a "Forgotten Man" contest. For, one sturdy look at the Tar Heels next time they perform for a stadium full of lucky fans, will immediately reveal the identity of one Johnny Clements. Mr. Clements, it seems, is one of the Tar Heel work horses that doesn't spend too much time in the hay, since he currently performs both on offense and defense.

That is a tiring task in this day and time of the specialist, but young John makes the mistake of specializing in too many specialties. A hazy mind would recall that Clements broke into the regular playing string as a defensive halfback. But this year with old reliable Jim Camp pitching his tent elsewhere, Clements is being called on to burn the candle at both ends. He really set it afire Saturday.

For the Love of the Game

CLEMENTS IS ONE OF THE MORE COLORFUL players on the Tar Heel roster. He reminds one of a combination of Jack Armstrong and a bouncing rubber ball with his scenic do-or-die for the old school. Johnny, like most good football players, takes his straight without any chaser. It is a common occurrence to see him chastise himself with enraged fist beating the turf. And all because he missed a one-handed interception which would have made young Phillip's catch of Princess Elizabeth look remarkably easy.

Clements takes quite a bludgeoning for his efforts each Saturday afternoon. He is usually assisted from the field at least once an afternoon, only to return again almost before he is missed. He exhibits further physical fortitude by playing with sleeves rolled far up in weather when the alcohol is freezing in thermometers and fans alike.

As an offensive runner Mr. C. shows constant improvement. He ran the reverse in grand style against the Longhorns in the Massacre of the Pines and charts a mean course while sailing back with punt returns. The Justice-Clements double safety man combination is one of the Tar Heels' most potential teedee makers.

On top of all this, John is highly respected and regarded by his teammates as well as his opponents which means a lot more than any stack of clippings. All of which proves that the Tar Heels' remaining nine opponents will probably see more Clements than clemency.

The Lonely Ones

WHILE THE SALVATION ARMY is probably resenting the competition by this time, it might be well to recognize just a few more of the forsaken souls who played a large part in the stampeding of the Steers. A couple of these are the scouts, Russ Murphy and George Radman, who did a heap good job of figuring what the Texans would do before they did it. Texas was obviously well scouted, and with this information in hand, well prepared for. It's easier to duck when you know when and where the pop bottles are coming from.

Texas, they say, used the same defense against the Tar Heels they did in Austin, figuring the aging doggies of Carolina hadn't succeeded in learning any new tricks. The score on the scoreboard proved how wrong they could be.

The last remembrance of the day goes to the Great White Father of Carolina football himself—Carl Snavely. Mr. S., after two years of early season sputtering and stalling, has gotten his 1948 team off on the right foot, which has been placed squarely into the plans of one of the nation's better teams. The gray-haired one brought his charges along at a pace that had them primed for Texas on the day the Longhorns were to be played. He has developed a fine offensive and defensive team that can run, pass, kick and defend in championship style. And he has trained them well in the two primary functions of the game—blocking and tackling.

The Task Ahead

THE BIG TASK FOR ALL NOW, knowns and unknowns, is to keep the Tar Heels up each and every week—a hard and seemingly difficult task. In this age, it is not good enough to be superior to your opponent—you must also perform in that manner.

The current paths of glory lead but to nine more grave weeks of football for the Tar Heels.

Emphasis Placed On Pass Defense For Bulldog Test

Firmly established as the South's number one gridiron power on the basis of last week's showing against Texas, Carolina's rambunctious Tar Heels yesterday settled down to begin a week of preparation for Saturday's game with Georgia in the heart of Peachland.

Last Saturday an unheralded group of Chattanooga Moccasins tore into the tough Bulldogs, losing, 14-7, but leaving their fang marks deeply imbedded in the Georgians. Coach Russ Murphy was in the stands at Athens and yesterday he rolled up his sleeves and went into detailed explanation of the plays which Georgia used to down the fighting Tennessasons.

Pass Defense Emphasized

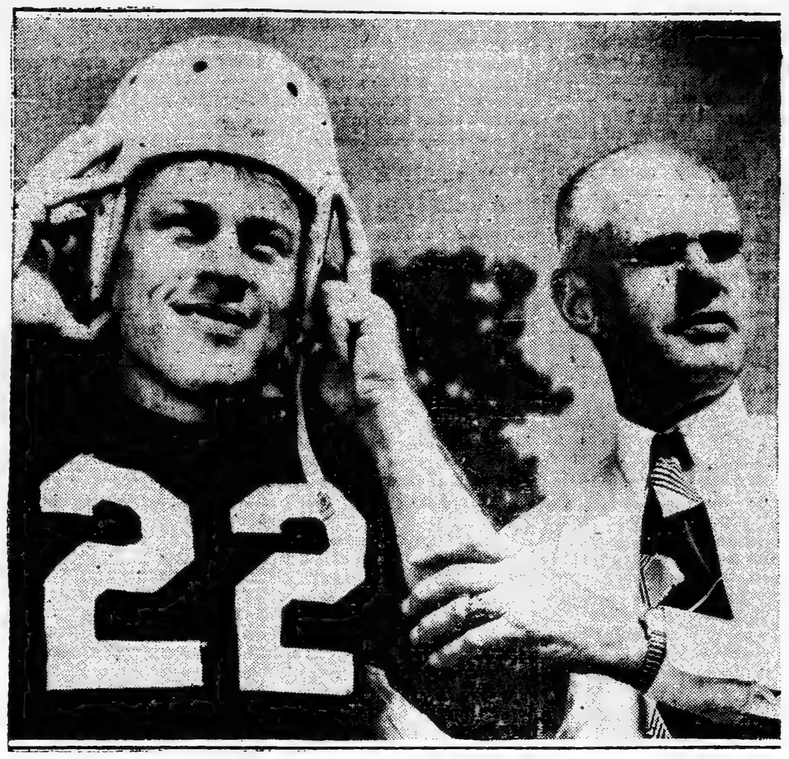
There was much emphasis at yesterday's session on pass defense, a department in which the Tar Heels have been woefully lacking recently. Murphy had one backfield running Georgia pass plays, and his top defensive alignment attempting to diagnose Georgia's passing operations more successfully than they did Texas' on opening day.

The linemen were taking it relatively easy, pushing the sleds, doing some running and limbering up sore muscles. The fullbacks were ironing out wrinkles in their passing and spinners.

There were no serious injuries to report. Don Hartig was in light equipment, suffering a bruised shoulder while Sid Varney had a sore arm to report.

Rubish Toe Hurt

Mike Rubish also failed to toe the practice mark, turning up with a slightly damaged digit. It was rumored around Navy field that it was the same toe which, covered only by a thin sock, caused a sensation in Kenan stadium by driving kick-offs deep into Longhorn territory eight times Saturday.



Definitely not cocky about what went on in the shadows of the pines surrounding Kenan stadium Saturday, the Tar Heels are going to be very cautious come game time this week. Last year the locals went into the Wake Forest game, throwing caution into the wind and got their ears soundly pinned back by the Baptists.

Although a good bit of talk has circulated through the campus concerning a possible bowl date for the Tar Heels on January 1, there is no mention of that among the squad members. They remember only too well what happened in 1947 and also that there are nine more games on the schedule. All nine could be very tough.

Heavier work is scheduled for today, but the byword will still be pass defense.

These Gentlemen Are Wanted in Austin

Pictured above are the two men largely responsible for Carolina's thrilling upset victory over Texas last Saturday. Charlie Justice scored two touchdowns, passed to Weiner and Cox for two more, and set up the fifth when he carried the ball to the Longhorn one-yard line. Coach Snavely, the one at right in the hand-painted tie, seemed well pleased with the outcome of the game.

Indians Best Bet For AL Pennant

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(UP)—By cold figures, by past performances, and by just plain logic, the Cleveland Indians were the best bet today to nose out the Boston Red Sox and the New York Yankees in one of the most thrilling major league pennant races of all time.

Cleveland is out in front by a full game but should the tribe fail to make it an "all-indian" world series against the Boston Braves, the Red Sox probably would be the American league representatives, making it an all-Boston classic. The odds were stacked heavily against the defending world champion Yankees. They are battered and weary and have the toughest schedule in the final showdown week.

Going to Athens?

Several means of transportation will be open to Tar Heel football fans who wish to follow the team to Athens, Ga., this weekend to witness the Georgia-Carolina contest.

Both the Seaboard and Southern railways are providing special trains to carry the Carolina partisans to and from the game. The Seaboard special will leave Raleigh at 9:30 Friday night and arrive at 7:15 the next morning. The train will depart at 9:30 the evening after the game.

Round trip fares on the Seaboard start at $18.11 by coach.

The Southern will leave from Raleigh also, but Tar Heels will be able to join the train at Durham. The Southern special will also leave Friday night and arrive early Saturday morning.

Tickets and information concerning these two trains can be obtained from the Graham Memorial travel office.

Students will have through Thursday to purchase tickets for the contest at a reduced rate of $1.20. They are only allowed to buy one at the special rate, but can buy extras at the full price of $4.20.

Freshman Football Squad Preps for Opener

Freshman football hit high gear yesterday, as Coach Crowell Little put his charges through a tough scrimmage session and drilled the boys long and hard on their passing attack. The Tar Babies will open their first post-war season here against the University of South Carolina freshmen on October 8.

Little's squad has a great deal of depth, but as yet the quality of the team can not be fully ascertained. A number of heavyweights and mercury-heeled half backs are working out and the team shows promise of developing into one of the better Frosh clubs in the Southern Conference.

Soccer Team Drills

Coach Marvin Allen's Tar Heel soccer squad has been shaping up nicely in the past few days and the amiable Carolina mentor expects the boys to be in tip-top shape for their season opener against the Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md. on October 6.

Allen announced that "no definite lineup has been decided upon," but added that, "several boys have been looking good in practice." A tentative lineup includes Williams, goalie; Nelson and Hagaman, fullbacks; McAllam, Greenbaum, and Johnston, halfbacks; Moore, Jordan, Bock, Hexner, and Farley, forwards. Allen stated that, "It's still too early to tell, but we expect to have a good team this fall." It was also announced yesterday that Freshman soccer practice will start Monday at 3 p.m.

All boys interested in the sport are invited to report for initial drills.

The North Carolina cross country squad went through a lengthy drill yesterday afternoon and Coach Dale Ranson reported after the workout that the boys are "looking good." A number of lettermen have returned to bolster the Tar Heel distance team. Among the outstanding early season performers are Julian MacKenzie, Sam Magill, Jim Hunt, Frank Hooper, George Harris, Jerry Lewis, Dick Gregory, Norman Barringer, Dick Carr, Bob Ryan, Halstead Holden, Ken Mattox, and John Hoots. The varsity schedule announced by Ranson yesterday follows:

Oct. 11—V.P.I. at Chapel Hill
Oct. 16—Navy at Annapolis

BASKETBALL BEGINS

Sixty candidates began training for the 1949 Carolina basketball team yesterday as Coach Tom Scott issued the first call to get practice under way.

Next session will be this afternoon at four o'clock on the main floor of the gym. All freshmen and new men are invited to try out for the varsity and freshmen teams.

FROSH MANAGERS

There is an urgent need for freshman football managers. All interested persons should report to Navy field this afternoon at 4:30. Tommy Lindley will be at the field to accept applications.

Felix Blanchard Set For October Wedding

San Antonio, Tex., Sept. 27—(UP)—Three times All-American Lt. Felix A. (Doc) Blanchard could hear those wedding bells ringing today.

The Wedding of Miss Josephine King, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Royla King, of San Antonio, and the "Doc" will take place here Oct. 12.

Miss King attended Texas University and the Incarnate Word college.

Lt. Blanchard attended the United States Military Academy where he played football.

"Doc" met his lady fair about a year and a half ago when he began his flight training at Randolph field. Blanchard is now stationed at Williams Air Force Base, Chandler, Ariz., where he expects to receive his wings Oct. 1.

The wedding will be a quiet, small affair with a reception held afterward at San Antonio's Bright Shawl club.

-Pseudo-Thief Meets Real One-

to check dormitories for theft because "some fool students never learn to keep their doors locked."

On that pretense I asked him for an I.D. card.

Feeble Alibis

He had none. His excuse was that he had not registered yet. He had no form of identification whatsoever in his wallet, except numerous pictures of women. He gave his name as Garner and claimed to be a senior med student, a transfer from "Ole Miss."

He did not answer when I asked if he had any identification in his room, but said that he lived on the third floor. When I asked how to get there, he pointed to the nearest steps. When we reached the third floor, he pointed to the nearest room, number 315, as his.

The door to the room was locked and had a note pinned on it to Jim Phelps. I asked the intruder who his other roommate was, only to be told that he knew Phelps but did not know the other occupant of the room.

Ride Wanted

His cab had not arrived when we returned downstairs. I told him that I thought I could get us a ride, and as he stood and listened I called not for a taxi, but for a squad car from the police station. A Chapel Hill fireman, the only man in the police station at the time, informed me that he could not send a squad car for fifteen minutes because most of the force was at the game, the rest were at a fire, and "the chief" was out on another call.

The suspected thief remained calm as he listened to this conversation but suddenly remembered that he had to meet his brother at the Carolina Inn immediately. Previously he had said that he was leaving to take his typewriter to town to have it checked.

Since I had no way of detaining him and did not want to leave the valuables unguarded, I allowed him to leave, first taking from him the typewriter, a sports coat and an expensive camera. He left these with me without asking any questions or requiring any identification of me.

Dormitory Search

I hid the loot in a shower room and made an inspection tour of the dormitory. I found ten rooms in the dorm unlocked, and there were enough valuables left in the halls to make entering the rooms unnecessary. On the third floor room 321 was standing wide open only a short distance from a large, ironically comic street marker which read "Street Closed."

I finally managed to hail a Durham cab, go to the police station, and have Chief Sloan send an officer to investigate. Together we checked room 321 and found a typewriter stand from which the typewriter was missing. Later I talked to two occupants of room 321, John Ingram, owner of the typewriter, and John Wellons, both of whom said they had locked the room.

Outside the dormitory we found four bicycles and a motorcycle, all unlocked.

During the game only one student returned to the dormitory. He was Richard Smith of room 214, who left the game early to pack a bag and leave for home.

Bus Station Check-Up

The police officer went to the bus station and was told there that a person answering the description of the suspected thief had been there but had left without catching a bus. "Garner" has not been heard from since. Should he read this, he will know for the first time what I was actually doing in dormitory "A."

As of yesterday afternoon no report of theft from "A" dormitory had been made to the police, to Dean Weaver, or to the dormitory manager, Earl Hill. Of the items now being held at the police station, only the typewriter has been identified. It is believed that the camera may have been the thief's own property.

On leaving the dormitory I had time left to cary out only a fluorescent table lamp which was sitting availably in front of room 403. Jack Ingle, its owner, has been notified.

Secretary Royall left to return to his duties in Washington soon after the Texas victory to which he was a happy witness.

-Assembly-

candidates for class offices are nominated by the three campus political parties, a special assembly will be held for the formal nomination of officers by the freshman class themselves. Candidates nominated by political parties will be renominated from the floor of the assembly by a fellow freshman. Any student who desires to run as an independent can also be nominated from the floor but will have to furnish the usual 25 names on a petition supporting his candidacy.

Eliminate Confusion

At the Assembly meeting following the nominations, all candidates will be given an opportunity to address their classmates. The program will obviously eliminate the confusion and ignorance on the part of freshman on who their candidates are and will give them an excellent opportunity to view Carolina politics in action.

The entire program will be complete shortly before Thanksgiving holidays and when completed will turn out the best informed and oriented freshman class that Carolina has claimed in many years.

Freshmen Cross Country

Coach Ranson announced yesterday that the first Freshman cross country practice will be at 4 p.m. Wednesday and anyone interested is urged to report. "We would like to have all boys with high school experience as distance or middle distance runners out for the Freshman team," stated Ranson. He added that experience is entirely unnecessary and that cross country is mainly a test of endurance rather than speed.

CAMPUS CALENDAR

Carmichael Gives Talk At Freshman Assembly

By Charles Pritchard

Freshman students yesterday applauded the advice and humorous illustrations offered by University Controller William D. Carmichael II in the initial freshman assembly in Memorial hall.

Carmichael, introduced by Dean of Students Fred H. Weaver as a man "qualified to speak for the Carolina he appreciates," spoke on upholding the standards of the University.

Own Standards

"Try to establish your own standards . . . built on a rock foundation," the speaker told his audience, adding, "make sure you're not just a ditto mark following the crowd."

Standards and a plan for living up to these standards will determine much of the happiness in life, he said. Standards in the University must be raised to increasingly greater heights, the Controller pointed out.

Greatest University

Citing the standards set by the football team in the game Saturday, he said: "If we had the same hours of thoughtful preparations and determination in all other things, we would have the greatest University in the land."

He advised giving a great deal of thought to the matter of "drawing the blueprints" for the student's life. A specific job of the University, where students begin drawing that blueprint, is to produce citizens, he said.

Selden Gives Talk With Photo-Slides To 200 Playmakers

Samuel Selden's illustrated lecture, "Adventures in Playmaking," highlighted an informal meeting of the Carolina Playmakers in the Playmakers theater last night. The lecture, accompanied by photographs projected on a screen, covered the background history of the theater group.

Selden, head of the Dramatic Art department, punctuated his talk with "eye-witness" accounts of the humorous stories behind the incidents shown in the photographs. The pictures included scenes from Playmaker productions and from the many tours that the drama group has made in its 30 years of activities.

One highpoint of the meeting was an experimental motion picture made by John Hamby and George McKinney. The movie was a continuation of some work the two students started in the motion picture production course offered last spring under the direction of Ed Freed.

Selden opened the meeting by introducing the members of the staff and the graduate assistants. Approximately 200 students attended the meeting.

Challenge

COLUMBIA, S. C., Sept. 28. (UP)—Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, preparing to push his own campaign for president, today challenged President Truman again to tell Southerners his reasons for backing the civil rights program.

Mr. Truman ignored Thurmond's first challenge last weekend to discuss the proposals in Texas.

"Wherever he speaks in the South," Thurmond said, "let him discuss his civil rights program—with special emphasis on his reasons for wanting to break down race segregation and to pass the un-American FEPC law.

"And let him tell his reasons for wanting an anti-lynch law when only one person was lynched in the United States last year, while there were over 360 murders in New York alone," the governor said at a news conference.

Flyers Request Shmoo Shipment To Feed Berlin

NEW YORK, Sept. 28—(UP)—The men of the 17th Military Air Transport squadron today ordered a shipment of "shmoos" with which to end the Berlin crisis.

One of the American Air Force units participating in the air lift into the blockaded German capital, the squadron cabled an order from Rhein, Germany, for a dozen. They promised to drop the shmoos into Berlin by parachute in "Operation Little Vittles."

Their cable from Rhein read:

"Al Capp, United Features syndicate, New York city.

"Will you ship by air immediately one dozen (12) shmoos addressed to "Operation Little Vittles," care of Lt. Col. James R. Haun, commanding officer, and men of 17th Military Air Transport squadron, Rhein, Main Air Force base, APO 57, U. S. Army?

"We will fly subject shmoos to Berlin at once and assure world crisis will be ended immediately. Special parachutes being readied to drop shmoos where they will do the most good. Once multiplication starts, we will all come home and take you out for a shmoo Christmas dinner.

"Suggest eager shmoos be oriented stateside prior to shipment with special reference to Ellis Parker Butler's famous tale of proliferocity, "Pigs is Pigs." Fear cargo capacity C-54 insufficient for ocean crossing if your critters fail to heed words of wisdom regarding over - enthusiastic propagation of species.

"(Signed) Men of 17th MATS squadron."

The mention of special "shmoo parachutes" recalled that the American fliers some months ago began making parachutes of handkerchiefs and dropping candy and gum in them to German children in the American sector of Berlin.

Community Club

An exhibit of arts and crafts by Chapel Hill women will be the feature of the opening meeting of the Community club of Chapel Hill, Mrs. J. A. Warren, president, said yesterday.

The meeting will be conducted Friday, Oct. 8, at 3:30 in the Episcopal parish house.

Mrs. Warren invited every Chapel Hill woman and extended an invitation to every newcomer. Anyone wishing to place an exhibit is requested to phone Mrs. Warren.

Following the exhibit a social hour will be conducted and refreshments will be served.

AGD Alumnae

All Alpha Gamma Delta alumnae are requested to attend a brief important meeting tonight at 7:30 at the Alpha Gam house, 226 Franklin street.

IN LOS ANGELES Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York and Mrs. Dewey respond to the ovation of the crowd that filled the Hollywood bowl to hear an address by the GOP candidate for president. He promised traitor's treatment for Communists who engage in treasonable acts. A parade of Hollywood notables preceded Dewey on the speaker's platform.

Dewey Says Country Will Not 'Compromise Our Principles'

MISSOULA, Mont., Sept. 28—(UP)—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey declared tonight that America will "not compromise our principles" in its search for a peaceful settlement of the Berlin crisis.

In his most solemn discussion of the critical world situation, the Republican presidential candidate said the threat of war hangs ominously over the future of America but we must not give up hope or efforts for a peaceful solution.

Dewey, who has been keeping in touch with the Paris negotiations on the Berlin crisis through U. S. Delegate John Foster Dulles, told an audience at Missoula, Mont., that a "dark cloud" hangs over the future of the nation.

Education Board Will Map Budget For Years 1948-51

RALEIGH, Sept. 28—(UP)—The state Board of Education tomorrow will make its budget demands for the 1948-1951 fiscal years, Paul Reid, controller of the state board, said today.

Reid said that major sections of the budget drawn by the board's Financial committee would concern teachers salaries, and state aid for school construction. He added that funds may be requested for expansion of the school bus fleet.

The controller could give no estimate today of the amount the board will ask from the 1949 General Assembly. The state this year is spending $64,687,295 for operation of schools.

The amount to be sought for teachers' salaries was expected to be increased in response to universal demands for higher teacher salaries during the primary election gubernatorial campaign.

Governor-Nominate Kerr Scott favored a scale providing a minumum salary of $2,400 for teachers holding "A" certificates and a maximum of $3,600.

The current scale for "A" certificate holders ranges from $1,620 to $2,412.

Regarding expansion of the school bus fleet, Reid explained that at the present time localities must purchase the original buses with their own funds and the state will purchase replacements as needed. He said the board would consider asking funds to finance the original purchases as well.

First Issue of Carolina Quarterly Is Due for Publication in November

The first issue of the Carolina Quarterly, new literary magazine on campus, is now being prepared and should be ready for publication some time in November, said the editors yesterday.

"The Quarterly," said Editor Bill Sessions, "was started by a group of students last spring who were interested in providing an outlet for the numerous literary talents on campus and in Chapel Hill. The staff consists of some of the most prominent professional authors and student writers in this vicinity."

Pricilla Moore and Roy Moose, both well known in campus publications, are serving as associate editors of the Quarterly. Other editors are Virgie Matson, fiction; Lee Knowles, poetry; James Rathburn and Harry Snowden, feature.

The editorial and business staffs wish to extend an invitation to all students interested in working on the publication. The Quarterly office is located on the south mezzanine floor of Graham Memorial.

'No Thefts'

No reports of dormitory thefts during Saturday's football game had been received late yesterday, even though the name of the owner of a stolen typewriter was released in yesterday's Daily Tar Heel.

Dean of Students Fred Weaver and Police Chief W. T. Sloan concurred in statements that no reports of stolen property had been received by them. And no word of any thefts were recived from dormitory managers or other officials.

Chief Sloan said if John Ingram, owner of the stolen typewriter, wanted his machine back, he could claim it at the police department in the Chapel Hill town hall. A stolen camera and sports coat also await their respective owners, he said.

HendersonNamed As Guest Speaker At Di Inaugural

Dr. Archibald Henderson, retired Kenan professor of mathematics and official biographer, of George Bernard Shaw, will be guest speaker at the annual Dialectic senate inaugral ceremonies tonight in the Di hall at 9 o'clock. All new students and any other students who are not members of the senate are invited to attend the program.

Officers to be installed at the meeting are Jim Southerland, president; Gran Childress, president pro tempore; Jerry Pettigrew, critic; Cam West, clerk; Charles Long, treasurer, and Bill Harding, sergeant at arms.

Merle Stevens, Di representative on the Debate council, and Long, Di representative on the Carolina Forum, will also be sworn in. Southerland will give the annual inaugral address.

An informal reception will be held in the Di hall, located on the third floor of New West building, immediately after the meeting.

Monogram Club Opens Doors To All Students at University

By Charlie Gibson

For the campus at large the Monogram Club has now opened its lavishly renovated clubhouse, inviting all students to use and enjoy a spacious lounge, a circus room complete with snack bar, and a dining hall which is soon to serve the whole student body.

The one-story brick building on the Country club road just behind Stacy dormitory and the quonset huts was originally constructed by the Navy in 1943 at a cost of approximately $45,000. Used by the Navy as officers' quarters, recreation hall, and reception lounge for trainees here during the war, the building was given to the Monogram Club in 1945.

"The clubhouse, Chancellor Robert B. House stated, "was turned over to the Monogram Club with the understanding that they would act as hosts for the University and would use it for the good of the campus. We had faith that the Monogram Club would work out something attractive, and that faith has been justified, The whole campus has benefited by their initiative and enterprise."

Chancellor House credited most work on this project to W. D. Carmichael, Jr., comptroller of the Greater University, and to P. L. Burch, former co-ordinator between the University and the Navy program here, now director of Victory Village.

Clubhouse Hours

The Monogram Club first became an all-campus student center on September 18. Its doors are open six days a week from 7:30 A. M. to 11:00 P. M. and from 1:00 P. M. to 11:00 P. M. on Sundays.

Supervising the new building are two University graduates, Ed Riggsbee and Frank West. Riggsbee, ex-foreman of the former dormitory refreshment stand beside Emerson Stadium, tends the main floor lounge and the circus room. West, experienced hotel resort manager, is in charge of the basement dining hall.

On the main floor the lounge finished in brown wood paneling affords ample seatting and reading room. At one end of the lounge is the mirror-walled circus room where a definite carnival atmosphere prevails among huge wood carvings of a seal, an elephant, a giraffe, and a 25-foot long, 3-feet high circus parade behind the soda fountain. These hand carvings required seven months' work by Carl Boettcher, University building commision employee and accomplished sculptor.

Downstairs is the eatting room finished in grey wood paneling with enough light-colored wood

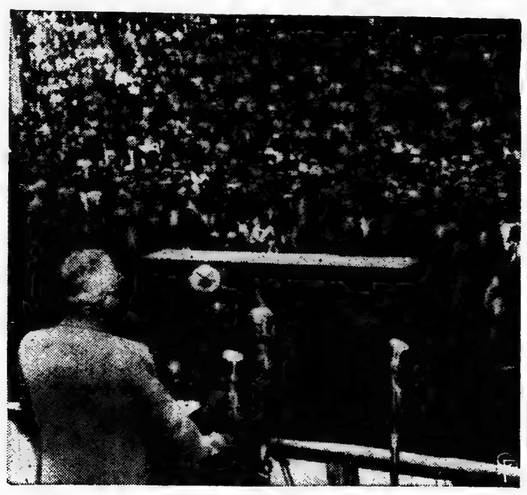
Traditional Chapel Hill Rain Brings Variety of Military Surplus Into Use

By Wink Locklair



Rain which began late Monday night and fizzled to a drizzle throughout yesterday, brought out a great variety of coats, hats and Army surplus to greet the first "weather" of the fall term. Hundreds of reversibles, field jackets, Navy dungares and, on three separate occasions, hip boots, were pretty much the uniform of the day, as university men and women began their early morning rounds.

The first showers of the year cajoled numerous students to forfeit breakfast for some extra sack time. Lenoir Hall, which usually has much more than it can handle by 8 o'clock, was cloister-quiet most of the morning. Downtown eateries reported slow business also.

All classes, of course, began at the scheduled times, and only a few absences were noted. The freshman class assembly was said to be well attended.

On a day such as yesterday, the library always does good busines. It seemed to be a god day to read all the out-of-town accounts of the Carolina-Texas rout. (Someone must have felt that Saturday's triumph entitled him to a few special liberties with the honor code: the sports section of the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot was no where to be found.)

Campus Party Slates Rally As Year's First Political Meet

PRESIDENT TRUMAN is shown addressing a huge crowd in San Diego, Cal., one of the largest he has encountered on his trip. The chief executive castigated the Republican majority in Congress for cutting appropriations for western reclamation projects. Preceding the Democratic presidential candidate's speech, tens of thousands of persons crowded the city's palm-lined streets to hear the president.

Truman Charges Republicans With Damaging U. S. Security

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept. 28—(UP)—President Truman charged today that Republican-inspired investigations of Communism have "impeded" the FBI and damaged national security.

Mr. Truman denied that Communism is a "powerful force" in America, and asked the nation to consider "the damage that is being done to our national security by irresponsible persons who place their own political interests above the security of the nation."

In the biggest speech to date in his 18-state campaign tour, Mr. Truman replied to Republican charges that he had "coddled" Communists. The president told an Oklahoma state fair audience that the Republicans had raised the Communist question as a "smoke screen."

He charged that Republican leaders have "impaired our nation's atomic energy program by their intemperate and unjustified attacks on our atomic scientists."

"I charge that they have not produced any significant information about Communist espionage which the FBI did not already have," Mr. Truman said.

"I charge that the Republicans have attempted to usurp the constitutional functions of federal grand juries and courts.

"I charge them with having trampled on the individual freedoms which distinguish American ideals from totalitarian doctrine.

"I charge finally that, in all this, they have not hurt the Communist party. They have helped it."

He charged that the Republican party is "the unwitting ally of the Communists in this country." To support his argument he cited figures to show that Communism reached its greatest popular strength in 1932 when the Communist party polled more than 100,000 votes."

Playmakers Seek Acting Personnel For First Comedy

Public tryouts for the first major production of the Carolina Playmakers, John Van Druten's two act comedy, "I Remember Mama," will be held at 4 o'clock and 7:30 o'clock today in the Playmaker theater. Lynn Gault, director of the production, will conduct the tryouts.

Roles to be filled include 12 women, 9 men, and several extras. Gault explained that tryouts are open to students, faculty and townspeople.

The simple tryout pocedure will be to read short scenes from the play, with several people trying for different roles at the same time. Everyone will be given a chance to try for the role he is most interested in, and he is allowed to try for as many roles as he wishes.

"However," Gault said, " anybody who tries for one role will automatically be considered for the other roles that his voice or manner might qualify him to play."

Gault invited everyone who is interested in working with the play to attend tryouts. "The Carolina Playmakers includes the campus and town, as well as the Dramatic Art department," he said.

'I Remember Mama" was first produced at the Shubert Theater, New Haven, Conn., in 1944, and later had a very successful run at the Music Box theater in New York city.

Gault, who designs the settings for the Playmaker productions, directed last season's highly successful production of "The Mikado" in Memorial hall.

Most Efficient

Carolina's Beta Upsilon chapter of Alpha Delta Pi, social sorority, was selected as the most efficient chapter in the United states at the annual convention held in Atlantic City, N. J., this summer.

Grace Marie Blades, senior from Apex and Carolina delegate to the convention, received on behalf of the chapter a silver service set as the award for outstanding efficiency. The chapter will keep the award until 1951, when every chapter in the country will again compete for the honor.

Jess Dedmond, Godwin, Eller To Give Talks

Launching a program of political activity for the fall quarter, the Campus party will hold a one-hour political rally in Gerrard hall tonight at 7 o'clock.

Party Chairman Jack Worsham said the meeting will be the first pre-election rally opened to all interested people sponsored by a political party on the campus.

With student government and campus politics as the main themes, the rally will feature addresses by several campus leaders. Scheduled to speak tonight are Jess Dedmond, president of the student body; Jim Godwin, vice-president; and Tom Eller, the former president of 1947-48. Worsham announced that other entertainment will also be provided.

The Campus party chairmanship will be officially turned over to Worsham in a ceremony tonight by John Rosser, temporary chairman during the summer sessions.

"New students have shown a keen interest in student government and we are expecting many of these men and women to become leaders in campus politics," Worsham said. He added that "The Campus party is a middle-of-the-road party with a broad platform that covers both fraternity and non-fraternity issues."

The CP chairman announced that business, covering a structural change in the organization of the party, will be transacted immediately after the rally. Worsham explained that the organization of the party is being shifted from centralized control to district control.

Free Election Bill Meets First Test

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 28—(UP)—Georgia's "free election" bill, a by-product of the Southern revolt against civil rights, meets its first legislative test tomorrow when two state senators throw in amendments aimed at hobbling President Truman and Henry Wallace.

The measure, which would guarantee a place on the ballot to Democrats, States' Rights Democrats and other parties, thus hits its first roadblock after free-wheeling through two days of a special legislative session. During these two days it has been read twice and received approval of a senate committee.

Sen. E. C. Wideman of Douglas announced today that he will seek to prune from the bill provisions requiring presidential electors to support party nominees. Thus Georgia's Democratic electors, controlled by Gov.-Nominate Herman Talmadge, could refuse to vote for President Truman even if he carries the state.

Sen. President William T. Dean of Conyers said he plans to introduce an amendment requiring electors to sign non-Communist affidavits.

From Wall Street

Somewhere on campus there is a young lady, probably an English major, who lost a mysterious package which is currently driving the English department mad.

Miss Orpah Cummings of the department said yesterday that the day's mail had brought in a brown-paper wrapped package slightly larger than a shoe box and weighing very little. It was addressed to:

"The young lady who was on the Silver Meteor to Baltimore Sept. 12

"Care of the English department

"Chapel Hill, North Carolina."

The mystery-shrouded missile was sent from 63 Wall street, New York city.

New Lineup In South

Notice should be taken of a new lineup of titles in the administration circles of South building. As of September 1, former Dean of Men Fred Weaver has taken over the functions of Dean of Students while former Dean of Students Ernest L. Mackie has become Dean of Student Awards and Distinctions. Bill Friday, a recent graduate of the law school has been named assistant to Dean Weaver to work in close contact with the student body on campus problems.

Congratulations should go to the student body more than to the three officials, since the students and the University will be the ones to benefit by the arrangement. Through the new division of duties, each of the men will have more time and more opportunity to perform more efficiently services now offered by the University and to institute new ones.

Each of the officials is particularly well suited for the job he now holds. Dean Mackie has always been interested in, and has devoted much time to, the organizations which tend to increase student interest in scholarship. In his present capacity he will work chiefly with Phi Beta Kappa, Phi Eta Sigma, the Golden Fleece and the Grail, and in the awarding of scholarships.

Dean Weaver has, during his term as Dean of Men, constantly endeavored to bring that office closer to the students. He has tried to make it a place where students could take their problems and be sure of receiving a quick hearing and considerate attention. His decisions on campus questions have often differed from the desires of the general student body, but they have always been made in what he considered the best interest of the students and the University.

If these man do not lose sight of the goals which they now have in mind and if they are able to carry out their present plans, their work will be of untold value to the University and its students.—EJ.

Is She Real?

We were talking to one of our finest girls on the campus the other day about the eternal subject . . . women.

Of course, we touched on many phases, but the one remark that impressed us the most was that she said "The best compliment a girl can get is to have someone say 'She's real, there is no sham about her.'"

We were inclined to agree with her, because it is so seldom that one finds a modest, unassuming "real" girl. Many of the women on a campus seldom have much interest in things outside their own little gossip circles. Their vapid minds are never concerned about what their college represents or means other than being a place where they can find fun, have stalwart young men escort them to dances, dinners and football games, where they can wear big pom-poms and maybe sneak a spiked coke.

The college girls worry about surface impressions on new girls before the rush season . . . so they work hard on songs and smiles. They also practice up on rolling "those big brown eyes" for the benefit of the boys.

Someday our sweet coeds will wake up and find that it takes more than cultivated sweetness to attract and hold a man and family together. It takes an ability to face reality, and it requires quite a bit of general knowledge to build a home and life with meaning.

We are not suggesting that men like intellectual girls only, but they do want intelligent girls with ability to help them build a future based on rational thinking and reality. Most men do not want to base their futures on frippary and falsehoods.

Well coeds, it is up to you. You know Carolina offers more than just party parties. There is a wealth of knowledge here for you. Want it?—L.K.

Letters Are Welcome

Letters to the Write Away column are welcomed by the editor of the Daily Tar Heel. If any student has any gripe, information or observation that he feels should be made available to the student body, the Write Away column is the place for it. Letters are accepted on any subject whatever so long as they are not of a lewd or libelous nature.

However, there are times when more letters come in at one time than can be printed in the amount of space allotted. For this reason it is requested that all letters be confined to not more than 300 words, in double space typing or written in a legible hand, with signature and address affixed.

Letters will usually be run as written by their authors, but all are subject to editing at the discretion of the editor. Names will be withheld from publication at the request of the writer but will be released on request to any person who has a good reason for inquiring. —EJ

By Rita Adams

ON CAMPUS: Never let it be said that the village is all village. Nope, we have our own touch of NYC in the addition of a real, sho-nuff checkered taxi that's been knocking out a beat around Times Square for the past 15 years. Just ask Frank Groseclose about his revolving seats and up and down top.

SOME FOLKS have family trees, and some folks have family trees with all sorts of nice branches to burn. Right now we're thinking of David Miller, whose sister has been at Carolina for two years to pave the way for him. 'Course we know well enough that David is doing beautifully on his own, but it is a good, secure feeling to have a married sis around just in case.

TOMMY LITTLE will probably be yelling "Timber" every time he goes by Davie Poplar, what with that bright blue lumber-jack looking sweater he's been wearing. And after checking $25 price tags on this year's cashmeres, we coeds will probably be dressing to the tune of the "Beer Barrell Polka."

BILL MILLER, the man who chalked up many a basketball score last year, is going to lose his questionable title, "The Brain" if he isn't very careful. Too many "Y" court periods with no books under his arm sound like fatal symptoms for the epitaph . . . By the way, here's a suggestion that seems in line at this point. All last year yours truly struggled through yea many hours of classes...straight through every morning....then, ditto this year. Now, we're back around the barn with the suggestion: When you new folks make out your class schedules from now on, remember to leave a "Y Period" open! It's just another one of those traditions some of us ignorant souls who came to college to learn to read had to spend a year learning about.

IN CASE there's too much of a rush on the record collection at Hill Hall, we'd like to remind that monstrous music appreciation class of the collection in the office of Graham Memorial. There's even a music room upstairs where you bury yourself away from the maddening crowd and listen to anything from Beethoven to Stan Kenton.

NOT THAT it's probable but just in case anybody gets tired of seeing and hearing about the Hill. Nancy Norman is still bubbling over with anecdotes she brought back from her recent trip to gay New Orleans. And if it's something a little farther North you're wanting to hear about, check Lucielle Riley's accounts of Washington.

IN TOWN: Anybody ever stop to wonder if they're going to do anything about rebuilding the University Service Plants office and Western Union? Or are people like June Fleenor going to keep getting into the wrong theater to send a wire home?

LAST NIGHT was the night! Knock off those books and meetings long enough for a take-10 break in the Ram's Head Rathskeller. The big opening was reeled off in —well, we just can't think of any other way to put it— in the alley down by the side of Sutton's. On the way down, you might check the fishbowl with real, live gold fish and a watch that ticks in Wentworth and Sloan's window.

HERE WE GO planning your whole evening for you— check the flashy blue and white wallpaper and new lighting effects in the University Cafe before you go home.

ELSEWHERE ON CAMPUS: Those long faces you see this week are being caused by sorority rushing. The faces, naturally, belong to the men, whose women are either at parties or attending compulsory meetings of their organizations. Identical faces will be seen on the gals in a few weeks when the men folk get tied up all night with this fraternity rushing business.

What Variety Of Flation?

By George E. Sokolsky

Business is concerned as to what the Republicans will do, if they are elected, about what is called inflation or deflation. We now have a dollar which has a purchasing power of roughly 57 cents as compared with 1939. That figure varies as prices vary and prices are affected most in this country by the cost of labor and by taxes.

Therefore, some elements among labor fear that if the Republicans come to office, they will remove certain props which keep wages high. The principal props are our huge expenditures for national defense, as preparedness for war is euphemistically called, and our foreign aids, the most costly of which is ECA. Neither of these can be dispensed with or be seriously curtailed.

Farm prices, on the other hand, are kept high by federal subsidies and by government purchases. In a measure, this is a prop for high wages (although a fictitious one) because as long as the cost of food is high, the cost of wages must be high, as the laborer must be paid sufficiently to be able to purchase his sustenance. The Republicans are not likely to change this equation because it cannot be done swiftly or drastically without upsetting the economy of the nation.

Any severe fall in prices—anything, for example, approaching a return to prewar prices—would inevitably result in unemployment, depression and widespread hardship. This is so because it is impossible to have falling prices and continue to have a rising national income. The high prices that housewife pays for pork chops and hamburgers and the high wages brought home are only two different aspects of the same picture. They are both a result of the great expansion of money income which has been brought about by the huge government spending, especially the spending by the Government of borrowed money.

It is only natural that we should all like to be able to keep the present level of wages, earnings and dividends, and at the same time bring down the cost of living to where it used to be before the war. That would be having our cake and eating it, too. That is too much to ask.

But it is not too much to ask that we should be able to keep on getting approximately our present level of wages and earnings and dividends without being squeezed by a further rise in prices. There ought even to be some prospect of a gradual relief from high prices.

To bring about such a development, we need two things: First, we need to stop the further expansion of the money supply by bringing the federal budget under control and carrying out a systematic reduction of the national debt. Second, and most important, we need to increase our productivity so that we can turn out a larger volume of goods at a lower per unit cost. This is the way America has traditionally moved toward a higher standard of living.

But this will certainly not happen if we make the mistake of trying to put on the brakes too sharply in our anxiety to halt the rising prices. There are ample signs, particularly in the field of agricultural commodities, that the scarcities arising out of the war and the postwar conditions in the world are gradually being overcome and that the normal workings of supply and demand are bringing about a natural tapering off in the postwar price inflation. Certainly the present harvest is evidence of this and should do much to lower basic food prices if the Administration in Washington is at all competent.

The thing to do is to encourage that natural tapering off, but to do nothing of so extreme a character as to turn inflation into deflation.

This 'n That

West Virginny, She's OK

By Bill Buchan

West Virginia ain't like what people say it is. It's a darn nice state of modern people, high mountains and more business than any regular North Carolinian could imagine.

Yours truly journeyed into the fair state during the past short vacation and spent ten fine days in Huntington. Huntington, I discovered, is the largest city in West Virginia and according to Roger Babson, will be one of the ten leading "big business" cities in America during the coming year.

Huntington's citizens are walking individual chambers of commerce. You announce that you are from any place except Huntington and immediately, you're in for a session of the advantages of living in Heaven's chosen spot for prospering. And people do prosper there.

They're among the happiest group of people that these eyes have observed. They are avid club joiners. All men either join the C of C, or the Jay-Cees. Their wives belong to the feminine equals of said groups. Then there is the Ad Club, the Reserve Officers Association, (with another feminine equal) a Mother's Club and numerous others.

Huntingtonites work hard, then they relax by partying twice as hard. They're people who love to make money, then they thoroughly enjoy spending part of the hard-earned cash playing. They also have a college there, Marshall by name. (I never heard of it either.) And they're just as proud of Marshall as we are of those forty some individuals called the Tar Heels.

I didn't get all my opinions about the fair state from Huntington, however. From Huntington, I was slated to go to Washington, so hit the highway via the hitchhiking route. Equipped with two signs reading "Washington" and "Points East" (much easier than sticking up your thumb every minute), I parked myself on the highway. First event of the day was a crash which resulted when one driver, interested in reading my signs, rammed into the car in front of him. While the two drivers involved were cussing each other out, I walked into the nearest hamburger joint.

But from Huntington, I got my rides and very, very soon was in the famous coal mining section of West Va. Coal mines go with mountains, unfortunately, and I discovered that the miners never go any farther than the nearest town. (Always located on the top of a mountain, where drivers take their lives in their own hands if they stop to pick up a bumming hitcher.)

The coal miners love West Virginia. They also love John L. Lewis, but that is neither here nor there. The first thing that everyone who picked me up had to say was something like this. "Wal now, I'll tell you, son, West Virginia ain't such a bad state. We 'uns up here think we done got one of the best dern states in the Union." And then comes the old line about the false rumors in out-of-state press and literature that ridiculed West Virginia. All those stories are all wrong. At least that's what West Virginians will tell you.

Myself, I like West Virginia. It seems to me as an ideal young persons' paradise. It's a land of opportuntiy for the taking. The jobs that were open and available in Huntington were amazing.

Go West, young man. West Virginia, that is.

Write Away

System Is Right

Editor:

Attention Mr. Robertson:

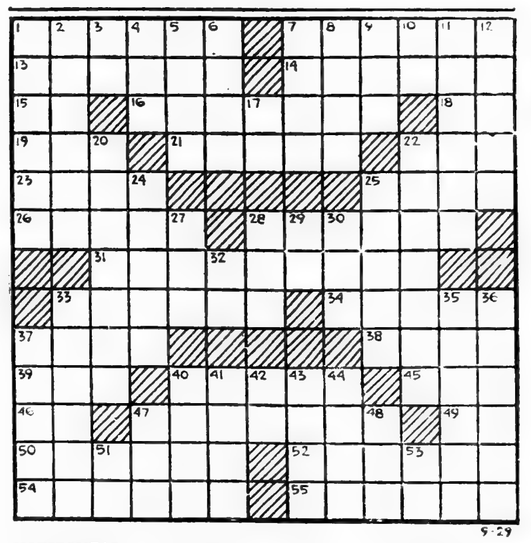
I have read your article entitled "The System Is At Fault" appearing in the Sept. 25 Daily Tar Heel. After reading it I decided to write you this in the hope that before you spout another such "pink" tirade you will give some thought to what I have set down below.

First off you believe that our American system is based on the dog-eat-dog idea wherein one man's gaining of capital causes the rest of the people to grow a little poorer. You have but to look about you to see that this is an economic lie. When Durham prospers, the towns Durham trades with gain in prosperity. When one company has the capital to build a factory in a town, that town is sure to gain wealth by the employment of its citizens. Even your whipping boy, Wall Street, prospers only when the nation prospers.

It is therefore obvious that it is the best interest of those who have wealth invested in this nation to see that the people have as high a standard of living as possible in order that they might buy the products that make those investments profitable. I realize that this idea is opposed to the idea expounded by the Communists and the Left in our own nation. They were right in supposing that capital gained (or thought it gained) a hundred years ago by paying the lowest possible wages, but since that time the holders of wealth in our land have begun to learn that they prosper only as the nation prospers and that it is their duty to serve the people who have made possible their accumulation of capital.

Secondly, you seem to believe that our society "can not allow its young people to figure out the true and basic causes, the 'crying injustices' in it." It seems to me that our society allowed you and the rest of your ilk to find out about all sorts of injustices and has even gone to the expense of providing you with a paper to write about them in.

Thirdly, you state that "a terrible economic crisis is approaching our country." If you know that, I figure you to be just about the smartest economist in the country.



Lastly, it seems you throw the word "American" around pretty freely like the Communist party that marches behind the U.S. Flag. You call on all students as "Americans" to preserve their intellectual integrity. What you mean is that they should swallow your distorted view of things and join you and your fellow misfits.

Our Split World

In these days of atomic fission
Everything seems to be in division.
Not only do we have the atom SPLIT
But we have the labor SPLIT,
The Democratic Party SPLIT,
The Palestine SPLIT,
And the Berlin SPLIT!
Small wonder as issues SPLIT
And atoms SPLIT,
Nations SPLIT,
Friends SPLIT,
Families SPLIT,
And even our personalities SPLIT!
It is enough to make our heads SPLIT!
As all the world's in twain,
The East and West divided
With all undecided
How to settle that great schism
Between Democracy and Communism!
Oh, what a relief it would be
If we could smile
And simply eat it all
Like a BANANA SPLIT!!

Rain Hampers Practice For Georgia Game

By BILLY CARMICHAEL III

Dunkeys, They Call Them

IF YOU WRITE SPORTS, long enough and hard enough, you will eventually run into something new in the sports world that hould have been tried long ago, but wasn't. The Faithful Scribe has witnessed just such an undertaking, and wishes to report to the weary world just what he saw—without mirrors, without strings.

It seems down in South Georgia they play baseball on donkeys. It had been rumored such an activity existed throughout the country and there was word of burro basketball being tried out last winter. But until you've seen the boys play the great American game on donkey back, you've yet to see anything.

It is not claimed down in Georgia that they invented the game but they don't often hear of anybody else athletically trying to make an ass of themselves. And they do it, too. It happened that some of the local Kiwanians of the little hamlet of Milledgeville thought that donkey baseball would be a good way to show the local Rotarians up. They didn't know exactly what they were bargaining for, but after all, either did the donkeys.

Well, the boys imported a bunch of South Georgia mules who are about as stubborn as most people in South Georgia—and sat down to figure out the rules. The game was to be played, they decided, as much like baseball as the donkeys would permit. That was where they made their first mistake.

The Loyal Mounted

THEY PUT EVERYBODY on a donkey but the pitcher and the catcher since some of the boys thought it best for some one to keep both feet on the ground. The batter stood in the box, unmounted, and was allowed to swing freely at a large rubber ball about the size of a juicy South Georgia cantaloupe. Then the trouble begins, for he must mount his donkey, handed to him at this point by the bat-burro boy and ride to first base. The mounting is like getting into the wrong side of the bed at night, and after that, the donkey usually starts for third, or the outfield, or even the dugout. It seems to be a matter of personal opinion with the animals.

The fielders are, meanwhile, attempting to throw the batter out in the true spirit of the game, which is no easy task. Seldom is the ball hit directly at one of the fielders, and if it is, the donkey will usually buck, throwing his rider into error and the game into general confusion. Occasionally, some one makes a tremendous bareback catch dead in his track—the donkey's—or plucks the ball out of one of the burro's ear, which gains a round of applause from the visiting citizens and pleasing round of brays from the defensive donkeys.

Of course, it is almost impossible to make any play from the donkey's back, and so the players dismount (?) and pull their animals over to the ball, pick it up and remount for the throw to first. The first baseman, meantime, rides over to the bag to take the throw, but he too seldom achieves a very high degree of success. He faces the problem of remaining on his donkey, and this is coupled with the fact that wild throws from the loyal mounted must be constantly dug out of the dirt or off of a hoof.

Carry Me Back

THE GAME, LIKE ANY GAME, has its finer points. Once an evening, each player is allowed to propel himself and his faithless friend around the bases by the simple procedure of lifting the animal's front legs under the arms and trunneling him around the horn in a half piggyback style.If nothing else, it makes for a lot of home runs.

The majority of the batters are retired by the simple means that they are carried far off the baselines and sometimes off the playing field by their animals. One player suffered this misfortune recently and was finally picked up by a state highway patrol some miles to the south on the road to Macon.

Will They Go Big Time?

THE EFFECT THE INNOVATION OF THIS GAME on Big Time baseball is still to be ascertained. The Big Leagues aren't exactly ready for the game as yet, with the donkeys also seemingly unprepared for the jump to the majors. But if the Big Leagues are looking for sometime to put the real kick back in the game, this is it.

Brooklyn looks especially prepared for the change, but in Flatbush any change these days would be welcome. Radio colorist Red Barber would probably be one of the big guns in favor of the advent of the Donkey Dodgers and would be heard some sunny afternoon saying:

"And now the Brooklyn Burros come to bat here in the last of the fifth. Peewee Reese at the plate—his burro, Joltin' Joe, nervously pawing the dirt beside home plate. Reese swings, and there goes a long fly into deep center—Di Maggio gallops back, pulls up short of the fence—but it's in there for extra bases. Reese rides hard around first, and there he goes into second with hoofs high—here's the throw—Stirnweiss puts it on him. Out! the umpire calls him—he's out! Now they're kicking up a terrible fuss down at second—the mules I mean—and Joltin' Joe is sitting down on the bag and refuses to leave the ball game. He's as stubborn as a Missouri mule."

So, maybe they had better keep the mules and the game down in Georgia. After all, it is rather an assinine way to spend an evening anyhow. . . .

The Top of the Mark

THE TAR HEELS, to use a Hammersteinism, have gone about as far as they can go. They hit the Top of the Mark this week at least in the opinion of one national sports writer and are charted only three-tenths below the rating of the perfect team.

Now, a lot of this is copy talk of course, but the Tar Heels do have a great football team, if they can retain what they had last week. They may lose a game or two, but they will win a much greater number in the process.

The point being made is that students must not take the winning ways too much for granted. Winning teams are actually harder to back than losing teams, for there is really less incentive to cheer since the old school is going to win anyway you play it. And from now on, we cheer alone, for we're at the top and everyone is peering upward with envy. It will be the Tar Heels against the nation for here until someone dethrones them.

They will need the support they know they are going to receive.

But Locals Stage Spirited Workout Despite Showers

By Zane Robbins

Coach Carl Snavely and his national collegiate pace-setters braved the wind and rain that swept Chapel Hill yesterday to get in an important scrimmage session on Navy Field. The Tar Heels worked long and hard yesterday afternoon against the Wally Butts T-formation that has given them so much trouble in the past two years. When the drill was over the "Grey Fox" heaved a sigh that indicated assurance but not over-confidence.

The Tar Heels know Butts well for his tricky offenses and ability to come up with tight defenses, and will not be caught napping come Saturday. The Georgia gentleman nearly sent Carolina down to defeat in last season's opener after taking a Sugar Bowl victory from the Tar Heels in January of the same year. Snavely realizes that his old rival will be laying for him again this year, especially after Carolina's impressive rout of Texas last week. He has worked his charges hard for this all-important battle.

The Georgians came on with a last-minute rush to down Chattanooga's so-so eleven last week, 14-7, and at no time showed promise of being a great or even good team, but the Tar Heels, nevertheless, are working hard for this one. A defeat would topple them from the top of the national list and do much to lower their morale, whereas a clean-cut victory would send the Carolinians roaring into Groves stadium, Wake Forest next to avenge last year's only loss to a Southern Conference team.

Choo Choo Charlie Justice and Hosea Rodgers were again the main cogs in yesterday's offensive fireworks, with little Johnny Clements reeling off occasional long gains. Len Szafaryn, Dan Steigman, and Sid Varney hogging the defensive show.

The core of the defensive drill was centered around the Georgia "T", which features a passing attack similar to that used by Texas last week.

Johnny Rauch, one of the best passers in the nation, engineers the Bulldog attack and usually presents a deadly aerial offensive. Halfback Joe Geri teams with Flanker Bob Walston to do most of the Georgia pass-snatching, and shoulders the brunt of the Bulldogs ground play.

FROSH TO REPORT

Baseball Coach Walter Rabb has issued a rekuest for all freshmen interested in playing freshman baseball to report to Room 304 Woollen between 2 and 4 today.

MONOGRAM MEETING

There will be a meeting of the Monogram club tomorrow night at 7:30 in the Club room of the Monogram Club.

Having Good Football Teams Is an Old Carolina Tradition

By Dick Jenrette

When a freshman enters Carolina, he usually is subjected to a series of lectures on traditions surrounding the Chapel Hill campus. But one tradition which the orientation committee probably neglects is this University's reputation of having consistently good football teams.

However, the average freshman needs no one to tell him that Carolina turns out good football teams. He couldn't have missed reading in the papers that Carolina has ranked ninth nationally for the past two years; that the 1946 team played in the Sugar Bowl; that the team has won 16 games, lost three, and tied one in the last two seasons, and finally that Carolina has whipped Duke decisively in the last couple of meetings between those two old rivals.

The Tar Heels certainly have had their share of publicity recently. But the tradition of good football teams dates back to 1888, the first year of Carolina football. The sport has been played continuously since then, with the exception of 1917 when World War I intervened. Over this period the Tar Heels amassed 292 victories, while losing 166 and tying 43.

First Great Team

Carolina's first great football team—and the only one to go through a season unbeaten and untied—was the 1898 agregation. That club marched to nine straight victories, with four of the wins coming in a period of 12 days. With few exceptions, the Tar Heels have enjoyed successful grid years since then.

Any story of Carolina football history is replete with tales of the Duke-Carolina series. The two schools have met on the gridiron 33 times, with Carolina winning 15, Duke 15, and three games ending in ties. A 34th game—the 1890 affair—was never played, and both teams claim a forfeit victory. If you are a Carolina fan—and this is a Carolina newspaper—you can mark the game up as a Tar Heel forfeit win, giving Carolina the series lead, on 16 wins to Duke's 15. There's usually a Duke fan around, however, who will contest the claim.

Upsets dot the Duke-Carolina series. Probably the greatest came in 1935, say Duke oldtimers and much chagrined Tar Heel rooters. Carl Snavely was coaching Carolina that year and had an unbeaten, untied, and high-scoring team going into the season's finale with Duke. It was generally understood that if Carolina beat Duke, the Tar Heels would go to the Rose Bowl. But the football gods frowned on the Tar Heels, and Duke smashed to a 25-0 victory.

We're Number One

Paul Williamson, whose weekly grid ratings in previous years usually have ranked Carolina's Tar Heels slightly lower than other experts in the nation, did his best for Carolina yesterday, declaring the Tar Heels to be the top football team in the country.

Georgia Tech, which defeated Vanderbilt, 13-0, this week, was ranked second behind Carolina, with Army in third place. The Cadets blanked Villanova, 28-0.

Last year Williamson rated the Tar Heels eleventh in the nation while most polls place them eighth or ninth. However, his latest rating has considerably raised his popularity standing on this campus.

The result startled the nation—not only because Duke had won but because of the wide margin.

The 1936 game was different. battling Tar Heel team came through with a 14-6 victory over Duke to avenge the loss of the previous season.

Carolina Upset

Carolina's victory over Duke in 1940 probably is the biggest upset a Tar Heel team has pulled on the Devils. Duke went into that game an 18-point favorite, only to be derailed by Carolina, 6-3, on a fourth quarter touchdown.

Another surprise in the Duke series even more recently came in 1942. Duke, loaded with veterans from its Rose Bowl team of 1941, was held to a 13-13 tie. The Devils had beaten the Tar Heels the preceding year, 20-0.

Since the war, though, the role of favorite has fallen to Carolina, and Carl Snavely's boys have taken 22-7 and 21-0 wins in their last two meetings with Duke.

The Carolina-Virginia series also has provided its share of thrills. This series, one of the South's oldest, was deadlocked at 23 games each before the 1945 game. But the Tar Heels have racked up three straight wins since then to take to the lead.

Rivalry with State

Great rivalry is manifested in the Carolina-State games because of the Wolfpack's rise as a football power recently, but the series stands at 27 wins for Carolina and just five for State. The Carolina-State series was resumed last season for the first time since 1943. Officials of the two institutions halted the series because of overly intense rivalry between the two student bodies and because the war had deprived State of its best football stars. Popular

DeadlineExtended For Mural Tennis; 60 Entries Are In

Approximately 60 Carolina students have filed entries for the annual Fall tennis tournament, Walter Rabb, director of the Mural department, announced yesterday. In connection with this, Rabb said that entries for the tourney would not close until Tuesday, Oct 5 instead of today as previously announced.

Rabb urged all students on the campus interested in participatin this tourney, to enter as soon as possible. There is plenty of room in both the novice and open divisions and the response so far was termed very good. Entry places again are the tennis courts, the Scuttlebutt and Woollen gymnasium.

Another important event on the Mural department's agenda for this week is the tag football officials meeting in Room 302 Woollen this afternoon at 4 p. m. It is important that all those who wish to be considered for the job of tag football officials be present at this meeting.

Dorm Managers

The Mural department also urged all men living in dormitories to attend their dorm's scheduled meeting to elect dormitory intramural managers.

A meeting has been called for tomorrow afternoon at 4 for all those on the campus interested in archery competition or the formation of an archery club. This meeting will be in 302 Woollen.

In this connection, Rabb said that his department had obtained a "handsome" trophy which will be awarded the campus' top archer. The winner of this trophy will be decided in a tournament, details of which will be drawn up at the Thursday meeting.

Tag Deadline

The fall managers' meeting will be held on Tuesday, October 5 at 7:30 in the mural office. This will be the deadline for tag football entries in both the fraternity and dormitory divisions.

Managers were also urged to take advantage of the intramural fields which have been lined off and are available for practice purposes anytime after 4 o'clock.

Coach Rabb also reiterated his willingness to talk with anyone about any phases of the intramural program or answer any questions. The mural office is located in Room 302, Woollen gynasium.

Tickets Still Remain For Georgia Contest

Despite a heavy run on tickets for the Georgia game to be played in Athens this Saturday 600-700 tickets are still left for anyone desiring to follow the team.

Students can buy one ticket for a reduced price of $1.20 with their pass books, but will have to pay the full $4.20 for any additional pasteboards. Sale of tickets ends Thursday afternoon.

UP Coach of Week Not So Confident About His Outfit

By Herbert Foster

RALEIGH, Sept. 28—(UP)—For a guy near the top of this week's football world, Coach Carl Snavely of North Carolina looks like a man raising a crop of ulcers.

An air of fretful gloom seeps out of the athletic offices in Woollen gymnasium. And in his white bungalow at the edge of Chapel Hill, terrific tailback Charlie (Choo Choo) Justice quietly admits he's worried, too.

Gone is the elation from last week's shattering 34-7 upset of the favored Texas Longhorns. In its place is the sober realization that North Carolina faces its toughest schedule in years, and every Saturday some good team will be straining to trim the Tar Heels.

No Easy Saturdays

The worry today centers around next Saturday and a round little man called Wailing Wally Butts, Coach of the Georgia Bulldogs. For Butts is host to North Carolina come Saturday in Athens, Ga., and Snavely fears that an overconfident Tar Heel squad might get the same dose it gave to Texas.

The canny Snavely, no mean weeper himself, is not impressed by the fact that Georgia "wallopped" Chattanooga only 14-7.

"Georgia was bothered by a lot of unorthodox defenses," he said. "We know Georgia has a time team—a team that is capable of beating us."

But Locals

In a brief radio recording (for Station WPTF) commemorating his selection as United Press Coach of the Week, Snavely said, "We don't anticipate any easy Saturdays. Of course we are always hoping that some team will be weaker than we expected and give us an easy time, but we're

Coeds Will Meet At Y to Discuss European Nations

An informal discussion of the educational situation in Germany and other European countries will highlight activities for coeds Thursday night at 7:30 in the upstairs lobby of the Y building.

The get-together will feature Miss Paula V. Szalatnay, former student at Guetersloh, Germany, and Claude Shotts, director of the YMCA, who spent the summer in Berlin, Germany.

Following the brief talks a coffee klatsch will be held in the YWCA office. All coeds are urged to attend this first YWCA function of the year and to bring dates if they desire.

Miss Szalatnay left Germany in October, 1947, to visit and travel through England. In August she came to Chapel Hill where she is visiting relatives, the Danzigers.

Shotts was in Berlin during the summer working with a group of 56 students from various European universities on the problem of methods to peace.

Future sponsorship of coffee hours by the Y will depend on the success of this first get together.

Scott Begins Governorship Campaign; Is Planning Whirlwind Speaking Tour

By William Sexton

ASHEVILLE, N. C., Sept. 28—(UP)—Kerr Scott, Democratic nominee for governor, shoved off today with his answer to what he calls the most "formidable" opposition Tar Heel Democrats have faced in many years.

The Democratic campaign officially kicked off with yesterday's 12th congressional district rally at Asheville. Scott launches a whirlwind tour today which includes at least one speech a day until the crucial general election Nov. 2.

It is the outspoken dairy farmer's reply to national problems which have splintered part of traditional Democratic support into ranks of Progressives, states rights Democrats and Republicans.

"There's a lot mixed up in this year's election that doesn't have much to do with politics at home," Scott said. "We face three times the opposition this year, but we're going to work three times as hard."

KERR SCOTT

He said his plans for the wind-up of the Democratic campaign are the most intense in years in a determined effort to regain backing lost in the civil rights revolt. As a result he expects his state ticket to run ahead of the party's national slate.

Today Scott and other state officials will go to a noon speech at Collowhee and informal conferences at Waynesville, Murphy, Sylva, Franklin and Bryson City after spending the night in Asheville.

"I enjoy campaigning, but it's tiring," Scott said. "Now we have a fight on our hands—just as we did in the primary. As before there'll be a lot of short, blunt speeches and a chance to meet people, then off to the next stop."

Scott was asked what he thought contributed most to his victory in the second primary June 26, after he trailed State Treasurer Charles Johnson in the first.

"Well, "he replied slowly, "some people knew a change had been coming for quite a while. It was just a matter of time before an outsider would crash the gate."

-Tradition-

demand on the part of the fans brought the revival of the series in 1947.

Carolina holds a historical edge of 32 wins to 12 Wake Forest wins. But the Deacons have won five of the last seven games between the two schools, with a 19-7 victory last year included. A Carolina win over Wake Forest this year would be almost as coveted as one over Duke.

CSFA Elections Slated Tonight

Fred Burgess announced yesterday that he had assumed the post of acting director of the Carolina Science Fiction association. Director Richard L. Bowen said he would be too busy this quarter with other activities.

Burgess also said that he had appointed Charles C. Odell, Jr., to serve as secretary, finishing the unexpired term of Erwin Danziger.

A meeting of the association is scheduled for tonight, Burgess said. The meeting will be held in the Grail room in Graham Memorial at 9:30. Election of officers to fill out the fall term will then be held.

Burgess urged that all persons—new or old students—who are interested in science fiction or fantasy should drop in for the meeting. Any person who wishes to join may secure application blanks then.

not counting on it."

As for the Texas game, Snavely—for him—was high in praise of his team.

"We hit then early, and the contest was over before Texas knew it was in a football game," he said.

But for the rest of the season—and particularly for next Saturday—the dour Dutchman has his worries. You're only as good as your last game in the rugged Southern Conference setup. This can be North Carolina's greatest year—or it can be a highly-touted washout. For a schedule that still includes such teams as Georgia, Wake Forest, North Carolina State, LSU, Tennessee, William and Mary, Maryland, Duke and Virginia can produce some tough Saturdays indeed.

Johnson Directing Oscar Wilde Play

Fredrick G. Johnson, former dramatic art student, is directing a production of Oscar Wilde's play, "The Importance of Being Earnest," for the famed Dock Street Theatre in Charleston, S. C. Fred, who received his master's degree here this summer, will be remembered for his portrayal of the role of "Cyrano" in the Carolina Playmakers' production of Rostand's "Cyrano de Bergerac" in the Forest Theatre last spring.

Both Fred and his wife, Frances, are serving as assistant directors of the Charleston theater organization. During their stay in Chapel Hill, Frances was active with the modern dance group. She is now engaged in doing the dance chorcography for the Dock Street production of "Of Thee I Sing," which is to be the opening show.

Last Day

Today is the final day to purchase tickets for the special bus taking freshmen to the dance at WCUNC Saturday night. The bus will leave from Graham Memorial at 6 o'clock Saturday night and return following the dance.

Graham Memorial's travel agency on the second floor of the student union is handling ticket sales, as well as distributing freshman identification to those who have lost their name tags.

Either a name tag or freshman identification will serve as admission to the dance, which is open only to freshman men from Carolina and freshman girls from the Woman's college.

Senior Rings

Contrary to an announcement yesterday, senior rings will not be on sale before Thursday, Oct. 7. Further details will be announced next week.

Radio Auditions Will Begin Today; Talent Is Needed

Auditions for positions in the radio programs to be conducted by the Communications center will held between the hours of 2:30 and 5:30 today and tomorrow. The auditions are open to anyone on the campus.

The radio programs and the auditions will be under the direction of Jane Grills of the Radio division of the Communications center. Each person auditioning will be allowed to audition any convenient time between the set hours.

Any person that has talent in acting, announcing, singing, playing a musical instrument, composing or arranging, writing, and sound devices is requested to sign the appointment list in the Center's office in the Swain building.

Bill Duncan, editor of the 1949 Yackety Yack, said yesterday that those students who did not receive their 1948 Yacks may pick them up in Horace Williams lounge of Graham Memorial between 1 and 2 o'clock any day this week. He reminded students who were not in school last year and did not pay their publications fee that they would be required to pay $1.50 for each quarter they did not attend.

Round-trip bus tickets are now on sale in the Travel Agency on second floor of Graham Memorial for the special bus going to the freshman dance Saturday, Oct. 1 at WCUNC. The $1.75 ticket will also admit any member of the men's freshman class to the

Yack Pictures

There are not enough students coming in for their Yack pictures, Editor Bill Duncan said yesterday. "If the students want their Yack by the third week in May they must keep their appointments," he urged, "we arranged the appointment schedule to prevent making it necesary for the students to stand in line. There there have been no lines and only a few students on the second floor of Graham Memorial." The deadline for Yack photos is November 6.

J. Strom Thurmond Will Speak Here Tuesday

House Says Scalping Will Not Be Tolerated

By Lincoln Kan

Saturday's booming ticket black market "is a clear violation of the University Honor Code and will not be tolerated," said Chancellor R. B. House yesterday.

House asked for the cooperation of all students in future games here to correct the situation. The chancellor said he was sure Student Body President Jess Dedmond would do everything in his power to break the case.

"It must be left up to the students and their representatives to get down to the truth," House added.

Dedmond called a meeting yesterday afternoon with University Attorney J. A. Williams and Assistant Dean of Students Bill Friday in an attempt to sift the information thus far available to the authorities and representatives of the student body.

Coach Bob Fetzer, University athletic director, commented yesterday, "The whole affair is deplorable." When asked about the sale of student passbooks which were going for "not a cent under $100," Fetzer shrugged and said, "I don't see how people can be foolish as to buy student passbooks which are non-trasferable and which will be confiscated if presented by persons other than those to whom the book was issued."

Fetzer continued, "If students sell their passbooks, they are surely misusing the privileges extended to them as members of the Athletic association. The passbook is really an identification of their status as a University student, and are issued to protect the students and insure space for them at all home games."

When asked if any action would be taken by the Athletic association, Fetzer said, "We are going to take the matter up with the Student council and Dean of Students, Mr. Weaver. We were at a great disadvantage, having such a big game only two days after school started. There was no opportunity for the administration to get all I.D cards with pictures made."

He added that there is no information yet on how the passbooks reached the black market.

"If the pass books came through channels other than students, the source must be located and dealt with as soon as possible. If they came through a premeditated and organized student source then these students have taken advantage of us and their fellow college mates."

Testudo?

Students at Mrs. Burke's rooming house on Rosemary street yesterday wondered whether the turtle they discovered under one of the beds might turn out to be Testudo the Terrapin, mascot of the University of Maryland which has been missing for several days.

Their wonderment ceased when they were informed that the Maryland mascot is metal and so large it requires the brawn of four men to take it out to the gridiron.

The newly-discovered terrapin at Mrs. Burke's residence is of the "live" species and little larger than vest-pocket size.

Changes Made In Library Staff

Prior to the beginning of the fall term several changes were made in the staff of the University library, according to an announcement coming from the library offices yesterday.

Taking over her duties on September 16, Mrs. Charles C. Hopkins will be available in the general college reading room where her principal duty will be a reader advisor service. Library officials stated yesterday that this service will be of much value to freshmen students.

Mrs. Hopkins replaces Mrs. Elizabeth Huggins who will work in the reserve room. The new staff member is a graduate of the Western Reserve library school, and has served in three libraries, including the public library in Burlington since 1942. Her husband, a graduate of the University, is a member of the local District Health department.

Miss Ann Clifford Wheeler of Gainsville, Ga., a graduate of agnes Scott college and the University Library school, has taken over her duties in the reference department. She replaces Miss Catherine M. Heniford, who resigned to accept a position with Northwestern State college in La.

Succeeding Mrs. Joseph W. Reid in the reserve room is Miss Shelah O'Connell. Mrs Reid resigned to accompany her husband, a graduate of the University, who will become professor of political science in Mercer university, Macon, Ga.

Marriage No Ban To GI Aspirants For Rhodes Award

Marriage will not be a ban to applicants for the Rhodes scholarship of 1948 under the War Service scholarship rulings, announced Dean of the General College C. P. Spruill, Jr., yesterday.

He urged that all who wish to apply for the Rhodes scholarship should see him for an application blank and further information in room 308, South building, as soon as possible. The deadline is October 8.

The two-year scholarship tenable at the University of Oxford ranges between 400 to 500 British pound sterling, which is approximately between $1,600 to $2,000 for the two years. To be eligible a candidate must be a citizen of the United States, be between 19 and 25 on October 1, 1949, unmarried, and have completed at least his sophomore year by the time of the application.

The War Service scholarship is open to the ex-serviceman candidate who is a citizen of the United States (marriage no bar), between 19 and 34 on October 1, 1949, completed at least one year of war service either as a soldier or a participant in civil-

First Aid Course Being Offered Now

The Chapel Hill chapter of the American Red Cross is offering a course in advanced first aid, to be taught by Professor E. A. Brecht of the School of Pharmacy, chairman of first aid and accident prevention.

The first class will meet at 7 o'clock next Wednesday in room 309 Howell hall, the Pharmacy building. There will be six classes of two hours each, to be held on successive Wednesday evenings.

To be eligible for this course, a student must have passed the standard course in first aid within the last 3 years. Dr. Brecht is offering this advanced course in preparation for the instructors' course, to be taught early in January by an instructor from Red Cross headquarters.

At least ten pharmacy students will be taking the course, and it is hoped that other students, both men and women, will be glad of the opportunity to enroll.

Freshmen Meet

The second in a series of freshman assemblies will meet this morning at 11 o'clock in Memorial hall.

This meeting, called activities day, will feature talks on forensics by Charlie Long; dramatics by Bob Coulter; political activities by Nat Williams; political parties by Ernie House; fraternities by Jack Thompson; publications by Ed Joyner; and honoraries by Dean Mackie.

All freshmen will be introduced into various forms of activities and will be given an opportunity to meet representatives of these activities. They will also fill out interest indicater blanks in the lobby. Tables in the lobby will be manned by representatives of the various groups. These tables will be open until 5:30 Thursday afternoon.

Any group who wishes to have a table in the lobby may do so.

Sprinkler System Causes Confusion

Chapel Hill was going to bed after a hard Monday when the sharp "Wah-Wah" of the fire alarm sounded.

All the fire-goers turned out. But to their disappointment it didn't amount to much more than a flase-alarm. Someone, accidently or purposely, set off the sprinkler system in Danziger's

The kitchen got quite a shower, and some of the water trickled into the Rathskeller below. Firemen quickly turned off the system and everyone went home happy except one of the Danziger cooks who was convinced that nothing else could have caused the disturbance except "vandalism."

Durham Sun To Be Manned By Students

In observance of National Newspaper week, which begins tomorrow, 35 Carolina journalism students will comprise the staff on next Tuesday's Durham Sun, afternoon paper of the Herald-Sun newspapers.

Headed by DTH Editor Ed Joyner as editor, the group will man the news and sports staffs, advertising and administrative departments and composing room. They will work with regular staff members to put out a single issue of the paper.

A similar arrangement was made last year in observance of Newspaper week, when the staff of the Durham high school paper, "Hi Rocket," worked for a day in the local offices. Arrangements were made this year by Dante Germino, business manager of the Herald-Sun papers, other members of the staff, and faculty of the journalism department, who met yesterday with the student newsmen to give preliminary instructions.

In addition to Germino, Herald-Sun staff members C. H. Cooper, photographer, and E. T. Rollins, of the business department, were present at the meeting. Journalism faculty members Thomas J. Lassiter, Joseph L. Morrison, Walter Spearman, Lola Mustard, and O. J. Coffin, department

Students and faculty members will on Tuesday be guests at luncheon of the Cooperative club and American Businessmen's club of Durham, and will hear John Park, editor and publisher of the Raleigh Times, speak. Following the meeting, a general tour of the newspaper plant will be conducted.

Declares South Gained Victory In Rail Decision

COLUMBIA, S. C., Sept 29.—(UP)—Gov. J. Strom Thurmond today said the federal court decision to uphold race segregation in railroad dining cars was "a victory for the South. . .To preserve our segregation laws. . . which we know are best for both races."

The Federal Court at Baltimore held that racial segregation in interstate travel did not violate the constitution.

"If the Supreme Court upholds this decision," Thurmond said, "I firmly believe that we will have turned the threat against these Communistic and undemocratic attempts to tear down our segregation laws in the South."

On another subject, Thurmond said he regrets that President Truman didn't accept an invitation to speak in South Carolina.

The President's aides informed national party leaders here yesterday that the president could not stop here en route to Miami and make a requested talk.

"I had hoped that he would come to our state and explain to our people why he saw fit to betray the principles of Jefferson and abandon the historic position of the Democrat party on states' rights by sending his so-called civil rights message to Congress," the Dixiecrat presidential candidate said.

Barkley Strikes At GOP Regarding Inflation Issue

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 29.—(UP)—Sen. Alben W. Barkley, Democratic vice presidential nominee, today denounced the 80th Congress for its failure to curb inflation and challenged the GOP to repeal the Taft-Hartley law.

An address to a luncheon audience of 750, the Kentucky senator chided Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and Gov. Earl Warren for evading the issues of the campaign.

"The constantly rising cost of living," he said, "affects every family, every housewife, and their budget. The cost of living has gone up unnecessarily and it could have been curbed had the Republican 80th Congress been willing.

". .If it continues it may undermine the economic stability of our country."

Sen. Barkley stressed that in his recent European visit he found that satellite nations have slipped behind the "Iron Curtain" because economic insecurity paved the way for Communism.

He accused Congress of failing to follow through on President Truman's requests to stop spiraling prices, enact legislation for housing and other benefits for the people.

Forum Will Sponsor Dixiecrat Candidate

By Sam McKeel

J. Strom Thurmond, governor of South Carolina and Dixiecrat candidate for the presidency of the United States will speak in Hill hall Tuesday night at 7 o'clock, the Carolina Forum announced yesterday.

Herb Mitchell, forum publicity director, said Thurmond would be co-sponsored by the forum and the Carolina Political union.

Thurmond, a veteran of World War II, will speak here during his whirlwind tour of this state. Former lawyer, farmer, and school teacher, he was elected governor of South Carolina in 1946 over ten opponents.

Nominated as candidate for president of the United States by the state Democratic parties of Alabama, Mississippi, and South Carolina on Aug. 11 he accepted the nomination the same day.

Gov. Thurmond graduated from Clemson college in 1923 with a B.S degree. He served as state senator from Edgefield county from 1933 to 1938. On November 7, 1947 he married his former secretary, Miss Jean Crouch.

GOV. STROM THURMOND

His appearance will mark the first in a series of speeches to be sponsored by the Carolina Forum.

Thurmond will speak in Durham at 5:30, Chapel Hill at 7 o'clock, and Raleigh at 8 o'clock.

Selective Service Announces 8,584,963 Have Registered

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29—(UP)—Selective Service said today 8,584,963 men 18 through 25 years have registered for the peacetime draft. It said about one of every four appears eligible for military service.

The final registration figures covered all 48 states and the U. S. territories.

In the states, 8,398,713 young men registered. The territories signed up 186,250 for possible military service.

Single, non-veteran, non-fathers 18 through 25 totaled only 2,147,813. Of these, 2,048,626 were registered in the United States and 99,187 in the territories.

It is from this group that the Army will call about 250,000 men in the next 12 months to swell its forces to 790,000 men. But even in this group many will be deferred under regulations laid down by President Truman.

The Army wants 10,000 men drafted during November, and 15,000 in December. Thereafter it will try to bring in about 25,000 a month until the quota has been filled. The Navy and Air Force have no present plans to take draftees.

Discrimination Ruled By Court

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 29—(UP)—Atlanta school officials today faced a federal court ruling that Negro teachers should not be discriminated against in pay.

Federal Judge E. Marvin Underwood handed down the decision in a case begun five years ago by Samuel L. Davis, a Negro teacher. Underwood said he did not take it upon himself to fix salaries, but held that "salaries may not. . .be discriminatory of color of race."

His decision said a study of pay scales revealed "a great differential between the pay of white and Negro teachers in favor of the former."

One example listed was a median pay of $348 per month and a mean salary of $340 for White high school principals. Negro principals had $240 as both mean and median, Underwood said.

Underwood said he would allow a reasonable time for the city school board to comply, and board sources indicated that an appeal would be taken.

D. C. Democrats To Greet Truman

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29—(UP)—Voteless Democrats in the nation's capital are planning to give President Truman a whopping big celebration when he returns Saturday from his western "Give 'Em Hell" tour."

Arthur Clarendon Smith, chairman of the District of Columbia Truman-Barkley club, said it would be the "largest demonstration" the president has ever received in the capital.

Government officials and employes, along with representatives of various independent organizations, will gather at Union station for a "Welcome Home, Harry" when Mr. Truman's special train pulls in.

The reception committee has arranged a motorcade procession from the station to the White House.

As Smith puts it:

"The Democrats of the District of Columbia, who have no vote, wish to take this occasion to cast a vote of confidence in their candidate, President Harry Truman."

Playmakers Plan Five Productions

By Mark Sumner

Five professionally written full length plays are to be presented as the major productions of the Carolina Playmakers' thirty-first season, Samuel Selden, director, announced last night. Three new student written full-length plays will be given premiere showings as experimental productions.

The announcement of the policy change, a shift of emphasis from one-act to full-length form for experimental productions, was coupled with the opening of the annual season ticket sale this morning. Three bills of one-act original plays are also scheduled.

John Van Druten's comedy, "I Remember Mama," will be the first major production of the new season. Lynn Gault, director, cast the play yesterday, and rehearsals will start Monday. "I Remember Mama" will be presented on October 20 through 23.

The second major production will be Sheridan's "School for Scandal," which is scheduled for December 1 through 4. "School for Scandal" will be toured by a Playmaker road company for nine days, January 6-15, and will be the first play to be toured by the theater group since Paul Green's "House of Connelly" in 1941. Harry E. Davis will direct the production of "School for Scandal."

The third major production

New Math Head Whyburn Fixes Gadgets in Spare Time

By Doris Thomas

The man who has succeeded Dr. Archibald Henderson as head of the University Mathematics department is known to the mathematical world as a whiz with differential equations, but around home, he is admired more for his handiness at solving gadgets that need fixing.

He is Dr. W. M. Whyburn, a native of Lewisville, Texas, and former president of Texas Technological College.

Henderson Retires

He succeeds Dr. Henderson, who has retired after 50 years on the Carolina faculty, 30 of them as head of the math department.

Dr. Whyburn took a B. A. degree at the University of Texas in 1922, an M. A. and Ph. D. from the same school in 1923 and 1927. He commenced teaching at South Park College, Beaumont, Texas, in 1923, went to Texas A & M. in 1924 and to Texas Tech in 1925. He was chairman of the University of California math department from 1928 to 1944, when Texas Tech called him back as its president.

Invitation

He resigned the presidency for what he called a "challenging and flattering invitation by one of the major universities of the country, where I can devote my full energies to creative work in my field of professional specialization."

During the war Dr. Whyburn served as chief of the operations analysis section of the Third Air Force, with headquarters at Tampa, Fla. This work, he illustrated, saved lives and equipment by such instances as one in which it was discovered that a mixture of high and low octane gasolines worked alright for some planes but that it was responsible for a high accident rate on a fighter model which "was just allergic to that type of fuel."

Any Problem

Math works in war, he said, because "mathematical training teaches one to attack any problem unemotionally from the beginning with the solution being the only objective."

W. M. WHYBURN

Here he chuckled and observed that mathematics and theology differ in that mathematics puts the answer at the end of the book while theology begins with the answer and then undertakes to prove it.

The Whyburns—including Mrs. Whyburn, 11-year-old "Skipper" and 20-year-old Willa Marie, a Bryn Mawr senior—expressed delight with Chapel Hill, especially the trees. "We have been living in the plains section of Texas so long," the doctor said, "we just can't get over all these trees."

ian war work, and has completed one year of college work.

The qualities which Rhodes specified in his will as the basis of selection were (1) literary and scholastic ability and attainments, (2) qualities of manhood, truth, courage, devotion to duty, sympathy, kindliness, unselfishness and fellowship, (3) exhibition of moral force of character and of instinct to lead and to take an interest in his schoolmates, (4) physical vigour as shown in outdoor sports or in other ways.

Last year the University had one student receive the coveted award. He was Donald G. Henderson of Chapel Hill. Dr. T. J. Wilson, former director of the University Press now with the Harvard Press, was also a winner of the Rhones scholarship.

Band Rehearsal Scheduled Today

There will be a University band rehearsal this afternoon at Kenan stadium with instruments at 4:30. In case of rain the rehearsal will be held in Hill.

Quarterly Begins Subscription Sale

The Carolina Quarterly subscription campaign opens today at the Y, sparking a drive to cover the entire campus. A special yearly rate of $1 is being offered to all students. Outside subscriptions will sell for $1.25 per year or fifty cents a single copy.

New students were first introduced to the Quarterly in registration line, "with excellent response," according to John Hough, assistant business manager.

The Quarterly, a sixty-four page, seven by ten magazine, will contain short stories, features, book reviews and poetry.

Subscriptions may be purchased in the Y from 8 to 2 o'clock each day or from any member of the Quarterly staff.

-Plays-

will be Gilbert Sullivans' "H.M.S. Pinafore," an operetta, in collaboration with the University Music department. Presentation dates are January 28 and 29. Foster Fitz-Simons and Paul Young will direct.

March 2, 3, 4, and 5, will be the dates for Lillian Hellman's "The Little Foxes." John W. Parker will direct the play.

The annual Forest Theater production for this season will be Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice," which is set for May 20 thorugh 22. Kai Jurgensen is to direct the out-door classic.

These five major productions will be included in the season ticket books. They are the only plays to which admission will be charged. The three full-length experimental plays and the three bills of four one-act plays will be presented admission free.

John W. Parker, business manager, explained that the season ticket sale will be limited to 1,000 ticket books on a first come, first served basis. Individual reserved seats will be available for the separate productions, however.

Season tickets can be obtained at the Playmaker business office in Swain hall, or at Ledbetter-Pickard's on Franklin street. The season books are a twenty percent saving over admission prices.

Religious Talks

Dr. B. W. Anderson, associate professor of biblical literature will inaugurate the series "Lectures on Religion" Monday night at Gerrard hall from 7 o'clock to 7:50.

The series of religious talks is sponsored by the young adult class of the Methodist church. Dr. Anderson will speak every Monday at 7 o'clock through the month of October.

Dr. Harold A. Bosley, dean of the Duke divinity school will continue the series through November 29, which will conclude the religious lectures for the fall quarter.

All interested townspeople and students are invited to attend.

World Federalists Will Meet Today

World Federalists will hold their first meeting of the fall quarter this afternoon at 5 o'clock in the Grail room of Graham Memorial Jake Wicker, president, announced yesterday.

A new slate of officers will be elected to serve for the fall quarter. Other business will consist of planning a program of action and organizing committees.

All members are urged to attend and help choose officers for the new quarter. "Anyone who is not a member but would like to become one is also invited," Wicker stated.

If time permits, a report on the World Government institute which was held at Chapel Hill during the summer will be made. Student leaders from 12 states attended the institute, which was devoted to instruction in the fundamentals of world government and the development of leaders for the world government movement.

The local club was represented at the institute by Russell G. Baldwin, who is state chairman of the student division of United World Federalists.

Coeds Are Invited To Y Coffee Hour

All coeds are invited to attend a coffee hour tonight in the Y building, featuring an informal discussion on the educational situation in Germany and other European countries. Dates are also welcome at the get-together, to begin at 7:30 in the upstairs lobby.

Paula V. Szalatnay, former student at Guetersloh, Germany, and Claude Shotts, director of the YMCA who spent the summer in Berlin, will lead the discussion. Refreshments will follow in the YWCA office.

Jewish Students May Get Excuses

Jewish students who want class excuses for the High Holy Days should come to the Hillel Foundation Office on the second floor of the Y building. Excuses must be signed by the Hillel president, the student's academic dean and by his instructors.

Green Room Stays Open Entire Day

The Green or Waffle room of Lenoir hall will be open this week from 6:30 in the morning until 7 o'clock at night. This is an experiment to determine if there is a demand for such service.

Celler Rathskeller . . . . . . Rivals Yale, Cornell

Ram's Head Holds Opening

By Wink Locklair

A rathskeller to rival those at Yale and Cornell has finally opened its handsome, iron-wrought doors to Carolina students and townspeople. Ted Danziger, son of Edward Danziger, owner of the restaurant on Franklin street, is responsible for this unique cellar tavern, called Rams Head.

The soft-spoken proprietor refuses to accept credit for the idea. He says, "For a long time students, teachers and people in town have been suggesting that we open a place where they might enjoy beer or some good food in a suitable atmosphere. University boys have told me that they would like to have a cafe they could bring their dates to for an evening, knowing that nothing embarrassing would arise. So we decided that it was time for Chapel Hill to have a rathskeller."

Finest Bar in U.S.

That was back in July. Since then, Ted and his gracious wife have devoted all their time to planning, equipping and creating a cafe to meet the requirements of their many friends. It was not an easy job, for the Danzigers, too, are people of the upmost discrimination. Everything was specially designed. The tables and other fixtures are made of maple. The walls are cedar, as is the bar at the rear of the hall.

"We have the finest bar dispenser to be found in the United States," Danziger commented. "They are still very hard to get and we looked for a long time." A fireplace in front of the bar gives the room a home-like atmosphere. This, and the Carolina banner of Rameses over the mantle, was Mrs. Danziger's idea.

It would take a map to trace the origin of many Ram's Head properties. The figurines which adorn each booth were imported from the southern Tyrol; the multi-colored lanterns were obtained in Pennsylvania; Daniel Boone's great grandson forged the iron which marks the entrance. And so on down the list. Stainglass windows from Mississippi. Civil War antiques from Virginia farms, slogans for the booths transcribed from a tavern handbook over 100 years old. The very best has gone into making Ram's Head the very best.

Special: Hammas Alabammus

In such an attractive setting, the one possible requisite would be good food and drink. Ram's Head has an abundance of both. The rather imposing menu offers an interesting variety of beer on draft and in bottles. There is some excellent imported ale available, also, and the connoisseur can order a glass of sauterne, burgundy or champagne if he likes.

For the gourmet, Mr. Danziger can provide two smorgasbord platters, with a generous selection of cheeses and meats, or the Ram's Head special: Hammus Alabammus. On occasion, Hungarian goulash and lobster are served. And for something to dally with over beer, it is possible to have caviar canapees, olde dutch pretzels, as well as pumpernickle bread and crackers.

Missed the Music

The one thing we missed opening night was music. It just seemed a matter of time before Edith Piaf would come slinking out of a corner to moan "Ja, So Bin Ich." Then, too, a singer of the Jean Sablon cut would certainly please the Truman Capote and slapped-wrist boys. Mr. Danziger does have elaborate plans for entertainment, however. Andy Griffith, who starred in last year's production of "The Mikado" will be wandering among the tables with his guitar almost every evening. A piano is on the way, and before long a singing waiter will be dashing about, leading the crowd in jovial song.

Ram's Head is located in Amber Alley, by the side of Sutton's. It seats and stands 100 people.

Naval ROTC Quota Is Filled for Fall

The quota for Naval ROTC training at the University has been filled, yesterday stated Major B. W. McLean, USMC, public information officer for the unit.

The unit is composed of 241 students of all classes and has been organized into a battalion this year instead of company, as it was last year. A battalion commander has been appointed with his staff as well as company commanders and their staffs.

Major McLean said that there would be no openings until next fall. However, it was announced that competitive extminations for regular NROTC applicants would be given in December and that certain catagories of male students are eligible to take them at this time.

Students who pass the exams would be eligible for appointment in the training program next September, according to their standing on a national competitive basis.

"Once a student is enrolled in the regular program he will, under normal conditions, be required to finish the four-year course, which includes three summer training cruises," McLean said. "Each regular student is paid a subsistance allowance from the time of his enrollment and uniforms are furnished without cost," he added.

Coalition Council

President of the Student Body Jess Dedmond yesterday called a meeting of his coalition-cabinet for this afternoon at 3:30 in the Horace Williams lounge in Graham Memorial.

Freshman Deadline Extended for Dance

Due to the great interest among freshmen in the dance to be given for them Saturday night at Woman's College in Grensboro, the Graham Memorial travel agency has extended the deadline for purchasing bus tickets through today.

The special bus will leave Graham Memorial at 6 o'clock Saturday night, and the dance will begin at 8 o'clock. There is no admission charge, but each person attending must have a name tag or a certificate from Graham Memorial to identify him as a University freshman

Pick It Up, Drop It, Knock It Around Is Way Bureau Tests Luggage Wear

By Harman W. Nichols

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29—(UP)—Ever nick a redcap or bellhop a little on his tip after he pitched your luggage like he was loading rocks onto a boxcar? Cuss him out a little?

Ditto the man who slam-bangs your new two-suit bag when you check it?

Sure, we all have. And the national Bureau of Standards is on our side. The bureau, you know, tests everything.

It is making an exhaustive bunch of tests at the request of the rails, buses, and airlines—on luggage. The transport people figured they couldn't do much about the porter and the check boys and the upstairs maid. But last year's ledger showed claims for loss and damage to luggage amounting to a million and a quarter dollars.

There must be some answer. So the transport folks appealed to the Bureau.

The job was put in the hands of a young facts-and-figures scientist, Dr. Bob Hobbs, 35, dark, handsome pipe-smoking.

Dr. Bob decided the tests should be divided between the road and the laboratory. But first he made a preliminary study. He found your traveling boxes suffer from four major types of injuries. Busted handles, fractured hardware, separation of frames and covering, and punctures.

Next he bought a carload or so of the most popular types of luggage—suitcases, wardrobes, week-end bags and overnight cases. In triplicate, in large and small models. Airline luggage, which sometimes gives up on being bounced around (the man said), comprised over 40 per cent.

Two from each style were sent to the laboratory. The third was put in service, loaded and shipped a total of 12,000 miles on 22 roundtrips out of Washington all points in the United States. It came back bashed in and scarred at the corners, with many of the handles flapping at one end.

The lab tests were going on simultaneously. Dr. Hobbs rigged up some trappings to give new baggage a scientific bounce and boot—patterned after the man-made roughing it gets on the train and in the checkroom. One was a lift which took a bag by the handle, hauled it up 1 1-2 to five feet and dropped it—ker plunk! It did that 37 times a minute, until the handle finally snapped. Sometimes it didn't take long.

Another machine dropped bags end-wise against the sharp edges of steel tables to see how much of that they would take. Still another thing of science gave the luggage an iron boot to see how hard you have to sock it to make a hole in the sides.

The experiments still are going on. But there'll be some changes recommended and the suitcase and trunk people are sure to go along. Joe, the checkroom boy, and Sam, the pullman porter, are too busy to care about a scar or puncture in your bag. So someday—soon, likely—we'll have some luggage that'll take the scuffs and bumps.

All, that is, except typewriters—which smart people carry themselves and don't check.

Betty Carpenter Leaves Northland To Attend University on Fellowship

A newcomer to the campus this fall, Betty Carpenter, from Brooklyn, said yesterday she finds Carolina more than compensation for having to leave the northland.

Betty is in school on a Danforth Graduate fellowship which provides the opportunity for her to do student religious work for one year. She spends her time with the YM and YW various denominational groups, interfaith groups and with the Council for Religion in Life.

Visits to other campuses in the vicinity are scheduled, plus work with intercollegiate conferences to be held during the year. The Fellowship is provided through the Danforth Foundation, with headquarters in St. Louis, Mo.

This is the sixth year of the "Danny Grad" plan, in which fifteen girls are trained and sponsored on a university campus for one year in religious field work. Girls are chosen from throughout the country, one from each state, and must apply for the fellowship for the year following the completion of undergraduate work.

Betty attended Keuka college in New York state. She majored in English and religious education there. She says her special fields of interest are in the ecumenical movement, having worked with the World Council of Churches and with students from other countries.

Dean C. P. Spruill is the Danforth associate or faculty advisor on the Carolina campus. As associate, Dr. Spruill is to promote students religious growth and advise the Danforth fellow.

All Quotas for Air ROTC Are Filled For Fall Quarter, Says Capt. Holmes

All quotas for the Air ROTC have been filled for the fall quarter, Public Relations Officer Captain Francis S. Holmes stated yesterday.

"We have taken all we can train in the freshman, sophomore and junior classes," Holmes said. "However, we are planning to open an additional sophomore class in the winter quarter to try to take care of some of the people who still want to get in."

Col. Byron R. Switzer, Air ROTC commanding officer, said the department was well pleased with the number of applicants homes in the town of Chapel sorry the group could not handle all the students who wished to enroll.

The program is open to all male students in the University. Any veteran may enroll for his last two years of school and he will be paid subsistance in addition to what he is already receiving under the GI Bill of Rights, Holmes said.

Under the present plan a freshman who enters the training program is expected to finish four years of work with one six-weeks summer training period which usually comes between the junior and senior years. For his last two years he will be paid a subsistance allowance by the United States Air Corps.

SDA to Hold Meet This Afternoon

The University chapter of Students for Democratic Action will hold its first meeting of the year tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock in Roland Parker lounge 3 in Graham Memorial. Plans for the year's activities will be made at this time.

Among the matters to be decided is whether or not to work for a presidential candidate in the current election campaign. SDA is already on record as opposed to Henry Wallace.

A group of non-Communist progressives, SDA is the student division of Americans for Democratic Action, which led the liberal forces in the civil rights fight in the recent Democratic national convention.

Orientation Team 51 Will Meet Tonight

Orientation group 51 will meet at 8:45 tonight in the main lounge of Graham Memorial. This meeting is required for the purpose of meeting the Men's Honor council and signing of the Honor pledge. Counselor Ed Tenney announced.

Old State Student To Get Dorm Rooms

Old students from North Carolina who have application on file for dormitory rooms and were in school during winter and spring quarters of 1948 should contact the housing office immediately regarding dormitory rooms.

AUSTRALIAN SCHOOLCHILDREN are led a merry chase as they attempt to catch Charla, pet wallaroo of Mr. and Mrs. E. Kelroy of Burnley (suburb of Melbourne). The animal, A.W. O.L. from the home of her owner, was finally captured and turned over to the Queensland Zoo by authorities who warned the Kelroys that it is against Australian law to keep a wallaroo for a household pet.

You Can Wander All Over Red Zone Without Seeing a Russian, Says Scribe

By Frank Eleazer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29—(UP)—It comes as a shock to most firstimers in Berlin that Westerners can wander all over the Soviet without even seeing a Russian.

Most Americans visiting Berlin apparently expect to find a barricade at the sector borders. They look for both Western and Soviet troops patrolling respective sides of Pottsdammer Platz, one key point in the dividing line.

And they expect to be snatched up and jailed if they wander across the line into the Soviet-controlled area of the Four-Power occupied city.

With a friend I spent most of an afternoon wandering around in the Russian sector. We took along a camera and made pictures, though with some trepidation and a little less display than is characteristic of rubbernecks elsewhere.

At the Pottsdammer Platz not a soldier was in sight, of any nationality. Not even a police officer was on hand. Signs marked the dividing line. That was all.

The famous Brandenburg gate, where anti-Communist rioting took place recently, also was deserted. On a later trip we saw one policeman on duty, directing traffic.

Among the better potential tourist attractions in the Soviet sector is the shattered Reich chancellory, where Hitler worked and lived in a many-round bomb-proof bunker.

We spent an hour or so in and around it. Except for a volunteer German guide, who hoped to pick up a few cigarettes as a tip, and a few German children, we didn't see a soul.

It is a fact that Russian sector police now and then arrest a Westerner, frequently keeping him overnight. A gag among newspapermen in Berlin is that no correspondent can hold up his head if he hasn't spent at least one night in the Soviet jail.

But newspapermen and others with some reason to go into the Russian sector continue to do so. Thousands of Berliners live on one side of the line and go to work daily on the other. Street cars and busses cross too.

Usually, incidents occur only when there is a disturbance of some kind. Also, picture-taking sometimes attracts unfavorable attention from over-zealous Communist police or Russian MP's.

It also is a fact that police in the American, British and French sectors sometimes pick up outsiders. Even Marshal Vassily D. Sokolovsky, the Soviet military governor, was picked up once, for speeding.

Cost Of Loving Throwing Romance On The Rocks, Merchants Declare

By Claire Cox

NEW YORK, Sept. 29—(UP)—The high cost of loving is putting romance on the rocks.

The men who used to woo with orchids, filet mignon and soft music now have to rely only on their charms and so risk losing their skirts.

Dealers in the commodities of courtship—candy, ice cream, flowers, movie tickets and night club entertainment—say loving costs have gone up at least 400 per cent. None had any idea when Dan Cupid will come back down to earth. But it's hurting—oh, how it's hurting!

The men who live on love said the fellow who used to spend $10 on his girl every Saturday night now treats her in queenly fashion only once a month and he has to scrimp to get together the $40 or $50 it takes to pay for the gay evening. Between times she has to be contented with having her hand held in a movie, in taking a walk, sipping beer or sitting in her own parlor with the guy, they said.

Ted Peckham, author of "Up to No Good," a book on how young men can do more and more with less and less, said the situation is so critical a fellow often has to ask his date to pay her share of the check. You can bet he has to use all his wiles if he gets away with that, Peckham said.

"The girl who used to get a box of candy once in a while is lucky now if she gets as much as a candy bar," he said. "The one bright spot is that the fine art of conversation is being revived. People who used to pay for entertainment now entertain themselves."

L. Charles Daum, Jr., official of a florist's chain, said inflation has put so many barriers athwart the road to romance the only roses a girl can count on these days are in her cheeks—if she can afford the rouge.

Orchids, he said, cost at least $2 more than they did before the war, with the top now at about $10. Gardenials that used to sell for $1 go for $1.50 or $2. Rose corsages are about double.

"Our business has dropped 30 per cent because all other costs are so high," Daum said.

Even an ice cream soda at the corner drug store costs more, confectioners said. Sodas are up from 15 cents to 25 or 30. A two-pound box of candy costs 50 cents more.

Cupid's emissaries agreed however, that the cost of courting has not gone up anywhere near as much as the cost of keeping the girl after you've got her.

"It isn't the initial cost," Daum commented. "It's the upkeep.

Students Must Fill Out Forms To Receive DTH

All students who do not live in dormitories, fraternity houses or university trailer courts must fill out a Daily Tar Heel delivery card in order to receive copies of the paper. This may be done at the Daily Tar Heel Circulation Office, Room 210, Graham Memorial. Those who wish to may notify the circulation department by phone at F-3361 or F-3371 or by mail at Drawer 1080, Chapel Hill.

An entirely new delivery list is made at the beginning of each academic year, and those who filled out cards last year must repeat the procedure this year in order to get delivery.

The Daily Tar Heel is paid for out of the regular student fees paid at the time of registration. Delivery by carrier is available to students living in dormitories, fraternity houses, all university housing and trailer courts, private homes in the town of Chapel Hill, Chase Avenue, Westwood Drive and Dogwood Drive. Students who commute from other towns or who do not live wthin the above zone will receive their papers by mail at no additional cost.

Boxes will be placed at the entrances to the following streets: Rogerson Drive and Pines Trailer Court, Oakwood Drive, Davie Circle and Justice Street.

These boxes will be ready by the end of this week, and students living in said areas will pick their papers up there.

Melancholy Train Call Signals Gum

Greenville, S. C., Sept. 29—(UP)—Each day just before the sun lowers behind the South Carolina hills, a melancholy train whistle hoots across Dunean village.

It's a signal. Like hounds to the chase, children boil out of houses and scamper for the tracks. Old freight no. 63 puffs around the bend. Smiling down from the cab is 63's engineer, A. C. Cobb.

Greenville Piedmont writer Mary Lou Culbertson described Cobb as "a Santa Claus in grimy hat and coal-blackened goggles, all set to toss his gifts of bubble gum to the waiting mob."

Old 63's whistle trumpeted the coming of the bubble gum train.

"It all started with a little three year-old girl in Docheno, just below Belton," Cobb said. "She would stand there by the tracks, rain or shine, summer or winter, and wave her lonely little greeting.

What About Logic?

The General College requires one course of mathematics, or Greek, or Latin of every student, the purpose of which is apparently to train the memory and widen the cultural background. Some students find both mathematics and classical languages very difficult and they believe neither of particular aid to them. With all of the various majors offered here, it is undoubtedly true that this requirement fails to give many students any foundation in their chosen field.

Another alternative to the requirement that would serve the purpose of training the memory and which would also afford an excellent background is philosophy. Many students who now have difficulty in the math requirement would find the intricate reasonings of Plato, of Descartes, of Hume, not only equal to the training and background of the others, but superior in mentally challenging material.

This is no radical suggestion, for some of the leading colleges of the country offer this election, while most of the colleges of the world acknowledge philosophy as one of the most thought-provoking and instructive courses in their curriculum. By opening this course as an alternate requirement the University will give the undergraduate an opportunity to inquire into the real and basic questions of life and death. It is no crip course, for it requires an adept mind to follow the thread of the discussions and theories, while it leaves one with much wider horizons and the desire for more complete and correct solutions.

The educational institution at this level, at any level, should not only teach—it should challenge, and this course offers many of the really vital challenges of humanity.

—B.V.

Americans Should Be Proud

Americans, the United States and the world should be proud today, although it took the death of Swedish Count Folke Bernadotte who had "proved most royally" and who still had completely to "speak to the yet unknowing world."

Most of all we think our South should be proud.

We should be proud, because we have always maintained that the educated Negro should take his place in the honorable realms of contributors to mankind.

Now we have added to the list of other great Negroes a man of a high courage and intellect, Dr. Ralph Johnson Bunche, a former professor of Political Science who has been recently appointed by the United Nations to replace Count Bernadotte in the role of peacemaker in troubled Palestine.

Dr. Bunche is an American Negro. He is a man of strength who has not permitted threats by dissident elements to deter him from working for the goal of peace for his fellow mankind.

His staff has said, "He will never let Bernadotte down."

We say, "God give him strength so that he may accomplish his mission of peace." —L.K.

On 'Dead Soldiers'

We heard this conversation Saturday night after the game.

"Finished? Well toss it out of the car!"

There was a clatter, and the car moved off. The next morning when we passed by the same spot on our way to classes we saw bottles all over the place.

There were containers of all sizes, description and brands of that stuff which enervates, or drowns one's spirits.

We don't mind joining our fellow students in a good time, but one must admit that there is nothing as ugly looking as a "dead soldier."

So how about it folks. Let's take things easy and put empties where they belong—in a trash can. Our campus is too beautiful to be marred by carelessness. —L.K.

Odds And Ends

By Helen Highwater

ON CAMPUS: Rush, rush, rush has been and still is the order of the week as Alpha Gams, ADPis, ChiOs, Pi Phis and Tri Delts put on their best dresses, their best smiles and their best behavior in an attempt to impress new coeds with the wonders of their respective sororities. Rushers and rushees alike smile and smile and smile until tired tongues begin telling the truth instead of the conventional "So glad to know you."

DATE HUNGRY Males also are being affected by the women's rush week rush. For the first time many of them are discovering that occasionally something else comes first with Carolina coeds.

THE FOOTBALL game isn't the only thing that Texans lost here last weekend from the looks of the ad Sam Daniels addressed to Bob Kirby in today's classified section. Five hundred bucks may be hay in the cattle country, podner, but in these here parts its five hundred bucks.

MAYBE PETE STRADER'S simmering scripts had something to do with Sound and Fury's announcement this week that Bunnie Davis will be its new censor chief. That must be a new office in the fun and frolic group's organization, because it's a cinch their rough and ready shows have never been censored before.

PAUL PASCAL, new Latin instructor from Vermont was taking no chances Tuesday morning when he tried to explain the use of the word "ante-bellum" as applied to the post Civil War period. As yet unaquainted with southern ways, Pascal hesitated before uttering the forbidden words "civil war." A member of the class supplied the name but Pascal, not to be outdone, replied, "Oh, I thought maybe you people called it 'the rebellion' or something."

A RECORD TURNOUT of aspirants for reportorial positions showed up at the DTH staff meeting last Sunday, but evidently other college papers weren't having the same luck. This announcement appeared in the University of California's student newspaper: "A spotless office—comfortably lighted, imaginatively furnished, quaintly surrounded by clinging ivy, profusely inhabited with remarkable reporters—awaits students interested in work on the Daily Californian."

ELSEWHERE ALONG Graham Memorial's publications row this week Tarnation's funny men are doing a hurry-up job on the first edition of the humor mag, which is not scheduled for perusal until November 1. Yackety-Yack photographers are busily snapping away at class pictures for the year book—and the sooner students sign up for appointments, the better.

IN TOWN, Danziger's was wet Tuesday night, and it wasn't entirely due to the rain and the beer that attended the opening of the rathskeller. The fire-control sprinkler system in the kitchen went on the blink, liberally spraying the area and setting off the fire alarm. Two fire trucks reported to the scene and numerous of the village and student citizenry gathered to watch the blaze that never started. Charlie, formerly of the Campus and University cafes, was more than somewhat irritated upon getting out of bed in his room above Ledbetter-Pickard's and dressing to find that the excitement had subsided.

IN THE STUDENT UNION: There's going to be a free dance for everybody come Saturday night. And everybody means everybody, not just students. Married folks in town and on campus who won't be rushing off for the weekend are especially invited to dance to Johnny Satterfield's music between 8:30 and midnight. Man-about-Graham-Memorial Mike Loftus says the dance is free.

Love and Beans

Chili For Your Hot Tamale

By Virginia MacPherson
United Press Hollywood Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD,—(UP)—A gentleman who claims he can whip up a powerful love potion landed Tuesday right where he can do the most harm—at Hollywood and Vine.

He's Gus Arriola, creator of the comic strip "Gordo," and the world's loudest booster of chili con carne as a wooing weapon.

We shudder to think what might happen if the local wolves ever meet up with him.

This chili con carne, at least the way Arriola cooks it, is so good, he says, one bite and the little dreamboat stops asking for a mink coat.

"It renders flowers, candy, and diamonds utterly useless," Arriola insists. "It puts stars in your true love's eyes when there aren't even any in the sky. It makes her think you're wonderful!"

All this is old stuff south of the border. Mexican Romeos, according to Gus, have been using it for centuries.

"But don't pin me down" he protested. "I don't know whether it's the red chili or the garlic or the combination that does it. If I did I'd bottle it and make millions.

"All I know is, it's wonderful stuff. Wouldn't be without it at our house."

The famous comic-strip artist spent Tuesday autographing a "Gordo bean pot" in Hollywood department stores. And the way the ladies swarmed around begging for his chili con carne recipe was enough to make you think local husbands might not be so hot in the romance department.

"They're all going home and try it out on the old man," Gus chuckled. "Well—they won't be sorry."

He's not even appalled at what could happen if the local wolves get the recipe.

"That," Gus grins, "is the idea."

The closest he comes to revealing the secret is that "with a full stomach...everybody loves everybody." He thinks that's a very fine idea.

The American Medical association will go along that far. But chili con carne isn't on their list of what laymen call "love potions."

"Alcohol and drugs and the French liqueurs, chartreuse and pernod, are generally recognized as promoters of romantic feelings," a local specialist said. "But chili con carne? It's not in any of the medical journals."

This Is Carolina

An Introduction To IRC

By Lincoln H. S. Kan

The second act of "Peace?" on the World stage is finished. The curtains have been drawn. Behind the scenes a last minute re-write may be in process to change the inevitability of horror and destruction introduced and developed in the first and second acts.

Here at Carolina we have been much concerned with what is going on and what has gone before in the national and international show. Two organizations in particular have led the way in the finding of facts and the discussing of the meaning of world events. This columnist is well acquainted with both the International Relations Club and the Carolina Political Union through membership in the first named and association with the leaders of the last.

The IRC was re-organized in 1938 when the Cosmopolitan Club, and the League of Nations association merged. At that time there were very few foreign students on the campus, but those who were here took an active part in the forming of the newly organized group, along with other Carolina students who were interested in world affairs.

The IRC set for its purposes a sustained program of giving information to the students and the people in North Carolina concerning the international scene. It drew its strength and its material from its members and through weekly discussion meetings. For a while it presented two 15 minute programs over WDNC in Durham and a Sunday roundtable discussion over WPTF each week. Faculty members took active part in the Sunday program as well as in club meetings.

The noted authority on the League and international relations on this campus, Mr. K. C. Frazer, and Dr. James L. Godfrey acted as advisers in an ex-officio capacity with no vote on club policy.

Although the IRC no longer conducts its radio programs, it is still actively engaged in forum and club discussions. The war put a crimp in its activities; however since then a new nucleus has been formed to spark the IRC once more into being an active and much needed outfit for the campus.

In the past few years, the IRC initiated a campus poll on the international scene and has done much to waken the campus to other nations by introducing prominant foreign diplomats to the student body in periodic open meetings.

Last spring the IRC regional meeting for the Southeast was held here and generally impressed the campus that here was a group of alive and serious students of the world situation.

One of the more colorful members of the IRC of long standing is the former North Carolina Chairman of the Highway Commission E. B. Jeffress Sr. No meeting can start without him, officially slumped down into his chair, eyes half closed and his cane beside him. When the discussion gets to rambling around, he snaps people back with a pithy question or tart answer. Mr. Jeffress is a part of the IRC, its traditions and Carolina.

What the IRC will do this year will be up to its members and the many new recruits who will join them. Many plans have been made; however, this columnist will leave the reporting of such to the news staff. We sincerely hope that the IRC will live up to its past traditions, and keep the campus informed as to what the significances of latest world developments may mean to the student body. It looks like a great year for Carolina and her entire brood of organizations.

A summary of the Caroline Political Union will be the next subject of this column.

May we repeat — directors, chairmen and publicity heads of all the campus organizations are welcomed and urged to send in any material they desire us to use in future columns of "This Is Carolina."

Right To The Body

Editor:

I haven't been around this school too long, but all my life from the time I was born until the time I did get here I have been hearing much about the Carolina Spirit. I liked the idea—and then I came here, last fall, and was promptly let down, with a bang. To cite one example—last year there was a senior class meeting about the middle of May, and a notice appeared in the DTH for three consecutive days. Out of a senior class of more than 1000 members, not but 35 turned up for the meeting. I am sure that more than this saw the notice, but "just couldn't find time to go". No class spirit and (almost) no school spirit go hand in hand. I know another boy who "didn't have time" to go to a single basketball game, and I'm sure that there were a great many more of the same caliber.

And here comes my last little item—the single thing, I think, that makes me madder than all the rest combined. At the football game last Saturday (34-7, WHEE) the students started pouring out of the stands and out of the stadium about five minutes before the game was over. As far as I'm concerned, their student pass books should be removed as they go out the gate—maybe if they had to pay the full amount to see the game they would stay to see it all, just to get their money's worth. It doesn't seem to me to be too much to ask that they stay until the game is over—really, fellows, it doesn't take so long to get out once the game is finished—and God knows the team deserved full backing, particularly at this last game.

Enough has been written on the cheering so that I know it won't do any good to harp on it, but PLEASE, people, when the cheerleader is giving a yell, can't you manage more than a whisper (if at all)? I've heard a good high school cheering section out-yell anything I ever heard this student body do—we only yell right after a touchdown or some thriller—when the going is tough we sit silent in the stands.

One last word—I know it is too much to ask most of you to go to the Georgia game—if you want to know how it looked, ask me, 'cause I'll be there—but when we do get around to the next home game, against State, October 16, what about trying just a little? And if this letter makes you mad, just switch all the energy from me to behind the team, where it belonged in the first place—they appreciate it and damn well deserve it.

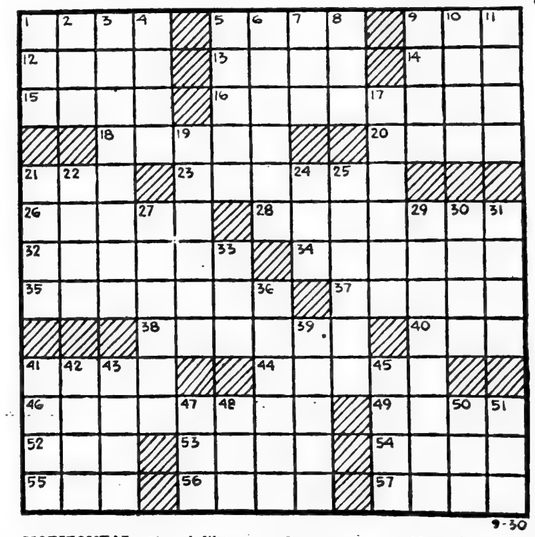
Orienting Oversight

At least one orientation counselor failed to do his complete duty, to judge by the following questionaire filled out by one of his orientees:

Question: What do you think was outstanding about your counselor?



Answer: His extra-curricula activities—women.

Do you think he was well versed in the subject in which he was instructing you? If not, explain your answer.

He was well versed in the subject that he didn't give a lecture on and the subject in which I was most interested—namely, sex.

What suggestions do you have for improving the orientation program?

Give us all available information as to favorite necking spots and directions for entering same. After all, if we are to become Carolina gentlemen and carry on the great tradition set for us by preceding males, we must be given the know how and the good word in order to enable us to become better aquainted with the other inhabitants of the campus—and I am not talking about the squirrels. How can the orientation committeemen expect us to enter into the Carolina Way of Life if we are excluded from the fundamental elements of the obviously well developed boodling sessions on this compus? Even Father in "Life With Father" gives a lecture on women to his Yale Freshman! Aren't we just as good if not better than the best that Yale can produce? We want to be Carolina men, not boys. And how can we prove our point if we aren't given the helpful hint during orientation?

The Voodoo of Testudo

THE DISAPPEARANCE OF TESTUDO the terrapin, Maryland's metal mascot from the College Park campus recently and subsequent accusation that this act of infamy was conducted by students of this University makes one wonder what this world is coming to.

The account of the preposterous pilfery as carried by this newspaper mentioned only that the unanimated animal had been stolen and that it was thought to be in the hands of Carolina students. No proof was offered nor facts disclosed, although they have been written for, which leaves the bad taste of who do these Marylanders think they are.

The idea brought to mind is that Testudo was found missing from the Maryland campus and every college in sight was immediately accused in the hope that the guilty party would be conscious-stricken enough to tote the thing back to its College Park home.

Like Having Five Thumbs

THE REAL POSER in the matter is who would want poor Testudo to begin with. He is a nondescript-looking metal terrapin of rather massive size and he may have even grown some since these three I's were set upon him last year. He is much too large for any mantel piece and as a center piece, would buckle any of the better dining room tables. On the floor he would serve as a constant hazard to navagation, and would be especially dangerous in regard to midnight raids to answer the call of Nature.

But unless the Marylanders are pulling someone's leg, young Testudo has definately left home, and because of his solidified condition, not under his own power. The motive is obviously to agitate the lads and lassies of College Park, though few here seemed to have ever taken the almost-Washingtonians that seriously.

Obviously, with the Maryland campus only five miles from the nation's capital, the matter will soon be safely in the hands of a Congressional committee. After that, one can expect almost immediate results with poor Testudo probably turning up in the new Rathskeller at Danziger's. On the other hand, the Wallacites will probably figure into the matter somewhere.

One serious note: If the terrapin is in Tar Heel hands, it should be returned immediately. Primarily, because this is both an honor and campus code offense, and secondarily, because the Marylanders don't seem to have too much of a sense of humor

Keeping Posted

IT IS NO REAL COINCIDENCE that acts such as the removal of Testudo from his home school have started some of the greatest rivalries in the history of football. Americans have always been trophy-conscious—with a longing for some tangible sign of triumph. The tearing down of the enemy's goal posts has been for many years one way to carry home a bit of victory. Many a father is still proud of the splinter of Virginia upright he risked his neck for back in '25.

Carolina and Duke tried to prevent this annual rush for the wood pile back in 1931 when the senior classes of the two schools donated a silver miniature goal post to be awarded to the victor in each year's classic. The trophy was designed to do away with this dangerous task of tearing the real posts asunder and served well the purpose until 1934.

In that year, the Tar Heel fans, elated in victory, violated the trophy and tore down the Blue Devil posts at Duke stadium to celebrate a 7-0 Carolina victory. That was Carl Snavely's first year at Chapel Hill during his two year stay in the thirties. After 1934, the trophy seems to have all but vanished until today when hardly anything is known about it. It might be in College Park.

The Bells Are Ringing

TO AGAIN CEMENT RELATIONS with our neighbors to the east, cheerleader Norm Sper this year has brought a victory bell of some historical orgin. The bell, repaired and mounted on a small truck, will serve as a rotating trophy between the two schools in the years to come.

The Little Brown Jug of the midwest is the center of another famed college rivalry. The jug was first used by Michigan to carry water for its players at the 1903 game in Minneapolis. After the game Minnesota grabbed the jug and took it home as a victory token. Then upon the suggestion of both schools, the jug became an annual trophy award to the winner of the big clash. The jug, like Testudo, disappeared one year from the Michigan trophy case, and wasn't found for two years. It is now kept securely in a vault between games and appears only under strong guard.

Tennessee and Kentucky battle each season for an old Beer Keg, which must have real sentimental value to be as empty as it is. The trophy had the misfortune to be orignated during prohibition.

An Axe to Find

BUT PROBABLY THE TROPHY with the background of greatest intrigue is the Stanford Axe. The Axe was forged in 1899 and used by Stanford to symbolize its famous axe yell. It was taken by force from Stanford rooters by California students in the year of its creation. For 21 years it was kept securely hidden by California, except when brought out at the annual California-Stanford pep rally.

In the spring of 1920, under the guise of newsreel camera men, a group of Stanford students succeeded in getting an interview with the axe and when they left, they took it with them. It reposed in a Palo Alto bank vault from then until finally it was reunited and made an annual trophy between the two schools.

All of which goes to prove that no matter how big the world tries to be, it is still the little things in life that count the most.

Tar Heels Prepared For Mud In Georgia

Heavy Rains Fail To Halt Practice As Drills Go On

By Frank Allston

Heavy rain descended upon Chapel Hill again yesterday afternoon and forced Carolina's top-ranking football team into Woollen Gymnasium for an all-important practice session. There was no rest for the weary as coach Carl Snavely put his boys through all the necessary paces in preparation for Saturday's game at Athens, Ga.

An air of sureness hung over the gym as both the offense and defense of the Tar Heels were given a throrough going over. However, it couldn't be described as over-confidence because the locals know just what to expect when they tangle with the charges of Wally Butts two days from now.

Choo Choo Charlie Justice teamed up with Billy Hayes, Johnny Clements and blocking back Eddie Knox to run a full hour of Carolina plays. Hosea Rodgers joined the group shortly before the end of hostilities.

It became apparent to those in Woollen after a short length of time that this Saturday's offensive menu would be more varied than that which the Texas Longhorns witnessed last week.

In the Texas opener, the Tar Heels struck with basic single-wing plays, embodying very little variation. This week it is expected to be a different situation entirely as the Snavely-led Carolinians will doubtlessly throw everything but "The Single-wing Primer" at the Georgia boys.

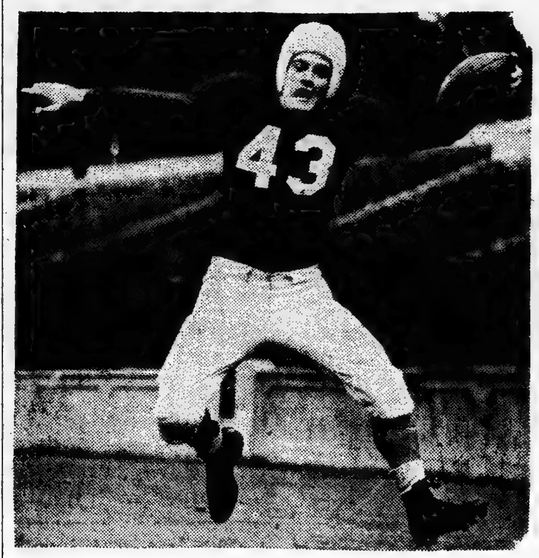
Pass defense again came in for a large share of the emphasis. For the benefit of the defensive eleven, the Carolina Choo-choo and Bill Maceyko made like Johnny Rauch and ran through some tricky Bulldog pass plays.

"Get the Bulldog!" sounded through the Woollen rafters several times as Choo-choo all but yelled his head off. It was obvious that the Tar Heels meant business and will mean business down in peach territory on Saturday.

Several of the Tar Heel squad members were on the sidelines with minor injuries, but there was nothing serious to report. Bob Cox was a newcomer to the group in light equipment.

The Tar Heel team will make the trip to Athens on Seaboard's "Carolina Special," which is scheduled to leave Raleigh at 9:30 Friday night and arrive in the home of the Bulldogs at 7:15 on Saturday morning. The return trip will be made Saturday night.

FROSH MANAGERS



There is an urgent need for Freshman football managers. All boys interested in aiding with the Frosh managerial chores are requested to report to K. P. Lindsay in Woollen gym today.

Swimming Hours

Ralph Casey, Tar Heel swimming coach, has announced the following recreational swimming hours for all students with "A" medical rating. All facilities of the pool will be availible Monday through Saturday from 9:00 to 11:00. Saturday from 2:00 to 6:00, and Sunday from 2:00 to 5:00.

The pool will also be open 4:00 to 6:00 on Monday through Friday; however, the use at this time will be restricted to the shallow section because of varsity workouts on diving boards and in the deep section. Coach Casey requests the cooperation of all students in observing these swimming hours, which are effective now.

He Can Run, Too

Bill Maceyko, Carolina's blond-haired tailback, has been used primarily as the defensive safety man for the past two seasons. But don't let that fool you. He rates as one of the team's hardest runners and is an excellent passer in addition. He is slated to play a vital role in the remaining games this year.

Only Three Lettermen on Hand For 1948-49 Basketball Quint

Carolina's basketball season got an early start last night as 25 eligibles heeded Coach Tom Scott's first call for practice.

The Tar Heel cage mentor indicated that for the first two weeks the aspirants would meet only two or three days a week and the practice sessions would consist mainly of conditioning and the learning of the ever present fundamentals of the sport. After these initial two weeks the schedule calls for daily practice and plenty of scrimmage.

As to this year's outlook, Coach Scott is not too optimistic and rightfully so. The 1948 Carolina squad has a nucleus of only one of last year's regulars and three lettermen on which to draw. The lone regular is elongated Nemo Nearman and the two other returnees who saw enough action last year to win momograms are Coy Carson and Dan Nyimicz.

Former Jayvees

The remainder of the turnout are hopefuls from last season's jayvees and several transfer students who are eligible to play. However, Coach Scott would make no predictions as to the merits of these men and pointed out that the coming scrimmages would give a fair indications of their abilities.

Regardless of the outlook, it certainly appears that the Tar Heel court head is looking ahead with anticipation to the trying 25-game schedule that opens on the first of December and includes a date at basketball's mecca, Madison Square Garden and a new Camelia Bowl game with Arizona during the Christmas holidays.

Baseball Drills

Walt Rabb, Carolina baseball coach, announced yesterday that a meeting of all freshmen candidates for the Tar Heel baseball team will be held this afternoon on Emerson field.

Coach Rabb, whose charges went to the Eastern NCAA finals last spring, is anxious to get a line on the new prospects enrolled at school.

The workout will be between 2 o'clock and 4. All boys should bring their own spikes and gloves.

Ducats Still Available For Georgia Contest

The Woollen Gymnasium ticket office announced today that several hundred tickets are still available for students and others who plan to follow the Tar Heels to Athens, Georgia, for their tilt with the University of Georgia's Bulldogs on Saturday. The tickets will remain on sale until mid-afternoon today.

In order for students to purchase the ducats at the special student price of $1.20, they are required to show their I. D. cards at the ticket office window. The regular price for the tickets is $4.20.

A large gathering of local fans is expected to be on hand when the Tar Heels take the field Saturday. In addition to the two special trains there will be a motor calvacade making the trip.

Indians Down Chisox; Move Closer to Flag

CLEVELAND, Sept. 29 (UP) The Cleveland Indians drove closer to the American League pennant today as they again battered the Chicago White Sox, 5 to 2, behind the steady pitching of Bob Feller. A crowd of 13,559 saw the Tribe hold its two-game lead with three games left to play.

Two veteran "pros" Joe Gordon and Ken Keltner, supplied Feller with the slugging support he needed to record his 19th victory and his seventh in a row.

The White Sox led, 2 to 0, until the sixth when Lou Boudreau walked with one out. Gordon then hammered his 32nd home run of the season into the left field seats and Keltner followed with his 30th into the same place.

William and Mary Is Title Threat, Says Rube McCray

Richmond, Va., Sept. 29—(UP)—William and Mary coach Rube McCray is staking patience and a jinx against the probability that North Carolina will meet his Indians in a clash of unbeaten elevens on Nov. 6 to decide the Southern Conference title.

North Carolina's powerhouse edged the Indians 13 to 6 last year, but Wake Forest had already tripped the Tar Heels. And that eventually handed William and Mary the championship.

With North Carolina looking stronger this year, McCray is playing a waiting game, keeping his vaunted attack under wraps until it is needed most.

Jinx over Deacons

He counts on a jinx William and Mary holds over Wake Forest to keep his secrets safe in the Southern Conference headliner Saturday. In five games since 1921, Wake Forest has never whipped the Indians.

McCray reached the pinnacle of patience Saturday night when he eased by upset-hungry Davidson 14 to 6, using only five plays and allowing fullback Jarring Jack Cloud to handle the ball only four times.

Wake Forest, using a new and tricky T formation behind a big forward wall, may force McCray to show his hand. Peahead Walker's Baptists thirst for vengeance for their worst defeat of last season—21 to 0 at the Redskin hands.

And despite the relatively easy victory over Davidson, the William and Mary prowess is a big question. McCray is parlaying that question to the best advantage.

Wake Forest has already tasted both victory and defeat this season. The Deacons were impressive in their inaugural against George Washington, but suffered a surprisingly severe setback against Boston College, 26 to 9. Boston College is on the William and Mary schedule late this season.

But if McCray plans to keep his best tricks under wraps until the North Carolina game, he may need some luck beyond the Wake Forest tussle. The Indians also face VMI, Virginia Tech, St. Bonaventure and Richmond before they tangle with the Tar Heels. But William and Mary is favored to win all games until its North Carolina contest.

Intramural Drills Held Up by Rains; Play Opens Oct. 5

Rains on the Carolina campus put a temporary halt to practice sessions of fraternity and dormitory tag football teams yesterday. But when fair weather returns the intramural department is expecting the athletic fields to be filled with boys getting in shape for the approaching mural season.

Many of the teams expecting to enter the grid league have already staged practices. Current plans have the first games slated for Thursday, Oct. 7 in the fraternity division. The dormitory loops will swing into action later in the week. Chi Psi fraternity is the defending champion, having defeated the Grads for the campus title last year.

There will be an important meeting of all intramural managers at Woollen gymnasium on October 5. The schedules will be drawn up at this meeting.

Another intramural meeting will be held tonight in Room 302, Woollen, for all those interested in participating in archery. The meeting originally was scheduled this afternoon.

Entrance is still open to the campus tennis tourney. Over 60 students have already entered the tourney. The deadline for this event is Tuesday, October 5.

Ninety Boys Try Out For Frosh Basketball

A squad of approximately 90 men, including freshmen and transfer students, are now working out under the direction of Coach Tom Scott, who is attempting to ascertain the quality of material available for the 1948-49 Carolina cage club.

None of the first year men will be able to play varsity ball.

The Southern conference's old ruling of freshmen not being able to play on the varsity is now in effect.

Scott stated yesterday he would welcome more candidates. Tests to determine the boys' ability are being given this week, with scrimmages slated next week.

Moscow Indicates U.S.S.R. Intends To Stay in U.N.

LONDON, Sept. 29 — (UP) — Moscow Radio said tonight that "there is no doubt but that the forces of progress and democracy will turn a deaf ear to those who try to sing the funeral march of the United Nations."

The Soviet Union "marches" in the "vangard of the forces," it was added.

This apparent implication that Russia does not intend to leave the UN as the result of the Allied complaint against her blockade of Berlin was contained in an English commentary.

Russia has followed consistently a policy which aims at peace and security by strengthening and developing equal co-operation among all nations, Moscow said.

"This policy of genuine democratic peace coincides with the interests of the ordinary people of the world," the broadcast continued

The broadcast said that America and Britain were conducting "a furious armaments race" and "have violated the democratic principles of the UN and are working to split it."

It said the UN assembly speech of British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin "sounded like a call to destroy the UN."

Moscow earlier said that Belgian Premier Paul-Henri Spaak indulged in "malignant fabrications" hostile to Russia in his UN speech yesterday.

Truman Hits 'Half-Baked' GOP Farm Policy

ENROUTE WITH PRESIDENT TRUMAN, Sept. 29—(UP)—President Truman in a series of 12 campaign speeches in Oklahoma today assailed the Republicans for having a "half-baked" farm policy.

In his major speech of the day at Tulsa, he resumed his political feud with Rep. George A. Dondero (R.-Mich.), chairman of the House Public Works committee.

He said Dondero's record on public power was proof that the Republicans want to take power from federal dams "and give it to the private monopolies to sell back to you on their own terms."

The president's farm policy charge came in an appearance at Muskogee where he was greeted by a welcoming delegation of Oklahoma Indians.

In Tulsa, the president spoke in Skelly stadium which seats 26,000 persons. There were only a few vacant seats. Mr. Truman paraded five miles to the stadium through clouds of confetti in the business district.

"The issues are clear enough in this campaign," he said.

"You can vote for continued price supports, more rural electrification and greater reclamation, irrigation and hydro electric power projects.

"Or you can vote for the candidates who threaten to reverse the established policies and turn the clock backwards to the boom and bust Republicanism of the twenties."

Mr. Truman forecast that if the Republicans win in November, they would "take care of a few people at the expense of many."

"They have already attacked the farm price support program throughout the country," he said. "Republican campaign propaganda is being spread through the country in an attempt to make the workers think that the farm program is to blame for high prices."

"At the same time, Republicans are telling the farmers that wages are to blame for high prices."

The president referred at length to his World War I record, recalling his training days at Fort Sill, Okla.

Draft Deadline

All students who have not registered for the draft must sign up this morning in room 208 South building between 8 and 9 o'clock.

This applies to 18-year-olds and other persons who have not previously registered and are between the ages of 18 and 25. Officials said this would be absolutely the last day of registration.

Governor Warren Indicates Republicans Might Revise Taft-Hartley Legislation

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 29—(UP)—Gov. Earl Warren, GOP vice-presidential candidate, indicated tonight that the Taft-Hartley law might be revised by a Republican administration.

In a speech prepared for delivery at a party rally at the Mosque theater here. Warren advocated a "sound, cooperative relationship between workers and management." He did not specifically mention the Taft-Hartley law but he said:

"If our laws affecting the collective bargaining process are, after experience, found to be unnecessary or oppressive, then they can, and should be, changed until they full guarantee democratic principles within labor organizations and establish a sound national policy based on equity to employers, employees and the public.

The California governor arrived in New York shortly before 6 o'clock, held a brief press conference and then drove to Newark with a group of Republican leaders from New Jersey. He will spend tomorrow in New York.

As had GOP presidential candidate Thomas E. Dewey, Warren stressed that the current campaign must be conducted in such a manner that it will leave America united and strong.

"I do not want to disrupt or divide our citizenry in any way, shape or form," he said. "I'm not so anxious for office that I would do one single thing toward getting it that would disturb the unity of the American people."

Tar Heel Vanguard Finds Athens Quiet

By Chuck Hauser

ATHENS, Ga., Sept 30—The University of Georgia campus was quiet tonight as the vanguard of the Tar Heel caravan rolled in.

But if the campus was quiet, the town was seemingly wide awake as possible. There was no Jeff's, no Harry's, no Max's, but the center of town was reminiscent of Chapel Hill on an average evening.

The "Varsity" was doing a thriving liquid business, and the upstairs poolroom where former Georgia halfback Charlie Trippi used to spend his spare time echoed to the click click of the billiard balls.

Athens is a typical college town. And tonight a typical pre-game college atmosphere hung over it. Conversations and bets centered on the Carolina-Georgia contest slated here Saturday.

In less than 35 hours the Tar Heel train will roll into the Athens station, and players and fans alike will step into a friendly, familiar atmosphere that one may find in any college town of this type.

Across the main street was the big gateway leading into the campus. Georgia freshmen studiously avoided passing through the "hallowed portals" restricted to upperclassmen.

On the dimly-lit campus, familiar titles appeared on more familiar-looking university buildings—the library, "School of Pharmacy," and the well-known Henry Grady school of journalism overlooking the stadium.

Sanford stadium lay like an immense black vacuum in the dark. In the background the huge Alumni Memorial building sat, silent but not dark. Inside, Georgia coaches worked late into the night, planning strategy for Saturday when the terrible Tar Heels are to decend on the Bulldogs.

This is Athens at night. A tense, waiting Athens.

UNC Students Will Attend College Meet

The Interim Council of the State Student Legislature will meet at Guilford College Sunday, October 3, at 1 o'clock, it was announced yesterday by Gran Childress, secretary-treasurer of the Council.

At that meeting plans for the annual Student Legislature, which is usually held in the spring, will be made. Also the group will discuss the report to be presented to the North Carolina General Assembly this winter, concerning ideas which college students and young citizens of the State would like to see accepted as law in North Carolina.

Two local college students are chairmen of special committees for the Student Legislature. Arnold Smith of Wake Forest is chairman of the records committee; Elsie Corbett of Meredith, chairman of the housing committee.

Other committee chairmen are the following: legislative and calendar, Tom Beyers, Johnson C. Smith College; registration, Peter Cooper, Catawba; finance, Lynette Boney, WCUNC; rules, Sam Hill, A and T College; and publicity, Perry Gilliard, North Carolina College.

Charlie Cooper of Duke University is president of the council.

Raise in Rent Is Announced In Dormitories

An increase of 19 per cent in all university housing rents was announced yesterday afternoon by university officials. The increase, according to South building officials was necessitated by the upward spiralling of prices for maintence material, supplies, utilities and labor. Many manufacturers had warned the University purchasing department in advance of the price changes, therefore rent adjustments had to be made to meet the rise.

J. A. Branch, head of the University Purchasing department said yesterday that prices for repair supplies such as nails, lumber, paint and panes have increased over 33 percent since 1945.

Mr. Branch added that although coal prices are expected to drop as a result of increased production in the mines and a heavy stockpile, the University will still spend approximately $35,000 more this year to heat the dormitories. In discussing the situation, Branch said, "I'm pessimistic, there's not much chance of prices going down."

With the price difficulty to meet, University officials voted to raise the room rents after deliberating since January. This is the first rent inrease since before the war.

The University maintenance program for dormitories has no appropriation and is budgeted to be self-supporting. Wages for janitor service was raised recently also to conform to the increased cost of living.

First UP Meet To Be Wednesday

The University party will have its first meeting at 4 o'clock next Wednesday in the Horace Williams Lounge of Graham Memorial, according to Thurston Williams, chairman of the party.

Any group on campus having a minimum of 25 members is cordially invited to send a representative to the UP meeting. This includes men and women's dormitory groups, social and fraternal organizations and any other groups sincerely interested in working for better student government.

"Freshmen and transfer students are especially urged to attend in order to become familiar with our party policies and organization," declared Thurman Williams. Meetings are customarily open to all.

The main order of business will be the setting up of the party organization for the coming year and consideration of the By-Laws drawn up during the summer. Attendance of all is desired and the representatives are reminded to bring alternates.

There has been no meeting this week due to the party's desire not to exclude co-eds engaged in rushing activities.

DECLARING THAT U. S. relations with the Soviet Union had never been more "critical" than now, Lt. Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, Ambassador to Russia, makes a personal report to President Truman. Gen. Smith flew from Washington to board the Presidential train en route to Bonham, Tex., to report the European crisis. (International)

Editors Seek Material For Initial Mag Issue

Editor Bill Sessions of the new Carolina Quarterly announced last night that the literary editors are ready to consider material for its first issue. The disclosure followed the successful opening of the campus wide subscription campaign yesterday.

Sessions said, "We are looking for fiction, both humerous and serious, for poetry, and for articles. The department editors are extremely interested in working with new student writers as well as with the more experienced ones."

"There are many student writers who have never submitted work to the campus publications," Sessions said, "and we cordially invite them to give us a try."

Sessions went on to explain that the main requirement demanded in the writing to appear in the Quarterly was that it be truly representative of the campus writers best efforts.

He said, "We intend to keep the Quarterly out of the clouds and to make it a clear hard-hitting magazine that the students will like."

The Carolina Quarterly, which is making its debut this year, was formed after the 104 year old Carolina Magazine was voted out last winter by a student referendum. Nearly 1500 students signed a petition asking that a new campus literary magazine be formed, and the Carolina Quarterly was the result.

A permanent advisory committee, consisting of Walter Spearman and Phillips Russell of the journalism department, and Charles Eaton, H. K. Russell, and Lyman A. Gotten of the English department, was set up. All of the members of the advisory board are successful authors or critcs.

The major staff members selected for the new magazine include: Bill Sessions, editor, Priscilla Moore, associate editor, Roy Moose, assoc. ed., Emily Sewell, business manager, John Hough, assistant business man-

Playmakers Have Favorable Start On Ticket Sales

The Carolina Playmakers' annual season ticket sale got off to a good start yesterday with several requests sent by mail from out of town people opening the drive. The sale this year is being limited to one thousand ticket books.

"I would like to point out," said business manager John W. Parker," that the season books do not contain the actual reserved seat tickets, but contain stubs which may be exchanged for reserved seats during the individual advance sale for each major production."

"There has been some misunderstanding about this in the past," Parker explained, "and I would like to emphaize that the book stubs must be exchanged for reserved seats to each of the first four plays."

The Forest Theater production, scheduled for next May, is the only one at which seats will not be reserved. Parker said that the season ticket sale will be continued through the first play of the season, "I Remember Mama".

GM Stages Fall Revue Tonight

The Rendezvous room will present the first in a series of Friday night floor shows tonight at 10 o'clock in Graham Memorial.

Featuring comedian Andy Griffith, the show will be mc'd by Jim Geiger. Griffith, who appeared at the Nags Head Beach Club this summer and also understudied a lead role in "The Lost Colony", will present a revival meeting sketch.

According to Lib Stoney, program director of the Rendezvous room, other entertainers presented will be dancer Mary Jo Cain and Barbara Young, vocalist. Miss Cain, who appeared in the campus musical, "Sweep it Clean" last year has been playing in summer stock at Raboth Beach, Delaware.

Wallacites Hold Forum Tonight

For the benefit of those who have any questions about the Progressive Party the UNC Students for Wallace Club are presenting a forum tonight in Gerrard hall at 8 o'clock.

The platform of the new political party will be presented by three speakers who will outline the three sections of the party slogan, "Peace, Security, and Abundance."

Princess, Sharman Douglas Compete For Marquess' Hand

LONDON, Sept. 30. — (UP) — Romanaic Londoners wondered today whether the young and beautiful daughter of U. S. Ambassador Lewis Douglas is beating Princess Margaret's time with the handsome eligible Marquess of Blandford.

Princess Margaret and the young Marquess have been linked by Mayfair gossip for some time, but the other day, photographers and autograph hunters found Sharman Douglas, lovely blonde daughter of the American ambassador, sitting with the Marquess in a movie theater.

Tongues have wagged ever since. Since the young Marquess is definitely a gentleman, and Princess Margaret is definitely a brunette, some observers have given Miss Douglas the edge.

The lovely Sharman is a friend of both Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret, but she also is decidedly a belle of Mayfair society. Young guards officers consider it a "must" to be seen escorting Miss Douglas around town before they finally are "launched" in society.

The vivacious Princess Margaret, meanwhile, is operating at a disadvantage if she really is interested in the Marquess. She has been in scotland on a summer holiday.

Soon, however, Princess Margaret will be returning to London and Buckingham Palace. Naturally, all Mayfair is looking forward to her arrival.

Tar Heels Will Stage Huge Rally In Athens

Head cheerleader Norman Sper announced plans yesterday for a pre-game pep rally and parade in Athens, Georgia tomorrow for all students going to the Carolina-Georgia football game. Sper requests all students to meet at the Georgian Hotel in Athens at 12 noon.

A special train carrying the Tar Heels will leave Raleigh tonight at 9:30 and will arrive in Athens tomorrow at 7:30.

Sper said he will meet a special train carrying over 300 Carolina alumni which will also arrive in Athens tomorrow morning, and will conduct them to the Georgian hotel. From there the entire body will parade to the stadium on the University of Georgia campus.

Commenting on the pictures of the card stunts staged at the Carolina-Texas game last Saturday which are now being shown at the Carolina theater Sper said, "the photographer who took the pictures completely missed the beauty of the stunts when he failed to take the students coming up into the stunts and finishing them.

Sper added that more film will be used during the Carolina-State game which will be played here October 16 so that no stunts will be left out. "The best stunts Saturday were not taken because there was not enough film," he explained.

The head cheerleader, apologising for the failure of the bucking bronco stunt, said he rushed the students too much in trying to keep up with the band.

New Group Plans To Aid Thurmond In Hot Campaign

By Jim Dickinson

Campus States' Rights Democrats will gather at 7:30 Monday evening in the main lounge of Graham Memorial for the purpose of forming a new organization, the Young States Rights Democrats Club.

Spokesmen for the group said yesterday the immediate purpose of the club is to insure a proper reception for J. Strom Thurmond, the States' Rights presidential candidate, in his appearance here for a speech in Hill hall on Tuesday night.

The group also announced its intention of spreading throughout the campus the principles and ideals laid down by the States' Rights Democratic party. The club's founders wish to extend an invitation to all students interested in the States Rights party in order that a good turnout will be seen on Monday night.

One spokesman said the new club intends to go "all out" as a campaign group for Gov. Thurmond and the States Righters—win or lose.

He added, "Our group believes it is the duty of every loyal Southerner who believes in the Southern way of life to aid Gov. Thurmond in every way at his command. The South has never had a better opportunity to teach the Democratic Party a much-needed lesson.

"Unfortunately the Democratic Party in the past few years has fallen into the hands of a few power-mad politicians of the North whose only interest in the party is to elect their 'yes' men by stirring racial strife among minority groups and by 'rabble rousing.'

Another local States Righter said that at the recent Democratic Convention "with smug self-assurance the Democratic National Committee gambled the Southern white vote in an effort to gain the Northern minority vote.

"One has only to ask anyone who attended the convention to find out that our Southern delegates were treated as poor relations and their rights trampled at every move."

A member of the new club expressed his belief that only through solidly backing Gov. Thurmond can the South hope to regain its political bargaining power and the respect of the nation.

"Only by bargaining the National Democrats away from minority rule," he asserted, "can we return the Democratic Party to the party founded by Jefferson, and party based on states rights which will respect and protect our way of life."

Freshmen Hear Talks On Campus Activities

By Charles Pritchard

Following an introduction to University extra curricular activities by eight speakers, Bill Miller, orientation committee chairman, presented a challenge to the new students in the second freshman assembly yesterday in Memorial Hall.

"The rest is up to you," the presiding officer said. He urged the new students to put into the activities of the campus "what you bring to Carolina."

A bit of humor was inserted in the program by Bob Coulter by putting up a two and one-half-minute argument for the time allowed to speak and by being "shot" by Miller after the three-minute-period. Coulter "got rid of the book" and told the students about the dramatic organizations of the University.

Dean Mackie enlightened the students on the honor organizations, pointing out the qualifications of scholastic ability required for membership.

"All three parties lead to better student government," Ernie House said of the Campus, Student and University political parties. He added that the political parties help students only if they participate.

Forensic organizations, including the Spanish, French and German clubs, the Carolina Forum and the Debate council, were reviewed by Charlie Long.

Freshman students were told that the continued success of the political activities depends upon the interest and support given them by the student body. Representing the Carolina Political Union, the International Relations club, the Collegiate Council of the United Nations, and the United World Federalists was Nat Williams.

Editor Ed Joyner of the Daily Tar Heel, explained the campus publication facilities including the Daily Tar Heel, the Yackety Yack, Carolina Quarterly and Tarnation.

It was pointed out by Pete Burkes, speaking on the place for religion on the campus, that religion holds a very important position in college life.

Fraternity rush period rules were outlined by Jack Thompson.

Faculty Meeting

The office of Chancellor announced yesterday that there will be a faculty meeting Friday October 8, at 4 o'clock in Howell hall.

Business will include the introduction of new members, information, and order of business for the year.

Carolina Girls Chosen to Enter Durham Jubilee

Miss Elizabeth Loyns and Miss Rebekah Huggins, two University students will represent Chapel Hill in the Tobaccoland Jubilee to be held in Durham this weekend it was announced by Mayor R. W. Madry yesterday.

The girls will compete in the contest for selection of Queen of Tobaccolina Jubilee Fashion Show at the Durham City Armory. Identity of the Queen, however, will not be revealed until the Coronation Ball tonight.

At the Fashion Show, Miss Huggins, a former student at Salem college, will be escorted by John Bipport, and Miss Loyns formerly of WCUNC will be escorted by John W. Ross. Judges for the contest in which 19 other girls will compete, will be Norman Cordon, former Metropolitan Opera star; Sam Selden, head of the Carolina Playmakers, and Mrs. A. T. West of Duke University.

Last year a Chapel Hill girl, Miss Elixabeth Hazlett now Mrs Richard Scott was chosen beauty Queen at the celebration.

Democrats Say Dewey Prefers Abolishment of Civil Service

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30—(UP)—The Democratic National Committee today accused Republican Presidential candidate Thomas E. Dewey of having said he would like to "abolish the civil service system."

A release from Democratic headquarters charged that the New York Governor attacked civil service employees during a private conference with Veterans Of Foreign Wars officials in his Albany office last February.

But Lyall Beggs, national commander in chief of the VFW who attended the conference, said in reply to questions that he "does not recall" hearing Dewey make the statements the Democrats attributed to the GOP nominee.

The Democratic release said Dewey "became enraged" when the VFW delegation recommended passage of a bill for automatic promotion of State civil service employes after 10 years service.

The release quoted Dewey as saying that "anyone who cannot advance himself in 10 years should be fired. . . if I had my way, I'd abolish the civil service."

Beggs said he "didn't get the impression that the Govenor was at all angry."

"He was just carrying on a conversation," the VFW chief said. "I got the impression he was strongly in favor of promotions based on merit, and against advancing people just on length of service alone."

Democratic headquarters did not say where it obtained its account of the conversation.

Signed For Themselves

Recently we heard a rather shocking remark, and it was that all the efforts of the Hague, the League of Nations, the Atlantic Charter, the United Nations and all other efforts of man to seek understanding and peace have been of no avail.

Why?

Because the signators were signing for themselves. The men who signed the great documents to give man peace did not represent the men for whom they were signing, only themselves.

Is the above thesis true? If so, the signers of the Constitution of the United States were also signing only for themselves, for they had no means by which they could get the full will of the people.

We believe the signators of the United Nations charter had every faith in their people and signed their names representing their people and their nations.

However, according to the thesis presented by the unknown intellectual, the peoples of the nations did not endorse the pacts and promises.

Evidence that the people might not have endorsed the deeds of their representatives can be gathered by looking at the world today. It is a world of cold suspicion, of hate and boiling war bubbles ready at any moment to burst. Only this time the bubbles are radio-active and will engulf all the world and its peoples.

The signators of the nations involved in the various agreements were truthfully sincere. Those men and women who are our leaders really thought that by their acts our world would be united as one. They were people who were sane and rational, and who realized that only through cooperation between all mankind can the world reach a point of relative security and peace.

Unfortunately there is an element of truth in our unknown observer's statement. Our leaders and representatives did sign for themselves. We the people have deserted their faith and have failed to back them up.

Our signators sought peace and we think war, suspicion, superiority and dominance.

It is only right that we must educate ourselves now so that we may understand what our representatives do and also be able to give rational support for any future moves toward peace. We must know what we want and then fight for it. We must be able to support our leaders intelligently unless we desire and want to sink into the morass of wars and more wars to the total destruction of ourselves and all mankind.—L.K.

To Arms, To Arms!

The lax administration has, as usual, failed to accomlish its acknowledged duty. We refer to the recent rains that have inundated the campus, causing pediatric disaster to the student body, not to mention cranial drenchings and similiar inconveniences.

With faculty members known to have rain-making powers, it is obvious that they must have rain-stopping authority. Let them be hauled out of their dusty little rooms, force them to cease their study of the schmoo situation and turn to practical things. Now is the time for rain-stopping dances in full regalia, for mysterious incantations at midnight, for dire curses directed against the black sky.

Let the seldom-busy Rainmaking Department of the University earn its keep in matters of practical consideration! Let the notorious administration rise in defense of the students! Enough time has been wasted, enough students have suffered! —B.L.

Note To Pan Hel

With a mad week of rushing almost behind them, during which they have been freshly impressed with all the evils that accompany a short, hurried rush period, the sororities by now should be ready to put pressure on the Pan Hellenic council to alter rules which now govern taking in of new members.

Three days of smiling continuously at one face after another while faces and names blur into a hodge podge of confusion is too unstable a foundation upon which to base two years of close sisterhood.

The fraternities, also faced with this problem, last year moved to lengthen their rushing periods in order that both members and prospective pledges may have a better opportunity to meet each other and to arrive at an unhasty decision.

We suggest that the Pan Hellenic council start now toward working out some such improvement for sorority rushing.

Odds And Ends

By Helen Highwater

ON CAMPUS—

EFFECTIVE: Bill Miller has found an effective way to stop long winded speakers. When Bob Coulter exceeded his three-minute time limit while addressing freshman assembly yesterday, Miller calmly shot him, and Tom Cunningham just as calmly dragged the carcass off the stage. Five other speakers took note and shortned their talks.

INEFFECTIVE: Dortch Warriner has come up with a novel but not recommended method for meeting coeds. Walking from the Y with coffee cup in hand he stumbled and splashed the contents on a coed's coat. Always the gentleman, Warriner apologized, offered to pay for the cleaning, and asked her name. All he got was, "N. D." and "I'll have it cleaned myself, thank you."

BIG JOKE: Then there's the one about the freshman who remarked "They didn't tell me about the Chapel Hill rain until after I was accepted.

WISHFUL THINKING: W. C. Bostic, III, of Forest City must have been a bit flustered when he filled out an application for one of the student organizations. He gave his address as 220 Alderman. Wonder if Sarah Turlington and Mary Beth Lockwood know about their new roommate?

PLEDGE STUNTS: Dating couples who have had their "gooodnights" interrupted can blame it on the Lambda Chis. It's their pledges who have been scrubbing down the steps of Alderman and McIver dorms at closing time. And Pledges Leland Jones, Joe Duke and Ralph Davis were the soap box orators haranguing Y court crowds on the virtues of Truman, Thurmond, and Dewey yesterday. Two others, Mo Morrell and Johny York came up with a new version of Testudo, the missing Maryland mascot. This one was painted a violent red.

SLIGHT ERROR: A United Press wire story out of Atlanta yesterday reported Georgia betters rating Carolina as two-touchdown underdogs. Publications personnel immediately made up a pot and sent managing editor Chuck Hauser south to collect the mana. Ten minutes after he left, the UP made a correction with the odds favoring the Tar Heels.

MYSTERY MAN: A character named John is causing lifted eyebrows hereabouts. Joanne Carpenter kept him on third floor spencer for several days and was seen dancing with him at the veterans club. Latest word is he has moved his domicile to Sutton Heights.

OFF CAMPUS—

SOME ENTHUSIASM: At least one person had heart attack upon hearing the results of last week's football game. Via postcard from the University of Missouri, ex-UNC students Milton Jordon, Dan King and Richard Moseley of Asheville, and Charlie Craven of Greensboro report "When four good Tar Heels heard the score over the radio, they came forth with such shouts of glee that their landlady suffered a heart attack."

HEADED HOME: Claude Shannon, we hear, is on his way home to the Hill from Vancouver with a mighty swell little gal—namely the new Mrs. Claude Shannon.

HILLSICK: Charlie MacRae, another ex-Tar Heel, writes that he is now at Columbia University, "but not for long. Already my bones are itching for Chapel Hill."

IN TOWN—

TASTE TEASER: Probably the most interesting thing on Franklin street these days is the colorful "Pep" ice-cream window at the Varsity. Dishes of luscious looking sundaes, banana splits, sodas and fruit revolve on a pedestal backed up by mirrors. There's only one catch—it's all imitation.

But Do We Need A Law?

By George E. Sololsky

Miss Edna Lonigan raises an interesting point in an article in "Human Events":

"It can be true,' say the pseudo-liberals. 'The Grand Jury would have indicted. The FBI would have proved them guilty.' But guilty or what? Most American followers of the NKVD have committed no crime. They have violated no law. If every statement in the testimony of Miss Bently and Mr. Chambers is proved true, the Grand Jury will still find it difficult to indict. We have no law compelling government employees to propose only ideas that are for the good of their country."

That is why such committees as the Thomas, the Ferguson and the Revercomb committees are having such a difficult time of it. Let us take the Hiss case as an example. It has not been established that Alger Hiss is a Communist, a Communist agent, a Russian spy, an NKVD agent or even a fellow-traveler. All that has been proved about Hiss is that he once kept some very bad company and tried to cover up and failed.

We may assume that all those who decline to answer questions on the ground that to answer would incriminate them are guilty of some offense. Otherwise, nothing that they said could incriminate them. They have been advised by their lawyers that they have a legal and constitutional right to silence. We know from the investigations of the Dies committee, the Rapp-Coudert committee in New York, the California Legislative investigation, the Canadian report and other sources that Soviet Russia has been operating in this country, as she has in every country, through natives directed by Europeans. The more native the native, the better he is for the kind of work they need to have done.

This pattern is universal. One meets it in Korea, in Germany, in China, in Czechoslovakia. It is the American pattern. But it is not an illegal pattern. Certainly, Louise Bernstein - Bransten -- Berma Bernstein - Bransten - Berman has a right to serve mankind as she chooses. Cleverly she places herself on the lofty pedestal of noble service. Tommy Manville spends his money on gals and mink coats; she spends hers on the underdog. So does John D. Rockefeller, Jr. Is anything wrong? What about Mr. Adams? She legally refuses to answer about him—to answer would incriminate her. And that is her legal right. Was Mr. Adams an underdog or a spy?

While he was trapesing around this country, the Hearst press exposed his as a spy and tried to trace him down, but he was permitted to leave the United States with valuable documents. What is the FBI record on Adams? That secret has been guarded by President Truman and is only now being forced out. And so far there is no record that Mrs. Bransten did anything contrary to the law, except her own acknowledgement that if she talked it would incriminate her—and legally the statement does not raise the presumption of guilt no matter what you or I may think about it.

There is, however, this essential difference between John D. Rockefeller, Jr. and this lady. Through his foundations or personally, he has publicly accounted for his contributions. The American people can know how he spent his money. Mrs. B. B. B. has spent her money without notifying the public. That, too, is legally her right. She can spend it on dogs, cats, philosophies, artists, men and women, spies and jewelry. Communists or Prohibitionists as she will. It is all within the law.

So how does this nation protect itself against its own sons and daughters? Ask Jan Masaryk! Maybe now he knows.

This Changing World

Our Dog-Eat-Dog System

By Bill Robertson

Last week we discussed the defects in our educational system and revealed how they are linked up with our dog-eat-dog social system. This week we have a few remarks to make about this dog-eat-dog social system itself.

A great French writer, Anatole France, who later became a Communist, once defined "Western democracy" as that which gives a rich man and a poor man the right to sleep under the same bridge together. Now this definition isn't bad. It goes to the root of things. In our country, for example, we have formal democracy; but, in practice, this democracy does not exist. Why is this so?

Because, whether we like it or not, there are two important classes of people in our country-the owning class of people and the working class. The owning class has the time and money at its disposal to pretty well run (that is not a split infinitive) this "democracy" of ours. Thus we have the Taft-Hartley anti-labor legislation, and the removal of price controls against the wishes of the overwhelming majority of the American people. The working class is forced by its position in society to sell its ability to work to the owning class. (And we might add that a large number of intellectuals are forced by their position in life "to sell their souls" in defense of our dog-eat-dog social system.)

We need hardly add that the fact that the owning class controls the radios and newspapers makes it possible for them to develop utterly fantastic "war scares" from time to time. These "war scares" are supposed to take the people's minds off of the real day-to-day problems of high prices, low wages, no jobs, etc., and their causes.

The supposed enemy is the Soviet Union. (shades of Adolf Hitler!) But the Soviet Union is engaged in a "peace offensive" which will inevitably expose the whole Wall Street line. This almost happened last May during the exchange of votes between the American and Soviet governments. Vishinsky's latest proposal, in the general assembly, that armies and armaments of the leading powers be reduced by one third within a year, has our armaments kings and aeroplane manufacturers frantic—not to mention our textile kings who are looking for fat contracts for army uniforms.

But let us calmly appraise the real causes of the mad ravings of big business. During the war, big business 'earned" 52 billion dollars profit. Also, the ability to produce was increased by 50 percent. That is to say, during the war it was proved that as regards the ability to make things, our country is able to provide sufficient food, clothing, and shelter to take care of everybody. The problem is one of distribution.

Since the war, profits and high prices have "narrowed the market" and started us on the road to a severe economic crisis of "over-production"—and this at a time when millions of ordinary people would like to have a little more of the good things of life. The big shots, of course, seek a way out through a war boom (remember that 52 billion dollars, official government figures, Department of Commerce). Of course, seek a way out through a war boom (remember that 52 billion dollars, official government figures, Department of Commerce)

It is the duty of all patrotic Americans to help to expose the dangerous enemies in our midst, and thereby to check them. It is true that they have won a temporary victory in the "battle of ideas". They have temporarily convinced large numbers of us that war is inevitable. They have given us "the blues".

But World War II was not fought in vain. The forces of dying imperialism and race-hating cannibalism have received a crushing defeat. For example, in our country, World War II has given a tremendous impetus to the growing struggle of the oppressed Negro people for their full rights. The common people, everywhere, are on the march toward final victory-and with that victory will come the establishment of lasting peace for all mankind.

Chollie's Follies

Nuts And Nutshell

By Charlie Gibson

Toushay For Today: So you believe that international peace is to be maintained only through international understanding, tolerance, and, above all, good-will and friendliness, do you? Then name one foreign student on the University campus whom you know well enough to speak to?

Trustease: At the close of the last school year there was considerable student demand for the installment of Coke machines in men's dormitories. The YWCA did and does handle refills and profits from the Coke machines supervised by a responsible girl in each coed dormitory. It seemed logical for the YMCA to attempt to obtain similar drinking facilities for men this fall. Logical, that is, to everyone except the mad maharajahs behind South building. According to some University ruling or other, dormitories and Coke machines are not mixers. Please, trustees, don't confuse chivalry with sex discrimination. The ladies' own WCTU would surely be the last to discourage this surprising thirst for soft refreshment. Anyway the only dormitory accommodations that men and women use differently are certainly not Coke machines.

Heard Among The Herd: "Last year my roommate was a psychology major, and he brought home textbooks with titles like 'Living with Children'. This year's roommate—why, if he wanted to telephone Raleigh long distance, he'd burn a rate from Chapel Hill to Durham to save a nickel on the phone call."

UNsCenes: Helen Stephenson's designs for the upright piano in her sorority house would make Dali and Disney both dizzy. It seems Helen painted the entire pianoforte in bright green and then decided on gold splotches for the underside of its raised top . . . When George Sibold sported a loud red tie branded with the hand-painted head and horns of a Texas steer, folks said he bet on the game. Well, did he win or lose? . . Where was Tarzan Saturday? . . There's a box in the "Y" lobby with a card reading "Suggestions for improving the cheering squad." Oh, Gad! What more can hard-working old Norm Sper hope for—hula skirts? But maybe he better check card stunt photographs that all the State papers use next time to be sure black and white reproductions do Justice to his cardoings . . . Note the way one look at Pat Frizzell makes men's eyes frizzle . . . Newly pinned-up Martha Manning and Ed Davenport are taking the marriage course together this quarted . . .

What happened to the male Stray Greeks who planned last year to organize themselves as transfer fraternity men whose frats were not on our campus? Can't the IFC help them? . . Understand Tom Eller, Student Body president last year, is breathing easy again with his name in only one headline in the six DTH issues so far this year. Aftert all the headlines yelling for and at him in the past, Tom must feel like a corpse mummied away in Law School obscurity . . . Listen how often husky male voices answer the telephone in Smith dorm. tory . . . When Mattie Cantrell "Y" courts these days, she tries to find Earl Fitzgerald, the Grail member who promised her "a date with the best looking man on campus" for selling tickets to the Grail dance. Maybe she can borrow Joe Satterthwaite.

Actually found among freshmen files: the middle name "Iceman" . . . Afraid Dover Moore might strain himself, Rover Dover says he is trying hard to say something catchy enough to get his name in print. Harlan-Landed: "Now, class, archeology includes everything in the world that has ever been made by man."

By BILLY CARMICHAEL III

The New Dook

TWO OF CAROLINA'S POTENTIAL victims, Duke and Tennessee, will attempt mastery of each other tomorrow afternoon at Duke Stadium, and the boys in Durham are ballyhooing the contest up as the greatest thing in sports since the invention of the ball.

It will be the second time in less than a month that the Blue Devils have tried to fool all of the people some of the time. Their first venture was a masterful undertaking. They introduced the logical answer to the Carolina Choo Choo in the presence of one Fast Freight Freddy Folger. He was a new man thanks probably to Wheaties or a Charles Atlas course and had scored five touchdowns in a single afternoon's drills.

Folger along with a rising sophomore, Billy Cox, of Mount Airy, would be the pacing objects in the Blue Devils' "New Dook" attack. The Dukesters then crushed highly-thought of William and Mary six touchdowns to one in a practice scrimmage, and the eyebrows went up while the odds on the Methodists plummeted downward. Wallace Wade had another miracle team.

All That Glitters

WITH ALL THIS IN MIND, there was little else to believe, but that the Dukes would crush State college on opening day. The Wolfpack merry-go-round had been seriously slowed down by the yanking of several of their better brass ringers on Conference eligibility rulings. Yet, after the clash was over, neither team had gained anything unless they had cornered some of the State and seven point money.

The people had been duped. Duke was no better than they had been the year before, and Fast Freight Freddy, though possibly hampered by slight injury, hadn't added All-American bunting to his game. Duke was fielding almost the same team it had in 1947, a team that was forced to play a seven man line against Carolina for lack of sufficient backs for a five man secondary.

State, on the other hand, had survived their eligibility loss well enough to produce a team to shutout the Blue Devils, though also lacking the scoring punch themselves. The game was marked by the syncopated sloppiness of opening day, and both teams will acquire the enamel coating before the season progresses too far. All said and done, neither squad is anything to write anywhere about except on the sports page.

Everyone Wants In

DRIFTING BACK TO the Duke-Tennessee undertaking, the Volunteers didn't quite make it off on the right foot last week either. They fell before the Bilbistic boys of Mississippi State and seem to lack the backfield power they were able to put into action a couple of years ago. Which means the clash in Durham will boil down to a tussle between two teams battling to prevent being called has-beens. It's a choice between Dr. Pepper and Seven-UP.

No matter the outcome of this game, both of this teams will be capital threats to the Tar Heels. A Carolina team has never beaten Tennessee in Knoxville, and the Vols can't seem to see any reason for breaking a fine, old Southern tradition at a time like this. Duke it will be painfully remembered, stopped Carolina's last great Snavely team in 1935, 25-0, one dismal afternoon in Duke Stadium.

And with both teams having a poor outlook to a successful overall season, necks, skins, and jobs could be save with a glorious and explosive victory over the Tar Heels. Both teams will outdo a couple of hunting dogs in pointing for the Tar Heels.

T-Party To Come

THE REST OF THE CAROLINA opponents have the same little nasty thought in mind. State, with a moral victory over Duke, goes to Clemson this week to do further preparation for the coming Battle of Brothers.

Up in Williamsburg, two more foe of the future tangle in the person of Wake Forest and William and Mary. The Deacons won a shaky curtain raiser and then plopped before Boston College rather unimpressively last week. They are becoming more and more successful with their new offensive manuveurs, though, and should have a nice T- party planned for the Tar Heels next weekend. Peahead Walker presently lacks depth and a little spit-and-polish.

William and Mary, still looking for a silver lining in Jack Cloud and galaxy of other paper-figured stars, should slide by Wake Forest. They still have that sneak preview with Duke to live down, but some of the best shows have poor dress rehearsals. The Indians come to Chapel Hill for the first time since Carolina's colossal wartime flop team in 1945. They are a 1948 bowl team, highly-regarded but possessors of one of weakest Big Time schedules in the country.

Three More Customers

CAROLINA'S OTHER THREE CHALLENGERS haven't shown much luster this far, but it is hard to judge a football team on a single game. Jim Tatum's Maryland team, which was deprived of several molars through the pre-season loss of Lou Gambino, won its breather-opener and hasn't left the ship as yet. The Terps get a well-ranged shot at the Tar Heels between William and Mary and Duke.

Louisana State, still recovering mentally and physically from a homicidal hosing at the hands of since-banished Texas, could also prove it was all a mistake by upsetting the Tar Heels three weeks hence. They start the long road back this week against Rice, who will probably make the Bengals just twice as mad.

The remaining eleven is Virginia, who may receive the honor this year standing between the Tar Heels and their first perfect season in 50 years. The Cavaliers turned in a rather raunchy performance in being held to a tie by little Miami of Ohio. They engage VPI this weekend.

So goes Carolina's eight opponents after tomorrow. About Georgia? Why, even Sherman won't tackle that crowd and Georgia, too, all in the same day.

Tar Heels Board Overnight Train; Hold Light Drills

Heavy clouds that had overhung Navy Field throughout the first part of the week drifted away yesterday and Carolina's Tar Heels got in their first good outdoor drill of the week with only mud to mar their way. After a spirited two-and-one-half hour workout, the Snavely charges trooped into the Kenan Stadium field house, tired but confident.

Yesterday's drills climaxed the heavy work for the week and today's session will feature only light non-contact work. A dummy scrimmage, skull session, and pass defense drill are on the agenda for the final drill of the week.

The Tar Heels will leave here tonight to board the "Carolina Special" in Raleigh at 9:30 p.m. for the trip to Athens. The Snavelymen will return to Chapel Hill on Saturday night on what local supporters expect to be the "Carolina Victory Special".

The "bookies" are quoting Carolina to swamp the Bulldogs by 13 to 20 points. Despite this air of confidence held by outsiders Coach Snavely refuses to believe that his Tar Heels will have an easy time with their Georgia rivals. Wally Butts has never fielded a team that wouldn't stand up and play its best when the odds against them were at a peak and the "Gray Fox" looks for this season's team to be no exception.

The Bulldogs edged by Chattanooga's lowly Moccasins last Sabbath by a 14-7 margin, and looked ragged throughout the first 45 minutes of the game. The Georgians sprang to life in the final period and pushed across the double stripes twice to account for the victory and save themselves from an upset.

The entire Georgia team looked bad. The running of Joe Ceri and John Tillitski combined with the fine all-around work of versatile Bob Walston, offensive end and defensive safety man, supplied the Georgians only punch. Johnny Rauch, the Georgia passing wizard, wasn't himself at any time until the final few minutes when he started one scoring play and then tossed a 30-yard aerial to Walston to account for the second Bulldog tally.

The Georgians' offensive lineplay was very ragged and the Bulldogs managed to turn in a creditable overall passing and punting average only because of the lack of charging Mocs. Long pass defense was fairly good, but the visitors completed short tosses almost at will.

Chapel Hill Eleven To Play Mebane Today

Chapel Hill High School will entertain Mebane High in a North Central conference football game this afternoon at 3 p.m. in Emerson Field. Carolina students may see this game for 50 cents.

The Wildcats will be seeking their third consectutive victory this week as they have registered previous wins over Methodist Orphanage and Oxford High. Chapel Hill operates from the single-wing with tailback Collier Hill and fullback Bill Butler supplying the offensive punch.

UP Writer Picks Carolina to Win, Vols to Top Duke

By Oscar Fraley

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—(UP)—Juggling football and baseball statistics—Fraley's Follies, or picking the football winners for the weekend while considering the series situation.

Purdue over Northwestern—A lot of people figure Northwestern, which roughed up U.C.L.A., will catch Purdue "down after that heart breaking loss to Notre Dame. But a team which fought the Irish to a finish should have what it takes to bounce right back.

Ohio State over U.S.C.—Someday the Pacific Coast is going to win one from the Big Nine, but Ohio State, which upset strong Missouri last week (picked by Old Fearless) seems to have enough to carry on the precedent.

The Midwest.

Notre Dame over Pitt—Now take the World Series.

Minnesota over Nebraska—It's a National League year.

Indiana over Iowa—They've alternated since 1940.

Michigan over Oregon—But it looks black for the Braves.

The East.

Army over Lafayette—Take the betting.

Columbia over Harvard—Cleveland is a 9 to 5 favorite.

Navy over Cornell—The Red sox Would be 7 to 5.

Penn over Dartmouth—And the Yanks only even money.

The West.

California over St. Mary's—In man to man betting.

Washington over Oregon State—It's two to one.

UCLA over Idaho — Meaning you bet $10 on the Red Sox.

Stanford over Washington State—To win $5.

The Southwest.

TCU over Arkansas — It's a tough way to make a buck.

SMU over Texas Tech—'Cause those Braves will be rugged.

Rice over LSU — And they'll take a lot of beating.

The South.

North Carolina over Georgia—The American League has the edge.

Vanderbilt over Alabama—In pitching.

Tennessee over Duke — In hitting.

Tar Heel Swimmers Work Hard Under New Coach, Ralph Casey

By Bill Burgess

Carolina's swimming team, under the able guidance of Ralph Casey, their new swimming coach, has begun daily workouts in Bowman-Gray Pool. Coach Casey, who was assistant coach last year, has taken over the helm as head coach while Dick Jamerson is on leave of absence from the University, working on his doctor's degree at Columbia University.

There is, however, no doubt in the minds of the local sports experts that Coach Casey will succeed, for Casey, the former mentor of the aquatic team at V. M. I., has been producing outstanding swimming teams and individual stars for years.

The locals, who were undefeated in dual meet competition last year and were Southern Conference champions, have 28 lettermen, being put through a vigorous training schedule. Assisting Casey in moulding another powerhouse is Mike Morrow, Carolina co-captain of the past year and workhorse of the squad for the past four years.

Tar Heel supporters must realize, however, that Casey is destined to a season of hard work if the locals are going to repeat the performances of last year, for Carolina had the best aggregation ever produced in the South last year. To add to his worries of developing another outstanding team, the coach has three other main obstacles.

The first of these is that he has lost four of his stellar performers who were always capable of earning points in every meet. These absentees are Morrow; Mac Eerle, second place winner in diving at last year's conference meet; Bill Pritchard, runner-up in the 50-yd. freestyle; and Bob Ousley, conference breastroke champion. Second, is that there will be no new talent to choose from because all incoming freshmen will be members of Bob Ousley's freshmen squad for the first since before the war.

The third is an impediment that was not forseen last year. The polio outbreak in North Carolina stymied the summer workouts and competition of almost every member of the squad. This meant none of the tankmen were able to work to improve their performances and that they also reported to practice far out of shape.

Two Tar Heels, however, were able to distinguish themselves during the summer. Jesse Greenbaum, co-captain during the past season, won the 100-yd. freestyle at the South Atlantic Meet with the excellent time of 53.6 seconds. Outstanding performances were also turned in by Jim Thomas, last year's freshmen sensation. Jim was the victor in the National Junior AAU 100-meter backstroke and the National Junior AAU 150-meter individual medley.

Labor Act Is Assailed By Truman in Illinois

EN ROUTE WITH PRESIDENT TRUMAN, Sept. 30—(UP)—President Truman campaigned through the southern Illinois coal country today, labelling the Taft-Hartley Act a "slave labor law" and protraying the Republicans as a big business party rejoicing at prospects of "another boom and bust spree."

The coal mines are thick in the territory through which the president traveled in a swift caravan, and most of them are worked by thousands of John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers, as yet unpledged to any candidate in particular.

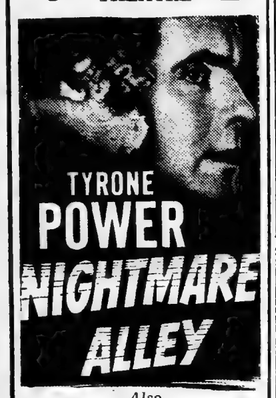
At most stops, the President hammered at contrasting the Democratic and Republican records on labor legislation, and painted the Republicans as a "Wall Street' party.

Heading across toward Louisville, Ky., for his major address of the day at 9 p.m. cst, (10 p.m. est) the President left his train at Mt. Vernon, Ill., early today. Then he traveled rapidly through Benton, West Frankfort, Herrin, Carbondale, Marion, Harrisburg, El Dorado and Carmi, where he rejoined the presidential special.

"Big business is rubbing its hands in the hope of having another boom - and - bust spree under a Republican administration," he said at Carbondale in the lengthiest of the day's rapid-fire speeches.

"Already, the big business Republicans have begun to nail the consumer to the wall with spikes of Greed."

Mr. Truman told the miners and their families that Republican big businessmen "are in the same greedy state of mind that brought the crash of 1929 and the Hoover depression."



"Then Wall Street had the spree and they had a headache that lasted for years," he said, "Are we going to let that happen again?"

He charged that "big business Republicans have set an economic trap for the American consumer."

"They have baited the tray with glib assurances that everything will be all right if you just let nature take care of everything," he said. "And when they say 'nature,' they mean themselves."

The president charged that the Republican campaign funds are coming from "big businessmen who know that if the Republicans win, they will get their money back many times over—until the crash."

Stump Speaker Favors Truman

At 10:45 yesterday morning a student who gave his name as J. W. Doakes stood on the South building steps crying out in a loud voice, "Remember folks, remember the initials H.S.T. It stand for Harry S. Truman. Vote for him in November."

A laughing crowd of 150 students stood in front of the arm-waving, hoarse-voiced political stump speaker. What made them laugh was that he was exhorting them to go down and meet J. Strom Thurmond, Dixicrat aspirant for the presidency and a life on the new White House porch.

"Doakes", a Wilmingtonian, was using the arrival of Thurmond as a political springboard to advance the cause of Democratic nominee Truman. Joe said to a cheering group "A true man will vote for a true party. . .the real Democratic party which favors Harry S. Truman! The Democrats have given us everything we have today. What have the Republicans ever done for the young people?"

The ..ten ..minute-to-eleven bell rang as the crowd jeered and cheered Joe Doakes, and off in the distance a faint shout cut through "Join the Army!" In a few minutes the crowd had dispersed and once more the campus walks resounded to the squish of many feet.

Pharmacy School Gives Supper

The School of Phamacy will honor its new students with a buffet supper, Friday afternoon at 5:30 on the lawn behind Howell Hall. This is an annual affair designed as a means of bringing together the new and old students with the aim of promoting friendships and closer associations within the School.

John Hood, President of the Pharmacy Student Boby heads the planning committee, assisted by Jean Snyder, Peggy Costner Simmons, Floyd Jones, and Henry Smith.

All Pharmacy students and faculty are cordially invited to attend.

Dewey Says That The Russians Should Not Bluff United States

SALT LAKE CITY, Sept. 30.—(UP)—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey declared tonight that the United States should treat Russia with friendship and fairness as a strong equal, but should not be bluffed or bullied.

The Republican presidential candidate laid down this dictum in a major foreign policy speech prepared for delivery in Salt Lake City's famed Temple Square Tabernacle and broadcast nationally (NBC 9:30 p.m. est).

It was a preview of the foreign policy which the world could expect in the event that Dewey is elected to the White House this year.

"The best way for us to get along with the Soviet leaders is to deal with them as strong people and by doing so to restore their respect for us," Dewey said.

"We shall deal with the Soviets as with all other nations in a spirit of friendship and fairness, but we should make it perfectly plain that now or hereafter we do not intend to be bullied or bluffed."

Despite the "steady march of Communist aggression" and the new crisis confronting the world in the United Nations deliberations in Paris at the present time, Dewey declared:

"It is not too late to develop and pursue a consistent and effective foreign policy to make the Soviet understand that, just as we intend to deal fairly and honestly with others, so we insist that others must deal fairly and honestly with us."

In the Paris negotiations, he said, "lie our hopes that cruelty and aggression will yield to the spirit of firmness and justice."

The GOP candidate, who has maintained direct contact with the Paris meeting, guaranteed that there will be no appeasement. That road, he said, "can lead only to slavery or to war."

The appeasement of Hitler at Munich 10 years ago, he added, can be blamed for the evil forces which have since racked the world with pain and suffering.

Although Dewey made the speech as part of his western campaign tour and described world peace as the greatest domestic issue facing the country, he said it was a problem which must be dealt with "entirely without partisanship and in the highest realm of statesmanship."

"It would serve no useful purpose to recall tonight how the Soviet has conquered millions of people as a result of the failures of statesmanship," he said.

"It does not advance our purpose to discuss the manner in which the Soviet has been able to pick the fruits of diplomatic victories that were yielded up at that series of secret conferences culminated in Potsdam."

Phi Delts Apply To "Adopt" Child

The N. C. Beta chapter of Phi Delta Theta recently announced that it has made application for the "adoption" of a war orphan through the Foster Parents' Plan for War Children.

It was explained by James Waldron, reporter for the chapter, that the "adoption" is through financial aid only and helps provide food, clothing and other essentials to the child for the period of one year.

Waldron also stated that upon receipt of the application, which states the preferred nationality, age and sex of the child, the organization sends its sponsor the history and a picture of the child.

The Plan was organized in 1937 to care for children regardless of race, creed or nationality. Since its creation, the organization has expanded with agencies being established in England, France, Malta, Italy, Belgium, Holland, Poland, Czechoslavakia and China.

Each child is helped as an individual according to its needs, and receives food, shelted, clothing, medical-dental care, and attends school. The children live in colonies, with private families, or with their own porents, if they have any.

More than 50,000 children have been aided by this organization, which lists among its sponsors dignitares and social leaders throughout the nation.

ager, and Charlie Gibson, managing editor.

John Hough, who is handling the subscription campaign, has divided the work into four phases. The first phase includes the sale at the YMCA building, which will continue until October 9, and a canvas of the girls' dorms, on October 4 and 5.

The second phase will include sororities, October 3 to 9, and the whole town of Chapel Hill, October 6 to 9. The third phase will be the men's dorms, Victory Village, the fraternities, and the trailer courts. This will be from November 1 through 6.

The fourth phase will include a statewide campaign beginning November 1.

The Quarterly, a sixty-four page magazine, will be published once each quarter, and the subscriptions are being offered at one dollar for the school year.

Editor Sessions has sent out a call for volunteers who would like to do some book reviewing, and campaign manager Hough said last night that any students who would like to help with the campaign would be welcome.

Tar Heels To Battle Georgia In Athens Today

New Editorial Staff Released By Mag

By Mark Sumner

The board of executive editors who will handle material submitted to the new Carolina Quarterly magazine was announced yesterday by editor Bill Sessions. The newly formed student literary endeavor is engaged in a twin drive to gain subscriptions and to find material for publication.

The editorial board will include: Vergie Matson, fiction editor, Frank Groseclose, poetry editor, Harry Snowden and James Rathburn, feature editors. Charlie Gibson, who has long been active in student publication's circles, is serving as managing editor.

Stories May Be Mailed

Sessions said that articles, stories, and poetry may be mailed to the Carolina Quarterly, c-o Graham Memorial, Chapel Hill, or the material may be brought in person to the magazine's office in Graham Memorial. Photographs are not being solicited at present.

John Hough, assistant business manager who is leading the campaign for subscriptions, pointed out that the Quarterly is to be entirely self-supporting, although its inital operations are underwritten by the student legislature. "For that reason," he said, "the subscription campaign is doubly important."

Student Helpers

Hough, who announced his four phase campaign two days ago, listed the following students who are helping with the drive:

Bill Koehnline, John F. West, Lindsey Stricklin, Sam Hirsch,

YDC Will Motor To Meet Truman

The Young Democratic Club of the University of North Carolina held its first meeting of the fall quarter in the Grail Room of Graham Memorial on Thursday, September 30.

The meeting was called to order by the club's new President, "Sandy" Harris. Various committees were organized and a report on the State YDC convention, which was held in Greensboro on September 16, 17 and 18, was read by Bill Cooke, delegate of the local chapter.

A resolution, calling for the support of all democratic candidates, both state and national, was introduced and adopted by the club members.

The group is planning a motor cavalcade to Raleogh on October 19 to greet President Truman when he arrives in the state on his campaign tour.

Anyone wishing to join the cavalcade should contact Bill Cooke at 208 Grimes.

UNC Freshmen Attend Dance At WC Tonight

Freshmen at Carolina will tonight emigrate to Greensboro where the freshmen at Woman's college will entertain at a dance in their honor in Rosenthall gymnasium at 8 p.m.

Arranged by the orientation committee in cooperation with Graham Memorial, the dance is open only to freshmen from Carolina, and all those attending must have identification. Freshmen name tags or certificates secured from GM's travel agency on the second floor will serve as admission.

Special buses will transport those not going in cars, to leave from GM at 6 p.m. Only those who have secured tickets should plan to go on these buses, which will return after the dance.

First affair of its kind this year, the dance will be repeated if it proves successful tonight. All those attending should go immediately to the gymnasium, located on Walker Ave. at the western end of the campus where the girls acting as hostesses will be waiting .

Lest He Be Left Out

TEANECK, N. J., Oct. 1—(UP)—Louis Rich enrolled at Bergen Junior College today. A retired businessman, Rich is 85 years old.

"This is an atomic age," he said. "You can't be left out of the swim."

Picture Schedule For Yack Fails

Students are not keeping their Yack appointments and are disrupting the schedule of the Yackety Yack, Bill Duncan, editor, said yesterday.

According to Duncan, the photographers have only taken 723 pictures to date, 500 under the 1200-photos quota set for today.

"IF this failure to keep appointments continues, the 1949 Yack will not be ready for distribution May 3," Duncan declared. Duncan urges all students to come in on schedule.

Fruchtman Joins UNC Music Staff

Efrim Fruchtman, Juliard School of Music graduate, has joined the University Music department as an assistant instructor in music 1. Fruchtman has also attended the University of Florida and Teachers College of Columbia University.

At the University of Florida he was assistant to the director of the band and orchestra. Mr. Fruchtman has appeared as soloist with the University of Florida symphony orchestra, and has done concert work in the south and performed with chamber music groups in and around New York. He will present his first recital here on October 10 in Hill Hall.

Girls Glee Club Set for Tryouts

Tryouts for the women's glee club have been extended through the entire week of October 4-8. Women interested in glee club work who were not able to try out due to sorority rushing are urged to see Paul Young in Hill Hall, room 207, between 4 and 5 p.m. any afternoon.

The women's glee club rehearses Tuesdays and Thursdays at 5 o'clock. It will make its first appearance of the year at the Founder's Day program.

Choral Group Plans Rehearsal

The Chapel Hill Choral club will hold its initial rehearsal of the fall quarter Monday, October 4, in Hill hall, room 108. The club is a volunteer organization of students, faculty, and townspeople. All singers are invited to participate. Paul Young is musical director of the group.

Mendelssohn's "Elijah" is the work to be performed by the group at its annual fall concert.

NC Symphony Set For Membership Drive This Month

Final plans for the coming Orange County membership drive of the North Carolina Symphony Society were effected Tuesday evening September 28, at a meeting held in Gerrard hall, Chapel Hill. About 20 committee members were present and Norman Cordan, chairman of the Chapel Hill and Orange County Symphony Committee, presided.

Swalin Speaks

Albin Pikutis, business manager of the N. C. Symphony outlined plans for the membership drive which opens October 7, stressing the fact that membership holders were entitled to attend any concert by the orchestra throughout the state and calling attention especially to cencerts in Durham and Raleigh. Benjamin Swalin, conductor of the Orchestra, spoke informally to the group.

Enlargements of the permanent Orange County board was suggested and 12 new members elected. Acting secretary Harold Weaver, was elected as permanent secretary and Miss Sally McNider, appointed chairman of the telephone committee.

Membership Cards

The opening date for the local drive has been set for Thursday, October 7, a week sooner than the date previously announced. General membership will be offered at $2.40 each, tax included and student membership for high school, university, and veterans wives will be sold at $1.20. Each membership card will entitle the holder to attend not only the Chapel Hill concerts, but all other performances throughout the state sponsored by the North Carolina Symphony Society.

Officers of the Chapel Hill and Orange County committee are; Norman Cordan, chairman; Mrs. A. C. Burnham, co-chairman; Miss Emily Pollard, co-chairman; Harold Weaver, secretary; E. Carrington Smith, treasurer; Robert Madry and Mrs. Arthur McKimmon, publicity. Children's concert chairman is Mrs. Fred McCall.

Plenty Smoke But Shortage of Fire

An electric stove that had been turned on for at least 20 minutes, locked doors, and a lot of smoke were the major opponents of the Chapel Hill fire department yesterday when they answered a call to East Franklin street.

The fire, at the residence of Miss Mary Manning, sent forth more smoke than it did flames.

Originating in the kitchen of an apartment just rented by Mrs. Mebane, the fire had spread very little when the firemen arrived. A shelf over the electric stove had been badly burned and the walls around the stove were hot.

The electric stove and a frigidaire had just been installed yesterday morning. In the afternoon some boxes had been piled on the stove. The boxes were thought by firemen to have contained some books and canned goods.

For Draftees

Roy Armstrong, director of admissions, reported yesterday that students could register for selective service when they reach their 18th birthday, or one week later, each Thursday in room 208 South building from 9 until 4:30. This is a service offered to University students to enable them to register without leaving Chapel Hill.

Medical Exam

Pre-medical students, eligible to enter Medical school in September of 1949, who plan to take the Medical College Admissions test on October 30, must register on or before October 12 with Mrs. McGoogan of the University Testing Service at 102 Peabody.

UVA to Air Game

Officials of the Vets Club announced yesterday that the club will open this afternoon at 2 o'clock in order that any students who wish to, may listen to the Georgia-Carolina game.

The broadcast is scheduled to begin at 2:15.

Renewals Due For Students Who Own Cars

J. R. Long of the state highway division yesterday warned that people whose names begin with the letters E, F, and G are not renewing their drivers licenses.

Long said that all licenses for people whose names begin with these letters must be renewed by January 1.

"If people wait until mid November like they usually do, they'll be caught in the rush and will have to spend several hours down here getting their licenses," Long pointed out.

Any student who accepts employment during school will be required to procure an N. C. license. Anyone who has had an examination since July, 1945 will only have to fill in the form and pay the required fee. But if he has not renewed his license since then he must take the road test, eye test, road sign test and written examination. If he has a valid out of state license the procedure is the same.

Long also said that professors from out-of-state who are now employed here must have an N. C. license. He said that licenses may be procured for the first time no matter what letter your name starts with. Long is in the courtroom at Town hall Wednesday and Thursday every week.

Parking Tickets Dime Per Dozen

RICHMOND, Va. Oct. 1—(UP)—Irritated traffic court officials waited for Edward V. Randall of Sandston to turn up with an alibi today, and warned that it better be terrific.

Randall has two court attachments against him, plus 16 summonses. Police explained they got tired of hanging tags on his car for parking and hauled it away on the 16th ticket. When Randall came to the station to get the car, he was given 16 summonses for the 16 tickets he hadn't bothered about.

He was due to appear last Tuesday to explain about the tickets. He didn't show up and a court attachment was issued for him. He was supposed to appear again yesterday to answer speeding charges, but again he failed to appear.

Carolina Favored In Important Tilt

By Buddy Vaden

ATHENS, Ga., October 1—The University of North Carolina football squad is due to arrive here tomorrow morning at 7:15 on a special train from Raleigh, North Carolina. The Tar Heels, 38 strong, will make their headquarters in the Holman hotel. Accompanying the players are Coaches Carl Snavely, Russ Murphy and Max Reed, along with managers and trainers.

The Tar Heels will face Coach Wally Butts' Georgia Bulldogs here in Sanford Stadium tomorrow afternoon at 2:30. Pronounced only in fair physical condition by the trainers, the Tar Heels will put the same offensive and defensive teams on the field that saw action against Texas last weeks in Chapel Hill, with the possible exception of end Bob Cox, who has seen only light workouts throughout the past weeks.

Starting Lineup

Mainstay of the Carolina offensive team will be tailback Charlie Justice, who had a hand in all five of the Tar Heels tallies last week. Justice, already a candidate for All-American honors, will be in the backfield with Hosea Rodgers, fullback, wingback Johnny Clements, and blocking back Don Hartig.

The Carolina line, which held the Longhorns to less than 50 yards on the ground in the Tar Heels' opener, will be the same, with Art Weiner and Cox or Mike Rubish at the ends, Chan Highsmith and Ted Hazelwood at the tackles, guards Bob Mitten and Sid Varney, and center Dan Stiegman.

Using a two-team system inaugurated last year against William and Mary, Coach Snavely will have as his defensive starting team ends Ken Powell and Mike Rubish, Haywood Fowle and Len Szafaryn at tackles, Bill Wardle and Larry Klosterman at guards, Irwin Holdash and Bobby Weant backing the line, Bill Flamisch and Johnny Clements at halfbacks, and safety Bill Maceyko.

Georgia Always Rugged

Georgia, always a rugged team for the Tar Heels to tackle, will be the underdogs in tomorrow's contest on the basis of their showing against little Chattanooga. Although the Bulldogs won the game by one touchdown, they did not show much power in doing so. On the other hand, the Tar Heels climbed to the top of the national football rating list with their impressive 34-7 triumpt over a supposedly latent Texas aggregation.

In the two Georgia- Carolina encounters last season, one in the Sugar Bowl, each team was credited with a win. The Bulldogs came out on top in the bowl game, 20-10, while the Tar Heels won the regular season game in Chapel Hill, 14-7.

Georgia Spirit Seems Listless To UNC Invaders

By Chuck Hauser

ATHENS, Ga., Oct. 1.— Fifteen hundred University of Georgia students held a half-hearted pre-Carolina game pep rally here tonight at which two scheduled speakers. Coach Wally Butts and team co-captain Weyman Sellers, failed to appear.

Nine cheerleaders and a 50 piece band had little success in attempts to bring out a show of school spirit. When a michrophone wielding Georgia cheering squad members asked the throng, "Are we going to beat Carolina tomorrow?" A cynical "Like hell" could be heard from a student in the background over a weak "yes" from the meager representation of the 7,000 member student body.

Butts No Speak

After several cheers and songs accompained by the loud if not harmonious band, repeated requests for Wallace Butts to speak as scheduled were greeted with silence from the crowd. Apparently Sellers decided not to speak, either, for the next step in the preceedings was a demand that all freshmen, not the entire pep rally crowd, immediately join in a "victory" snake dance around a huge bonfire which was the only big and exciting event of the evening.

The cheerleaders, male and female, and a handful of freshman were hardly able to form a half circle around the blazing pile of boxes and timber.

At 8:30 tonight, after the Georgia pep rally closed down shop, two cars of Carolina students pulled into town, apparently the first of many to arrive this evening and the impromptu pep rally they tossed at the edge of the Georgia campus was enough to put the Bulldogs to shame. As far as enthusiasm, if not actual volume, was concerned.

Spirit All Tar Heels

It was obvious that there would be plenty of spirit in thens before the night was over, but it would be all Tar Heel spirit.

Crys for the band to play "Dixie" were finally heeded toward the end of the 40 minute rally, followed shortly after by

Wheelchair Student Enjoys Life at Carolina; Sees Good Will on Campus as Great Attribute

By Charlie Gibson

In spite of scaplers, thieves, and what-have-you, Iris Kiem is one Carolina student who belives that there is far-reaching good-will on the University campus.

Iris brought her wheelchair along when she left hame— Miami, Fla. and came here this fall to do graduate work in bacteriology. She had already spent one year at Northwestern University and had received her B. S. in biology last June from the University of Miami.

At the lattter school Iris was befriended and helped by Alpha Phi Omega, a service fraternity connected with the Scout movement in America. There whenever Iris faced class building traps and bewilderment, a member of APO was always on hand to lift both her wheelchair and her spirit.

The local APO has been inactive for several years. However, one of its members, Bill Roth, proved to be as interested in aiding Iris as he is in soon reforming his Scout fraternity here. Each morning and evening Roth rolls Iris from Kenan to Spencer dormitory for her meals before Rodney Glascow, another student, wheels her back again.

Lunch Iris takes with her to class. From 8:00 to 1:00 o'clock she works in the medical school building, a heaven of well-appreciated elevators. Afternoons she spends either there at research or back in her dormitory room.

To cross campus, Iris drives a '40 Buick with specially-devised hand controls. Her wheelchair is collapsible and can be folded on the driver's seat beside her. However, she does require assistance in getting from the chair to the seat. W. T. Sloan, Chapel Hill crief of police, plans to reserve a parking spot for her near the Kenan entrance.

"I like to see a little of everything that goes on," Iris says, "especially the Tar Heel football games." Last Saturday she sat on the sidelines in front of the student cheering section; now she is determined not to miss a home game in Kenan Stadium. She is a movie-goer, too, although heavy school work has kept her too busy to try local theaters as yet. "Just so I can find a seat on the aisle."

"Just as soon as you meet Iris," a dormmate of hers said, "you are impressed with her everygay disposition and sincere appreciation for the little things people find to do for her."

Warriner Works Hard for Student Government; Friends Give Him Rating of 'Good' Politician

'Editor's note: This is the first in a series of Daily Tar Heel feature articles on personalities on the Carolina campus.)

By Bill Buchan

Dortch Warriner is a campus politician. This, of course is no novelty among the dozens of self-made politicoes on campus, but Warriner is unusual in the line because he rates as a "good politician". Good politicians are rated as such, because in the opinion of their friends and associates they work not only for their individual party but for the betterment of the campus student government as a whole.

Warriner's rise as a campus "wheel" began almost immediately after he transferred here last September from Berea College in Kentucky. He joined the Student party and quickly rose through the ranks of the group until he was appointed to fill a vacancy in the student legislature in January.

In the legislature, he served as a member of Jess Dedmond's election committee and took an active part in the writing of the elections bill which was passed by the legislative group last spring. He was elected as treasurer of the SP.

Warriner, a political science major, is an active member of the Naval ROTC and was one of the number of Tar Heels who participated in cruises this summer. His particular cruise, in company with buddy John Stump, was aboard the U.S.S. Astoria and took the boys to Honolulu, San Francisco, Seatle, San Diego and other cities along the Pacific coast.

He is a member of the Dialetic Senate, having served as chairman of the orientation and membership committees and is at present a member of the membership group. Last spring he and Marshall Pennix copped the Intramural debate crown for Whitehead Dormitory, where the two were living at the time. Dortch rooms with Pinnix this year in 313 Grimes.

Mentioned occassionally as a potential presidential candidate (a rumor which he denies), Warriner is getting a close-up view of top student government problems as a member of the student body president's coalition cabinet and as a member of the highly successful committee

His views and opinions on local political questions are respected and sought out by student government workers, both SP men and those belonging to the University or Campus parties.

That Dortch Warriner is ambitious, that he plans big things for himself after his college life is finished, is obvious in his everyday work and plans. He's one of the many hard workers here who are interested only in improving our student government for the benefit of the entire student body. He's a man with ideas and he's definitely a man to watch.

That It Not Be Vain

Religion plays a vital part in the Carolina way of life. Here in Chapel Hill are churches of many denominations, and all of them take a special interest in the students of the University. Tomorrow these churches will join with other churches throughout the world in the observance of World Wide Communion Sunday. In the hope that all students of the University will take part in this service, we are printing here a call to worship from the Reverend Bernard Munger, chairman of the Chapel Hill Council of Churches:

It would be impossible to estimate the total number of Christians who will go to churches of 150 denominations in over 50 nations on Sunday, October 3, to bear symbolic witness to the unity of the Church as they share in the celebraton of World Wide Communion Sunday. This special day on the calendar of churches throughout the world will take on new meaning this year because of the recent Amsterdam Assembly of the World Council of Churches. The "Amsterdam Message" will find partial expression in this common observance of one of the sacraments of the Church Universal. A portion of the "Amsterdam Message" pertinent to this occasion, reads:

"Here at Amsterdam we have committed ourselves afresh to Christ, and have covenanted with one another in constituting this World Council of Churches. We intend to stay together. We call upon Christian congregations everywhere to endorse and fulfill this covenant in their relations with one another. . . . Our coming together to form a World Council will be vain unless Christians and Christian congregations everywhere commit themselves to the Lord of the Church in a new effort to seek together, where they live, to be His witnesses and servants among their neighbors!"

The churches of Chapel Hill urge you to begin your affirmative response to this "call" by being in attendance at the church of your choice on Sunday when this high occasion is celebrated.

Cry Thief

The University should be the last spot for a high incidence of petty thievery, but evidently, no place is immune.

When raincoats, hats and books cannot be left unguarded safely, perhaps it is a misnomer to term stealing as petty. It is absolutely necessary to leave personal gear outside of the dining hall or classrooms and therefore every student is a potential victim.

In Dickensian England, it was the custom on discovery of a theft for the people to echo the cry, "Thief," as a warning. The only way to stop sneak thievery on the campus is for every student to appoint himself as much a guardian of his fellow's property as his own. Certainly no one should have any qualms about enforcing the honor code to the letter in such cases.

The sneak thief is a coward who is everywhere loathed both for his nature and his tactics. The skill of his brother jackal, the pickpocket, may be admired; burglars command awe for their daring and the deeds of murderers have inspired the plots of dramas, but the disgust which a sneak thief deserves cannot be expressed. Neither passion nor skill distinguish his acts, only greed for other's property.

Odds And Ends

ON CAMPUS: We are jealous! Here we have been beaming over a beautiful opportunity to be the early birds on campus to wish you good morning, and now we have competition. Just who is that character with the bugle in the middle of the women's quadrangle every morning at a yea early hour? It's fine for him to play us weary coeds to sleep with "Taps," but must he horn in on our early risers club monopoly?

SINCE "ALL God's chillen Got Shoes," and all Carolina students have something of nubs left where there were once feet, let's get the two together and brush up on our rhumba, tango, fox trot, or just plain learn to dance. Lib Stoney says she has the perfect lessons that will run our popularity gauge way up sky high; so why don't we take her up on it? All we gotta do is hide the books in some deep, dark corner and drop by the Rendezvous Room at 7:30 Tuesday nights.

BOOKS....how did that word creep into such cheerful thoughts? Now we're like Audrey Donan-brewing over what's a weak verb, what's a strong verb in Chaucer's Prologue. Audrey, like others I could name without going a nose's distance, can't understand why the profs couldn't have waited just one more day to start quizzes. Well, if April-le must have its "shoures soote," October must have its "chores soure."

CALL TO ARMS....typewriters....appointments....ad infinitum: Bill Duncan wants everyone to know that the Yack can make mighty fine use of a few willing souls. The Yack office is on Graham Memorial's mezanine, with open doors any time of the week but they're practically going to knock the hinges off making ready for new staff recruits next Tuesday.

ONE EXPRESSION keeps bobbing up in mind right now ....in between the devil and the deep blue sea. And, yet, that's a ticklish way to bring up the subject. There is absolutely nothing personal intimated! Can't decide which to say first, whether everybody is missing Mrs. Maude Lee at Spencer or that the girls in the dorm are very fond of their new housemother, Mrs. Bessie Buc-annan. Both cases are true.... guess this is one of those times you get all befuddled and laugh with tears in your eyes.

THE DAILY Tar Heel hits true campus level this week with the addition of another comic strip. Check it on the back page and work it in with your eggs, coffee, and Lil Abner. Don't you think it would save an awfully lot of time to furnish every dorm with shmoo mascots....no more chow lines, no more bank balances that are downright nil. Let's collect a few and teach them to make chocolate shakes.

IN TOWN: Just in case that shmoo idea doesn't pan out, it's a handy thing to remember that the bakery is open 'til 9:30 every night. We've been thinking of surprising heck out of a roomate by bringing a few cinnamon buns home some night just to prove that life can be beautiful.

LYGETTE BLYTHE'S gain was Chapel Hill's loss this week-end when he gathered such localities as Bob Madreys, the Walter Spearmans, the Pickell Coles, and Mrs. Jack Wade into the Selwyn Hotel in Charlotte for a dinner party. That journalist troop must have had one more time celebrating the debute of Blythe's "Bold Gaililean" which hits the bookshops today.

MANY THANKS to the courtesy of the men down at the Carolina Cab Co., yours truly is not docked up to pay for a new emergency brake on a borrowed car. So, if traffic problems get the best of you and your fenders, limp along down that way.

Making It Tough For The Ploughman

These Days

Birth Of Berlin Crisis

By George E. Sokolsky

An historical mistake can never be corrected. It establishes a status from which one starts anew. Thus each war does not correct the errors that produced the war; it only establishes a new basis, sometimes worse for mankind than the one it supplants. Certainly the world was not as confused in August, 1939, to say nothing of June, 1914, as it is today.

At Teheran, Yalta and Potsdam, the United States, Great Britian and Soviet Russia entered upon a series of settlements which have led to failure. No principles of international justice guided Roosevelt, Churchill or Stalin. They bargained and Stalin was the best trader of the three. He made deals which gave him Europe and Asia from the Elbe to the Pacific. He out-traded Roosevelt on every proposition.

The present Berlin crisis was born at Potsdam, where the United States was represented by Harry Truman. Instead of dealing with the issue there, the United States agreed to a plan whereby a Council of foreign ministers would be organized and matters referred to it. Right there is the essential error which has produce all the troubles at Berlin —because nothing was really settled at Potsdam. I quote James F. Byrnes as my witness:

"Ben Cohen and I prepared the plan for the creation of the council of foreign ministers, When I presented it to President Truman for his consideration, we suspected what later we found to be true: the Soviet Union did not wish to act promptly on a German treaty....

"....The foreign ministers, shortly thereafter, would take up the German treaty, agree on fundmental problems such as frontiers, and local governments, and then appoint different deputies to begin drafting a German settlement. The peace treaties based on these general agreements would then be presented to all the United Nations for their consideration and amendment...."

Byrnes himself says of this unworkable plan:

"It was a good theory. But it was faulty in one assumption. I had assumed that at the end of hostilities an era of peace would be so deeply desired by those nations that had fought the war in unity that the inevitable differences of opinion could be resolved without serious difficulty."

So instead of the combatants, the allies, the United Nations, whatever you want to call them, dealing with Germany at a peace conference, the subject was relegated to four foreign ministers, those of the United States, Great Britian, Soviet Russia and France. At the first full meeting at Potsdam, after the organization of the Council of Foreign Ministers, Molotov drew a red herring across the discussion by raising the issue of Greece. So that started a fight that got nowhere. Then they rowed over freedom of the press, over how to hold elections and such topics. Meanwhile, the British held an election and achieved a change of government midstream. Churchill was replaced by Attlee; Eden by Bevin. This complicated the situation no end as both Attlee and Bevin were as new as Truman and Byrnes. What a field day Stalin, Molotov and Vishinsky had with such negotiators on the other side of the table!

This is what happened concerning the German boundaries:

"The President asked how the reparations issue could ever be settled if part of the German territory is gone before we reach agreement on what reparations should be.'

"Stalin remarked that everything the President said was relevant since no frontiers had been ceded at the Crimea conference except for the provisions that Poland would receive territory."

Practically, the Eastern boundary of Germany was already made a closed issue unilaterally by Russia before the meeting at Potsdam. Then came the question of German reparations. Byrnes says of it:

"There was, first of all, the figure of twenty billion dollars, with one-half, or ten billion dollars, to go to the Soviet Union. Mr. Maisky had advance this figure at Yalta and President Roosevelt had accepted it as a 'basis for discussion' in the Reparations Commission. At Potsdam, both Generalissimo Stalin and Mr. Molotov kept pressing for the establishment of a definite figure."

So that got nowhere. Now three years later, secret diplomacy has produced failure after failure, lie after lie. And we face the peril of war.

It Just Ain't Big Enough

By Bill Buchan

Carolina's urgent need for a new student union building to take the place of the overcrowded Graham Memorial was emphasized again this fall then GM officials spent several worried hours attempting to rearrange the office space for new and more active organizations.

So tight is the space in the present building that GM directors have been asked to approve a plan to convert the extra room in the Women's lounge into an office for the director. This project would necessitate a new door from the hall into the lounge and the closing up of the door in the proposed new office. This move would leave the director's office on second floor for use as a music room or as an extra meeting room for small groups.

With the invasion of Yackety Yack photographers into two of the lounges on the second floor, only two lounges are available for the numerous organizations on campus, namely Horace Williams and Roland Parker 3.

Director Bob Watson, in discussing the crowded conditions in the building, cited many necessary, facilities that are unavailable because of lack of room. He listed: a room for campus orchestras to practice (there is no place on the campus for them), a small auditorium to take care of the larger meetings which cannot crowd into one of the lounges, more smaller meeting rooms (a look at the schedule of groups seeking space would call for at least four such rooms), an art room for the preparation of posters for use by various groups here, a good music room (Graham Memorial has an excellent collection of records and a record player, but there is no place at the present time where it can be utilized.), and an improved, larger dark room for use by lens fans.

Needed in Graham Memorial at the present time to put it into top running condition for the remainder of the year are new rugs throughout the building (Watson says the current ones are completely threadbare), and new furniture, most of the furniture was given an overhauling during the summer months, but the GM staff doesn't expect it to last over six months). Also needed badly, as noted by anyone who has waited in line to use the one public phone, are more telephone booths.

The possibility of a new student union building may be some distance in the future because of the simple problem of available cash. However, for an ever increasing active student body, the capacity of Graham Memorial is

What the solution to the crowded problem will be is at present unknown. It seems a bad business, though, to be continually paying out as much as a $1000 dollars each year to improve the present building when it is a known fact that the continuation of Graham Memorial's existance as a student union building is limited as far as time is concerned.

We Have The Spirit

Editor:

I have never before displayed my literary incompetence through your column, but after reading Mr. Bruton's farce of Thursday in which he intimated that the ol' school spirit was practically nil - well, I just had to put my hand to work in way of retaliation.

I don't know what Mr. Bruton expected to find as representative of Carolina spirit when he joined us last fall...probably a bunch of pennant-wavers in ramskin coats! I, too condemn the lack of loyalty shown by the senior class in their meeting last May. However, the failure to cooperate shown by one particular senior class has nothing to do with the over-all spirit of the student body.

Again, Mr. Bruton seems to think there was a major stampede for the exist long before the final whistle Saturday! If this is true, I'm sure it wasn't due to lack of interest or spirit on the part of those students guilty, but, on the other hand, they were no doubt struggling back to their dorms in search of throat sprays, artifical respiration, rub-downs, and the like. To dispell any doubts you have in respect to the ovation we presented our team, you might check with fans who were on the opposite side of the field or those less fortunate ones who nursed radios. They will undoubtedly tell you that spirit shown was the best yet. Personally, I panted and raved and yelled more Saturday than I have ever done before. As a result, by voice is just now shifting from a musty bass to its normal, off-key contralto. If this isn't school spirit, then Carter don't got "Little Liver Pills"!!!

I venture to say that we have school spirit at present in unrivaled proportions. The entire student body is aware of the fact that we are blessed with a great football team. And we do most certainly promise, with the able aid of Norm Sper, Jr. and his crew or cheerleaders, to back that team to the limit of our abilities. On To Georgia!!!

DWIGHT E. BUNN

On the Tourist Trade

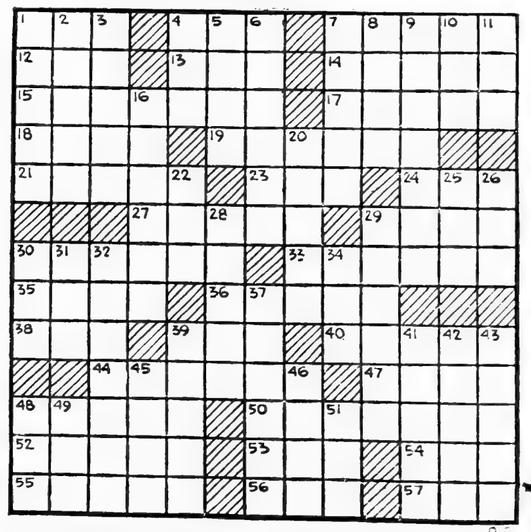
Wandering Knights

ATLANTA, GA.—(UP)—The staid Federal Reserve Bank has delved into history and the good book to prove that the tourist industry is here to stay, and as a major part of the American economy.

The bank's monthly report for the southeastern area was almost lyrical as it traced the urge to wander and see new sights back as far as the crusades.

"Beyond the Alps lay sunny Italy," the report said, "and at the end of the road lay the golden sands and olive groves of Palestine. Midway in the journey the fabulous wealth and exotic pleasures of the saracenic captial on the Bosphorus spread their net of allurement....

"The wandering armies of armored knights and barons are no longer with us, but they have a modern counterpart in the army of tourists moving over the country in all directions in search of relaxataion. The armor had given way to sport clothes and in place of the charger there is now the family car, perhaps with a trailer drawn behind it...this is the modern knight-errant —the vacation-bound American."



It perhaps began, the bank said, "when Divine Providence decreed that man should work six days and rest on the seventh." And since those days, man has increased his leisure time to some 44 hours a week, plus a paid annual vacation.

So up sprang the tourist industry, now cited as "just as productive as the provision of food and clothing...as legitimate as any other from an economic standpoint."

For the southeastern area, the bank said tourists are one of the most important business factors. It suggested there is exaggeration in Florida's claim of a $700,000,000 annual tourist trade, but said the realty of the fountain of youth myth "has nevertheless been found by many" in the state.

Mississippi claimed something like $200,000,000 spent annually on travel and recreation. Louisiana $100,000,000 of which 80 per cent is spent in New Orleans; Georgia $105,000,000, Alabama $50,000,000 and Tennessee $150,000,000.

The bank noted that the tourist business is lined up on the side of those who want to preserve the South as it was, rather than yield to full-scale industrialism.

The Venice of the South

ATHENS — GEORGIA'S WEE WALLY BUTTS has about turned this scenic little college town into the Venice of the South. His tears have ceased to be absorbed by a number of proverbial crying towels set aside for just this purpose, have overflowed Sanford stadium and the surrounding areas and are now threatening to engulf the town.

The truth of the matter is that ductless doings of the pudge little man who heads the Bulldogs, have drowned everything around here but Georgia's chances in their game with visiting North Carolina. Mr. B's taturns are the most accurate barometers known to modern man. For when the tears begin to flow, it's time to bar the doors, head for the hills and prepare for the worst—if you're the visiting team.

The current cause for these emotional esipodes, says the moaning Mr. Butts, are premonitions of what the awful Tar Heels will do to his poor little Bulldogs come kickoff time. What he fails to relate is what the Bulldogs will counter with to prove that their bite is worse than their bark.

Greatest Since Pullman

THE GEORGIANS, IT SEEMS, may have the greatest thing in a sleeper since Pullman. They have a cautious and capable quarterback in the person of Johnny Rausch, who has played against the Tar Heels enough in the past two years to know what the score is—at least in the literal sense of the word.

Rausch is the piece de resistnace in a football player which when freely translated might describe his ability to pierce most any resistance the Tar Heels might throw up. Young John finds himself in his greatest capacity as a passer and it reputed to be able to knock Coca-Cola bottle caps off a stake at 50 yards for lack of something smaller to toss at.

Mr. Rausch will appear with talented supporting cast to back up his efforts. The Bulldogs have one of the finer lines in the South this side of Atlanta's Chez Paris. Bawler Butts one real claim to the undulterated truth is that he does not have a real breakaway runner on the squad—or so it sez here in small print. The Tar Heels had to contend with the threats of enough speed demons against Texas last week. They will be glad to cooperate in enforcing the Georgia speed limits.

No Visitors Allowed

MR. BUTTS ENJOYS the distinction of playing the Tar Heels in his own little nest. Southeastern teams, like most throughout the nation, are harder to beat at home than they are on the road. Visiting teams have been grossly unpopular in Georgia ever since the Yankees played an exhibition series down here back in the 1860's.

So, the Tar Heels will probably trot into Sanford stadium about two touchdowns to the rear at the start. The one break for the Tar Heels is that the Ku Klux Klan doesn't show its face in the daytime.

Actually, the Carolina crew wouldn't mind taking on most any comer this afternoon after a week of practice in the miry sod of Chapel Hill. They need a modicum of fast action to stir the spirits back to Texas level, for these "here's mud in your eye" practice sessions don't go too well woth those who know better.

Riding High

THAT THE TAR HEELS may be riding for a fall doesn't fail to leave its impression on the entire Carolina football squad. They worked for their tremendous triumph over Texas, and like the cautious gambler, don't intend to shoot all the winnings on one spin of the wheel.

Big Build-Up works both ways. It forces some teams to start buying their hats in drum stores, while in others it instills the confidence necessary to a winning way. The Tar Heels worry too much to be overconfident. They have one great fear and that's the fear of defeat. They will be out to overcome it against the Georgians.

The Good in Evil

YOU CAN JABBER all you wish about the bad effects of Big Time Football, but Carolina's gay start this season has certainly quickened the pulse of those who follow the Tar Heels. The faithful have been pouring into this Georgia hamlet since Thursday, with trains, planes, autos and goat carts clogging the entrances to the city.

All over the country alumni who have long since forgotten the Glory of UNC, are now rallied to the colors. 'Tis a shame that it takes a winner to do it, but the task of bringing ex-Tar Heels, Tar Heels, and future Tar Heels together is being accomplished.

The astute students continue to render their fine following of the team. If they are ever going to have Saturday classes, the smart thing to do, would be have them at the rival institution when the football team plays away from home. It's hard to tell the Georgians from the freshman down here.

All of which brings one smack up to the engagement immediately at hand. The Tar Heels should win by three touchdowns. 'Tis time someone taught these Georgians the meaning of Blue and White supremecy.

Cleveland Misses Chance To Clinch Pennant

Indians Checked By Detroit Club In Crucial Game

CLEVELAND, Oct. 1—(UP)—The Cleveland Indians muffed a golden chance to clinch at least a tie for the American League pennant today when they let the Detroit Tigers come from behind in the ninth with a three run rally that scored a 5-3 upset victory.

The defeat left Cleveland only a game ahead of the Boston Red Sox and New York Yankees and delayed final settlement of the most thrilling race in major league history until Sunday—the last day of the season.

The Indians still need only one more victory to clinch a tie but in their two remaining games they will be facing a pair of great money pitchers, Freddy Hutchinson and Hal Newhouser of the Tigers.

Meanwhile, tomorrow and Sunday, the Yankees and Red Sox will be at each others' throats in a "Battle of Extinction" at Boston.

And there still was a possibility of either Boston or New York beating the Indians out for the flag. Should Cleveland lose both its two remaining games and should either the Yankees or the Red Sox win both their remaining two, the Indians would be done out of their first pennant since 1920.

He'll Cause Bulldogs Trouble

Sid Varney, the mighty mite who plays guard for Carolina's Tar Heels, didn't earn the nickname of the "Toy Bulldog" for naught. And Carolina supporters are expecting him to play havoc with another variety of Bulldog—Georgian, that is—when the Tar Heels perform in Athens, Ga., this afternoon.

Blue Devils Battle Tennessee In Durham Tilt This Afternoon

Two of Carolina's future grid opponents will work each other over in Durham this afternoon when the Duke Blue Devils play host to the Tennessee Volunteers.

Neither team showed very much last week with Tennessee bowing to Shorty McWilliams and Mississippi State, 21-6, while the Blue Devils were stumbling to a 0-0 tie with N. C. State.

The Dukesters defeated Tennessee last season, but they will have a much harder time this year, for the Volunteers fielded a team loaded with sophomores and freshmen then and should improve with every game.

Jack Mounie, sophomore fullback for the Blue Devils, was the big ground gainer against State last week before he was injured and his return to action will greatly strengthen Duke's chances. However, both tailback Freddie Folger and big tackle Al DeRogatis are on the slightly injured list and may not see much action.

Ralph Chancey didn't play against Mississippi last week and if he doesn't start at fullback for the Vols, the nod will go to an old Duke gridder, Geargе Balitsaris. J. B. Procter will probably open at tailback for the visitors.

The bookies have tabbed Duke a six-point favorite, but many observers consider Duke at the most an even choice, if not the underdog.

Jenrette and Jeff

Dick Jenrette, Daily Tar Heel sports writer, and Jeff, the local proprieter with the uncanny knack for picking football winners, led the sports prognosticators for last week's games. Both had identical records of 14 correct selections, four incorrect, and two tie games.

Jake Wade, University sports publicist, was third. He had 13 winners. Billy Carmichael, sports editor, was next with 12, and Orville Campbell followed with 11 correct picks.

Local High Tramples Mebane Outfit, 59-6

Chapel Hill high school made it two wins in a row yesterday afternoon by defeating Mebane high, 59-6, in Emerson Stadium.

Bill Butler led the Wildcat scoring attack; counting two six-pointers himself and passing for a third. Ivalee Hill contributed the most outstanding Chapel Hill marker by galloping 95 yards for the touchdown.

Mebane didn't score until the final period with the Wildcat second string in the game.

Freshman Baseball

The first freshman baseball practice, which was slated to be held Wednesday afternoon, fell prey to the elements and is rescheduled for Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock at Emerson Field.

The overall record shows an almost equal distribution of victories, Carolina having won nine, while Georgia has won seven. One tie is recorded in the record books, that being a 6-6 affair back in 1932.

Coach Snavely, named the Coach of the Week by the United Press sportswriters last week, is a strong advocate of the single wing and will use that offensive formation against the Bulldogs.

Wally Butts, one of the cleverest coaches in the South, favors the "T" formation. The "T" works exceptionally well with a fast backfield and Butts has just that on his Bulldog eleven. He can boast of such standouts as Lukie Brunson, Billy Henderson, Bob Walston, Bill Mixon and Tommy Kaminshi.

But the most outstanding figure in the Georgia lineup is quarterback Johnny Rauch. Considered the finest quarterback in Dixie last year, Rauch has an impressive passing record. Last year he led the nation in passing with a total of 48 completions in 37 attempts, compiled in ten games. A real tripple-threat man, he can run and kick with the best.

Using unorthodox defenses last year, Coach Butts almost completely bottled up the Tar Heels' running attack which features Choo Choo Justice. So the Tar Heels were forced to take to the air to score.

Seixas Eliminated

Carolina's number one tennis player, Vic Seixas, reached the quarter-finals of the Pacific Southwest Tennis tournament, but then Ted Schroeder came along and that was the end of the line for Seixas.

Davis Cupper Shroeder had little trouble in defeating Seixas, who previously had upset the Californian earlier in the season. Seixas bowed in straight sets, 6-3, 6-2, 6-4.

The Schroeder jinx also extended into the doubles play when the first seeded combination of Frank Parker and Schroeder downed Herbie Flam and Seixas in a quarter-final engagement, 6-1, 7-9, 6-4, 6-2.

JOHNNY SATTERFIELD AND ORCHESTRA will furnish the music tonight for the first in a series of fall dances, sponsored by Graham Memorial entertainment committee. The dance will be held in Woollen Gym, beginning at 8:30.

GM To Sponsor Dance For Students Tonight

The first in a new series of free informal dances, to be sponsored by the Graham Memorial entertainment committee, will be given tonight in Woollen Gym from 8:30 until 12.

Mike Loftus, director of the entertainment committee, said that the dance is being given for those students who are not planning to attend the Georgia-Carolina game in Athens or the freshman dance at Grensboro. However, the dance is open to the general public and everyone is invited to attend.

Loftus said that the series is being scheduled because of the enthusiastic response to a similar series given during the summer quarter.

Music will be furnished by Johnny Satterfield and his orchestra.

The committee is planning to give at least one dance a month during the fall quarter, Loftus said.

a weak rendition of the Georgia alma mater, the tune of which tempted a few curious Tar Heel spectators to burst into "Hark The Sound."

An indifferent, resigned attitude smothered the entire spread out Georgia campus today. Students gloomily predicted a crushing Carolina victory over Johnny Carolina victory ove r Johnny Rauch and the Bulldogs.

Even the campus newspaper, "The Red and Black," admitted today that "any team that can humiliate Texas 34-7 is in a different league from the Bulldog team fielded last Saturday, literally and otherwist."

The newspaper commented that Charlie Justice "does everything with a football except eat it.

SASKATOON, Sask., Oct. 1—(UP)—Don't eat that chicken, Prof. w. J. Rae of the University of Saskatchewan warned today. You might bite into an atomic drumstick.

Rae made a special radio broadcast aimed at the thief who took several chickens from the University's poultry house.

Reason for his warning: the chickens have been used in experiments and are radioactive.

CAROLINA ROLLS OVER GEORGIA 21-14

S and F Sets Monday Night For Tryouts

Sound and Fury, Carolina's musical comedy organization, will hold its first meeting of the quarter tomorrow night at 7:30 in Memorial Hall. After a brief meeting acquainting new members with the officers and production staff, final tryouts will be held for the Fall production of last summer's successful "Mardi Gras".

Working on the assumption that nothing, not even Sound and Fury, is perfect, Composer Tread Covington has been polishing his music and lyrics, while Fred Young has been putting the finishing touches to his authentic "mood" songs. Author Pete Strader has been busy shuffling plot, comedy and characters into different situations and states that "we hope the last deal will bring us a full house".

Hero Beauregard St Charles, aided by the lovely young painter, Meg, wreaks havoc on the sanity of the inhabitants of the Vieux Carre as he explains his plight. A gentleman named Charon has informed him of his death, and to cross the River Styx into the Underworld, Beau must have a dime for the ferry. Breaking loose from Greek legend the musical romps through the courtyards and bayous of present-day New Orleans, leading the cast through a web of frustrated lovers, harried officials, and musical numbers, as Beau attempts to obtain one thin dime.

Casting will be decided tomorrow night, and a variety of acting, singing and dancing parts are open for a large cast. Technical crews will be signed at the same time.

The production will be directed and designed by Pete Strader, with dances by Tommy Thomas and lighting by Colbert Leonard.

Munger To Speak At Service Tonight

Rev. Bernard V. Munger, pastor of the Congregational Christian Church, 211 West Cameron avenue, will speak on "What is Good in the Old Time Religion" tonight at 8 o'clock.

Believing there is a need in the community for a Sunday evening service of songs, prayer, and scripture, Rev. Munger is instituting this series of evening worship services. Everyone is invited.

Cushman to Speak At Wesley Supper

The Wesley Foundation of the Methodist Church will present Dr. Robert Cushman, professor of Christian doctrine at the Duke University Divinity school, at the weekly Sunday supper program this afternoon at 5:45. Dr. Cushman will address students on "Christian Faith and Reason."

The Young Adults class, which taught by Dr. Frank Hanft of the University Law school, will meet at 10 a.m. The theme for the present series of lessons is "Christian Views of Immortality."

The Student class, meeting at the same hour, will be addressed by Rev. Brooks Patten on, "The Life and Teachings of Jesus."

World-Wide Communion Sunday will be observed at the 11 o'clock service.

Snavely to Speak

Coach Carl Snavely will be the featured speaker at the Faculty club luncheon Tuesday at the Carolina Inn, Professor Phillips Russell, president of the club, announced yesterday. Snavely's topic will be "Coaching and Teaching."

Town Men's Club Plans Membership Drive This Week

An all-out three-day membership drive will be conducted by the Town Men's Association on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. According to John Van Hecke, president of the group, tables will be set up in the Y building for the purpose of signing new members.

Any men students living in town, outside of fraternity houses, are eligible to join the group. Fraternity men who live out in town, but who are not staying in frat houses, are eligible to join the organization as well as other town men.

The purpose of the organization, as outlined by Nelson Taylor, member of the executive board, is to provide representation for town men on the various student organizations on the campus. "We feel," said Taylor, "that the town men have been lacking in proper representation since the TMA was disbanded during the war. Through our reorganization, town men should receive equal representation with the dormitory men."

Membership fees are one dollar per quarter and prospective members will be able to join Monday through Wednesday from 8 until 1 at the YMCA.

Becky Huggins Chosen Queen Of Durham Tobacco Festival

Miss Becky Huggins of Chapel Hill was crowned Queen of Tobaccoland at the Coronation ball of Durham's annual Merchants Association Tobacco Festival Friday night in the City armory. Lyndon Hobbs, Miss Huggins' escort who is also from Chapel Hill, reigned as king of the festival.

Miss Huggins, winner of a beauty contest sponsored by the Durham Merchants Association, is the daughter of Vic Huggins, president of the Chapel Hill-Carrboro Chamber of Commerce and Merchants club. Both the king and queen are students at the University.

Miss Elizabeth Lyons also represented Chapel Hill at the three day festival, which was climaxed by a 50 unit parade down Durham's Main Street yesterday morning and a square dance in the City armory last night.

Friday's festivities included the Merchant association sponsored beauty contest in which Miss Huggins was chosen queen from among 22 girls from the Durham area, and a fashion show at the City armory.

Music for the Coronation ball was furnished by Johnny Satterfield and his orchestra.

UNC Professors To Lecture At Health Meet

Dr. Hughes Bryan and Dr. Lucy S. Morgan of the University School of Public Health will present papers before the 76th annual meeting of the American Public Health association in Boston November 8-11, it was announced today.

Dr. Bryan, professor of public health nutrition, and Dr. Morgan, will be among 300 members who will speak at the convention. Two other North Carolinians, Dr. MacDonald Fulton and M. L. Chilton of the Bowman Gray School of Medicine in Winston Salem, will also address the meeting which will be attended by approximately 4,000 members of the Association.

Executive Secretary Dr. Reginald M. Atwater, said the speakers and their subjects were selected to present the most complete program possible. More than 200 scientific and commercial exhibits on public health will be on display in Boston's Mechanic hall, Dr. Atwater added.

Student Party To Meet Monday

The Student Party will meet at 9:00 in Horace Williams Lounge of Graham Memorial Monday night. All new and old students alike are cordially invited to attend. In keeping with the traditional polices of the Student Party, everyone is welcome to its open meetings regardless of his political, religious, or social opinions.

There will be a meeting of the party exec. council at the same place at 8:30. All councilmen are urged to be present, chairman Ed Tenney announced.

Pearlman Will Hold Jewish Services

Rabbi Samuel Pearlman will conduct services on the campus for the Jewish New Year, Rosh Hashonoh. Services will be held in Gerrard hall tonight at 7 o'clock, Monday morning at 11, Monday evening at 7:30, and Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock.

Just for Laughs

FLORENCE, Italy, Oct. 2—(UP—)Count Pandolfini's sons fought a mock duel today with Blunderbusses which had hung on a wall in the Count's souvenir room for 50 years.

Roberto, 12, aimed and fired. His brothed, Giannazzo, fell dead.

'Slick Chicks' Today . . .

Former DTH Editor Says UNC Has Undergone Many Changes

By Leonard Dudley

Lt. G. E. "Ed" French, USNR, a graduates of the University, class of '32, and former managing editor of the DTH, has been assigned to the staff of the Naval ROTC unit on the campus as an instructor. He has been on active duty with the Board of Naval Personnel in Washington, D. C.

Lt. French said the thing that impressed him most about the DTH was "the addition of women to the staff." "In the days when I was managing editor," he wailed, "we only had one or two girls working on it and now you have several 'slick chicks" putting out columns."

In those days, French said, things were really tough. The managing editor was the man responsible for putting out the paper. "There was no such thing as 'night' editors," he added.

Another thing that has changed is the size of the paper, he said. "At that time it was a six-column tri-weekly and the students voted to increase the fee and make it a daily," he said.

Graham Memorial, said French, was just another unfinished building for "about ten years" and during his reign as editor it was finished and became the student union. The DTH had been housed in the basement of Alumni building up until the new building was finished, after which it was moved to its present location on the second floor of Graham Memorial.

"Another thing that amazes me," observed French, "is to hear some of these students talking about coed visiting agreements as though it were something new. We had the same trouble back in those days."

One of the biggest stories of the day, said French, was the inauguration of Dr. Frank P. Graham as President of the University.

Lt. French said he spends much of his time renewing old acquaintances around the campus and trying to get adjusted to his new duties. At present he is living at the home of Mrs. A. H. Patterson on East Franklin street.

Tar Heels' Pep Rally Stops Athens Traffic

By Chuck Hauser

Athens, Ga., Oct. 2—Some 500 carefree Carolinians showed the none-too-friendly town of Athens some real school spirit and thundering cheering at noon today as they met for the official pre-Georgia game pep rally outside the large Georgian hotel here.

A traffic-blocking parade of the traveling Tar Heels then wound through the streets of town and onto the University of Georgia campus, chanting, singing and cheering. Head cheerleader Norm Sper led the rally, assisted by cheering squad members Sarah Jane Farlow, Claudia Lee, Wray Farlow and Durwood Jones.

A smaller, but just as noisy in proportion, group of Chapel Hillians got up—or stayed up—to welcome in the caravan train carrying the team, students, and hundreds of alumni and friends of the University. The rail-riding sons of Carolina arrived in two train sections at 7:30 and 8:30 this morning.

The new arrivals were paraded from the train station to their respective hotels, elderly alumni and students-alike either walking or riding the several-block trip. Two busses took the team to their hotel where they rested and relaxed in preparation for the grid-iron tussle which began at 2:30 this afternoon.

Some Georgians Rude

University students here for the game have found many of the Georgians, both students and townspeople, friendly, courteous and eager to assist their weekend guests. But most comments are of rudeness and unfriendliness on the part of North Carolina's hosts.

Several acts of vandalism have already marred the Georgia weekend slate. At least two students reported that their car radio aerials were torn from their automobiles, and one owner of a well-advertised "Carolina 34, Texas 7—Georgia, you're next" car discovered that Georgia students, re-

GM Fans Are Sad, Remain Confident During First Half

By Stewart McKeel

It was only half time, and it was only a football game, but it might have been the funeral of the greatest man alive according to the long faces in the main lounge of the student union on the campus of the University of North Carolina.

The score was only seven to nothing but it might as well have been 70 to nothing. Most of the students who were there for the main purpose of listening to the football game were very quiet, talking listlessly to one another.

The radio was giving Carolina most of the credit, but after all the score was against the Tar Heels, the team that was rated number one in the nation the past week. True, they had pushed Georgia all over the field, and had gone down to the Georgia 12 inch line, the one yard line, and the five yard line, but on none of these occasions did the Tar Heels score.

For all of these long faces though no one gave up hope, all around could be heard the remarks, "it's only half over," "we only need one half," and "spot them seven points, they will need all of them and then some." Yes, for all of the disappointment that these students felt they still had faith in their team Forever confident that as last week, the Tar Heels, in the weeks to come, would still be rated among the top in the land.

Movie at Village Features Germany

MGM's "The Search", a movie of displaced persons camps in Germany, will play at the Village Theatre Sunday and Monday.

The movie, filmed in Germany on the sites of DP camps, features many DPs as both principal actors and extras. Reports from persons who have seen the movie say that it is a very good portrayal of actual conditions and attitudes in the camps.

UNC Officials At Fort Bragg

Approximately 600 ground force reserve officers left yesterday for Fort Bragg in Fayetteville for a contact camp. Those attending from the University include C. P. Spruill, dean of General College, F. C. Shepard, veteran's advisor, Clyde C. Carter, Walter Creech, H. R. Totten, and Harry Davis.

While there the group will witness arterial and air-born attacks, and will also study a small attack which is to be staged .

This is an annual gathering for reserve officers, and the only change made is that those attending will be in uniform.

Baskin to Speak At French Meet

Le Cercle Francais will hold its first meeting of the year Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock in Caldwell Y. President Bill Baskin will address the campus French club on his trip to France this summer.

Members will also meet their new faculty advisor, Mr. Gordon Argo, who is replacing Mr. Joe Hutchison in this capacity. Mr. Argo, a new member of the faculty received his Master of Arts degree from Middlebury College, Vermont, and completed his undergraduate work in Birmingham, Alabama, and at Louisiana State University.

All interested persons are invited to participate in the activities of the club. Knowledge of the French language is not required.

Come From Behind To Achieve Victory

By Buddy Vaden

ATHENS, Ga., Oct. 2—Overcoming a seven-point deficit at halftime, the University of North Carolina Tar Heels pushed across three second-half touchdowns to defeat the Georgia Bulldogs, 21-14, in Sanford stadium here this afternoon. A capacity crowd of 43,000 witnessed the nation's number one grid team capture their second win of the season.

The general opinion in the Carolina dressing room after the Georgia game seemed to be that Georgia (and Carolina) had better teams than the score would suggest.

Coach Snavely, who was pleased with the outcome, but was not totally satisfied with the first two periods, said, "It was a tough ball game, and we made it more so ourselves by failing to score when we had the opportunities. Georgia played a bang-up game, but we had anticipated that. We expected them to be rough." Snavely continued.

Concerning the brilliant exhibition displayed by Charlie "Choo Choo" Justice, Coach Snavely commented, "Charlie seems to get better and better with every game. He's a great little ball player and great to have on our team."

There were more compliments for the Ashville flyer from the rest of the team. Ted Hazelwood, who played a bang-up line thought that Georgia had a wonderful team.

"I'm glad we won," he commented, "and with a few more breaks we would have added several more TD's."

Max cooke was of the opinion that this Georgia game was tougher than the Texas rout. "We were lucky to get by them. The rest of the teams on our schedule will be 'up' for us now. We're the team to beat, "he said.

Art Weiner was no different from the rest of the tired, but happy Tar Heel crew. All he could say was, "I'm just glad its over. It's been the toughest game I've been in in three years."

Irv Holdash, defensive line backer superb, seemed relieved too. Said he, "Our team looked great today after coming from behind and going on to win. We can really get those points when we need 'em most.

Even though the score was very close, the ball game was not so. Although unable to score in the first half, the Tar Heels were inside Georgia's fifteen yard line four times. Twice the locals advanced the ball to the one yard line.

Choo-choo Charlie Justice, living up to his pre-season All-American ratings, scored all three Tar Heel touchdowns. He went over from the nine for the first score, went 14 yards through the middle for the second and returned a punt 83 yards for the game winning third touchdown.

Carolina Line Holds

The big Carolina defensive forward wall held Georgia's running game and it was not until the final minutes of the game that the Bulldogs could put on an offensive drive to score. Johnny Rauch's highly-touted passing was finally successful with three minutes to go when he tossed a 29-yard pass to Lorendo for the score.

Time and again the Carolina offense rolled up first downs while Georgia was not able to register a first down until their scoring drive began in the fourth period. The Tar Heels ran up 21 first downs to 3 for the Georgians.

The game was close all the way from the opening Carolina play down to the final gun. At one time the Tar Heels held a 21-7 lead, but the Georgia charges of Wally Butts came back fast to register their second touchdown and make things look tough for a time.

Carolina Supporters Go Wild

Carolina supporters, several thousand strong, went wild in the second-half as their team finally began to cross that praviously forbiding double stripe.

Georgia broke into the scoring column midway in the first quarter when halfback Eli Manieich intercepted a Hosea Rodgers pass on his own 30 and raced 70 yards for a touchdown. Joe Geri split the up-rights to make the score 7-0 for Georgia.

Carolina had previously driven to the four-yard line where Art Weiner fumbled on an end-around. Carolina had recovered Geri's fumble on the Georgia 25 and Carolina rooters were sure the Tar Heels would be able to push the pig-skin over.

Tar Heels Move 69 yards

After an exchange of punts, the Tar Heels worked the ball 36 yards to the Georgia 30, only to lose possession on downs. After three Georgia plays, Geri kicked and the locals were back knocking on Georgia's door once more. It took 16 plays to move the ball 69 yards and two feet, but Billy Hayes fumbled when trying to buck the center for the last foot. Georgia recovered in the end-zone for a touchback.

Just before the first half ended the Tar Heels again began to drive for pay-dirt and got to the one yard line when time ran out. This Tar Heel drive covered 64 yards, but was again unable to cover the few remaining feet that lay between scrimmage and the chalk mark.

Carolina started the second-half with a big bang. Running plays without huddling, Justice, Rodgers and sub fullback Bob Kennedy worked from their own 43, where Rodgers had taken the

Where Ghosts Walk . . .

Girls of Alpha Gamma Delta Now Live At Crystal Palace

By Emily Baker

The girls of Alpha Gamma Delta sorority started moving into their new home, the Crystal Palace, on September 23. The house, belonging to the University, is also known as the Algernon Sydney Barbee place.

The house was rented from the University following the expiration of the lease on the sorority's former residence on Battle lane. It is located directly in front of the partially completed Morehead Planetarium on Franklin street.

Crystal Palace has seen many changes during the 90 years of its existence. The small servant's dwelling which once stood behind was torn down for fire wood during the depression. Also notably absent are the elm trees which once shaded the place and the pasture in which the cows grazed.

The University bought the old house in 1946 from Mrs. R. B. Parker of Enfield, who had inherited it from Mrs. Barbee, her sister.

Miss Nancy Hilliard, builder of the house, came here from Granville county with her family in 1817 when she was 20 years of age. About 17 years later she opened a lodging house near the present site of Graham Memorial in a building later known as the Eagle Hotel. In 1853 Miss Hilliard sold the hotel to Major R. Guthrie for $10,000 and shortly thereafter built the house now known as Crystal Palace. Students dreamed up the nickname because of the house's many large windows and bright white paint on the outside.

After the Civil War Miss Hilliard found herself in desperate financial straits and was forced to sell the beloved Crystal Palace in the year 1869. Solomon Pool, the non-so-popular Reconstruction president of the University, assumed ownership of the dwelling for a paltry $150.

Following Miss Hilliard's death in 1873 Crystal Palace was occupied by Major Guthrie and two years later was sold to the Algernon S. Barbees, the death

Crises And Comic Strips

Next to the activities of the Carolina football team, probably the most immediately important events in the world today are taking place in connection with the Berlin situation. Yet ask any American about the latest developments in that crisis and it is likely he will be able to answer you only in general terms. If, however, you should ask about the great Shmoo crisis, chances are you will get a detailed, up to the minute reply.

This raises the question of which is more important in our national life, world affairs or comic strips—and it is not entirely an idle question. The names Al Capp and George Marshall placed side by side with no identification would probably poll an almost equal degree of familiarity. The actions of Li'l Abner, Daisy Mae and Fearless Fosdick are equally as well known as the provisions of the Secretary of State's plan for the reconstruction of Europe. Sadie Hawkins day has become a national institution and hardly anyone confronted with the face of Lena the Hyena would have trouble identifying her.

Perhaps the University should drop its courses in history, government and economics and begin mass training of future cartoonists.

No Matter How Good

The editorial board announced yesterday by the Carolina Quarterly magazine included a group of capable, efficient editors. All of them have had previous experience in publications work. All of them believe in the possibilities of the quarterly and are willing to work for its success.

But editors alone, no matter how good, can not produce a good magazine. It takes writers—fiction writers, feature writers, poets—to build a magazine of the quarterly type. It takes good writers to make such a magazine worth reading. On this campus there are many good writers who have never taken the trouble to contribute to publications here. There are many potentially good writers who for some reason or other have hesitated to put their ability to use. These are the people who will determine the fate of the quarterly. And the quarterly editors can not search them out; they will have to come to it.

In its last year the Carolina Magazine had top-notch editors, but it failed because these editors had too little material with which to work. Here in the center of a nationally-recognized authors colony, this University should be able to produce literary works on a level with those of any other University in the world. If enough students will contribute their efforts, the Carolina Quarterly will prove that this is true.

Not For Long

After three days of cold and rain, dog days came to Chapel Hill. The air is mild, the sun is warm, the grass is still green, and only a few leaves have begun to turn bright orange and gold. Summer has returned to give a last farewell before the frosts set in.

Students who spent last winter on the hill are taking full advantage of the warm weather. They remember the icy, week-long rains, the muddy paths and the days when snow was piled so high that cars could not move. Those days may not return before Christmas this year, but brisk, nose-nipping fall weather is just down the calendar a piece.

Summer weather is not long for this world. Enjoy it while you can.

The Daily Tar Heel

The official newspaper of the Publication Board of the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, where it is issued daily during the regular sessions of the University by the Colonial Press, Inc., except Mondays, examination and vacation periods, and during the official summer terms when published semi-weekly. Entered as second-class matter at the post office of Chapel Hill, N. C., under the act of March 3, 1879. Subscription price: $8.00 per year, $3.00 per quarter.

Odds And Ends

By Helen Highwater

ON CAMPUS: Can't somebody please do something about the coffee line at the "Y" in the morning? People with 8 o'clocks might be able to keep at least one eye open if they could burn their taste buds off with a couple of swallows of java. As it is, the one person at the counter can't possibly meet the sleepy demands.

SOMETIMES HAPPY dreams of Chapel Hill really and truly do come true. Here's an example that's enough to refresh your hope and maybe make you feel as glad about it as we do. Two of the swellest kids on this campus celebrated their first anniversary (of their meeting, that is) simply by eating lunch at the Carolina Inn last Tuesday. It was exactly a year ago that Fran Angas by some stroke of fate got into one of the long cafeteria lines right behind Hank Beebee. Two things developed — proof that all Carolina men who like to talk to coeds in lines aren't wolves at heart—and also a fraternity pin that has made Fran's brown eyes twinkle all the more.

SIGNED PETITIONS requesting the reopening of the Emerson Scuttlebutt keep rolling into the Student Government office. Looks as if sentiment on the matter is pretty strong. One aspect of the question that nobody's mentioned is that coeds just out of gym classes found it mighty handy last year to drop in for a coke to lend them enough energy to get the rest of the way home.

THE CAROLINA DOG Foundation has done its good deed for the week and its members want you to know about it! They took the little brown and white spotted pup seen limping around campus with a hurt foot to the veterinarian for a bit of first aid.

THE ONLY unhappy Gawjans aren't in the Peach State today. There are a few left right here at the Hill, but their song of woe is that they couldn't get away for the game—fr'instance Ann Chandler from Macon—or, as the folks from South Georgia would say—Mecken.

BY THE WAY, if you have anything you'd like to contribute to this rat race, there's a hook crying for copy in the front office of the Daily Tar Heel. Typed items are not required; although please don't leave anything in Chinese brail. We have no Rosetta stones available at present.

IF THERE'S such a celebrity as Oscar Hammerstein's son on campus, for goodness sakes, let's hear more about him. Sound and Fury, we hear, is already rounding up bloodhounds to send out on the chase.

IN TOWN: Since the Daily Tar Heel is now devoting a large percentage of its space to Chapel Hill current events, with complete coverage within 24 hours, we thought we'd give you town people a listing on the new special reduced rates. A one year subscription (four quarters, or about 220 papers) $2.40; and one week (six papers), $.25. The papers will be delivered before 7:30 a.m. daily except Monday.

THE FIRE ALARM Friday that attracted a smattering of neighbors and a few students who were looking for some sort of excitement to make up for not going to Georgia turned out to be no more than a pile of cook books and kitchen utensils that the folks at 507 Franklin Street probably didn't need anyway. There was one good page left in the collection—one with a recipe for North Carolina pumpkin pie; so maybe the family can thrive on that for a while.

HARRY FREMB was seen trotting around town in all the rain this week quite nonchalantly in raincoat, cap, and bare feet. When Betsy Brunk asked him what the score on the feet was, he laughed and replied, "Just don't forget I'm from Florida."

Out on a Limb—But Why?

These Days

The Essentials Of Power

By George E. Sokolsky

Six factors enter into the accumulation of power: coal, iron, oil, aluminum, uranium, manpower. Those who possess these or who have ready access to them possess political and economic power. The United States is the greatest power because, as of this moment, she possesses the readiest access to and utilization of coal, iron, oil, and aluminum (although her stores of bauxite are not great.) The United States has the best access to uranium (in Canada.) While her manpower is not equal to that of Soviet Russia or China, it is more mobile, more facile, capable of greater productivity.

The only country which can, at this moment in history, challenge the United States is Soviet Russia. Rich in coal, oil and iron, with easy access to bauxite — and therefore an aluminum potential — Soviet Russia exceeds the United States in manpower. It may be roughly estimated that with her satellites in Europe and Asia, Soviet Russia now has a population of close to 250,000,000. Should the Communists take over China, this figure would be stupendous.

It is interesting that in 1939, 33,000,000 Soviet citizens lived in Asia. As Robert Strausz-Hupe says in his "The Balance of Tomorrow":

"....The development of industries in the shelter of the Urals, beyond the reach of hostile European powers, and the strengthening of the Asiatic border regions, have dominated the strategic thinking of the Soviet regime since its earliest days. Industrialization and mechanization of agriculture in Russian Asia set in motion mass migration not only from the land to the towns but also from densely settled rural regions of Russian Europe. When the Red Army fell back before the German invader, it shielded the withdrawal of many war-important industries. Whole plants, together with their skilled personnel, were moved to Asia. In addition, millions of people uprooted by the war, villages with their livestock, skilled workers, Jews from the border regions, and the forcibly evacuated Volga Germans streamed eastward ...."

This process has continued since the end of the war. Vast numbers of Germans, Austrians, Hungarians have been moved into Siberia where in the homeland of Genghis Kahn and Timur Lenk a new world is being created — a slave world of peoples of mixed blood. In this new world, a race will come into being that has never known Europe, never known Western civilization, never known Chistianity, never known freedom. Against the utilization of such power for the subjection of the world stands only the United States with its superior utilization of coal, iron, oil, aluminum and uranium. But with smaller manpower.

There is no prospect of a power rising in Western Europe or any combination of powers capable of withstanding either the United States or Soviet Russia unless all the countries of Western Europe unite. It is possible for Western Europe to aid the United States against Soviet Russia, but on their own, the nations of Western Europe possess no potentials for power.

Those who speak of One World, of a federation of nations (whether by name of World Federalist or any other), ignore that this is not an age of peace; we are at the historical moment of the rise or fall of one of the greatest and most ruthless imperialistic powers man has ever known. This power is Soviet Russia and it also possesses more manpower than any imperialism has ever held in all human history. This power will either subject all mankind to itself or it will be destroyed.

CPU Roundtable

Why Present Inflation?

The first CPU roundtable discussion for this fall quarter is scheduled tonight at 8 o'clock in the Grail Room of Graham Memorial. Students and townspeople, CPU members and visitors, will come to express and hear expressed some facts some opinions, on a political and economic question that is of vital concern to every one: "Why present-day inflation?"

The "what" as well as the "who" may be considered in attempting to name the reasons for the present state of the American economy. There is a divergence of views that can proceed from the same assumptions, as well as highly contradictory assumptions with which to begin in the first place. The question may be asked, is our so-called present-day inflation something to worry about, anything which is really harmful? If this can be answered with affirmative assurance (and there is room for doubt), apportionment of responsibility and naming of villains for the deplorable state of affairs should follow.

Some will provide this explanation. The basic contradiction of our social system is to be found in the fact that wealth produced by large numbers of workers in mines, mills, and factories falls into the hands of the owner of these mines, mills and factories. The wealth is then distributed in accordance with the needs of the people. The problem of inflation in our country must be studied in the light of this fundamental fact. . . Eventually the roof falls in. . . . It can be seen from this that the working people will NOT be responsible for the oncoming crisis of "over-production," a crisis the immediate cause of which will be the inability of the great majority of people to buy the things which have been produced. . . To say that anybody who points out where the greed of the owning class is taking us is unpatriotic is to say that patriotism is the last refuge of a scoundrel.

On the other side of the roundtable, however, will likely be someone who will have no patience or respect for the preceding assertions, one who emphatically embraces this "selfish and greedy profit system," with the acknowledgement that it can and should be made less greedy and less selfish. His reasoned comment will be, thus it becomes evident that the problem is too complex for us to put the major blame on one factor or one group with any degree of certainty. To do this would be merely to speculate—and in the final analysis that depends largely on our political inclinations and upon just whom we are willing to believe.

The Democrat may point with glee to the Republican 80th Congress, and recall that the president of NAM told a Congressional committee in 1946 (rather prematurely) that "the danger of inflation comes from OPA. If OPA is finally dead . . . prices of autos may be expected to reach normal within six months while rents might take at least a year." GOP stalwarts can then handily recall that President Truman once remarked, out loud, that price controls were the methods of the police state, and a few months later exhorted the Republican Congress to maintain price controls so as to protect our democratic institutions with a strong and stable economy.

There is some factual evidence that should be presented in this matter; it may be possible to generate more light than heat.

Write Away

'Based On Reaction'

Editor:

To the members of the "States' Rights Democrats":

I had better state my position first. I am a Southerner, born and raised in the South, and have no greater interest than the welfare of the South. I do not feel, however, that this aim can best be realized by joining an organization that is based on reaction, oppression, and maintenance of the "status quo" regardless of the cost to the individual. If loyalty to the South means that these policies must be accepted as goals, then I am not a "loyal" Southerner.

Far too long, in my opinion, has the Northern Democratic Party put up with eccentricities of their Southern brothers. The Longs and the Talmarges (now again in power), the Bilbos and the Rankins, with their filibusters and their ridiculous prejudices, have degraded all the true Southerner stands for. We at least some of us—seem to fail to realize that by improving the standerd of living of the lowest income group we will raise it for all of us. To step on the Negro—and that is exactly what Thurmond, in the final analysis, stands for—is an example of bigotry and shortsightedness seldom equalled in the world's history. Perhaps, although there seems to be no statistical basis for the fact, we are superior to the Negro, but certainly as a race they have never been offered any opportunity to try themselves, and conviction without trial is not part of the "democratic principles of Jefferson".

"The Democratic Party in the last few years"—by which I suppose the period under Franklin Roosevelt is meant—has not, to my mind "fallen into the hands of a few power-mad (Northern) politicians." On the contrary, it has brought to this country, for one of the few times since 1860, a government interested in the welfare of the common man. Perhaps by now the national Party has become so sick of its reactionary Southern component that it was perfectly willing to split. They, as I, stand for States' Rights, but perhaps they feel that after the continual squawking for the last 150 years or more about states rights, coupled with the failure, in the South to use these rights for the good of their people, it is high time for somebody to do smething to stir us to a little action.

I address this letter not only to "States Righters" but also to the thinking voters of the campus, asking them to consider the entire subject, override their instilled Southern prejudices, and cast their ballots in the only intelligent way—not for Mr. Thurmond and reaction, but the only way that will lead to the ultimate improvement of the South.

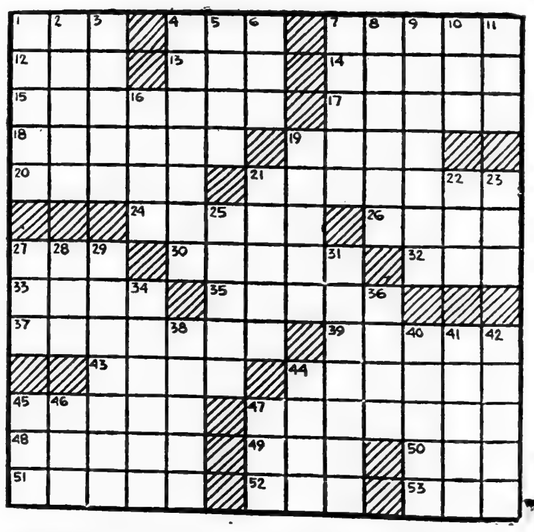
Plug For Pearson

Editor:



What ever became of Drew Pearson's column which appeared regularly in the DTH last year? Pearson was a first-rate columnist and he had something new and interesting to say every day.

This mediocre joker, George E. Sokolsky, who takes Pearson's place is a sad substitute. It takes a notable spirit of charity and compassion for me to rate him as high as the poor-to-middling class. So far he has offered DTH readers nothing more than a series of boring tirades against the Democratic administration and some warmed-over cliches from the less inspired Republican political orators.

Speaking for myself and for everyone else who has expressed any opinion on the subject, I would like very much to see Pearson back. Why print a poor column when a good one is available?

(Editor's Note: Sokolsky is the first of three nationally syndicated columnists whose work will be sampled during the fall quarter. The column which meets with the most general approval will then be continued for the rest of the year. We will appreciate comments either favorable or unfavorable about all columnists.)

By BILLY CARMICHAEL III

Business Was Slow

SANFORD STADIUM, Oct. 2—Nickels were hard to make in this Southern football mint this afternoon as an untold number of sweating Tar Heel football fans got the general idea of what business looks like for a championship team on a slow afternoon. It was hard on us guys with the weak hearts.

The Tar Heels arrived early, started late, scored quickly and then packed up their play things and went home. For the first half they marched up and down this Georgian soddy plain like soldiers on dress parade with almost military precision. But when it came time to score, the Carolina lads couldn't find the goal line in their scripts. They almost had to rewrite the ending.

But the story, of course, has a happy ending, since the Tar Heels finally came to life both in time to win the ball game and to make the night train back to Chapel Hill.

It was a Frank Merriwell finish or better said, a Charlie Justice finish. For it was the little Carolina Comet who dragged one Tar Heel foot out of the grave and helped shovel the dirt back in on the Bulldogs.

The Second Sherman

Justice was a second Sherman to the Georgians. He got booed on arrival and on departure but while in the arena led the greatest marches seen in this territory since the 1860's. History was reversed for this time the "C" marched through Georgia.

Justice ran, passed and kicked with workmanlike precision that left little to be desired except possibly his autograph. He ran through them, he ran over them, he ran around. He passed to an assortment of receivers, picking his man like chocolates from a Whitman's Sampler.

But his single performance of the afternoon that warmed more Tar Heel hearts than the assortment of whiskeys, was his 84-yard punt return for the Tar Heels' final touchdown. Mr. C. gathered the ball in on his own 16, faked the Alfonse-Gaston routine to Fred Sherman, while whipping across the field behind two helpful teammates, who escorted a pair of too-eager Georgians to some front row seats with blocks that shattered windows in downtown Athens.

On reaching the far sidelines Justice cut up-field, dusting down the outside marker to the Georgia 30, where he faked a straggling Bulldog into oblivion and rode off into the sunset. One can live on that for at least a week.

Justice for All

The Justice also added the other two Tar Heel teedees. In the third period when the odds and shadows were beginning to fall on the Carolinians, young Charles finally broke the ice his teammates had been chopping at all afternoon.

As the story had gone all afternoon, the Tar Heels had driven deep down in dark Georgia territory—the nine-yard line on this occasion. From here, Justice took it almost on his own on a Sally Rand play to the right that left the Georgia boys hollering, "Has anyone here seen Charlie?"

The other touchdown was another Justice masterpiece. This time he took a spinner from Hosea Rodgers, zooming up the middle for a meager 14 yards, but a mighty big Tar Heel touchdown. Sanford's electric scoreboard lit up with everything but "God Bless America."

One fact must be recognized. Justice went little of the more than a quarter of a mile he traveled today without a personal escort from a bunch of guys who will knock someone down for you and then get up and knock someone else dwn.

The Summary

Today's game proved one thing to one writer: You can look darn good, while looking darn bad on the scoreboard. Of course, they're going to decide the American league next year by the team with the most men left on base.

Also shown was the great pressure that a great team is always playing under. May the roof not fall for another eight weeks!

And there must be conjuncted a line about possibly the greatest line in America. Both on offense and defense they are a marvel to behold—from the stands, that is. Pity the guy that drives the truck for the team that opens the hole big enough to drive a truck through.

All of which proves that when Sherman said "War is Hell," he must have been talking abut fighting it in Georgia.

Georgia Tech Scores

ATLANTA, Oct. 2—(UP)—A powerful Georgia Tech team used two razor-sharp touchdown thrusts and a fool-proof second half defense to score an easier-than-it-sounds 13-7 victory over Tulane today before a capacity crowd of 40,000.

A stream of unspectacular but effective Tech backs, led by Jimmy Southard, Frank Ziegler, Bob McCoy, and Buster Humphreys, got an early jump on an offensively weak Tulane eleven.

Justice's 83-Yard Run Clinches UNC Victory

Choo Choo's Trip In Final Quarter Thrills Big Crowd

kick-off, to the Georgia 22. Georgia took the ball over when Carolina failed to gain a first down.

Justice Calms Fears

In bewildering silence, the Carolina crowd began to wonder if the second-half would be a repetition of the first. Their fears were soon calmed as twelve plays later, the Carolina Choo-choo went into the end-zone for his first score.

The scoring play was a nine-yard juant over the weak side tackle by Justice after he and Kennedy had collaborated to run and pass Carolina into scoring position from the Carolina 25. Bob Cox's placement split the up-rights for his first of three points-after-touchdown.

Carolina went ahead for good shortly afterwards when they scored their second touchdown, Justice again going over for the six points. After Georgia failed to do anything following Mike Rubish's barefoot kick-off, Justice and Rodgers moved the ball in two plays to the Georgia 14.

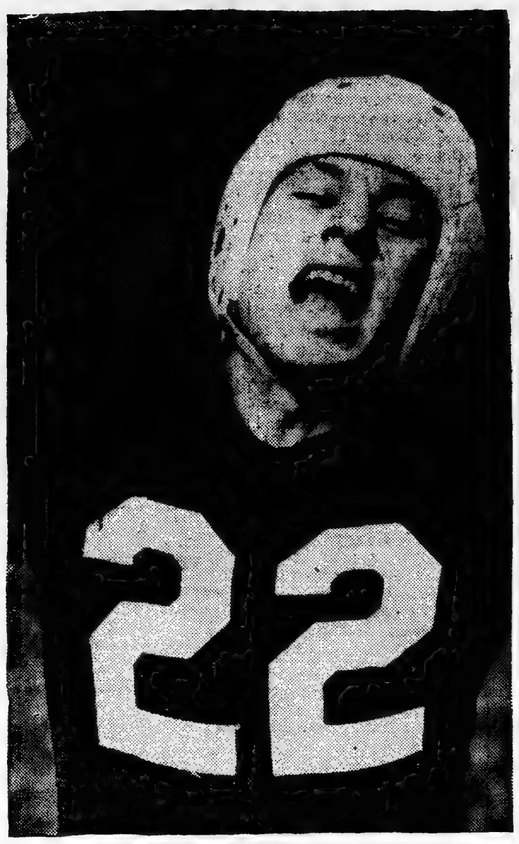
Choo-choo Down The Middle

Rodgers faked a pass and handed the ball to the Choo-choo, who went right down the middle to score his second consectutive touchdown. Again Bob (True Toe) Cox sent his placement spinning squarely through the goal posts, making the score 14-7 in favor of Carolina.

Shortly afterwards the Tar Heel powerhouse added their third score. An exchange of kicks gave Georgia the ball on their own 48. Rauch tried two passes, both incomplete, Reid was thrown for a loss and Geri punted out.

83-yard Punt Return

The phenominal Choo-choo standing on his own 17 took Geri's punt, reversed his field, faked a hand-off to Fred Sherman and went 83 yards up the field to score his third and Carolina's third. Hosea Rodgers came in for a share of credit when he threw the key block which eliminated Geri, the only man between Justice and the goal line, from the play.



Bob Cox, who sat out most of the game on the bench due to a knee inqury, came into the game to add his third perfect extra point placement.

Following the kick-off of barefooted Mike Rubish the Georgians could do absolutely nothing and again Geri punted out. The Tar Heels started driving goalward from their own 38 and went all the way to the five yard line. Bill Maceyko carried the ball over, but there was a backfield motion penalty and the score was nullified. On the next play, Talitski intercepted a Maceyko pass and carried back to his own 22.

Lone Bulldog Drive

It was here that the Bulldogs were finally able to get an offensive drive underway. With Rauch passing on every play, the Georgia eleven moved 78 yards on five completed passes. The pay-off pitch was a 29-yard toss to Lorendo. Geri again added the extra-point.

Here's Hero of Carolina Win

Charlie Justice, the Asheville Ambler whose play at tailback has sparked Carolina in every game for the last three years, enjoyed what possibly was the best game of his career as the Tar Heels licked Georgia, 21-14, in Athens yesterday. He scored three touchdowns, one on an 83-yard kick return.

Wake Forest Looks Impressive In Trampling Indians by 21-12

WILLIAMSBURG, Va., Oct. 2—(UP)—Wake Forest shackled the vaunted William and Mary running attack and thrilled 16,000 fans with deadly passing and T-formation tricks today to spring a 21-12 upset over the defending Southern Conference champions.

The inspired Wake Forest line stopped the great William and Mary fullback Jack (Flying) Cloud cold. And for Coach Peahead Walker's Baptists, Quarterback Tom Fetzer's passing and punting and Left Half Bill Gregus' savage running kept William and Mary in too much trouble to threaten the ever-mounting Wake Forest lead.

Cloud himself was battered and bruised when Coach Rube McCray ordered him to the bench midway in the third period with a slashed cheek. Cloud had to be helped off the field and did not return to the game, though his injury was not considered serious.

William and Mary fumbles, recovered by alert Wake Forest End Ed Bradley, set up the first two Baptist touchdowns.

Cornell Scores Upset Over Navy Club, 13-7

BALTIMORE, Oct. 2—(UP)—Cornell proved to Navy's luckless Midshipmen today that things are pretty tough all over in the football world as they scored a 13-7 upset before 25,000 fans in the Babe Ruth stadium.

The Midshipmen, hoping for better things under a new civilian head coach, George Sauer, had figured at least that they would be able to topple Cornell, the one team on their 1947 schedule that they were able to beat.

But it didn't work out that way.

Cornell, scoring its second straight victory, grabbed a 13 point lead in the second quarter, Jeff Fleischmann going over for both touchdowns. Both scores came after the upstate New Yorkers intercepted long passes by Reaves Baysinger.

Duke Tied Again, This Time by Vols In Durham Game

DURHAM, Oct. 2—(UP)—Duke and Tennessee battered each other to an ineffectual 7-7 deadlock today before 22,000 fans whose principal thrills came from the aerial genius of Tennessee's tailbacks J. B. Proctor and Hal Littleford.

Tennessee's one score came on a Proctor pass. Duke's slipshot air attack under cloudy skies set up the other touchdown but needed an assist from Tennessee.

Duke scored the first time it got the ball and then settled down to its defensive chores, offering neither a dangerous passing attack nor a sustained ground drive.

Good Runback

Duke wingback Tommy Hughes grabbed the first kickoff on his own 12 and hauled it back to the 42. Fullback Paul Stephanz plowed for a first down in three plays and Tailback Fred Folger passed from the Tennessee 45.

Tennessee blocking back Jack Armstrong intercepted the pass on his 28—but fumbled it in a savage tackle, and Quarterback John Montgomery pounced on the ball for Duke.

Two plays later Folger passed from the 28 to End Ed Austin on the three and the big flankman went over. End Mike Souchak made the extra point.

Take to Air

Tennessee took to the air with Littleford pitching shovel passes over the line or neat, high aerials to End Kenneth Powell.

Then in the second period Tennessee's Proctor on the Duke 40 plopped a long aerial into Powell's arms, 30 yards downfield. Powell's momentum carried him to the goal line and he slid into the end zone on his stomach.

Indians Clinch Tie for Title; Red Sox Eliminate Yanks, 5-1

CLEVELAND, Oct. 2—(UP)—The Cleveland Indians blasted an 8 to 0 victory over Detroit today and clinched at least a tie for the American league pennant, while in Boston, the New York Yankees lost to the Boston Red Sox and were eliminated from the race.

A Cleveland victory over Detroit in Cleveland in the final game of the season, would give the Indians the pennant no matter what the Red Sox and Yanks do in Boston. If Cleveland loses and New York wins, the Indians still would get the title. But if Cleveland loses and Boston wins, the race will end in an Indian-Boston tie and a playoff game will have to be played Monday.

Five Run Frame

The Indians won their game with a five-run inning. Until then, it was a tense, scoreless game with Detroit making several mild threats against the jittery Tribe.

Three doubles and two Detroit errors produced the five runs which pushed Cleveland to within reaching distance of its first championship since 1920.

As Cleveland blanked Detroit defenses before 56,000 home park fans, the Red Sox were paralyzing the Yankees in Fenway park, Boston, and earning a 5 to 1 victory.

By winning, Cleveland remained one game ahead of the Sox with a game to go. But had the Indians lost, as they did Friday, then Cleveland and Boston would have been tied for first place.

Early Lead

Boston teed off early on the Yanks when Ted Williams soared a home run with a teammate on base in the bottom of the first inning. The Sox again tallied twice in the third and counted a fifth run in the fourth. Jo Dimaggio limped across the plate with the lone Yankee run in the seventh.

So now the chips are down for Sunday—the blue chips. The Indians will pitch their fireball star Bobby Feller, against the Tiger ace Hal Newhouser. In Boston will be an equally important game.

Boston can lick the Yankees again and still be out short of the pennant. All Cleveland has to do to clinch the flag is to win one more game.

'Bama Ties Vandy, 14-14, in Final Seconds of Play

Mobile, Ala., Oct. 2—(UP)—Sailin' Ed Salem, a curly-topped Syrian from Birmingham today tossed a last-second touchdown pass and kicked the extra point to gain Alabama a 14 to 14 tie with Vanderbilt before a capacity crowd of 36,000.

The gun sounded to end the game as Salem picked out quarterback JackBrown with an eight-yard pass just inside the Vanderbilt end zone. The largest football crowd in Alabama history, dedicating Mobile's new Ladd Memorial stadium, saw the Crimson Tide fight back brilliantly earlier in the fourth quarter to tie the Commodores at 7 to 7 and then come from behind a few minutes later to get the final deadlock.

Big Line

Vanderbilt, it's big line outcharging Alabama, also bombed the Tide through the air to begin long drives for its two touchdowns. A bevy of scatbacks from Vanderbilt outpassed and outran the Crimson until the final Alabama drive.

Salem, the successor to Harry Gilmer, hit his targets eight times when Alabama started its tying touchdown drive from the Vandy 48. He passed once to Brown for 13 yards, then to Brown again for eight and to Ralph Cochran for a first down on the Vandy 25. Salem hit Brown again for eight and right half Clem Welsh for the same. With 18 seconds to go he missed his mark twice, once tossing into the end zone stands. But with the clock ticking past the zero hour he found Brown for a payoff pass.

Salem, a sophomore, completed 11 out of 22 tosses for 118 yards.

The Commodores were cleverly the masters of the field for three periods. They got started in the second quarter after neither team made a first down in the opening period.

Bobby Berry passed over the Alabama defense to Bud Curtis for 42 yards to the Alabama 26.

Rich Scores

Berry tossed out of a bottleneck to Joe Hicks for four, Mac Robinson circled left end for five and Berry hit the line for one. Herb Rich, a Miami Beach boy, spun through the line from the four to score.

Alabama reached the Vandy 10-yard line during the first half but lost the ball on a fumble by Red Noonan of Mobile. Alabama started its first touchdown drive by a 44-yard pass from Salem to Rebel Steiner over Hicks' head.

Alabama	0	0	0	14	14
Vanderbilt	0	7	0	7	14

Touchdowns: Rich, Salem, Davidson, Brown. Points after touchdowns: Clinard 2, Salem 2.

State Cancer Drive Is Aided By UNC Group

The Communication Center of the University of North Carolina has been placed in charge of public relations for the North Carolina Division of the American Cancer Society, Mrs. George E. Marshall, vice-president of the Center, announced today.

The public relations program was approved last week when representatives of the Cancer Society met in conference with Mrs. Marshall.

"The new program will include utilization of newspapers, magazines, radio programs, motion pictures, and other public relations methods, "Mrs. Marshall said, "and it will mean that greater emphasis will be placed on work done in North Carolina to fight cancer."

Jane Grills and Robert Schenkkan of the Communication Center Radio Division will direct the program, and Edward Freed of the Motion Picture Division will assist. Walter Spearman of the journalism department of the University will act as press consultant.

Dixiecrats to Meet

A meeting to organize a local States' Rights Association will begin at 7:30 Monday evening in the main lounge of Graham Memorial, Walt Arnold announced yesterday.

Szafaryn Chosen Fraternity Head For Coming Year

At a recent meeting of Tau chapter of Pi Kappa Alpha, Len Szafaryn, popular campus figure and All Southern tackle, was elected to the presidency for the coming year.

The other officers are as follows: Carlyle Morris, vice-president; Charles Smith, treasurer; John Neal, dining room manager; Bill Sutton, house manager; Ted Wall, IFC representative; Rex Kennedy, German club representative; Chan Pegram, intramural manager.

-Alpha Gams-

of Mrs. Barbee closing out that chapter of the famed residence about 20 years ago.

Back during the gay 80's Major William Cain, head of the University math department, rented the second floor of the Palace and oftentimes played his violin in the late hours of night. Cain met his death accidentally in front of his home on the day of a football game in 1930. Since that time residents of the village declare they have heard violin strains while passing the house at night.

For the next few years after 1930 the Palace was used as a rooming house for truck drivers, as a bicycle repair shop on the side of the house and as a shoe fixery at the rear of the place. In 1937 the Summerlins moved in and converted the house into a real home. For several years they were bothered daily by room-seeking truck drivers and other persons in need of shoe and bicycle repair.

The girls of Alpha Gamma Delta pitched in recently and did a goodly part of the overall renovation which has taken place at Crystal Palace during the past few weeks. Now greeting the passerby's eye is a brightly painted new-looking structure with an attractive picket fence bordering the front.

Girls moving into Crystal Palace include Priscilla Moore of Tryon; Jean Snyder of Hagerstown, Md.; Sally Jackson of Demopolis, Ala.; Ruth McCann of Asheville; Alice Middleton of Sumter, S. C.; Emily Baker of Asheville; Mary MacGougan of Lumber Bridge; Jean Somervell of Prince Fredericks, Md.; Jacque Goodwin of Apex; Nelle Ring of Kingsport, Tenn.; Gwynn Finley of North Wilkesboro; Margaret Allred of Raleigh.

Sheriff Says Kids Grabbed Log Cabin

Des Moines, Ia. Oct. 1.—(UP)—Sheriff Howard C. Reppert disclosed tonight that 30 boys and girls used his own secluded log cabin for all-night parties without his knowledge.

He said that the mother of one girl in the group has filed statutory rape charges against two youths, 18 and 20. He said five youths have pleaded guilty to delinquency charges sentences.

The cabin had been presumed vacant since the death of a caretaker three weeks ago. Reppert visited it and discovered the clues which led him to round up the youngsters.

Three of the girls are being held at a juvenile home, he said, and six others have been released in the custody of their parents.

Reppert said the five boys who were sentenced ranged in age from 15 to 20 years.

-Hauser-

portedly beanie-wearing freshmen, had smeared quick-drying red enamel over the washable white shoe polish which he had used to decorate his car.

Some Georgians Polite

Georgia University students were quite often belligerent and studiously unfriendly toward the Carolina visitors. In contrast, However, others often introduced themselves and apologized for the actions of their campus brothers.

As far as the subject of spirit was concerned, thee Tar Heels resoundingly downed the Georgians as badly as their fellow students did on the gridiron.

Cheerleaders Work Hard

The few hundred Carolinians outshone the thousands of Bulldog students in all respects, as their five boisterous cheerleaders worked them into a frenzy before, after and during the game.

And tonight, as they pack up and prepare to leave for Chapel Hill, theey know that it will be some time before the University of Georgia will forget the time the Tar Heels came to Athens.

AED Society to Meet In Graham Memorial

There will be a meeting of AED Pre-medical society in the Horace Williams lounge of Graham Memorial, at seven o'clock Monday evening, October 4.

Dr Graham, of the Medical School, will speak to the group.

All pre-medical students and interested persons are cordially invited to attend the meeting.

Miss Huggins was winner of the contest involving 22 attractive girls for the title of Queen of the Durham Merchants' association Tobaccoland Jubilee. Hobbs was her escort.

WC Alumnae Slate Meeting On Chancellor

GREENSBORO, Oct. 4—(UP)—A committee of Woman's college alumnae today scheduled a meeting here Wednesday to consider candidates for recommendation as successor to Woman's college Chancellor W. C. Jackson.

The recommendations of the committee would go to Frank P. Graham, president of the Greater University of North Carolina. A spokesman said the recommendations probably would not be forwarded for several months.

Jackson asked recently that he be relieved of his job at the end of the present academic year.

Mrs. Charles W. Tillett of Charlotte, chairman of alumnae, headed the group which would meet here. Other members included Mrs. Albert Lathrop of Asheville, Mrs. Thomas Brafford, Jr., of Raleigh, and Mrs. Julius Cone of Greensboro.

CPU Discusses 'Why Inflation' At First Meet

"Why Inflation?" was the topic discussed at the first roundtable session of the Carolina Political Union Sunday evening in the Grail room of Graham Memorial.

Several specific governmental policies, removal of price controls, tax reduction, loans to foreign countries, the European recovery program, and relaxing of consumer credit controls, were mentioned as contributing to the present high level of prices.

A partisan note was injected into the discussion with the declaration that the Republican party should be held responsible for the present state of affairs. Another opinion expressed asserted that there was little difference in what either of the major political parties could accomplish, and that our present trouble is basic and fundamental to the capitalist system.

The union will continue discussion of inflation next Sunday evening at 8 o'clock when the topic "What Is the Cure for Inflation?" will be presented.

Dixiecrat Candidate Strom Thurmond To Speak Tonight In Memorial Hall

ED JOYNER, DTH editor, is shown above giving instructions to the staff of some 35 journalism students who will work with him to put out this afternoon's issue of the Durham Sun. The group met last week with E. T. Rollins, Dante Germino and C. H. Cooper of the Sun staff, and made arrangements to take over the management of the paper today, in observance of National Newspaper week, Oct. 1 to 8. The students, specialists in sports, news, society, advertising, administrative, and composing techniques, left for Durham at 7:30 and 8:30 this morning, and will return this afternoon when the paper has come out. They will be guests at luncheon of the Cooperative club and the American Business men's club of Durham, and will hear John Park, editor of the Raleigh Times, discuss various aspects of the profession. The stunt was arranged by faculty of the journalism department in cooperation with the Sun staff.

Motorcade Will Arrive For 6:45 Talk

By Sam McKeel

Governor J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, States Rights Democratic presidential candidate, will bring his motorcade to Chapel Hill tonight in his whirlwind attempt to capture North Carolina's 14 electoral votes.

Thurmond, co-sponsored by the Carolina Forum and the Carolina Political Union, non-partisan campus political organization, will speak in Hill hall at 6:45.

Nominated for the presidency by the state Democratic parties of Alabama, Mississippi, and South Carolina, Thurmond has blasted both the national Democratic and Republican parties.

He has predicted that he will carry the Tar Heel state and said that if his States Rights party had not won a place on the state ballot, Republican candidate Thomas E. Dewey would have carried the state.

For all of his confidence, Thurmond will face a mixed reaction in the Old North State. Retiring Governor R. Gregg Cherry and Democratic Nominee W. Kerr Scott asked that differences over civil rights be settled "within the family."

Thurmond has blasted the civil rights proposals of his opponents in the presidential race by saying that "the federal government is going to make every business a semi-government business . . . this Fair Employment Practice commission is an ideal bill for the Communists of America."

Thurmond, in his tour of the state, will follow very much the same pattern of two other presidential candidates, Dewey and Wallace.

Herb Mitchell, publicity director of the Forum, said that due to the lack of time in the tour there will be no question and answer period after the speech. Thurmond speaks in Durham at 5:30, here at 6:45 and Raleigh at 8:00 o'clock. He leaves the Raleigh-Durham airport at 9:45 for New York.

Thurmond Says 'Reds and Rakes' At Convention

EN ROUTE WITH THURMOND, Oct. 4—(UP)— Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, States Rights presidential candidate, charged today that the Democratic national convention in Philadelphia "was anything but a convention of the real party.

"It was a convention of reds and rakes and subversives and people who jump from one party to another," he told an applauding courthouse crowd at Charlotte, N. C.

Opening a two-day campaign for North Carolina's 14 electoral votes, Thurmond repeated point by point his blasts against the civil rights proposals of his opponents in the presidential race.

The South Carolina governor said he was "booed and hissed until I had to stop" when he seconded the nomination of Sen. Richard B. Russell of Georgia for president at the Democratic national convention in Philadelphia.

"Is that a convention of the Democratic party we know?" he asked.

Rain forced the scheduled outdoor rally to move indoors. The crowd of more than 500 took over the courtroom where civil court was in session, and there heard Thurmond shout his speech. It applauded frequently as he attacked "Northern interference."

First Phi Debate Slated to Follow Thurmond Talk

The Philanthropic Assembly moves into its first debate of the year tonight at 7:30 in Phi hall, immediately following Gov. Strom Thurmond's address.

The first debate will be sparked by the opinions of Dr. E. J. Woodhouse, popular professor of political science.

His address will lead off the evening's discussion on the bill which will be reported out of the Ways and Means committee which reads: "Resolved, that the Nuremburg trials of war criminals were morally justified and legally prosecuted by the Allied Powers.

Parliamentarian Peter Gerns and Critic Ernest House will be inaugurated at the meeting, and the assembly will meet in executive session following its regular session to select a new speaker pro tempore.

All persons are urged to attend.

Band Has Rehearsal Slated for Today

Band rehearsal will be held this afternoon at 4:30 in Kenan stadium, Earl Slocum, director of the band, announced yesterday.

In case of rain, rehearsal will take place in Hill hall X.

Third Assembly

Dean C. P. Spruill, Jr., dean of the General College, will address freshman students in the third in a series of freshmen assemblies this morning at 11 o'clock in Memorial hall.

Giving a description and interpretation of the General College, Dean Spruill will also explain the various courses offered, and at the same time point out the adjustments freshmen students must make during these first two years of college

The speaker, a graduate of the University and professor of economics, is the first dean of the general college.

Comedian Fred Allen Says He'll Guarantee Quiz Calls

NEW YORK Oct. 4—(UP)—Comedian Fred Allen, in a battle to protect his radio popularity from the quiz shows, has insured his listeners against the loss of any prizes they may miss while tuning in his program.

Allen said he has arranged with the National Surety corporation to guarantee the payment of up to $5,000 to any listener who can prove he has missed winning a prize or prize money by listening in on the Allen show.

"There are so many programs giving away things that people have stopped tuning in comedians," Allen said. "They're afraid while they are listening some giveaway show will call them on the telephone and they will lose a trip to Bermuda with all expenses paid or the giant jackpot."

Although he didn't mention it, the comedian's Sunday night show on the National Broadcasting company, 8:30 to 9 P.M. EST, is in direct competition with the American Broadcasting company's giveaway show "Stop the Music" which is on the air from 8 to 9 P.M. EST.

Last season the comedian's radio rating dropped from one of the top 10 shows to 38th place. Radio officials explained this was primarily due to the influence of the "Stop the Music" show.

Allen said the agreement with the Surety corporation was for $50,000, which would cover up to 10 claims for $5,000.

"In other words," the comedian explained, "my listeners can only lose 30 minutes."

However, Kenneth Crosby, 41, a beer salesman of Bluffton, Ind., was just as happy he wasn't listening to the Allen show last night, despite the guarantee.

Crosby won the "Stop the Music" $30,000 jackpot when he identified the mystery melody as "Turkeys in the Treetop."

If he had been listening to the Allen program, he might have collected the $5.000 guarantee but would still have been missing the extra $25,000 he won in prizes that included a new car, $1,000 diamond ring and a vacation trip to Mexico and Hollywood.

Mississippi State Student Council Looking for Caretaker for Bulldogs

STARKVILLE, Miss., Oct. 4.—(UP)—The Student council at Missisippi State college here today was looking for a student who wanted to be nursemaid to two bulldogs.

The bulldogs are mascots of the school and Student Association President Peyton Alexander said the council would take sealed bids until not later than tomorrow for the contract of kennel master for the dogs.

The dogs must be fed twice daily; must have clean fresh water and clean bedding at all times; must be sponged and groomed as often as necessary; must be walked at least once each day; the kennel must be kept clean and orderly, and a veterinarian must be notified if either or both of the dogs gets sick or injured.

Alexander said the kennel master must also perform any other duties "necessary for the well-being and health of the animals."

Alexander added that the Student Association would furnish all feed, necessary supplies and veterinary fees. He did not say anything about medical expenses for the master in case he shouldn't get along too well with his charges.

Legislature Delegates Slashed From 32 to 19

University representation in the House of Representatives at this year's State Student Legislature was cut from 32 to 19 delegates at a meeting of the Interim council Sunday, Council Member Dortch Warriner reported yesterday.

Presiding at the meeting, which was held at Guilford college, was Secretary-Treasurer Gran Childress, in the absence of President Charles Cooper of Duke university.

The representation cut was the result of a reapportionment of seats which allows three delegates to any school with an enrollment of 1,000 or less, and an additional delegate for every 400 students over 1,000.

The previous rule allowed two delegates for any school with an enrollment of 500 or less, and one additional delegate for every additional 250 students.

The new ruling, supported by all council members except Warriner, will, in effect, increase the representation in the House of smaller schools and decrease the representation of larger schools. The council is made up of one voting delegate from each school participating in the legislature.

The motion to change the apportionment rule was made by Catawba college.

The council discussed the possibility of meeting this fall, but decided to leave the decision up to Cooper and Childress.

Papers Delivered In Rural Sections

Students living in certain rural areas near Chapel Hill will now be able to pick up their Daily Tar Heels at boxes in their neighborhood, and thus will get delivery before 7:30 each morning.

New boxes have been installed at the following locations: at the corner of Justice street and Airport road, at the west entrance to Davie circle from East Franklin street extension (Durham road) and at the corner of Oakwood drive and Raleigh road. The last-named box will serve the residents of Rogerson drive and Pines Trailer court, as well as those who live on Oakwood drive. A new metal box has replaced the wooden one at the intersection of Country Club road and Raleigh road.

New Projects Are Undertaken By YW Cabinet

Two new projects were voted in as cabinet undertakings when the YWCA cabinet had its first meeting yesterday in the Y office.

The coffee klotsch, which began last Thursday, proved so successful that it was made one of the many things to be sponsored by this cabinet, made up of chairmen of some 15 committees. The klotsch, an informal discussion over coffee cups, is to take place each Tuesday night at 7:30 in the Y office. Coeds and their dates are invited.

Second on the list of projects was a weekly Y newssheet containing news of the various committees along with dorm and cabinet news.

All coeds who pledged money to the YWCA but did not sign up for any definite committee are asked to drop by the Y office in the Y building this week and have their names put on the membership list.

Ackland Hearing

Dr. Frank Graham left last night by train to be present today in Washington for another hearing over the much disputed Ackland endowment case.

He and state Atty.-Gen. Harry McMullan will appear at the proceedings in behalf of the University. The legal battle over a $1,000,000 endowment for an art building has gone on over a period of several years after an early refusal by Duke. The present case involves the University and Rollins college of Florida.

On Wednesday, Dr. Graham will return to North Carolina to attend a meeting in Asheville of the Southern Joint Land-grant college and will also confer with officials of the T.V.A.

Duncan Says Keep Photo Appointments

All students who have not yet been photographed for the Yackety-Yack are urged to complete the appointments they made during registration, Editor Bill Duncan said yesterday.

If a student has missed his appointment he is requested to come to the Yack office in Graham Memorial immediately.

By completing his appointment now, a student can decide which of the poses he would like to appear in the '49 Yack. The photographer's time is limited, so all students who haven't made their appointments as yet are urged to come to the Yack office as soon as possible.

Cleveland-Boston Game Stirs Campus As Geology Students Whisper Score

By Wink Locklair

A breathless geology student slipped into his seat three minutes late. s the roll was taken, 61 whispered to 62, "It's one-all. Lou Boudreau belted a homer in the first inning and the Sox came back to tie it up in their half."

In the lounge at Graham Memorial, a good-sized group of pro-Boston fans (and two dogs) sat tensely around a large console, listening to Mel Allen's voice floating in from Fenway park. Nothing since the Carolina-Georgia hair-raiser last Saturday held students closer to their radios than the Cleveland-Boston play-off game for the American league pennant yesterday afternoon.

The unprecedented game was a life-saver for a dull, cold, dreary afternoon. Portable radios were seen alongside coffee cups in a number of Chapel Hill cafes, and word had it that patrons of the Village theater were in touch with the game through word-of-mouth from the ushers.

Although Cleveland held the upper hand throughout, local Boston fans never gave up hope. But the special attraction did serve one very useful purpose: Boston Brave rooters could size up the foe for the opening game in the 1948 World Series Wednesday afternoon.

Cutting The Cost

From the University of Virginia's Cavalier Daily comes an idea worth considering. It is a project for beating the high cost of textbooks.

"With the price of textbooks skyrocketing and the percentage of non-GI students rising," says the Cavalier, "more and more of us are shelling out more and more for the equipment which is essential to the process of education. Today, the damage for just the basic books required under the average curriculum is seldom less than twenty-five or thirty dollars."

The situation is the same here at Carolina as most of us know too well after having recently shelled out for this quarter's books. And what happens to these books at the end of the course? The Cavalier editorial continues:

"At the end of the semester, students have two alternatives: either to sell back these white elephants to the local bookstores (at a rate which hovers around one dollar for every three paid for them), or to let them lie on their shelves, or in boxes in the attic. Most choose the latter, for want of a sufficient monetary incentive for hauling them to a bookstore."

What can be done about the situation?

"With prices mounting in the stores and perfectly usable textooks gathering dust in almost every attic," the editorial writer declares, "an opportunity exists for some non-profit organization to establish a service to benefit us all.

"We suggest that a non-profit Textbook Lending Center be established, using as a working base the hundreds of books that students have lying around from last year. Many of these are on the required list again this year. These books would be given to the center, and later rented out for the whole semester free, or at a standard nominal fee. In this way one student, by handing in his basic German text now would find the biology book he is looking for waiting for him when he needs it next fall, and vice versa. He might have some pangs about giving up for nothing a German book for which he could get fifty cents at the book-ex, but he would feel better when he considered the five dollars he would have had to pay for the biology unless someone had had the foresight to hand one in to the Lending Center. It's just a matter of arithmetic—and self interest."

One of our many "service" organizations could do a lot with that idea.

The Comma Question

Most freshmen regard punctuation about like Admiral Farragut did torpedoes. The guidance of a whole gamut of hyper-punctuation-sensitive English instructors only serves to make them painfully aware of the existence of a set of rules for regulating grammar and little else. Instead of sailing like a pilot well within the bounds of a marked channel, they dash about furtively like rats in a maze.

A certain colored gentleman summed up the freshmen's feelings when he said, "I knows I looks better with shoes on, but I'm more comfortable with them off and besides, they just slow me down when I'm in a hurry."

Those who speak reverantly of the agony of childbirth have never watched one of our collegiate tyros in the throes of composition. Instead of being ensconced in a hospital bed, with a sympathetic attendant nearby, he is cramped against a rough desk, and jeered at by a callous room-mate, or worse, by ninteen fellow Quonset-hutters. Instead of proudly presenting a gleeful co-parent with a heavenly bundle, he must shamefacedly lay his ugly offspring before a critical English prof.

The trouble with the art of punctuation as most Freshmen see it, lies not in knowing the marks themselves but in knowing where to place them, and that involves making decisions. Until they learn to make the right decisions, the Freshmen are faced with a seemingly insoluble dilemma, for they aren't allowed to write without punctuation and most of them can't write with it.

To those who have almost given up in stygian dispair there is a suggestion of hope. It has been revealed that there is a tendency towards the use of less punctuation. You may now properly omit the last comma in a series. Who knows? Perhaps the trend will grow. Today it is a comma, tomorrow it may be the whole works. —B.F.

Odds And Ends

By Rita Adams

ON CAMPUS: Watch your hats while the sorority girls breathe a sigh of relief 'cause that's one puff that could blow the whole town out of Orange County. Rushing last week was almost too much for all of them—rushees and rushers alike. It got to the point that Ferne Hughes was saying good-bye—we loved having you—and then she added before she could stop her faux pas, "I'm so glad I didn't get to talk to you!" And it hit the rushees just as hard. Fr'instance, there was the one who said to Fran Angas, "Everytime I see you, I get you mixed up with that girl who is speaker of the Coed Senate." Case of double identity, shall we say.

THERE HAS been something missing around this place all fall—all three weeks of it, that is; and we just now figured out what it is. No evidence of a Chesterfield representative. Since R. Foo Gidus treked off to Columbia University, things just haven't been the same.

Still around but not conspicuously so, is the C.C.U.N. Has the national political picture gobbled up everybody's time, thought, and publicity, or just what has happened to the organization that was setting its woods on fire with progress last year? Mention was made at orientation meetings of a mimeographed paper, the circulation of which reached 1000 last year and was expected to hit 5000 this year; we have heard nothing more about the paper.

JUDGING FROM the comments of this year's med students, the only thing dead in their school is the cadavers. Gordon Heath, whom you probably know as Sody Pop—don't ask us where that name came from, 'cause we've tried in vain for a year to find out—Anyhoo, Sody has been plaguing his date with tales of his 23 year-old, blonde corpse. Then, there's Charlie Adams who has evidentally fallen in love with his cadaver,— he hasn't been seen or heard of since he got back to school this fall.

WE'RE STILL wondering if we'll see Paul Ritch, former high school star in Charlotte's Little Theater, stealing the lime-light at Carolina. He's mighty good material, with all sorts of training in dramatics. Fact is, there seems to be talent going to waste all over this place. New students keep wandering through the DTH office looking for jobs of every description. And for the benefit of any of them who might bump into a seemingly common difficulty, the Carolina Quarterly office is on the mezanine to your right as you come in the front door of the building. Incidentally, you might even make use of the directory of rooms staring you in the face as you enter.

SOUND AND FURY members are beaming over the 150 try-outs they recently recruited—and also over the letters from faculty and organizations asking for new office headquarters for the group. Their bloodhounds tracked down Hammerstein's son and are now on the chase for Dick Jacobson, who toured with "Oklahoma." and Larry Peerce son of the celebrated Jan.

PLEZ TRANSOU is now going through his yearly routine of reacquainting himself with his former buddies from Winston-Salem. Seems they keep looking for "P.A." and all they round up are reports of "Plez."

IN TOWN: If we're short along this line, it is NOT our fault. Too many families spent the week-end galavanting all over Georgia and Durham and celebrating the victories. We'll just have to wait for another gab session at the Coffee Shoppe and hear Lib Napier's report.

Our apologies to whoever ramrods the work around the service plants. Something IS being done there. Smudged up men were dragging out piles of charred odds and ends all last week.

A Matter Of Opinion

These Days

Why Wallace Is Slipping

By George E. Sokolsky

Last Spring, the betting was that Henry Wallace would get at least 5,000,000 votes. No one experienced with American politics would bet that way today. It is now calculated that Henry might get at most 3,000,000. Many competent men would estimate that that is high because Wallace is definitely slipping as the campaign proceeds.

The shift in judgment is due to the growing certainty that Henry Wallace's Progressive party is a Communist front; that those who control the Communist apparatus in the United States control the Progressive party. Wallace's speeches read as though they were written in the Kremlin. If it is false that Wallace has become a slave of the Communists; if it is false that he closely follows the Kremlin line, it is his own fault that his own countrymen have come to think that way about him, That is the picture he now paints himself, just as at another period he liked to be thought a mystic and queer.

The Communists do not believe in the two-party system. To them it seems a ridiculous institution, outworn and outmoded. They believe in a one-party system. Their idea is that whoever takes the power holds it as long as he can for whatever purposes he chooses. They do not speak of being elected to office; the phrase they employ is "seizing power."

Thus the Communist party platform says:

"Millions of American working people have come to realize the futility of any further support for the bankrupt two-party system of big business. Both major parties are committed to the bipartisan war program, reflected in both the Truman Doctrine and its new look version, the Marshall plan. Both major parties are united in this program of fattening the billionaires and bleeding the taxpayers."

Then this same platform says:

"Millions of Americans, disillusioned with the two-party system, have given birth to a new people's party.

"The new Progressive party is an inescapable historic necessity for millions who want a real choice between peace and war, democracy or facism, security or poverty.

"The Communists, who support every popular progressive movement, naturally welcome this new people's party. We supported the progressive features of Roosevelt's New Deal. We helped organize the C.I.O. in the 1930's, we have supported every democratic movement since the Communists of Lincoln's generation fought in the Union cause during the Civil War."

"We Communists are dedicated to the proposition that the great American dream of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness will be realized only under socialism, a system of society in which the major means of production will be collectively owned and operated under a government based on the working class...."

Henry Wallace has never repudiated the support of those who hold such views. Therefore, he has been repudiated by most of American labor and even by the Negroes whom he sought to mobilize in his interest. He has gambled the respect and good-will of Americans for the support of a foreign power and its traitorous agents in his own country. And it was a bad gamble, even politically, because it will not bring him anything, not even votes. If Henry Wallace's vote is small, he will cease to be a factor in American politics.

This Changing World

'I Have Chosen My Side'

By Bill Robertson

(The circumstances of the world are continually changing and the opinions of men change also.—Thomas Paine)

At the present time there is a "short subject" film playing the theatres throughout the country. The title of this film is "This Is America." It deals with a poor, "misguided" college student whose father, (a newspaper editor), got pretty upset about the "fiery" editorials his son was writing for the college newspaper. These editorals were all about the capitalist system in the process of decay. The father's letter to his son constitutes the movie.

By the strangest coincidence it happens that the writer of this column is a college student whose father (a newspaper editor) has been pretty much upset by his political views. In the light of this coincidence we feel called upon to write a few words of rebuttal, hoping that we will not do injustice to that unknown college student. Here goes:

America is not a static thing. America is a great nation in process of change. To be more exact. America is, in the words of our greatest poet, Walt Whitman, "a teeming nation of nations....magnificently moving in vast masses."

Further, this movement has never been like the simple flowing of a river. Rather, it has been a spasmodic movement, a movement in which large masses of people, with sudden bursts of energy, have wrested the future from the past.

Such was the situation when our nation won its freedom during the American Revolution. Such was the nature of the bitter struggle under the leadership of Jefferson and Jackson to secure to the people their democratic rights. Such was the nature of the Abolition Movement — and the great Civil War which destroyed forever the barbarous institution of slavery.

No, the movement toward greater and greater democracy in our country has not been the simple flowing of a river. After the Civil War there were the bitter strike struggles of those who were building America—the industrial working people. There was the savage persecution and murder of their leaders. There was the struggle of those who fed and nourished America—the farming people—against the economic oppression of the banks and the railroads.

And what is the situation today? These struggles have become concentrated and intensified. They have been merged in a bitter war of the people against the trusts. The lines have been sharply drawn. The savagery of our enemies —the enemies of the people— knows no bounds.

Such in brief is the nature of American democracy—a dynamic process, fought for and cherished by the people. The sophists are fond of arguing that there are two sides to every question. That is certainly true in this case. There is the side of savagery, decay, and darkness; and there is the side of civilization, rebirth, —and the light of a world-outlook which affirms the essential worth and dignity of man. I have joined in the struggle.

Scuttlebutt Wanted

Editor:

For ten quarters I have lived in Ruffin Dorm, and have found it one of the better dorms because of its convenience. Now, some of that convenience has gone. What happened to the Scuttlebutt? When I left school last spring, it was still here, and appeared to be getting just about all the business it could handle. But when I came back this fall, it was gone.

Was it possibly losing money? I doubt that. Then, just what was the reason for closing it down? I've asked around among the boys and girls that were here this summer, and all of them knew it was closing, but none seem to know why. Is it a secret? Was it condemned because of polio? Could it be the Chapel Hill Merchants Association put pressure on the University officials to close it down?

I'm not above walking uptown at night (or during the day, for that matter), but why? All I ask is one good reason that it should not remain open.

Yours for more and better Scuttlebutts.

Cofield Is Annoyed

Editor:

Apparently a number of students returned to the University in September to be surprised and a bit annoyed upon finding that the armory store or Scuttlebutt, whichever you prefer to call it, had been closed. Located adjacent to Emerson field, conveniently close to the men's dorm area, that little white building was recognized and patronized by dorm men as a real benefit.

Perhaps the armory store was closed because of the opening of the Monogram club's circus room to the student body. The Monogram club's opening is certainly an excellent idea, but the circus room should supplement, not replace, the armory store. Armory store was not only popular because of its soda fountain, but also because it offered a great number of items, such as magazines, crackers, fruit juice, soap, tooth paste, that dorm students find useful.

Already a petition is in circulation, requesting the re-opening of the aromry store. Let's hope that the petition will be heeded, for it's apparent that the armory store is desired and needed.

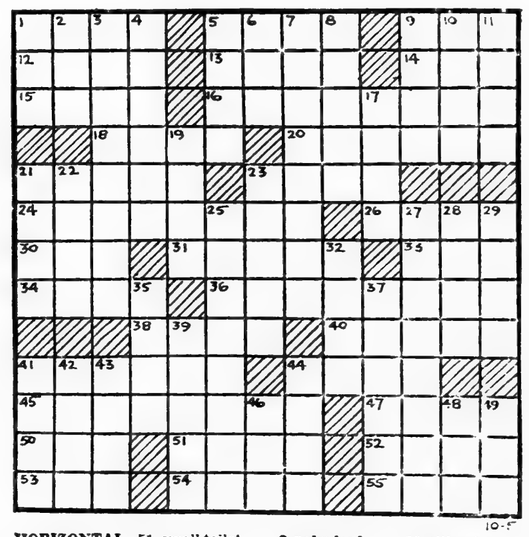
Att: Mr. Mendenhall



In reference to your ad in last Thursday's issue of the Daily Tar Heel, I would like to make a few inquiries. You advertise on page 5 in columns 5 and 6 a group of miscellaneous items from the Village Pharmacy, Inc.

I am interested to know if you have the Complete Baby and Children in assorted sizes and colors. Do you have the large economy size? If so, that will satisfy present needs.

As stated in the ad, I presume this comes under the delivery service. I am expecting, your immediate attention to this order.

The Traveling Troopers

THE TAR HEEL TRAVELING players returned home Sunday after their first road show performance of the year in the Sanford Dixie stadium at Athens, Georgia. And the critics, it seems, are still vociferously shouting the acclaim of the Carolina footballers in every Middlesex village and town.

Saturday's show didn't quite match the polish and luster of the Texas triumph, but in the end everything came out in the wash except the 13 point money that went down the drain with the soap and

The first act wasn't the best part of the play, though the Tar Heels did handle every bit well except the Georgia goal line; they just couldn't get it across. After the intermission things picked up a little and while a hidden choir of thousands of voices hummed "Stars and Stripes Forever," the Tar Heels marched on to victory. The critics, who had been sitting on their hands for the better part of the afternoon, released their extremities and thundered approval.

The Line in Carolina

FAVORTING CHARLIE JUSTICE was again the star of the Tar Heel extravaganza, as he did everything possible except sell programs in the stands between halfs. He was the feature of the show, big numbers on the Carolina side of the scoreboard and stopped the show cold in the fourth period with a dazzling punt return for yards in the direction of Birmingham.

Mr. Justice was splendidly assisted by a brilliant supporting cast being backed by the best line seen around since the Follies of '29. The defensive crew allowed the Georgians a total of 26 yards, and over half of this could be attributed to some of the boys being a little offbalance on a couple of plays.

The offensive line hogged its share of the spotlight. They had little trouble solving a Georgia defense that kept shifting like the sands of the Sahara, but finally found that by outwaiting the Bulldog boys, they could find their assignments just where Coach Snavely said they would be.

Making and Breaking

THE TAR HEELS were just a great team operating without a weak. They eventually scored by the simple application of the old theory of—if at first you don't succeed, try, try again. Injuries at critical moments hurt the Carolinians badly early in the game, especially when Don Hartig was downed, and again when Hosea Rodgers had to leave the contest on a fourth down at the goal line.

Those were the times that tried men's souls, but the Tar Heels soon learned that victory, even to a great football team, comes some Saturdays only through hard and persistent action. Georgia was up for the game and played in a region above their natural stature. They jumped to the fore early in the potential fiasco when a Bulldog halfback trumped in on a Rodgers to Justice pass and ran it down the Tar Heels' unguarded throats.

This was the danger point, for here the Snavelymen could have folded their tents like Arabs and Georgia been long gone to the coast of the week. But poise and experience triumphed over all and the Tar Heels gained their victory legs and marched on through Georgia.

What Might Have Been

CAROLINA MIGHT HAVE beaten Georgia as bad or worse than it did Texas. It was prodded toward the Georgia goal line early in the game when the Tar Heels recovered a Bulldog fumble deep in East Georgia. Opportunity just knocked, for the door never closed. A quick score might have started the Tar Heels on the road to rout.

But all in all, Carolina probably profited more by their casual brush of the fumes of defeat. It keeps the feet soundly on the ground and proves all the way around that football games are still being played on grass and not on paper.

Next week is another toughie for the Tar Heels. Wake Forest has had a pinkie pointed at Carolina all season and would probably turn the Baptist campus to the ground were they to defeat the Tar Heels. Justice and Company will be out to prevent such vandalism.

All of which brings one to the story of the week about the traffic cop who tagged the Asheville Ambler for speeding recently. He got a call from seven colleges for being the only man ever to stop Mr. Justice.

Cleveland Takes American League Pennant

Indians Triumph Over Boston, 8-3, In Playoff Game

BOSTON, Oct. 4.—(UP)—The Cleveland Indians, a team of destiny which ran a little behind schedule, won their first pennant since 1920 today by defeating the Boston Red Sox 8 to 3 in the first play-off game for the flag in American League history.

The Indians scored their climactic triumph before 33,957 suffering Red Sox fans at Fenway Park, and won the right to meet the Boston Braves in the World Series, opening here Wednesday.

In the moment of great triumph for a game ball club, the big glory belonged to a purple heart kid pitcher, Lefty Gene Bearden. He scored his 20th victory and his seventh in a row by holding the slugging Red Sox to just five hits.

Cold Steel

Bearden, who has aluminum plates in his head and his left leg from war wounds and iron in his arm, plus cold steel in his heart, was out there with only one day of rest.

There were those who thought Cleveland's daring manager, Shortstop Lou Boudreau, had gone crazy when he put Bearden in for this historic game. But Boudreau was right. With a whole season's effort for both clubs in the balance, Bearden pitched the game of his life.

Of course he had help. And most of it was provided by Boudreau himself. As if personally accepting the responsibility for the spot he had put Bearden in. Boudreau smashed two home runs, two singles and drew a walk to pace the 13-hit Cleveland attack.

Victory Tempo

Boudreau set the thunderous tempo of victory in the very first inning with a lofty home run over the left field screen.

That blow seemed to electrify the Indians, who appeared downcast and jittery after losing their final game of the season yesterday to the Detroit Tigers.

And in the fourth, another old pro, Indian Third Baseman Ken Keltner, put the game entirely beyond the reach of the Red Sox by blasting his 31st home run of the season with Boudreau and Joe Gordon on base.

That blow blocked out Galehouse, who also had been a surprise starter, and the Indians went on to pick up another run in the same inning off Kinder on a double by Larry Doby, Bob Kennedy's sacrifice, and Jim Hegan's infield out, making the score 5 to 1.

Bearden suffered his battle wounds with the Pacific fleet on the U.S.S. Helena when it was

Carolina Gridders Begin Drills For Wake Forest Tilt Saturday

Carolina's rampaging Tar Heels resumed practice yesterday afternoon for the coming Wake Forest encounter in Groves Stadium, Wake Forest on Saturday afternoon despite the precipitation which drenched Navy Field.

Coach Carl Snavely's well-laid plans were dealt a serious blow in the Georgia game last week when number one blocking back Don Hartig was carried from the field with a torn ligament in his knee. The injury, it is reported, will sideline Hartig for the remainder of the campaign. Diminutive Eddie Knox is currently slated to inherit Hartig's blocking duties.

Yesterday's practice session was devoted mainly to running plays and setting up defenses to cope with the expected accurate passing of Wake tailback Tom Fetzer. The slender Baptist passing ace showed outstanding form as he passed for one of three touchdowns and led the team brilliantly in their 21-14 upset over the William and Mary Indians.

As in last week's practice sessions, rangy ends Art Weiner and Kenny Powell were being tried out at the defensive halfback posts. Billy Hayes, meanwhile, was passing a la Fetzer while the backs got in some practice on pass defense.

In addition to Hartig, several other Tar Heels were suffering injuries. Bob Cox, who has been bothered with a knee injury since last Tuesday's scrimmage against the freshman team, was in light equipment yesterday. Bill Flamisch was also suffering knee trouble, but it isn't expected to be too serious.—FRANK ALLSTON.

Out for Season

Don Hartig

Don Hartig, starting quarterback of the local grid outfit, sustained a serious injury in Carolina's 21-14 victory over Georgia this weekend. Don tore a ligament in his leg and is not being counted on for any further action this season. But team trainers are hoping for a quick recovery.

Meeting Is Scheduled By Girls Hockey Team

Women's intramural activities will get underway this week, under the sponsorship of the Women's Athletic Association, according to Randy Hudson, president.

All girls interested in joining a hockey club are asked to meet today at 4 o'clock, in the classroom at Women's gym. The group will meet regularly, and girls who do not play well are especially urged to join, in practice for hockey intramurals, which will begin in the near future.

Tennis intramurals will begin next week, and girls interested in playing must sign up with Miss Frances Burns in the Women's gym by Friday. Each dormitory and sorority is limited to two entrants in the tournament.

Monogram Meeting Cancelled

The meeting of the Monogram Club, originally scheduled for tonight, has been cancelled.

Meeting of Managers Slated Today at Gym

Carolina's extensive intramural program gets rolling officially tonight when the first scheduled meeting of the mural managers is scheduled for 7 o'clock this evening at 302 in Woollen gym.

Tonight's assemblage marks the deadline for all tag football and fall tennis entries. All tag football managers are urged to attend, as it is planned to discuss the rules and regulations of sport, and also the possible revisal of the point system now used in wrestling and boxing. Other business to be presented is the organization of a protest committee and the question of whether badminton should be held in the fall or spring.

If things go as planned, the fraternity play will get underway Thursday, while the dorms and independents get into action next Monday. It is hoped that fall tennis will be inaugurated Thursday also.

Archery has been introduced to the campus and its present enthusiasts would welcome any others who are interested in the bow and arrow sport. The newly organized group meets each Monday at 4 o'clock on the eastern end of Fetzer field. All who are interested can contact Dick Fayssoux at 329 Tenny Circle or call 7580.

Tickets for Game With Wake Forest On Sale at Woollen

Tickets for the Carolina-Wake Forest game to be played in Wake Forest on Saturday are now on sale at Woollen gymnasium. The price will be $1.00.

Vernon Crook, who handles the sale of tickets, announced that they would be available to students at the Woollen gym ticket window on Tuesday and Wednesday. The ducats were also available yesterday.

When applying for a ticket to the game, the students should bring along their athletic passbook. A coupon will be given each student on receipt of $1.00 and this will enable him to pick up his ticket at Wake Forest just before the game. Carolina students should take along their athletic passbooks to Wake Forest in addition to the coupon. All seats will be in the Carolina student section.

A student is entitled only one ticket at the reduced price. If he wishes to take a guest or to take his wife, an additional coupon may be purchased and the full retail price of the ticket ($3.00) will be charged.

Student wives books do not carry the reduced rate privilege at this game.

The Athletic Office also has announced that no more season tickets can be made available to student wives. Already more than 750 wives have obtained season tickets. And this number in addition to the student enrollment for the fall quarter, fill up all the available space for students in Kenan stadium.

For the three games at Chapel Hill for which tickets still remain, there is a student guest arrangement whereby a student can bring his date or his wife by exchanging his student athletic passbook and the purchase price of one reserved seat ticket for two reserved seat tickets. Student wives who were not taken care of on the season ticket basis can be accommodated on the student guest basis for the State, William and Mary, and LSU games.

RIDERS NEEDED

Anyone interested in making football trips should report to Tom Lindley this afternoon at 4 o'clock on Navy field.

Carolina's Soccer Team Leaves Tonight for Contest With Navy

All set to inaugurate the new soccer season, a travelling squad of 22 booters plus managers and Coach Marvin Allen will entrain for Annapolis, Md. tonight to meet the Navy eleven there tomorrow afternoon.

This is the second year that soccer has been an official University sport and the Tar Heels will be out to make their second campaign even more successful than last season, when they compiled a 6-3 record.

The Middies took a heartbreaker from Carolina last year and so the Blue and White outfit will have an added incentive tomorrow. The score was all tied up, 1-1, at the end of the regulation period, but Navy's inside right Bentin pushed in the winning goal to give the future admirals a 2-1 decision. It was really a moral win for the Tar Heels as they had just suffered a 4-0 defeat at the hands of Loyola, whom they play here next Friday in the home opener, but rebounded to force the Middies, one of the top outfits in the East, into an extra session.

Hank Pallulat, who scored the Tar Heels' only goal of the contest, is no longer in school, but there are many holdovers from last year's squad who will see action against the Middies.

Frosh Soccer Drills

Tryouts and drills for the freshman soccer team will start Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock, Coach Marvin Allen announced yesterday.

All men interested in winning places on the freshman eleven, which has six games already scheduled, should report then. Workouts will be held every day from 3 until about 4:15.

Coach Allen emphasized that previous experience isn't absolutely necessary. With return of the freshman rule, coaches have an opportunity to work extensively with inexperienced men, who show promise of developing into varsity material.

Eight or nine freshman have been working out with the varsity all along and they are expected to form the nucleus of the yearling outfit. However, many more men are needed.

Symphony Group To Meet Tonight

The Chapel Hill and Orange county committee of the North Carolina Symphony society will meet tonight at 8 o'clock in Gerrard hall. Plans for the fall membership drive, which begins Oct. 11 and continues through Oct. 16, will be discussed. All persons interested in participating are asked to attend the meeting.

The following officers were elected June 24: Norman Cordon, chairman; Mrs. A. C. Burnham, co-chairman; Miss Emily Pollard, co-chairman of Orange county; Harold Weaver, secretary; E. Carrington Smith, treasurer, and Robert Madry, publicity.

TMA Meeting

A campus membership drive, started yesterday morning by the Town Men's association will continue through tomorrow morning, according to officials of the group who are manning membership tables in the Y each morning from 8 until 1 o'clock.

John Van Hecke, president of the organization reported yesterday, "We've gotten as good results as we expected on our first day."

Membership fees are $1 per quarter and membership is open to any student living in town who does not live in a fraternity house.

Seniors Wanting Placement Aid Must Register

J. M. Galloway, director of Placement service, requests all seniors to register with his office as soon as possible if they desire assistance or information regarding full-time employment after graduation. Placement service offices are located in rooms 207 and 209 South building.

Beginning this week, Galloway reported, company representatives will be invited to visit the campus for the purpose of interviewing seniors regarding employment. Those seniors who have registered with Placement service will be notified as to the speakers who are brought to the University.

Last year approximately 135 company representatives visited the campus. Company representatives are notified by the Placement service, and they come to the campus at their convenience.

This service is made available to large companies, and to many smaller businesses in North Carolina. Many nationally known businesses send representatives to the University to interview interested students.

Many registrants secure jobs while still in school and are thereby enabled to start work immediately after graduation, Galloway said.

Grumman Attends ACE Conference

torpedoed. He was missing for 10 days. Even when rescued there were medicos who despaired of his ever resuming an athletic career — let alone pitching a ball club to a pennant.

And the irony of it for the Ex-World Champion New York Yankees, was that they, and not the Indians, could have had him doing the World Series pitching. But they disposed of him as a liability and the Indians picked him up and won a pennant with his aid.

Thurmond Repeats Truman Debate Challenge

Vandalism Talk Held By Officials

Campus leaders from North Carolina State college and the University met yesterday in an early attempt to stamp out vandalism and create more good will between the two schools.

Present at the meeting were the presidents of the two student bodies, Fred Kendall and Jess Dedmond; Dean Wood from State and Dean Fred Weaver from the University; and other members of the student governments of both schools.

Bringing most of their attention on the subject of vandalism, those present suggested many and varied ways of getting the idea across to the student bodies.

One State spokesman said that he thought that the idea is to keep foraging parties of both schools from going out with paint brushes and buckets of paint.

Dean Wood said that the best way to stop such action is through the students themselves, not higher school officials merely talking to the students.

According to another State spokesman, State will have difficulty with their publicity, due to the fact that their school paper, the "Technician," is a weekly paper and will come out only twice more before the State-Carolina game.

Both schools were quick to point out and emphasize the penalty for vandalism. In both schools the penalty is the same, indefinite suspension from school.

Plans were made to reach students through the IFC, the IDC, and the freshman assembly.

Last year cheerleaders were exchanged for the pep rallies of both schools. The new idea is to exchange student body presidents for the pep rallies on the coming weekend and to exchange cheerleaders for the pre-game pep rallies.

Kendall said, "We appreciate the invitation to visit here. It was certainly an opportunity to better the relation. The campus government at State plans to do everything possible to assure that this meeting and all other contacts that the schools have with each other be done in true friendship and sportsmanship."

From Dedmond came the statement, "We were delighted to be hosts to student leaders and faculty of North Carolina State. I hope that this meeting may be a beginning of more understanding and good will between our institutions. We should look forward to further meetings to discuss problems not only pertaining to our athletic relations but to matters concerning our mutual interests as units of the Greater University of North Carolina."

Fund Increased

RALEIGH, Oct. 5 — (UP) — More than a quarter-million dollars in railroad funds went to the consolidated University of North Carolina bank account today because of a one hundred and fifty-year-old state constitutional provision.

Wake County superior court judge William C. Harris yesterday signed a final judgement turning a $275,598 settlement over to the University's escheastes fund. The settlement was the final result of a case envolving overcharges of passenger fares collected by the Southern Railway and the Atlantic Coast Line for intrastate transportation during a period between Aug. 1, 1944, and July 25, 1945.

Income from the fund is used for scholarships at the University at Chapel Hill, North Carolina State college in Raleigh and the Woman's college in Greensboro.

Freshman Group To Meet Tonight In Gerrard Hall

A one-hour organizational meeting of the Freshman Work commission will be held in Gerrard hall this evening at 7 o'clock, bringing together all freshmen interested in advancing their class's fellowship through the YMCA.

The gathering tonight will be open to all first year students. John Brockman, president of the freshman group in the YMCA last year, will preside over the meeting which will include brief explanatory speeches about the work commission and the history and work of the Y in general.

"The Y believes," Brockman stated, "that the best way to bring the freshman class members closer together is to organize a sort of nucleus of class leaders among the freshmen themselves. Then this nucleus can formulate its own ideas to benefit all freshmen throughout the coming year, the 'Y' offering whatever assistance is called for."

Called the Freshman Friendship council heretofore, an annually-organized group of first year students has taken an active part in the YMCA programs for many years. Last year the council arranged two dances in conjunction with WCUNC; co-operated with the YMCA cabinet in the local charity drives and the campus-wide Natural Bridge retreat; and planned the preschool conference at Camp Nawakwa for this year's new students.

Wallace Group To Meet Tonight

The Wallace-for-President Club will meet tonight at 8 o'clock in Horace Williams lounge of Graham Memorial. Persons interested in the Progressive party and the campaign of Henry A. Wallace are invited to attend the meetings each Wednesday. There will be a question and answer session at each meeting of the Wallace group.

Pan-Hel Council Will Meet Today

The Panhellenic council meets this afternoon in the Grail room, Graham Memorial at 5 o'clock Ferne Hughes announced yesterday.

ON THE ANNIVERSARY of the signing of the Trujillo-Hull treaty, President Rafael L. Trujillo, of the Dominican Republic, inspects the U. S. aircraft carrier Coral Sea during its visit to the Caribbean country. In the treaty, signed 10 years ago, the United States agreed to restore to the Dominican Republic full control of its customs houses.

All Yack Appointments Cancelled; Deadline Set

All Yack appointments for pictures have been cancelled, Bill Duncan, Yack editor, said yesterday. Duncan received a long-distance call from Arthur Grey, president of Chidnoff Studio, N. Y., yesterday to the effect that the studio is loosing money on the contract with the Yackety Yack because students are not filling their appointments according to schedule.

The photographers were originally scheduled to take pictures through Oct. 31, but further developments force them to stay here only through the 22nd of this month. Duncan said pictures will be made according to a "first come, first served" schedule. At least 200 pictures a day must be made in order for all students to appear in the 1949 yearbook. This is a necessity, according to Duncan, in order that both the Yack staff and Chidnoff meet their respective deadlines.

Last year's pictures were not satisfactory to Duncan, and he urged Chidnoff studio to send the best photographers available to the University. This was done, but to a greater expense. The photographers are top flight men in their field, and Grey reported that the pictures taken this year were far superior to last year's.

Proofs will be returned to students in less than two weeks after the picture is made, and implicite directions will be enclosed with the proofs as to what proceedure the student should use in returning proofs and ordering personal pictures. Office hours are from 9 to 12 o'clock and from 1:15 to 6 o'clock. No pictures will be made on Saturdays.

Male students are requested to wear coats and ties, and preferably white shirts, and the coeds are to wear white blouses. Four poses are made of each student.

Grad Exam-Takers To Register Today

All students planning to enter graduate school next quarter must register today for the graduate record exam. The exam, which will be given Oct. 25 and 26, is a national exam, administered once each three months.

Debate Council Calls Meeting

The Debate council requested yesterday that all students interested in joining the varsity debate squad attend a meeting to be held in Graham Memorial at 7 o'clock tonight. Business of the meeting will concern information on tryouts and formation of the squad, announced Earl Fitzgerald, president of the council.

80th Congress Is Di Subject

The Di Senate will debate tonight at 9 o'clock in the Senate hall, West building, the question of President Truman's remarks concerning the 80th Congress.

Don Shropshire, former president of the Senate, will introduce a bill "To return Harry S. Truman to the White House." The bill reads:

"Whereas: The 80th Republican-controlled Congress of the United States has failed to provide many of the measures that the administration deemed absolutely necessary to national security,

And whereas the Congress has passed legislation that has been detrimental to the economic structure of the country, and whereas the Congress has shown a marked tendency to court the vested interest groups,

And whereas the Congress has turned our respected government into a type of side-show by its rediculous hearings of the Un-American committee,

And whereas the Congress has generally been playing 'politics' instead of letting the best interests of the nation dominate their deliberations pending legislation; therefore be it resolved that:

Article I: The Dialectic Senate go on record as backing the recent remarks concerning the 80th Congress by the President of the United States, and Article II: The Senate goes on record as favoring the return of Harry S. Truman to the White House as President of the United States."

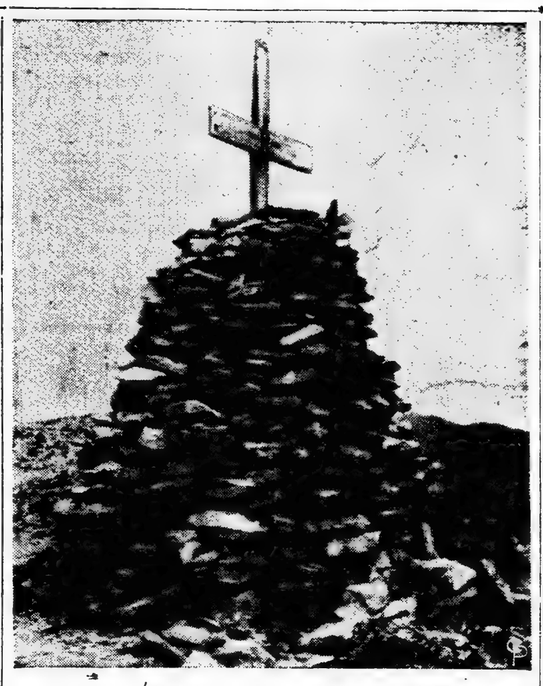
The Di Senate has had on its roll many great men such as President James K. Polk; Governor Zebulon Baird Vance, Past Deputy Minister to the U. N. Security council, and Dr. Frank Porter Graham president of the Greater University of North Carolina.

"The meeting tonight is open to all members of the student body and townspeople." said President pro-tem Gran Childress.



Ring Orders Will Be Taken Tomorrow

Orders for senior rings will be taken at the Y tomorrow by Lee H. Blackwell the representative from the L. G. Balfour company. Each Wednesday thereafter he will be at the Y between one and 4:30 in the afternoon to take orders.

As in the past the Order of the Grail will handle the transactions with Monroe Landreth as chairman of the Ring committee.

Society Writers To Meet in GM

There will be a staff meeting of all people interested in doing any type of society writing for the Daily Tar Heel in the kitchen of Graham Memorial at 4 o'clock today. Everyone is welcome to come, whether experienced or green as grass.

IN THIS ROCKY CAIRN, about 450 miles from the North Pole, stranded members of a Navy-Coast Guard expedition found records signed and left in a bottle by Comdr. Robert E. Peary more than forty years ago, in 1906. The cairn is located on Cape Sheridan, Can., where the stranded men were waiting for a helicopter to rescue them when they made the historic discovery.

Says He Will Even Argue In Missouri

By Sam McKeel

J. Strom Thurmond, governor of South Carolina and States Rights candidate for the presidency of the United States, last night reiterated his challenge to President Truman to debate the Civil Rights proposals anywhere in North Carolina or he would debate him in Missouri.

Speaking before a Hill hall audience of 1,800 that filled the seats, the aisles, and crowded outside the doors, Thurmond included Dewey in his challenge, adding, "Henry Wallace, I ignore."

Thurmond assailed the men who have said that the States Righters have left the Democratic party. "We have not left the Democratic party, the national leadership has left the Democratic party," he said.

In attacking the Fair Employment Practice commission Thurmond said, "I never thought the time would come when an employer could not hire and fire, or promote and demote whom he pleased. This bill is against the best interests of America. You can't ask an applicant if he is an atheist, if he is a Communist, if he has ever gone under any other name, or if he has committed any crimes. That bill is perfect for the Communists; they couldn't ask for a better bill."

As he made one statement on Dewey he was booed, looking around he said, "I thought we'd hear from the Republicans soon. If you Republicans will wait a minute I'll convince you."

Almost at the close of his speech, Thurmond said, "Now we come to Wallace. I don't care to discuss him so we'll get on another subject."

"Truman is coming to North Carolina soon," he said. "When he gets here I want some of you good Southerners to ask him to explain civil rights."

Thurmond pointed out that the constitution of the United States says that voting requirements are left to the individual states. "As long as the people in the United States can fix the voting requirements we will have a fine country and not a totalitarian state," he said.

Talking of the anti-lynching bill, Thurmond said he was against lynching as much as anyone because it is the worst form of murder. In the United States last year there was just one lynching, while in New York city alone there were 350 murders, he said.

Asked what his policy toward Russia is Gov. Thurmond said he believes in being patient but firm. He said he believed in giving Russia what was supposed to be given under agreements, but giving them nothing else.

Thurmond opened his speech by saying that no matter who ran in the election, "if I am elected the White House will have the prettiest first lady in history."

University Day Plans Under Saunders, Sper

By Lincoln Kan

Spike Saunders, executive secretary of the General Alumni association, was appointed general chairman of the University day program Oct. 12 by Chancellor R. B. House, and Norm Sper, head cheerleader was put in charge of the actual program at a preliminary meeting yesterday.

The University day services as planned so far will begin at 11 o'clock in front of the South building steps facing the library. The band and the University choir will lead the singing of the University hymn which will start the services. The entire student body will be asked to join in one minute of silence after the invocation. The program will end with the singing of "Hark the Sound."

The celebration of the 154th anniversary of the University since it opened for matriculation will be an expression of the faculty administration and student's allegiance.

Tentative plans made at the preliminary meeting also called for a parade formation, mock cornerstone laying and other pageantry. Classes will be suspended till 2 o'clock, immediately after the services.

The Order of the Grail was asked to assume the responsibility for the pageantry which will commemorate the University's anniversary. They will seek the cooperation of the Playmakers and other organizations.

The Monogram club will assist in the distribution of programs and will help encourage the full participation of the campus.

Attending the meeting called by Chancellor House were; Bill Shuford, assistant to Spike Saunders; Scotty Venable, representing President of the Student Body Jess Dedmond; Ed Lanier, director of Central records; Roy Armstrong, director of admissions; Dr. J. C. Lyons, faculty marshall; Gus Johnston, president of the Monogram club; C. E. Teague, assistant controller and business manager of the University; Victor Huggins, president of the Chapel Hill Merchant's association; and Spike Saunders, executive secretary of the General Alumni association.

Fitz-Simons To Speak Today At Bull's Head Bookshop Tea

During the fall's first Bull's Head Bookshop tea to be conducted this afternoon at 4 o'clock, Foster Fitz-Simons, assistant professor in the department of Dramatic Arts, will be present to discuss his recently published book, "Bright Leaf." The tea will be held in the library staff room, next to west door entrance on the ground floor of the University library.

No invitations will be sent out for the tea and no reservations will be made; however, all students, especially those interested in creative writing, and the general public is invited to attend to hear Fitz-Simons.

Fitz-Simons will be introduced by Samuel Selden, head of the Dramatic Art department of the University. The exhibit that has been on display in the main lobby of the library will be removed to the staff room to be viewed during the tea. The display, labeled "The Making of a Novel," shows the steps utilized in the writing of Bright Leaf. Major changes in the eight different versions from the initial manuscripts to the finished product, is shown in the exhibit.

The book, about which the member of the Playmakers will speak, required a period of ten years to write and captures the development of a tremendous fortune in the tobacco industry. Motion picture rights to the 631-page book, published by Reinhart and company, has been sold by Fitz-Simons to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios.

Debate Council Schedules First Meeting This Evening

The University Debate council will hold its first meeting of the year tonight in Horace Williams lounge of Graham Memorial, Earl Fitzgerald, president, announced yesterday.

Students interested in varsity debating, especially new and transfer students, are requested to attend the meeting.

At the meeting, Fitzgerald said, the intercollegiate debate question will be given to those present, and announcements regarding practice debates and tryouts will be made. He emphasized that the Debate council is in need of coed speakers, in order to use all-girl teams during the year.

The tentative program for this quarter's activity included debates with the University of Virginia, Georgetown university, University of Pennsylvania, Princeton university, Yale university, and Harvard university. This is a continuation of the extensive debate program which was in progress here last year.

Several schools, including the University of Georgia, have requested to be listed on the debate schedule here in Chapel Hill. Plans are being made for later in the year when the debate team will attend tournaments, and visit other schools in the neighboring states.

Freshmen Hear Spruill Speak During Third Assembly Meeting

By Charles Pritchard

Continuing orientation of new students, the third freshman assembly in Memorial hall yesterday introduced to the students Dean of the General college C. P. Spruill, Jr., who briefly outlined the obligations of faculty and students along with the opportunities presented.

Dean Spruill, a graduate of the University and the instigator of the division of the General college, said yesterday that the heritage of the University has been placed in the hands of the freshmen, and that here it is a case in which the whole is greater than its parts.

"As long as you live and remember, there will be the memory of experience at Chapel Hill," the speaker said.

According to Dean Spruill, an attempt is being made to continue the task that is becoming harder and harder to discourage. This faculty obligation, he said, is to recognize and deal with each student as an individual.

He urged the freshmen to arrange conferences with their advisors in order to plan "the best years of your four years of study." He recommended that the students take full advantage of placement test service, medical advice and urged them to adapt the resources of the University to the energies of the student.

Strenuous efforts, Dean Spruill pointed out, are still being made to combat the housing crisis, another faculty obligation.

"Personal conflicts can be resolved by the ideal that each student is an individual, unique in his own abilities," he said, explaining the opportunities of developing warm associations and personal friendships among students.

"We will find that most anything we learn comes in handy at one time or another," he advised.

Well-Baby Clinic Switches Dates

The Chapel Hill Well-Baby clinic, co-sponsored by the Junior Service league and the District Health department, announced yesterday that their meeting dates will be changed.

The meetings will be held Oct. 12 and Oct. 26 at 1:30 in the afternoon. The former morning section will meet at the latter date. All morning meetings have been cancelled for the quarter.

The babies scheduled for immunizations on the morning of Oct. 12 should be taken to the District Health department on Friday afternoon, Oct. 15, or Saturday morning, Oct. 16, for their shots.

Carolina Ambassadors

Down In Georgia this past weekend, Carolina students got a glimpse of rude vandalism and general discourtesy. The incidents caused many of us to think back and realize with a greater pride, just how great our own University is.

But our being on the receiving end of the "chip on the shoulder" attitude resulted in our wanting to give more honor to Carolina by representing her in an honest and gentlemanly light. We had to give the best impression there, for by such conduct, we were able to put the numerous acts of rudeness in a light that showed the Bulldog fans for what they were.

Whether we won or lost the contest last weekend was not important. What was important was that the Carolina students left as they arrived—as true Carolina gentlemen.

We learned a great lesson. We wondered if the visiting teams who came to our University ever received the same impressions that we did? Did they feel that we were rude, ungentlemanly and crass?

We are of the hopes that they found us friendly and warm, confident in our team, without being obnoxious and insulting. We hope our opponents went back to their campus feeling that they received a kind and cordial welcome. We hope they never forget the words, "Welcome to Carolina."

There will be many more home games yet to be played here. Let us hope that we will represent our University in her best light. Each of us will be ambassadors of Carolina, just as our visitors are envoys of their alma maters.—L.S.K.

Symbol Of Liberty

"Your right to know is the key to all your liberties"—such is the slogan of National Newspaper week, in observance of which thirty journalism students from the University went to Durham yesterday to publish an edition of the Durham Sun.

"Your right to know"—Each day some 1,850 uncensored newspapers bring to Americans as much and as accurate information as can be gathered about happenings in all parts of the world. Often these newspapers are merely glanced through and tossed aside—taken for granted. Yet where else in the world today can an uncensored newspaper be taken for granted? In what other nations do the people have "the right to know?" Certainly not in Russia, where a government-controlled press may tell the people only what the government wants them to know. Not even in England, birthplace of individual rights, where shortage of newsprint limits the amount of information newspapers may print.

"The key to all your liberties"—Freedom of religion, of speech, of the press and of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the government for redress of grievances, these are the American liberties guaranteed in the first article of the Bill of Rights. These are the liberties of which the American newspaper is a symbol and a guardian. For, so long as newspapers are free to print all the news in an unbiased manner, so long as their editors are free to express any opinion they see fit, are free to criticise the government and to expose corruption—so long, and no longer, will the people themselves be free.

Share A Ride

The Carolina spirit is evinced in many ways, but in none better than the willingness of its motorized students to offer rides to their less fortunate brethren. The habit of utilizing all car space going to and from Chapel Hill costs only a little time and reaps a reward of genuine gratitude.

Only those who have hitch-hiked during a cold rain can know the joy of taking refuge in a warm, low-slung convertible and heading for home.

Our ride sharing habit is not only evidence of our spirit, but goes a long way towards engendering a feeling of co-operation and fellowship among us.—B. F.

Odds And Ends

By Rita Adams

ON CAMPUS:

FOUND: Can't figure whether Jess Dedmond is out for another political office or for a date. Anyhoo, he wants us to inform you that he has found $2.37 in a phone booth in Aycock dorm and is willing to refund it to the rightful owner.

THEY SAIL: Has anyone noticed the increase of "flying saucers" in Lenoir Hall since the advent of plastic plates?

VIVE LA PRESS: There were three mighty chagrined men in Everett dorm Saturday during the airing of the Carolina-Georgia game. Seated at a "friendly game," the trio leaped to their feet so enthusiastically when Choo Choo made his 85-yard run that a tube in their radio was jarred loose.

BIRTH OF A SONG: A new Carolina fight song was born at the Georgia game. Interested students and alumni, as well as Carolina sympathizers, dug down and came up with five dollars worth of small change to have it printed and distributed. It goes: "The eyes of Justice are upon you!" to the tune of you guess.

DATES WITH MODELS: Word from the Yack photographers is a bit discouraging at this point. Maybe it's the rain and straight hair and starched shirts—but their customer list seems to be running low. The dogs who continue to wander in and gaze at the bright lights aren't quite enough to keep business going.

GEORGIA CRACKERS: Chuck Hauser departed from his usual role of a whip-cracking managing editor and became a pep rally rallyer. Quite a speech we hear he made—sincere and to the point! Georgia infirmary residents were cheered by rousing yells proclaiming Georgia's fame on the gridiron—by Carolina students—rendered with volume that caused Georgians to comment—hmmm, better than we can do.... Charlie Howe, student party politic who always prefers neophytes to do his leg work, was legging it in a two mile pep march perspiring and muttering....Sweet Jimmy Lallane of the Touchdown Twin fame in 1939-40, now a little less slim, smiled and smiled and said Justice is hot, we're hot, the whole team is red hot!....Carolina had its junior cheerers, too—two young military school boys wearing Georgia Military Academy patches were carrying the Carolina banner (in all fairness, they came from the Old North State). They were A. W. Welborne, 15, Waynesboro, Ga., formerly from Statesville, and Paul Godfrey, 18, second lieutenant from Tarboro—the boy hopes to hit Carolina before too long. . . The car painting with non-washable paint was just a case of Georgia Horseplaytality.

CRASH: Pris Moore still gets a big kick out of the story that almost scared some innocent, well-meaning new girl out of town. Seems the new kid was telling Pris about a country club party which she and her date crashed way up in the hills of Tryon. Of course, none other than Pris' own mother was giving the party. It's a good thing there were no Communist scouts around: that red face could have set her on top of the list.

NO THIEF: Bunnie Davis wishes to inform any and everybody concerned that she did NOT lift her date's cigarette lighter and door key the night of the Texas game. Ed Rodman is probably locking his door at State with double ball and chain—or is he?

IN TOWN:

SUGGESTIONS: We have a few hopeful suggestions that maybe somebody might think about—and maybe someday put into effect. We'd be willing to guarantee their success. A bowling alley less than 12 miles away—a golf course where a coed who can't quite make "five cards under 50" can take a few shots—a pool room (say the boys here in the sports department)-

Draftees Are Getting Warm

By Charlie Joyner

"So live that when thy summons comes
To join that innumerable caravan...."
from Bryant's Thanatopsis

The first gentle breath of the draft was felt on campus this week when several of the non-veteran students received their questionaires from Uncle. It might pay those who are beginning to feel his hot breath down their neck to investigate the benefits of some Reserves here at Carolina other than Calvert's.

Meanwhile President Truman is running around the country accusing the GOP of being "the....ally of Communists," with Dewey following directly behind him charging the Democratic administration with giving "aid and comfort to the enemies of our system" of government. From this corner the whole thing is beginning to appear a bit REDiculous.

For the benefit of those carefree characters to whom the word "draft" means nothing but beer on tap, we'd like to add our plug for Ted Danziger's new "Ratceller" (no offense) at the bottom of Amber Alley. When you go down the steps to the alley and see the non-transparent stain-glass windows, you feel you should knock three times and say "Joe sent me" before turning the door handle. Once inside, however, you find yourself surrounded by soft lights, quiet conversation, and an over-all air of intimate, old-world respectability. Take it from us, the "Ramshed" is strictly SHMOOth.

And speaking of nice places to take a date, we can't pass up an opportunity to comment upon Steve Stefanous Cafe Seville. We were cruising for brews the other night so we dropped in to congratulate Steve on his new place and to look around. As anyone would expect who remembers Steve's smiling face behind the "Y" counter last year, the service is fine and so are the refreshments.

Last but by no means least on our list of elegant eateries is the Monogram Club's Circus Bar. Here you can imbibe nothing stronger than a milk shake and still walk out seeing two of yourself as well as any one else, and the elephant behind the soda fountain, while not pink, is nevertheless something you'll want to look at twice. Seriously, if you haven't seen the 3-foot high circus parade mural and the mirrored walls of the circus room, you've really missed something.

Bobbie Lowe, one of the new coeds and a yankee from Long Island was telling us the first of the week that she was told that it rained a lot in Chapel Hill, and that she was a little disappointed because she hadn't seen any so far! Well, Bobbie, what do you think of the Sunny South now?

Here's a story that has it all over the Long-Smith roommate affair. It seems that one of the freshmen over in "C" Dorm walked into his room and noticed that his new roommate looked strangly familiar. The two began to discuss the matter of where and when they could have known each other and it came out that the roommate had been the provost marshal in the Marines who had sent the freshman to the brig.

Chollie's Follies

Sherman Marched Again

By Charlie Gibson

Poor Georgia. First Sherman, then Herman, now another Sherman and Justice. But what's all this talk about the score and a close game? Why, we have tricks we hain't even used yet against the Bulldogs—card tricks, that is.

United Press recently insisted Carl Snavely would make an excellent golf pro, too. King Carl plays in the 70's . . .Someone introduce the male Bunny Davis to the female Bunny Davis. . .Last one to agree to the newest South building dictate about imports having to leave fraternity houses at the same hour as coeds is "an Ace lad" . . .Ann Coop Knight regards the local Charlie Chaplin as more than a comedian . . .Law student, already discouraged: "If I am ever going to be admitted to the bar, I better hurry on out to Steve's . . ."

Wanna see double even between weekends? Then notice such UNC lookalikes as John Green and Alec Hine, John Hough and Jim Spence, and the pair of Yack beauties last year—Joan Lucas and Jean Marie Lester. . .The entire Monogram Clubhouse may soon be filled with music broadcast from a centrally-controlled phonograph that plays 100 records automatically for five straight hours . . .CP attracts many prospective freshman politicoes through Eloise Jacobi, party SEXretary.

Why is there a Chapel Hill ordinance closely regulating when and where sound trucks may be used here? On Our Mistakes

Editor:

Being the former editor-in-chief of two different college newspapers, I understand the stress and strain of campus publication.

I must say, however, that your daily, so excellent in many respects should not be allowed to deteriorate through lazine to detail—the only explanation to the 20 (count 'em) errors in Saturday's edition.

I admire your makeup, alertness to news of national interest and feature plays. I hope that your fine efforts will not be wrecked by the minutiae of publication.

John C. Broderick

(Editor's Note: Proofreading, a cause of major concern to us, is done by a paid employe of the Colonial Press, Inc. So far this year it has been done by a University student working part time, but with this issue an experienced proofreader is being hired. Desk and night editors are also being instructed to make closer checks of copy and page proofs. Errors will be reduced to a minimum—or else.)

Against Sokolsky

Editor:

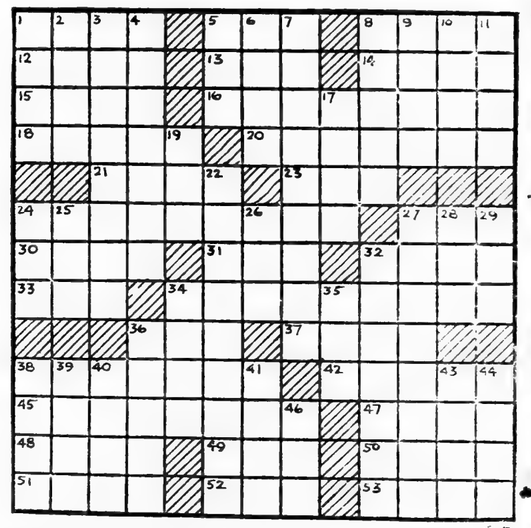
Since in today's issue you expressed the desire to receive comments "favorable or unfavorable, upon all columnists," may I take the chance of being premature, not having seen the other two columnists, in saying that my opinion of George E. Sokolsky is not favorable.

In these days when the office of the Attorney General and the Thomas Committee take such unwarrented liberties of attacking newspapers and organizations by implication, safeguarding their accusations under legal cloaks, and often making it impossible for those charged to defend themselves. I do not feel that I want to join the chorus of the bigots in asking that any columnist of any opinion be silenced. I do feel, however, that even if Mr. Sokolsky's views are expressed with modulation, and even if he shows some intellectual capacity, be it as it may an incorrectly oriented one, his position is well toward being extreme, and an antidote for his beliefs should be available to the student body.

The obvious and ideal solution would be the above—a companion column written by "the opposition." Journalistic sources other than newspapers could be tapped. However, for practical reasons this may be impossible. In that case a columnist of more moderate views would be appreciated, and I don't mean Westbrook Pegler or even Walter Lippman.

Edwin DeT. Kooser

And He Is Too



Editor:

It says here in not so fine print that a former paid propagandist for the imperial Japanese Government and the National Association of Manufacturers is now writing a syndicated column for newspapers slightly to the windward side of the right.

For Pete's sake, do you have to fill precious newsprint with the Republican paeans of George E. Sokolsky? The DTH is a student newspaper. Why not confine its space to student contributions?

I can take this kind of stuff in the commercial press where I expect to find it, but it's a rough diet in a campus "free" paper.

Gridders Second In AP Poll; Soccer Team To Meet Navy

By BILLY CARMICHAEL III

Boo You

'TWAS UNFORTUNATE BUT the thing that left the biggest impression on the quite agog assemblage in Athens Saturday was not the Tar Heel football team. It was, instead, the unfortunate and uncalled for orgy of actions produced by a Georgia student body that had all but forgotten the meaning of Southern hospitality. Chivalry is deader than you think.

The Bulldog backers were booing everything in sight and tossed in for good measure a few insults at undefended Georgia Tech some 70 miles away in Atlanta. The Tar Heels were greeted by boos when they entered the stadium and were forced to play in this agitated atmosphere for the majority of the afternoon. The Georgians were hollering for blood and occasionally got it.

The whole point to this comment on a rather discouraging situation is not a mire fling at the Bulldogs. Few people care what goes on in Georgia anyhow. But what must be slammed home is that this condition is hibernating on the Carolina campus and could take serious root.

Don't Get You Nowheres

THEY DON'T BOO just anybody and everybody here at Carolina, but every once in a while the Carolina stands do rock with the fragrance of a Bronx cheer because everything is not well for the Tar Heels on the field below. That's where the trouble starts, and Athens will go to show just where it will get you in the end.

Booing has yet to solve any of the major or minor problems of the world including the Russian situation. Comes under the heading of sitting back and taking it like a man or woman—which ever you prefer. And it drags one down to the unsightly level of all those who find it enjoyable to indulge in such actions. Let us dig them all a pit to hiss in.

An incident in the recent Massacre of the Pines personifies the point. Seems a tempestuous Texan took a flyer on the half-turned jaw of Tar Heel Bill Wardle, after which said Longhorn was told he could leave for the field house and cool temper in the shower.

A Unfortunate Incident

THE INCIDENT WAS UNFORTUNATE and the Texan received his share of the boos before being escorted to the nearest exit. But two wrongs, as usual, didn't add up to any worthy of note. The Tar Heel fans were just as guilty of a violation of the code of sports ethics as the victim of their acoustical efforts.

The incident should have died a very natural death at this point. Mr. Kelley, who had not committed anything of an original crime, apologized for his actions, and everybody went home happy—except a few grudge-holding Carolina students who couldn't leave well enough that well.

One such supposed Carolina Gentleman wrote a very bitter and very unwarranted letter to the Daily Texan at the University in Austin. He established himself as a representative of Carolina through the use of the proverbial Lindbergh, tossed off on the sovereign state of Texas, bragged of the glory of UNC, and finished up by demanding an apology that had already been delivered.

On Being Great

IT WAS A LEWD LITERARY endeavour and created a state of dissention between schools that actually existed in a few warped minds alone. It shows how one rotten apple can create an impression for an entire university.

Good sportsmanship is a rather corny subject that has been driven far into the ground in the past. It is a shame to have to write a reinter it. Greatest in athletics is more than a team that can score five times each Saturday.

Tar Heels Receive Most First Places But Irish Get Top

Notre Dame's defending national champions dashed to the front of the contending 1948 champions this week on the strength of a 40-0 victory over Pittsburgh. Carolina's Tar Heels were in the runner-up spot and Northwestern took over third from Army.

The Irish came in second to North Carolina in the first place balloting with only 50 votes for the number one position compared to 55 for the Tar Heels. The Southerners led in second place votes also, 24 to 23. But with Notre Dame gleaning 29 third-place ballots to 21 for Carolina, the Snavelymen wound up with a grand total of 1,190 points, ten shy of Notre Dame's leading 1,200 mark.

Northwestern Third

Northwestern ran wild over Purdue last week to win by a three-touchdown margin over the powerful Boilermakers and climb to third place in the nation. Army, last week's third place team, won its third straight game but was ranked fifth, 147 points behind SMU's Doak Walker-led Mustangs.

Duke University compiled a total of eight votes to place thirty-sixth in the country, while Wake Forest received five votes. Other North Carolina schools mentioned in the balloting were North Carolina State, Davidson, and Catawba with one vote each.

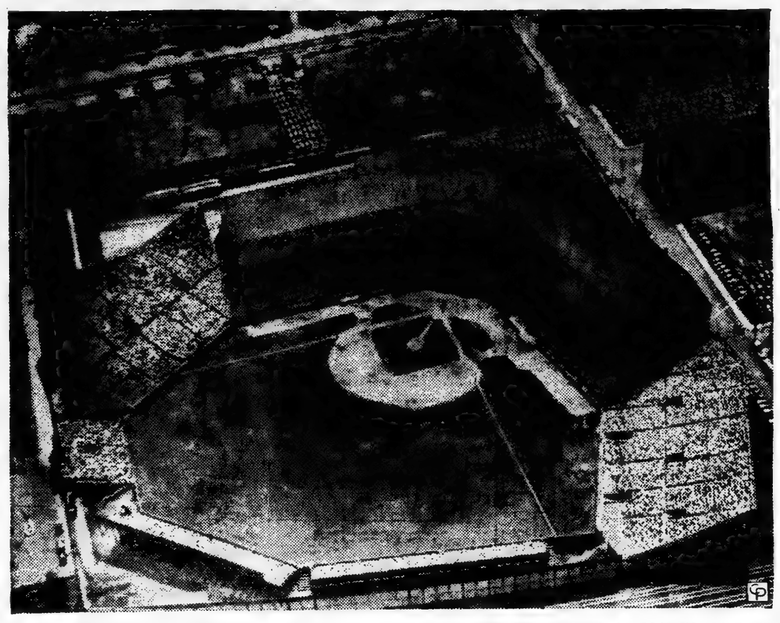
WORK IN MUD

The Blue and White footballers were scheduled to put in a full afternoon's work today as drills for Saturday's Wake Forest game entered their third day.

King Carl Snavely's boys drilled on a flooded Navy field yesterday and increased their chances for a win if the field at Groves stadium is muddy this week-end. Yesterday's drill was a little more comfortable for the Tar Heels, who had to work out in the rain on Monday.

The drills yesterday were confined to light workouts. The defensive halfbacks got in a little work on pass defense while the fullbacks, wingbacks and linemen also came in for a little specialized instruction.

Fetzer, Dowda Injured



Meanwhile, over in the home of the Wake Forest eleven, coach Peahead Walker was surveying injuries suffered in their 21-12 upset at William and Mary last week. Ace quarterback Tom Fetzer and halfback Harry Dowda both showed up with knee injuries, but were expected to be in top shape for Saturday.

Deacon drill sessions were devoted to pass defense and light workouts yesterday. The Baptists have a tremendous respect for the Tar Heels and are especially wary of the triple-threat Carolina Choo-choo, Charlie Justice.

Both the locals and their highly-regarded adversaries are expected to put a good bit of emphasis on pass defense during the remainder of the drills this week.

Site of Opening World Series Game Today

BRAVES FIELD in Boston, shown above, is the site for the opening game of the 1948 World Series which begins this afternoon. The Boston Braves, National League champions, will be hosts to the Cleveland Indians. Cleveland copped the American League pennant Monday, defeating the Boston Red Sox, 8-3, in a playoff game.

Cleveland, Boston Begin Play As World Series Opens Today

BOSTON, Oct. 5—(UP)—Manager Lou Boudreau of the Cleveland Indians revealed today that he will lead with his two right-handed aces—Bobby Feller and Bob Lemon—in the first two games of the World Series against the Boston Braves.

As was expected, fireball Feller was named by Boudreau to pitch tomorrow's opening game against the Braves' Johnny Sain, who won more games than any hurler in either league this season.

"Feller is the logical choice," Boudreau said. "He is the best pitcher in baseball."

No Commitments

Beyond naming Feller and Lemon, a 20-game winner, for the two games at Boston, Boudreau said he could make no definite pitching commitments.

The clash between the Braves and Indians has been termed one of the strangest World Series ever conceived.

It was a strange alignment because the Indians, the team almost unanimously conceded to be the winner, almost didn't get into it at all. And the Braves, the poor and supposedly mediocre club rated little better than a pre-season second division outfit, won their race by a comfortable margin.

Indians Favored

When the teams get down to business tomorrow at 1:30 p.m. (EST) at Braves Field, Cleveland will be a 13 to 5 favorite to win the Series and a 9 to 5 choice to win the opening game. The oddsmakers made no provision for the kind of pennant race the two teams had gone through—all they were interested in was how the teams stacked up man for man.

And on that basis it had to be conceded that the Indians deserved their role as favorites. For their crew, which had to battle into an unprecedented American League playoff game with the Boston Red Sox, winning it 8-3, to gain the pennant, generally stacked up as a superior outfit to the amazing Braves.

Third, Says Paul

Paul Williamson, in his weekly football rating of the nation's top football teams, has placed the Tar Heels third in the nation this week. Carolina was first on Williamson's sheet a week ago.

Northwestern was first, with a score of 99.6, and Army held second, with 98.8. The Carolina rating was 98.0. Georgia Tech and Notre Dame were fourth and fifth respectively.

Frosh Football Team Has Tilt Here Friday

Coach Crowell Little's freshman football team will make its debut Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock in Kenan stadium when the Tar Babies take on the University of South Carolina's eleven.

The Carolina ticket office has announced that two gates will be open for the game. Gate two will be open for all students and gate six for all others attending the tilt. Admission is $1.00.

Duke Gridders Out To End Tie Streak

Raleigh, Oct. 5—(UP)—Duke university, the tie-ingest team in Southern Conference, tuned up today for its 10th meeting with the U. S. Naval academy and hoped it could break the awful monotony of fighting to a deadlock. Even defeat might be a refreshing change.

The Blue Devils, a little more blue than devilish this year, opened the season with a scoreless tie against North Carolina State.

Last week, Duke renewed its old rivalry with Tennessee and uncorked a wobbly scoring attack. But so did Tennessee and the game ended in a 7-7 tie.

So now they meet Navy this week at Durham.

And what happened last year when Duke met Navy? Right. It was a 14-14 tie.

Coach Wallace Wade seems willing enough to put up his Dukes against the sternest competition as a glance at the schedule will prove, but this year he seems to be wearing pillows for gloves. They're a hard team to beat but so far they have been matched too close.

The Navy game looks like a fair bet to break the down-the-middle streak. But the breaks seem to be riding with Navy.

The Blue Devils have been breaking even on the work of just two or three men with the others thrown in because the rules call for 11 members.

Coach Allen's Club To Open Schedule In Baltimore Tilt

By Larry Fox

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 5—A total of nine lettermen will be in the lineup of the University of North Carolina soccer team when the Tar Heels open their season against undefeated, but once tied, Navy here tomorrow afternoon.

Carolina will present an experienced outfit tomorrow in its attempt to start off the campaign with a victory and reverse the 2-1 overtime decision the Tar Heels dropped to the Middies last year.

However, the Navy roster is also studded with proven stars, including three All-Americans. Goalie Schaufelberger and left halfback Peard both made the select group last year. Arch Ruggieri, who plays outside left, didn't compete last season, but holds an All-America rating from the campaign before that.

First in South

The Tar Heels will have to go some if they are to defeat the eleven that was rated number one in the South by the National Soccer Coaches association in 1947.

Navy opened its season Saturday afternoon by battling Cornell to a 2-2 deadlock through the regulation time and two overtime periods. The two teams played airtight defensive ball after Ruggieri tied the game up early in the third quarter. The Middies fielded an especially strong defensive eleven which blanked the Big Red after Cornell had counted twice in the opening session.

Gus Johnston, Joe Bach, Frank Nelson, Dave Boak, and Al Williams are expected to pace the Tar Heels tomorrow afternoon. Nelson, at fullback, is Carolina's closest approach to an All-American. He made the third team. However, Johnston and Boak were selected on the team for the Southern Olympic tryouts.

Six and Three

Bill Moore, Boak, and Bach were both regulars in the forward wall of the squad that won six and lost only three games last season. They will be joined by a part-time regular from last year, Dave Forebee and newcomer Pete Hexner.

Jesse Greenbaum and Johnston are two old regulars in the halfback slots, with reserve Mac Hagaman stepping into a starting role. Nelson will occupy one fullback position while Wally Vreeland will make his debut in the other side.

Old faithful Williams will be back guarding the nets.

Wake Forest Game

Today is the last day that Carolina students may buy tickets to the Carolina—Wake Forest football game at the special student rates of $1.00. Ducats will be on sale at special windows at Woolen gymnasium.

When purchasing a ticket to the game, each student must present his athletic passbook. A coupon entitling the purchaser to one seat in the Carolina section will be given to each person who applies at the office sometime today and pays his $1.00. These coupons will be redeemed at the gate at Wake Forest on Saturday.

If any students wish to take a guest to the game, they must purchase additional tickets at the regular price of $3.00. Student wives books do not carry the reduced rate privileges for the game Saturday.

FROSH SWIMMERS

All freshmen interested in trying out for the freshman swimming team are asked to meet in 304 Woollen on Wednesday night at 7:30. Previous competitive experience is not necessary. Any freshman who feels he would like to try out for the team is welcome.

University Plans To Keep Summer Work Schedule

Summer is a memory; however, it was announced yesterday by Chancellor R. B. House that summer office hours will be kept throughout the year for the University administration.

The hours will be from 8:30 to 4:30, with closing hour 12:30 on Saturdays. On football weekends with home games South building and other University departments will close one half hour earlier.

An option was given in the announcement. Any department may operate on the usual winter schedule if they wish, beginning Oct. 15, 1948.

Many reasons were given for the keeping of the summer hours. Some of them were that the secretaries often were student wives of men who had 8 o'clock classes, and by keeping early hours it would save them considerable waiting around for the 9 o'clock winter schedule starting hour.

Another reason was that the extra half hour in the morning would enable the departments to have the extra time to set up their business schedules with their help before having to start their 9 o'clock classes.

Landscape Paintings Displayed at Person

Fifteen original paintings by American artists, entitled American landscape paintings, 19th century, are on exhibition in Person hall art gallery.

Prepared by the Metropolitan Museum of Art as part of its circulating exhibitions that tour the United States, the paintings will be on view from Oct. 6 through Oct. 31. The gallery is opened during regular weekday hours from 9 o'clock to 4:30, and on weekends from 2 to 5 o'clock.

This exhibition is concerned with the immediate landscape that surrounded the artist. The paintings are closely related to the philosophic current clarified in the naturalism of Ralph Waldo

EVERYBODY gets lost once in a while, but that is no consolation to Evelyn Berko, 2, who turns on the tears full blast—with sound effects— after winding up in Detroit police headquarters. Her dog, Whitey, who should have known how to find his way home, shows his complete indifference. Eventually, Evelyn's mom and dad came and claimed the two strays.

Emerson Scuttlebutt Razed As Negotiations Prepared

600 Students Sign Petitions To Reopen Shop

By Gordon Huffines

The Armory store "Scuttlebutt" was torn down by a wrecking crew yesterday as student-signed petitions poured into the Student Government office requesting the University administration to reopen the store, which has been closed since the beginning of the fall quarter.

Student government officials said the order to tear down the building, which is located near Emerson stadium, was given by University Controller William D. Carmichael, Jr. The building has served as a refreshment center for students on the east campus since it was turned over to the University by the Navy Pre-Flight school.

A delegation of student leaders had an appointment to see Carmichael yesterday afternoon, but were told that he was out of town for the afternoon.

President of the Student Body Jess Dedmond protested the issue to Assistant Controller C. E. Teague yesterday afternoon presenting petitions signed by approximately 600 students requesting the reopening of the store.

At that time Teague issued a statement prepared by the administration. According to the statement the administration had planned to replace the Armory store with a permanent structure as soon as it was possible. "After thorough consideration, it was felt that the best location for permanent, sanitary, and healthful refreshment facilities for the expanding east campus would be in the area of the Monogram club building. At that time the Monogram club very graciously consented to permit the club to be opened as a recreation facility for the entire student body, particularly serving the east campus, and work was immediately begun to build quarters which we believe are as handsome and healthful as are to be found in any university in America," the statement read.

Protesting to Teague, Dedmond and Worsham maintained that the facilities of the Monogram club were inadequate to handle the increased number of students on that section of the campus. In the protest Dedmond stressed two points: (1) That the administration was not considering the welfare of the students, and (2) student sentiment was not considered before the building was razed.

Commenting on the situation later in the afternoon, Dedmond said, "I can think of no good reason why the Scuttlebutt should have been closed. It is my belief that the University administration and student government are here in the interest of student welfare and I do not see that this action is in accord with this principle."

Dedmond also stated that he had conferred this summer with Carmichael on the matter and had been told that the Armory store would remain closed on a six month trial basis to see if the Monogram club could furnish adequate facilities.

The foreman of the wrecking crew said that the building would be completely removed by last night. According to the University Buildings office the materials salvaged from the store are being moved to 603 Park Place drive.

Final Plans Are Laid For University Day

By Lincoln Kan

Final plans were made yesterday for the University day celebration on Oct. 12 at a luncheon meeting at the Carolina Inn.

Spike Saunders and Norm Sper announced that the entire service will be held in the area in front of the South building.

In order to symbolize further the tradition behind the University, a faculty member dressed as William R. Davie, father of the University, will re-enact the cornerstone laying of Old East on Oct. 12, 1793.

"There will be no speeches—just a simple ceremony to commemorate our birthday," said Saunders, executive secretary of the Alumni association. Sper added, "We hope to set a new standard on which future celebrations can be modeled, and we expect to present such an interesting program that all students will want to be there!"

Promptly at the ten-minute-to-eleven bell, the University band will present a short concert as the crowd gathers. As soon as the audience is settled, Chancellor R. B. House, "William R. Davie" and the faculty will descend the South building steps and move to the platform.

After a salute to the national anthem, the minister will give the invocation. The audience will then join in singing the University hymn sung to the tune of "My Country 'Tis of Thee." The programs which will be distributed by the Monogram club will have the hymn and the responsive reading which follows the singing. The reading will then end in a one-minute silence in memory of University dead.

The University Glee club will end the silence by rendering the "Integer Vitae." Paul Young will lead a special musical program by the combined University choir of over 300 voices.

As soon as the musical part of the program ends, the mock cornerstone laying will begin and will be explained as to its meaning and significance to the University.

Norm Sper will then lead the audience behind the choir and the band to Davie Poplar. There the crowd will disperse after singing "Hark the Sound."

The book exchange, Y, University offices, departmental offices and the library will be closed between 11 and 12 o'clock. It is expected that many of the business establishments in Chapel Hill will also cooperate with the University by closing during the service hour.

A MEMBER of Marshal Vassily Sokolovsky's policy committee in Berlin, Herlin R. Schdarnov is reputed to be the man the Russians selected to drive the Western Powers from Berlin. Schdarnov is held to be the person who engineered the Berlin blockade.

AP Bureau Head Delivers Speech To Rotary Club

Relman Morin, chief of the Washington bureau of the Associated Press, last night told a meeting of the Chapel Hill Rotary club that "the Russians don't want war, they want the fruits of war."

Morin was invited to be guest speaker of the club in observance of National Newspaper week. He has served with the AP in Los Angeles, New York, London, Algiers, Tokyo, Cairo, New Delhi, Italy and France.

"I don't believe anyone will deliberately start a war between the United States and Russia," Morin said. "However, the explosives are there, and there are matches lying carelessly around. But if a war begins, I believe it will be by accident."

Morin said there were two reasons for the Russian blockade of Berlin. He said one was to gain control of Berlin, the "psychological capital of Germany," and the other was retaliation against American policy in the Western sector of Germany.

On the United Nations, Morin said, "We have come to a period of diplomatic bankruptcy. They have reached the bottom of the barrel."

WSSF Committee Will Meet Today

There will be a meeting of the WSSF steering committee this afternoon at 4:30 in the YWCA office. Anyone interested in working on the committee this year is cordially invited to attend.

HPB Rules Are Signed By Officials

The office of the dean of students, headed by Fred Weaver, and the office of the dean of women, Katherine Carmichael, yesterday approved the House Privileges board visiting agreement, and said it would be available for distribution to fraternities today, according to Jack Thompson, president of the Interfraternity council.

If the agreement is acceptable to the fraternities, it will go into effect tomorrow at noon.

The IFC has asked coed house presidents to familiarize coeds with the terms, and fraternity presidents are to present the agreement to members during chapter meetings. If the agreement is approved by the fraternities, the presidents will sign it and return it to Dean Weaver.

Last week the House Privileges board met and drew up the visiting agreement, which is identical with the one drawn up and passed last year.

At the regular meeting of the IFC last Monday, the members selected seven from their group to serve on the IFC court. Those elected include Andy Cornish, chairman; Allison Pell, Tommy Jordan, Marshall Roberts, Bill Wilson, Charlie Loudermilk, and Jack Brantley.

The newly elected IFC court met Tuesday night and tried the Kappa Sigma fraternity for violation of last summer's visiting agreement. The fraternity was found guilty by the board, and it forfeited the $50 visiting bond, and was put on an indefinite suspension of visiting privileges.

Special Session Of Legion Post Called Tonight

There will be a special executive session meeting of the Chapel Hill American Legion post No. 6 tonight at 7:30, Paul H. Robertson, legion member, announced yesterday.

Although this is an executive session meeting, Robertson urged all Legion members to be present. The calendar, for use of the hut during the fall and winter, will be worked out at this time.

All veterans, whether members of other veterans organizations or not, are invited to drop into the Legion hut on Rosemary street at any time during any meeting.

Draft Offices Are Open on Thursdays

Students who reach their 18th birthday today or within one week of today can register for selective service in 208 South building.

The office will be open each Thursday from 9 o'clock until 4:30.

Drawings Begun

WINSTON-SALEM, Oct. 6—(UP)—A firm of Winston-Salem architects today began working drawings for the new $5,000,000 four-year medical school at the University of North Carolina.

Preliminary building plans were approved by the University Building committee.

The local firm of Northrup and O'Brien said the new 400-bed seven-story hospital would be built east of the present infirmary on the campus at Chapel Hill and would incorporate the infirmary and the present Medical school.

The 1947 General Assembly authorized construction of the new building and expansion of the medical school from a two to a four-year course.

Fruchtman Slated To Play Sunday At Hill Concert

Efrim Fruchtman, violoncellist, accompanied by Jeanne Fornoff at the piano, will present a recital in Hill hall Sunday afternoon at 4:30. Seven variations on a theme from Mozart's "Magic Flute" by Beethoven, a Debussy sonata, and Suite No. V in C Minor by Bach are among the selections to be played.

Fruchtman, a Julliard School of Music graduate, has joined the University Music department as an assistant instructor in music, a graduate assistant, and an instructor in cello. He has also attended the University of Florida and Teachers College of Columbia University.

At the University of Florida, Fruchtman was assistant to the director of the band and orchestra and appeared as soloist with orchestra. He performed with chamber music groups in and around New York.

Town Men's Group Sets Meeting Today

The Town Men's association will meet this afternoon at 5 o'clock in Horace Williams lounge of Graham Memorial, John Van Hecke, president, announced yesterday.

All members who have joined during the past three days are especially invited to attend the meeting.

Van Hecke also announced that the membership drive which has been in progress since Monday will be extended through today. A table will be set up in the Y for the convenience of any town men who wish to join.

The Carolina Science Fiction association will meet tonight at 9:30 in Roland Parker lounge 3, Graham Memorial.

NSA, Summer Session Work Will Be Reported Tonight

DEMOCRATIC PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATE Harry Truman (arrow) is welcomed on his return to Washington, D. C., by a large crowd with a sign spelling out "Our Man." Truman had just returned from a trans-continental speaking tour.

Student Solons To Hear Rodman, Lowenstein Talk

A report on summer action of the Student Legislature, one on the National Student association convention, and the filling of several vacancies will occupy the time of the first fall meeting of the Legislature this evening at 7:15 in Di hall, New West building.

George Rodman, presiding officer during the summer, will present the report of summer activities. During the first term two bills were passed, the first an appropriation of $40 for registration fees for University delegates to the National Student association, and the second establishing an order of ascendancy to the temporary duties of president.

The only bill passed in the second term was a resolution petitioning the administration to rescind an order banishing dogs from the campus.

Al Lowenstein, one of three University delegates to the NSA convention at Madison, Wisc., will present a report of the meetings, at which there were nearly 800 representatives from schools throughout the country.

Several vacancies in the legislature will also be filled at tonight's meeting. Two names already submitted, which will have to be approved, are Monroe Landreth, to replace Ben Kistler, and J. W. Anderson, to replace Bill Jernigan.

At Least Eight Dead In Bomber Wreckage

WAYCROSS, Ga., Oct. 6—(UP)—A B-29 bomber exploded over Waycross today and at least eight of its occupants perished but "three or four" others miraculously survived by pulling their parachute ripcords as they were blown into space.

The big superfortress was believed on a secret experiment flight, possibly involving cosmic ray research, when it met disaster high in the clear blue air over this south Georgia city.

Thirteen men, some of them believed civilians, were reported aboard the plane when it left the Warner-Robins test base near Macon, Ga., an hour earlier.

The disintegrating bomber crashed in smoking fragments covering 20 acres of marshland on the edge of the Great Okefenokee swamp.

With a roar like a clap of thunder, the blast ripped the big bomber as it cruised at 8,000 to 10,000 over the heart of Waycross, eyewitnesses reported. There was one report that the B-29 trailed a plume of black smoke just before the blast.

The B-29 fluttered down and began falling apart, witnesses said, but the momentum carried the larger pieces of the wreckage beyond the city.

"It fell to pieces," said A. C. Harvey, Jr., a filling station operator who served with the air force in the war. "It was about 8,000 to 10,000 feet in the air. I saw at least one parachute, but the plane was falling in so many pieces that there may have been more."

John Pobola, manager of radio station WAYX, said he ran out and "saw pieces of metal flying about high in the air. The explosion left a long vapor trail."

Jack-Pot Prize Offered by UVA Tuesday Evening

A jack-pot prize of $35 is waiting for some lucky student to win Tuesday night at the University Veterans association quiz show, Hugh Wells, president of the UVA announced yesterday.

The $35 does not have to be won by a campus Einstein, Wells said. Any student who attends the show will have a chance to win the $35 or a consolation prize.

The quiz show will be run along the lines of a "Doctor I.Q." radio show. Participants will be picked at random from the audience and Bob Allison, announcer for radio station WTIK, will serve as master of ceremonies.

Parents Invited To Nursery Meet

The Baptist church nursery school is available again this year for eight-hour nursery care if the need for such care can be ascertained, J. C. Herrin, Baptist minister, announced yesterday.

All parents who need the service for their children are urged to be present at a meeting this evening at 7:30 in the student lounge of the Baptist church.

Housing Office Names New List

The names of 25 students have been released from the housing office as eligible for dormitory rooms. They must contact the office by Saturday for assignments.

Those who do not contact the office by that date will have their deposits refunded, for it will be assumed that they are not interested in obtaining dorm rooms.

Quarterly Staff Will Meet Today

The entire staff of the Carolina Quarterly will meet this afternoon at 3 o'clock in Roland Parker lounge 3 of Graham Memorial, according to Editor Bill Sessions.

The subscription drive, manuscripts, and progress of the magazine thus far will occupy discussion. It is urgent that all staff members attend, and that they bring in their subscription books.

Chow Line

The cafeteria on the Wake Forest campus will open Saturday morning at about 10:30, according to Manager E. T. Cummings, in order that University students going over early to avoid traffic may eat lunch before the game.

The staff estimated that they can take care of about 2,000 people. They will remain open as long as seems necessary before the game, and open for supper immediately after the game.

Radio, Not Brain Reception Comes Over 'Eeg' Machine

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 6—(UP) — Jefferson-Hillman hospital's "brain waves" had patients and personnel in a dither today. Incidentally, the World Series broadcast was coming in without benefit of radio sets.

It all started when a technician fitted a special machine on a mental patient to measure his brain impulse. But instead of a brain impulse, the startled technician heard a distinct "Ball one, strike one."

While he looked around for a hidden radio, the program changed from the ball game to lively jive. That was a week ago and ever since the hospital experts have been trying to tune out the radio programs coming in on their brain-wave machine, known technically as the electroencephalograph, or just "eeg."

The machine has no amplification gadgets but the reception apparently comes in via extremely sensitive needles. These needles are supposed to register brain impulses on a graph but this week they have been acting like phonograph needles.

The reception first came in only from frequency modulation stations but lately all 10 of the stations in the Birmingham-Bessemer area — plus the Birmingham police department radio —have been heard on the brain-wave machine.

The machine manufacturers in Quincy, Mass., could not supply the answer. The weatherman couldn't even find a sun-spot which might have given the hospital something to blame it on.

The hospital is sending out an SOS for help, but not over the machine. It won't transmit.

Brazen Pillars Slate Meeting

The regular meeting of the Brazen Pillars will be held in Phi hall tonight at 7:30. All student masons are cordially invited.

Mardi Gras Back on Campus as S & F Holds Tryouts, Completes Show Cast

Mardi Gras will come a little early this year. All the romance, gaiety, and music which symbolizes the famous New Orleans festival are contained in Pete Strader's musical comedy, "Mardi Gras," which will be presented by Sound and Fury Nov. 4 and 5.

Casting for the show has just been completed and Strader, who will also direct the show, stated that he was "well-pleased" with the cast. Hold-overs from the summer cast include Faith Adams as Nita; Bill Sanders as Keith; and Jerry Weiss as the landlord. Dan Morgan will play Pa La-Fitte.

Anita Gates is cast as the heroine, Meg de Tourleville, and Bob Thomas as the hero, Beau St. Charles. Other members of the cast include: Gladys Levenson as Zenobia; Fred Young as Charon; George Grizzard as Art; Bunnie Davis as Maggie; Alice Ferebee as Cora; Nancy Norton as Millie; Jim Hammerstein as the Judge; and George Stephens as Art Jr.

Members of the chorus and dancers have not yet been announced. There are still some openings in the S and F orchestra and anyone interested in playing in the orchestra is asked to come by Memorial hall any night this week between 7 and 9 o'clock.

Charles Eaton Will Speak at Meeting Of Chi Delta Phi Literary Sorority

Charles Eaton of the English department will be guest speaker at the first open meeting of Chi Delta Phi, Monday evening at 8 o'clock in Horace Williams lounge of Graham Memorial, President Sally Woodhull said yesterday.

Planned especially for girls interested in joining the group, a national literary sorority, the meeting will be devoted to a discussion of the opportunities for young writers on the campus and in national fields. All coeds interested in writing are invited, whether or not they plan to join this year.

Members of the sorority are chosen on the basis of their writings. Manuscripts for tryouts should be turned in to the information office at Graham Memorial before Wednesday, Oct. 20.

Any type of creative writing is acceptable, and no set amount is required. Coeds desiring further information may contact President Woodhull, Pi Phi house.

Throughout the year, the group will sponsor a number of similar open meetings, to which the entire campus is welcome, with speakers from this area. At closed meetings, members read and discuss their own writings. Other activities of the group include cooperation in campus wide projects such as May day, sponsored jointly by CICA, Pan Hel, and Chi Delta.

Students Barred From Parking Lots On Campus By Latest Set Of Rules

Steele, Phillips, Memorial, Carr Are Restricted

Assistant Dean of Students Bill Friday yesterday released a new set of parking regulations which prohibits student use of four parking lots on campus from 7 o'clock in the morning to 7 o'clock in the evening.

The amendments were passed by the Board of Trustees and will go into effect as soon as proper signs have been erected in the designated areas.

Areas that will be restricted to the use of students are as follows:

1. The parking lot south of Phillips hall and north of the buildings department.

2. The parking lot south of Memorial hall and the YMCA, north of Venable hall, Venable X and Venable Y.

3. The two parking lots south of the Playmakers theater and Carr building, north of the walk extending from Steele dormitory to the roadway leading to Emerson field, east of Steele dormitory and west of Caldwell.

Exceptions were also included in the amendments. They include the staff of the University and students who can demonstrate to the administration the need for special parking privileges. These students may park in the restricted areas if they display a parking permit issued by authority of the administration.

Persons considered in staff positions include administrative officers, the teaching faculty, the extension force, the clerical force and all other non-student employees of the University.

College Centers Are Being Operated In Four Cities in State This Year

By Jimmie Leeson

College centers are being operated in four North Carolina cities by the extension division of the University during the 1948-49 term, for veterans and non-veterans.

The centers, which are sponsored by the North Carolina college conference and the North Carolina state Department of Public Instruction, are located in Charlotte, Fayetteville, Greensboro and Burnsville. The centers have an approximate enrollment of 459 students.

The college centers were begun in the spring of 1946, when, all colleges and universities of the state found that they had more student applications than they could accept. The centers were formed through the cooperation of the Veteran's administration and other educational agencies of the state to help relieve the unprecedented educational problem.

Many individuals and organizations in the cities desiring centers helped in setting up "off-campus" centers. A steering committee was formed to ascertain the number of students who would attend these emergency centers, if they were established near their homes. Through questionnaires sent to many high school principals it was found that about 15 college centers might materialize with a minimum of 30 students in each.

Later, the steering committee approved the 12 centers most likely to meet the requisite standards and commissioned the extension directorate of the University to act as its administrative agent.

C. E. McIntosh was selected by the directorate as assistant director to have the centers ready to open about the middle of September, if possible.

Classrooms of local high schools were used. College center classes began soon after regular high school classes ended. Some classes lasted from about 4 o'clock in the afternoon till 9 or 10 o'clock at night. Average enrollment for the three quarters was above 900 with a total faculty of 95.

LITTLE Mary Tobin who has just finished her meal at the Widden Hospital, Everett, Mass., looks none the worse for it after a 35-foot fall from the third floor of her home. Mary was rushed to the hospital by her father. The doctors could find no broken bones or apparent damage of any kind. She is being held for observation.

Temporary?

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 6—(UP)—President Truman signed the guest book at historic Independence hall today. He listed himself as:

"Harry Truman, Independence, Mo. Temporary address, 1600 Pennsylvania Ave., Washington, D. C.

Rhodes Aspirants Must File Forms

Students who plan to compete for Rhodes scholarships must turn in their applications to C. P. Spruill, dean of General college, by tomorrow in 308, South building.

To be eligible a candidate must be a citizen of the United States, be between 19 and 25 on Oct. 1, 1949, and have completed at least his sophomore year by the time of the application.

A three-man faculty board, consisting of C. P. Spruill, Cecil Johnson, and William Wells, will judge the applications and select four or five to submit to the state commission. The state commission will select two applications from North Carolina, and these students will meet either in Atlanta or Columbia for the final step toward becoming a Rhodes scholar.

Col. F. C. Shepard Answers Two Veterans' Questions Most Frequently Asked, and He Asks Question Himself

By Leonard Dudley

Two of the most frequently asked questions relating to veterans' affairs, according to Col. F. C. Shepard, are: When will the checks for the fall quarter start coming in, and what should I do if it doesn't come on schedule?

The answer to the first one is, checks should begin coming in after the first of November. These will be a full month's pay for October plus the last 10 days of September.

Answer to the second question is, you should not do anything until after the 10th of November. If a veteran has not received his check by that date he should see Col. Shepard, 315 South building.

Col. Shepard said that a veteran should wait the 10-day period because of the large number of accounts that the VA has to handle for the month of October.

The tables are now turned and the veteran's advisor asks this question: Have you received form 7-506 from the VA? This is the authorization of pay form sent to all veterans who are enrolled in a course of training.

It shows the dates on which a veteran's pay starts and ends. For instance, a veteran enrolled here should be paid from Sept. 21 through June 6 if he stays in school for the three quarters. If a veteran is taking the 15-day leave his form 7-506 should read Sept. 21 through June 21.

Any veteran who has not received this form by Nov. 15 should see Col. Shepard in South building.

Dr. James Patton Hopes to Continue In Creator's Work With Manuscripts

By Charles Pritchard

A hope of continuing the work of its creator has been expressed by Dr. James Welch Patton, director of the Southern Historical collection, an integral part of the University library.

The collection, which includes relative material of the people and history of the fourteen Southern states, has been around for a number of years. Each year a new group of students, coming to the University, discovers this manuscript division of the library, which had its beginning in the conceptive stage as early as 1833.

The new director, succeeding Dr. J. G. deRoulhac Hamilton, has been around since July in his new capacity.

"I am very glad to be in this new position," Dr. Patton stated. A graduate of the University and a former instructor, Patton assumed his duties in July. Prior to his coming to the University to continue the work of Dr. Hamilton, he was professor of history and political science, heading the latter department at North Carolina State College. He took his AB degree from Vanderbilt university and MA and Ph.D. degrees from the University.

The collection's creator, Dr. Hamilton, became the initial director in 1930 when the great body of source material was formally established.

Preserved and properly cared for, contributing to historical investigation of southern yesteryears and available to generations to come, the collection continues Dr. Patton. Gifts and material contributions merge to distinguish this collection as the largest gathtributions merge to distinguish this collection as the larges gathering of southern manuscripts in existence.

"I am hoping to continue the work Dr. Hamilton inaugurated," said Dr. Patton, who has written books dealing with many Southern subjects. "Unionism and reconstruction in Tennessee" was written in 1934. In 1936 he wrote "The Women of the Confederacy" in collaboration with Francis B. Simkins. He has contributed to many journals.

He has served on the faculties at Woman's college, the University, the Citadel, Wittenberg college, and Converse college where he was head of the History department for 11 years before going to N. C. State. He is a member of the American historical association, the Mississippi Valley historical association Southern historical association, historical associations of South Carolina, East Tennessee and North Carolina.

Stylists Who Made Falsies Popular Are Now Giving Men That Uplift Look

By Claire Cox

NEW YORK, Oct. 5—(UP)—The stylists who made falsies a household word are giving men an uplift, too.

For the sake of sex appeal corpulent males are tucking their girth into boned corsets with laces in the rear.

Max Brainin, who has snapped two-way stretch, believes the world is full of men who are putting up a false front. He's been wearing a girdle himself for 20 years. He says it makes him feel more manly.

Scores of men squeeze into bones and stays at Ruth Merzon's corset salon, where Brainin is chief designer. Mrs. Merzon is even thinking of manufacturing corsets for men on an assembly line. She's making a nationwide survey of masculine bulges in her campaign for girth control.

Men who suffer from Executive's Spread, an affliction peculiar to those who work with their feet under desks, or Plutocratic Paunch usually slip into the salon with the mysterious air of a woman who's about to have tucks taken in the crow's feet under her eyes.

The broad of beam, often driven to it by their wives or sweethearts, telephone before reporting for fitting room exposure. They sneak in so they won't be seen by their wives' best friends. Once reduced to the indignity of trying on a corset for size, they stop talking. They won't give their names. They want to pay cash, not an incriminating check.

"They like secrecy," Brainin said. "Getting your 'girlish figure' back is a delicate matter."

A few men have confessed before they clammed up, however, that they tried on their wives' girdles before getting one of their own.

Brainin said girdles are just the thing for men who stand on their feet a lot, whether they are grocery clerks or lawyers. Traveling salesmen sag from carrying valises. The iceman probably has a fallen stomach.

"I talked my doctor and dentist into wearing girdles," Brainin said. "I have one lawyer for a customer who buys five or six at a time."

The well-corseted businessman is wearing a girdle about six inches wide, with stays across the front. Some need full-length, two-way stretch girdles. Many have to be laced into bondage. They get a choice of baby blue, pink, gray or just about any other color.

What anchors them down is Brainin's professional secret, but he guaranteed men won't fidget in the confines of their corsets or tug at their girdles in public the way women do.

Students Asked To Notify Address

All students are urged to notify the housing office, located behind the Geology building, of any change in address, Roy Armstrong announced yesterday.

Students are also urged to check the DTH carefully for lists of students who have been admitted to dormitories. If students fail to supply a change of address to the housing office, the office is unable to locate them to inform them of their room assignments.

Armstrong also added that students who have moved out of the quonset huts should notify the housing office, so their room assignment, when it comes up, can be assigned to someone else.

Openings Available For Local Musicians

Director Earl Slocum of the University symphony orchestra announced yesterday that openings were available for interested students, faculty, and townspeople who wish to join.

The first formal concert is scheduled for Nov. 1. There will be a total of three concerts to be presented this year.

Rehearsals are held every Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock and Monday nights at 7:15.

Two things every college man should know!

1. This is a bookworm. Gets out of breath turning pages. Couldn't hurt a flyleaf. To take a leaf from your campus style book, get a smart "Manhattan" sportshirt.

2. This is a "Manhattan" sportshirt. Even makes bookworms feel active. Tailored for style and comfort. Washable rayon gabardine in choice of handsome colors.

Students Invited To Attend Dances After WF Football

A cordial invitation has been extended to all University students to attend a dance to be given at Wake Forest after the game Saturday.

The women's student government of Wake Forest college will present Jimmie Marshall and his Carolinians, a Carolina student band, for informal dancing between 8 o'clock and 11:30 Saturday evening. The dance will be held in the Wake Forest high school gymnasium, the largest dance floor available. Admission will be $1 for couples and stags.

State Students May Register Saturday Morning

Saturday will be the last chance for most North Carolina students to register to vote in the November elections.

Although state absentee balloting is permitted, unregistered voters must register at their home polling places in person. Chapel Hill polls will be open for this purpose all day on three successive Saturdays, Oct. 9, 16 and 23.

Students for Democratic Action, local campus organization, yesterday issued a reminder to students that absentee balloting is also permitted in all states except Florida, Louisiana, Maryland, Missouri, New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania.

Registration by mail for those not already registered is permitted by some states.

SDA will maintain an information booth in the Y from 11 to 1 o'clock today and tomorrow to furnish prospective voters with complete information on registering and obtaining absentee ballots.

Bingo Season Opens Tonight

Carolina's bingo season will open at 7:30 tonight when John Van Hecke will call the first game in the main lounge of Graham Memorial.

The games will be held every Thursday night this year, with cash prizes averaging between $1.50 and $2.00 and a finale prize usually running over $6. All students are invited to drop in for the non-profit games. Bingo cards sell for five cents each.

Student Roster Ready in YMCA

A temporary student directory is now available at the information desk in the YMCA for use until copies of the regular student directory for 1948-49 are released in approximately three weeks.

Those anxious to learn student addresses are asked to come to the Y personally instead of telephoning. Mary Godbee, YMCA secretary, has a typed roster there which anyone is welcome to consult.

The regular student directory, similar to the one sold last year for 10 cents per copy, is now being printed and is scheduled for completion in the next 20 days.

Travel Agency Trip Tempts Carolians To Get Tamborines

After a brouse through Graham Memorial's travel agency, it is tempting to turn gypsy, grab a tamborine, and take off to points anywhere from the Canadian Rockies to Cuba. That tamborine, incidentally, might come in handy for a collection to buy a few train, plane, or bus tickets.

On a table steeped high with colorful pamphlets and maps are enough intriguing descriptions to keep a body traveling for the rest of his life.—full-page color pictures of Yellowstone national park, sun bathing on the Florida strand, and Cuban dances. And right above these items are times tables on nearly every means of transportation servicing this part of the country.

For those who are inclined to travel closer home, there are new time table charts with schedules from Raleigh to Washington, New York, Jacksonville, Miami, Tampa, St. Petersburg.

Members of the travel agency are in their office on the second floor of Graham Memorial from 1 until 2 o'clock on week days and from 9 until 12 o'clock on Saturdays.

Under the directorship of Bob Watson, they offer a valuable service to the student body by working out itineraries and making arrangements for reservations. This service is offered to students through the courtesy of Graham Memorial.

AT LAGUARDIA FIELD, N. Y., Mrs. Nancy Fletcher Choremi, who received a suspended sentence after her conviction on a morals charge, is interviewed on leaving New York for Casablanca, Morocco. Mrs. Choremi, the daughter of an American diplomat, was accompanied by her husband, George A. Choremi, Egyptian cotton broker, and their five-year-old son John.

Wallace's Presidential Campaign Beginning To Slip, Skid, Says Scribe

By Lyle C. Wilson

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6—(UP)—Henry A. Wallace's left wing campaign for president is beginning to skid, stumble and slip.

Few political observers believe now that his effort to divide the New Deal-Democratic vote to insure President Truman's defeat will have any real effect on next month's presidential returns.

The congressional contest is a different story. Wallace's campaign manager, C. B. Baldwin, jolted Republicans last week by announcing withdrawal of several third party congressional candidates in districts where they were pretty sure to divide the New Deal-Democratic vote and assure the election of Republican candidates.

Even more disappointing to the GOP was the decision of the Wallace high command against entering a third party senatorial candidate in Minnesota. Mayor Hubert Humphrey of Minneapolis is the Democratic-Farmer Labor candidate for Senator there. He opposes Sen. Joseph H. Ball, a Republican. Ball will need all the help he can get to remain in the Senate. The left wingers had planned to enter former Gov. Elmer Benson to make it a three-way contest. With Benson in, Ball's election would have been more than likely. With Benson out, Ball is in for a hard fight.

Democrats have a chance in November to regain control of the Senate. The division now is: Republicans 51; Democrats 45. But left wing candidates will be of some assistance to the GOP in holding the Senate unless there are more withdrawals of congressional candidates. The Democratic chances would be much brighter if the third party did not exist.

The Wallace party has 11 candidates in as many senate contests, three of them in the South where they have no particular significance. Outside the South there are third party senatorial candidates in New Hampshire, Delaware, Kentucky, Idaho, New Mexico, New Jersey, Colorado and Iowa.

Republican senators seeking re-election in contests where third party candidates are entered cannot fail to obtain some benefit from the three-way division of ballots. This is especially true in Iowa, New Jersey and Kentucky.

Wallace's ambition to be president and his willingness to go along with the Communists who are among his most active supporters may be the factor which will maintain Republican control of the senate.

Candidate Thurmond Tells Yankees They Need Federal Anti-Murder Law

Dixiecrat Leader Makes One Speech In Far Northland

NEW YORK, Oct. 6—(UP)—Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, States' Rights Democratic candidate for president, said today that if the South needs "a federal law for murder by lynchers, you need a federal law for murder by gangsters."

In his only campaign speech in the North, the governor of South Carolina told an Overseas Press club luncheon meeting that he came here "to bring about a better understanding of the fight we are making for state sovereignty and constitutional government."

Thurmond said, in a speech prepared for delivery at the luncheon, that the states' rights movement had gained such support that it appeared probable the party would get more than 100 electoral votes.

Hitting at President Truman's civil rights program as unconstitutional and "un-American to the core," Thurmond said that "the fight we are making is not motivated by racial prejudice."

"Neither the people of New York nor those of South Carolina approve of murder," he said. "Lynching is murder, just as gangster killing is murder. We had one lynching in the South last year. You have had more gang murders in New York in five years than we have had lynchings in the South in 50 years.

"If we need a federal law for murder by lynchers, you need a federal law for murder by gangsters. I believe you feel that the crime of murder is one for the state courts."

Tryouts for The Beggar's Opera Slated for Today

Tryouts for an early English opera burlesque, "The Beggar's Opera," was announced yesterday by Phi Mu Alpha and Sigma Alpha Iota, honorary music fraternity and sorority, co-sponsoring the show.

Tryouts for the opera will be held tonight at 7 o'clock and and tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock in room 202, Hill music hall.

The opera, which is tentatively scheduled for Nov. 18 and 19, will have the cooperation of the Music and Dramatic Arts departments as well as the Sound and Fury student organization.

Copies of the score of "The Beggar's Opera" are available on reserve in the music library in Hill hall for those who wish to study them prior to the tryouts.

The co-sponsors, PMA and SAI, also announced that Dr. Jan P. Schinhan of the music department will be the musical director.

Stray Greeks Meet Tuesday

The Stray Greeks organization, composed of sorority women whose chapters are not represented on this campus, entertained with a tea Tuesday afternoon from 4:30 to 5:30 in Alderman parlor. This affair honored new Stray Greeks on the campus.

Among those present were Molly Craig, Beth Deaton, Kay Holden, Lindsay Tate, and Alice Sharp, old members, and Carrie Dixon, Margaret Law, Jean Elizabeth Ogburn, Joy Katt, Frieda Anne Snow, Marylin Stanley, Sara Caroline Williams, Grace Sneed, Mary Jean Lee, Mary Gray Porter, Caroline McCluny, Blanco Rollins, Helen Mapp, Margaret Butler, Mary Virginia Hayes, Gene Ann Snyder, Mary Gusta Beall, Ann Bridger, Dorothy Fawatt, Betty Belk, and Betty Otter, new members.

Thoughts On Dixiecrats

The Carolina Thurmanites have joined the Wallacites on our campus in revolt against the Democratic party. No one was surprised that the Dixiecrat supporters organized a group here, rather we were surprised that they delayed two weeks in doing so.

Some seventeen of Thurmond's supporters met Monday night for the "organizational meeting" of the "Young States Righters." It is encouraging for those of us who believe in either the Republican or Democatic party to see that such a minority of students had sufficient interest in the proposed organization to be present at the meeting.

It is difficult to keep from comparing the Dixiecrats to Wallace's Progressive party. Their interests are as far different as any two party platforms could be, but they are alike in that they both have seen fit to bolt from their mother group.

Yet, if sides had to be taken between the two groups, the Wallacites probably have a better reason for their actions. They are not preaching just against the presidential candidate of one party, but are wholeheartedly attacking every candidate of practically every party on the voting ticket.

The Dixiecrats, however, are against President Truman and President Truman alone. They haven't even bothered to condemn Senator Barkley, his running mate, who must believe in the same civil rights program that Truman proposes if he consented to be his running mate.

We must concede then, that the Dixiecrats are merely fighting a grudge and are not particular in the methods that they choose to do it. In arguing with a Thurmond supporter, one finds that he is usually unwilling to discuss the possibility of the damage that the Thurmond-Wright ticket will do to the Democratic party. They can talk only of "teaching the White House powers a lesson". We cannot help but wonder, however, if the lesson that is taught will not be learned by our erring Southerners.

The Republicans—to all public appearances—are firmly united behind Thomas E. Dewey. The loyal Democrats—also as far as the public is concerned—are behind Truman. The fact that both parties may have men behind the scene who are planning to fight the civil rights battle after the election is over, is kept strictly on the quiet side.

Whether we be Republicans or Democrats, the movements, the shouting, the accusations of the Southern Dixiecrats seems to be a losing, silly fight of a few stubborn men. If they lose their battle, as they surely will, and if Truman is defeated by Dewey, it is not pleasant to contemplate the thoughts of the Southern gentlemen who led the "revolt" during the next four years. —B.B.

To Avoid Delay

The coed visiting agreement, which regulates conditions under which coeds may visit fraternity houses, was signed by Deans Carmichael and Weaver yesterday and will go to the fraternities for approval today. Since the agreement is the same as that of last year, there seems to be no reason why it should not be signed by most groups in time to go into effect Friday at noon.

However, if there had been any changes made, negotiations between the administration and fraternities might have taken a longer time with coeds being denied the visiting privilege in the meanwhile. For this reason we suggest that the House Privileges board submit next year's agreement in the spring rather than waiting until school reconvenes in September. In this way the board and administration officials will have time to make any necessary negotiations before the summer vacation and the agreement will be ready for fraternity approval immediately upon the reopening of school.

Odds And Ends

By Rita Adams

ODD AND MAYBE THE END: The following brief from T. D. Kemp's column of last Sunday is enough to scare the stuffin's out of all of us.

"Worry, of course, does no good. You may recall the old lady who said: 'I've had lots of troubles in my life; and most of 'em never happened.'

"If you really enjoy worry, read what some of the scientists have to say. For example, Dr. Hugh H. Brown, of Douglaston, N. Y., warns that our planet is about to upset. The trouble, Scientist Brown says, is that the ice in the Antarctic is getting thicker and heavier. The earth is wobbling. Soon the slosh will come, causing the two poles to move their positions. Most of mankind will be drowned and the survivors will enjoy new climates. The last time this shift occurred, he says, caused Noah's flood."

THAT'S NEWS, SON. Ask Phil Stone about the man-bites-dog incident he saw last week-end up Virginia way. It seems that when a Heinz (all 57 varieties) dog licked the face of a little, four-year-old boy, "Junior" grabbed hold of his tail and took a lusty bite. Phil jumped even higher than the dog when the animal yelped, and said that the last he (Phil, that is) saw of him was the remains of a tail heading for Chapel Hill and safety.

SCALPERS TAKE HEED. We have an honest, dependable gentleman here in the DTH office who is very eager to possess just ONE ticket to the Duke game. Line forms to the right.

CLASSIFIED—BUT HOW? As our good deed for the week, we'd like so much to find three dates for the Wake Forest game for three new students over in Quonset hut 24. Puz Nichols, J. C. Singleton, and Brownie Smith say they have the transportation and all the trimmings—so let's form this line to the left.

It was brought to our attention that the P. A. tobacco and pipe salesman who was holding down fort in the "Y" this week practically chain-smoked Chesterfields the whole time.

CHARGE OF THE SOAP BRIGADE. Along with thoughts for the future we should be planning for more than one wash room for the quonset huts. Cold weather is upon us and all those boys have upon them are bath towels, with tooth brushes waving in the air.

LEST YOU FORGET. Just a helpful reminder to boys who are planning on getting their dates' tickets for out-of-town games. Be sure to have her I.D. card with you! Otherwise, "Sorry, sir, she'll have to come down and get the ticket herself. Just ask Earl Somers about that situation.

CLASSIC. When his music appreciation class was asked if they had ever heard of Claude Debussy, Ed Darnell replied, "No, but won't Roy Acuff do just as well?"

UP AND COMING. The planetarium is beginning to take shape, in case you haven't noticed. Maybe in a few more weeks we can climb that big, tall fence and take a gander at the inside.

CPU is calling for new members in their Sunday get-togethers. They meet on second floor Graham Memorial at 8 o'clock every week.

GETTING UNDER WAY is the WSSF drive for this fall. The group held its first meeting this week; so we should be hearing more about the group before too long. Leave us hope it's not another coed auction. Some of us poor victims are still being labeled as "Going, going, gone!"

CPU: Outlet For Thought

By Lincoln Kan

There was no muttering under our breath when this columnist approached the typewriter to tell our reader (?) more about Carolina's organizations. The subject matter had already been promised days before.

As we said in the column about the IRC, there was an organization on the campus that made it its duty to keep the student body informed on national happenings and trends. This group is the Carolina Political Union.

Each Sunday evening you will find its members seated around the round-table in the Grail Room at Graham Memorial discussing the latest political issues or making plans to provide the campus with some new analysis of the current problems before the nation.

The key to the founding of the CPU was discovered in the many heated sessions in Dr. Edward J. Woodhouse's classroom. It may have been under the trees, where our philosophical political professor likes to take his class on warm sunny days that the ideas of Floyd Fletcher of Raleigh, who was then a senior, took root. Nevertheless the first chairman of the CPU Frank C. P. McGlinn of Philly solidified the then neophyte organization and resolved that all major political parties should be at all times represented in the membership and that the CPU will do its utmost to bring a political consciousness to the campus on national affairs. Dr. Woodhouse stayed with his class geniuses and became their faculty advisor.

At the offset, Memorial Hall where the CPU held its public meetings looked as if the walls had been built around a small group of bull sessioners. Gradually the 1800 seats in the hall were filled to capacity as the CPU instituted a special debate on the Supreme Court packing bill in 1937, between Representatives Maury Maverick and Ralph Brewster of the U.S. Congress.

The defense to the Supreme Court plan straight from the horses mouth by way of the then Postmaster-General Farley came in the year 1937-38. The CPU began to expand and their help and cooperation with other campus organizations became an unwritten law in the framework of the aims of the CPU.

Then came the glorious year of 1938 when this columnist first entered the University of North Carolina. It was the year of Stirny Stirnweiss of football fame, Paul Severin the Carolina All American. Voit Gilmore the guiding hand of the CPU, IRC the newly awakened power of weakening international organizations and the arrival on our campus of the greatest president of our time President Franklin Delano Roosevelt on December 5, 1938, sponsored by the CPU.

Since that time the CPU has shifted from emphasis on state politics to national politics by presenting a galaxy of important men and women from the rosters of our public servants, Senators, Representatives, Governers and officials of the United States government. When World War II crashed onto the campus, the trend began to move toward subjects of international consequence.

The War has been over for three years, and the CPU is now beginning to come out of its wartime doldrums. A new spirit is present among its leaders to maintain the pledges of the CPU to the campus and to build a stronger outfit.

Herb Alexander, the chairman for the year 1948-49 had this to say, "The CPU this year intends to branch out into other activities such as student polls, forums and conferences. I sincerely believe that the Union will be of great service to the campus this year. We hope to be worthy of interest and respect from the student body."

We hope you will achieve all that you set out to do CPU, but watch your expansion. The campus will be watching you. Good luck and many members.

Concerning Do-Hickeys

Clear Water And Red Tape

By Ben Lawler

The University recently had a tragic and pathetic incident occur which involved one Jasper Twirlhead, freshman, of Slippery Ball, North Carolina.

During lunch at Lenoir Hall, Jasper was unusually thirsty and decided to re-fill his glass of water. Approaching the counter, he edged into the line and extended his glass under the do-hickey. Before he could activate the mechanism, a firm voice stopped his fingers in mid-air.

"Have you a card for a re-fill?"

Jasper quailed, being easily intimidated by authoritative voices. He admitted that he had neglected to obtain the necessary form.

"See your advisor," snapped the voice, "He will furnish you with one."

So Jasper left the Hall, dinner half-finished, steak half-masticated, coffee half-quaffed, in search of his advisor. Striding quickly to Fiddle F, he walked into the advisor's office. Seeing the elderly gentleman busy improving his culture quotient with an old ESQUIRE, Jasper sat waiting for the lascivious savant to conclude.

Glutted with Petty, the gentleman leaned back and gave Jasper a disgustingly phoney smile, saying, "Well, my boy, whatever can I do for you?"

After hearing of Jasper's difficulty, he consulted the catalogue, his mind obviously on page 53 of another manual concerning girls in leaves, and finally declared that Racktime 42 was closed for the quarter. Jasper finally straightened out the distinguished scholar and obtained a blue ticket entitling him to chit-chat with the Dean of the College.

The Dean was busy working on the latest DTH crossword puzzle and told Jasper to return on the following day. With a faint grumble in his internals, Jasper went back to his humble bed between the Quonset huts and dreamed of water and fried advisor steak.

When the dawn came, Jasper found himself rebuffed at the door of Lenoir, with another stern voice ordering him to straighten out his affairs before he returned to eat. Sadly, Jasper waited until five in the afternoon, when the Dean cracked the puzzle and produced a card for him, telling him to carry it to Venebalz.

Standing in line the next morning, a bit hungrier, he collapsed twice and lost his place in the line both times. Upon finally reaching the door, in late November, he ran into unfortunate news. There were no more Water-Refills left. However, he was offered advice.

"Go to the Head of the Basketweaving and Latrine Construction Department, he may permit you to join the waiting list for replacements to the priority list for Re-Fills."

Poor Jasper began the weary search for Hophead Hall which (See CLEAR WATER, page 6)

Scuttlebutt Wanted

Editor:

Someone in your paper Monday wanted to know why the Scuttlebutt at the east end of Emerson Stadium had been closed. The reasons for this are, in my opinion, two-fold. One is a matter of practicality; the other a matter of downright inefficiency.

The Monogram Club Circus Bar is a real beautiful little hole in the wall but it cost a lot of money to build it and it isn't big enough to supply the demand for drinks and other such articles that it should sell. By closing the Scuttlebutt the powers that be, and try to find out and see who they are, thought they would pay for the Monogram Club bar. Well, it was a wonderful thought, but I'll wager that the bar at the Club isn't doing a third of the business that the Scuttlebutt was doing. If you lived in Ruffin Dorm, would you walk to the Monogram Club to get a coke at 11 o'clock at night? Hell no, you wouldn't. But you would walk to the Scuttlebutt just across the street. Maybe the Umstead Act is the reason that they can't open both of them. Well, that's wrong too. It's just inefficiency and practicality—they often rhyme, rhyme.

The other reason is that when our esteemed Coalition Cabinet met and decided to do something about the closing of the Scuttlebutt; in re, they decided to make, circulate, and present petitions to the administration asking for the reopening of the Scuttlebutt; but they forgot that an ounce of action is better than their sitting there and talking their heads off for 16 weeks. No one is running their little show and you can't do things unless you have someone who is able and willing to work at the wheel. They gave the Daily Tar Heel no information. They probably think that those petitions will get up and walk to South building and plead their case for them. In other words, they think up wonderful ideas, but can't make them work. And they talk about the importance of Student Government.

The reason that I'm writing this letter is that I circulated one of those petitions down in Alexander Dorm last Thursday night and practically everyone in the Dorm signed it. They think that the leaders of our campus are going to make an attempt to get the Scuttlebutt re-opened. I know these men will vote next year because they now see what a vital part Student Self-Government plays here on our campus. Or do our leaders in the Coalition Cabinet know this.

This is one man's opinion — it could be wrong.

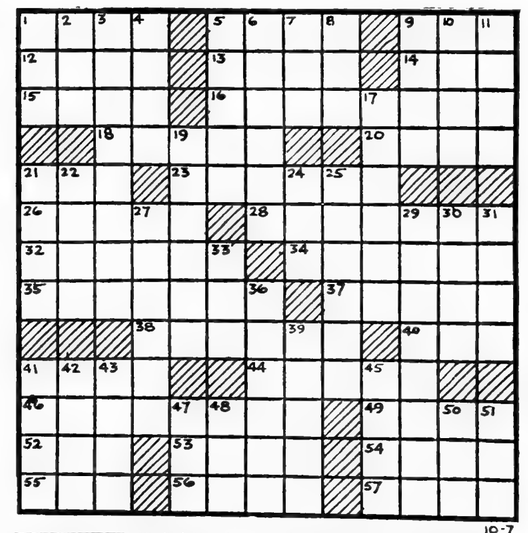
Editor:



I am a disillusioned man. For almost a quarter of a century I have believed in the American way of life. In my innocence I imagined America as a land of freedom and opportunity. But, now — thanks to Bill Robertson — I realize that I have been taken for a ride by the treacherous capitalists.

All the things which I once held dear and vital to my well-being and happiness are now alienated from me by this new-found knowledge. There was a time when I enjoyed reading Life magazine — but no more. It recently printed a capitalist-inspired article by a capitalist-backed psychiatrist (who, no doubt, was forced "to sell his soul in defense of our dog-eat-dog social system") which purported to show that even chickens are class-conscious. Needless to say, this thesis is loaded with dangerous implications.

Taking into account the "chickens are class-conscious" thesis, (and I admit the article was convincing, in a treacherously logical sort of way), one might assume that much-maligned man, himself, is inherently class-conscious. One might further assume that to impose a class-less society on man would NOT eliminate the factor of class-consciousness. But that is absurd! One has but to consult Marx to see his error.

How we in America can remain so blind to the glorious Russian example — where true democracy is a living reality; where the state, which will eventually wither away, is the complete servant of the people; where the government is so wise as to predict the wishes, thoughts, and actions of the people,

Boston Tops Cleveland; Navy Defeats Soccer Team, 2-0

John Sain Tosses Brave Victory, 1-0, In Series Opener

By Carl Lundquist

BOSTON, Oct. 6.—(UP)—The Boston Braves, riding to glory on only two hits, scored a surprising 1-0 victory over the Cleveland Indians before 40,135 delighted fans today in the first game of the World Series.

Brooklyn-born Tommy Holmes deprived Cleveland Fireball Bobby Feller of the greatest glory of his career, with one of those hits in the eighth. Until it came, Feller had held the underdog Braves to just one meaningless single.

In the first 1-0 game in Series competition since 1923, it was Arkansas Johnny Sain, the tall righthander of the Braves who emerged in the hero's role.

None Past Second

Sain, mutilating a large cud of tobacco as he mowed the Indians down, inning by inning, held them to four scattered hits. He was a master technician with runners on the bases. Not once did an Indian base runner get beyond second.

As the innings unwound in this nerve-jabbing drama of two strong-armed, strong-hearted pitchers, it became apparent that it would take a break—a wrong guess or a fielding bobble—to settle the outcome.

It came in the eighth. Catcher Bill Salkeld, the first batter, worked a walk off Feller, the second of the game given up by the great righthander from Van Meter, Iowa.

Mike McCormick, a chips down batter, dropped a perfect sacrifice bunt to First Baseman Eddie Robinson, who tagged him while Phil Masi, a pinch-runner for Salkeld, legged it down to second.

Dubious Strategy

Then came a dubious bit of strategy by Cleveland Manager Lou Boudreau.

He ordered Feller to purposely pass the Braves' little pepperhead, Eddie Stanky, in order to face Pitcher Sain. That part of it worked out fine since Sain flied out. But it brought up

Leaders in Boston Victory

JOHNNY SAIN, LEFT, turned in a masterful pitching performance yesterday as the Boston Braves edged Cleveland and its ace moundsman, Bob Feller, by a 1-0 score in the opening World Series game. Tommy Holmes, right, drove in the only run of the afternoon with an eighth inning single.

Footballers End Heavy Work For Wake Forest Tilt Saturday

Realizing that they are facing one of the toughest teams on the 1948 schedule this Saturday, the Blue and White gridders got down to business and put in a heavy afternoon's work yesterday. Coach Carl Snavely and his Tar Heel eleven have tremendous respect for a trio of Wake Forest gentlemen, namely one Peahead Walker, Tom Fetzer and Bill Gregus, and they went at it hard and fast in a closed session at Navy field.

Last year Carolina had a great ball club and Wake Forest upset them 19-7. For the accomplishment of that and several other similarly unexpected deeds, the Wake Forest Demon Deacons have been labeled "giant killers."

Both teams put in a scrimmage session yesterday before rounding out their final touches for this all-important Southern conference contest. Lighter work was scheduled for today.

On Navy field yesterday the Tar Heels went at it for two hours. Both the offense and defense underwent the critical eyes of the Carolina coaching staff.

Bill Maceyko was in light equipment, but still worked out at the safety spot in the defensive alignment. Bob Cox got off the injury list, but Bill Flamish was still on. Don Hartig and Al Bernot are both out indefinitely.

The Tar Heels, who were rated second in the nation in one of the top polls this week, are confident of a victory Saturday. They realize that there isn't a breather on the schedule and don't expect to find Wake Forest "down." On the contrary, the Baptists are expected to be "up" for this week's battle more than for any other on their not too potent schedule.

A capacity crowd is expected to file into Groves stadium Saturday afternoon to see this top-notch battle. It is generally thought around Chapel Hill that if the Tar Heels get by Wake Forest in good fashion, they will be over the "hump" in the '48 schedule.—FRANK ALLSTON.

WAA COUNCIL

Woman's Athletic association council will hold its first fall meeting tonight, and all dormitory and sorority representatives are asked to meet in the gym classroom at 7 p. m.

FRESHMAN GATES

In the Freshman game Friday, gate six will be for the students and gate two for the public.

Mural Play Opens In Frat Division

Today marks the inauguration of the 1948-'49 edition of Carolina's extensive Intramural program. The ball will be set rolling this afternoon when the torrid Intra-Fraternity League has its initial contests at 4 o'clock at the fields indicated as follows:

4:00, Field 1, DKE 1 vs KA 1; 2, Pi Kappa Phi vs Phi Delt 2; 3, Chi Psi vs Zeta 2; 4, Lambda Chi 1 vs PiKa 2; 5, Kappa Sig 2 vs ZBT; 6, TEP vs Phi Gam 1; 7, ATO 2 vs KA 3

5:00, Field 1, ATO 1 vs. DKE 2; 2, Chi Phi 1 vs KA 2; 3, Sig Eps vs SAE 2; 4, Lamb Chi 2 vs Phi Delta Chi; 5, Kappa Sig 1 vs Kappa Psi; 6, Sigma Nu 1 vs Delta Sigma; 7, Beta 1 vs Pi Lamb Phi

The Intramural Managers held their first yearly meeting last night at the Gym and conducted among themselves a lengthy and profitable session.

All entries for the coming Tag Football Fall Tennis programs were accepted and Director Walter Rabb was well pleased with the response of all the various campus organizations. The fraternities had their expected large turnout and the Dorms and Independents chipped in with 30 competing teams for their league.

The business presented in last nights' assemblage covered a wide range. The managers turned down a proposal to introduce badminton as a Fall activity; they widely discussed a possible revision of the present point system used in boxing and wrestling but reached no agreement and they appointed a new Protest committee whose purpose is to arbitrate all disputes that may occur on the field of battle.

Those selected were Chan Pegram, Ronald Bowles and Calt Simpson who represent the students plus Mr. Rabb and Mr. Allen of the faculty.

Powerful Middies Score Both Goals In Second Period

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 6—The University of North Carolina's soccer team went down in defeat today as a powerful Navy team held the Tar Heels scoreless while collecting two goals themselves.

Navy scored both goals in the second quarter after both teams battled on even terms throughout the first period. First Middie score came after eight minutes of the second frame had elapsed when Cadet Sullinwizer put the ball into the nets.

Rugeieri scored Navy's second goal only 13 minutes later in the same period to give Navy extra insurance of a victory over the Tar Heels.

Carolina put up an excellent defense, but Coach Marvin Allen's boys just couldn't get their offensive rolling. Al Williams, Gus Johnston, and Frank Nelson, third string All-American last year, kept the Tar Heels in the game, but were unable to push over a score. In addition to these three Jesse Greenbaum showed up exceedingly well, but again, the Tar Heels were unable to score despite his fine work.

Coach Allen, although disappointed in the loss, commented that "Our boys look better than last year and we ought to better last year's won-lost record."

Before the game got under way the soccer squad elected captains for the season. Jesse Greenbaum and Frank Nelson were elected to captain the squad for the coming season. Basil Jackson was elected honorary captain.

Mural Tennis

4:00, Court 1, Norm Kohler vs. R. Woodson; 2, Bill Andersen vs. Hames Horton; 3, John Huske vs. Walter Grimsley; 4, Al Lowenstein vs. Crawford Hart; 5, Rod Nicol vs. G. O. Tuck; 6, Jack Moore vs Clarence McLain.

5.00, Court 1, Bert Grossman vs James Hammerstein; 2, Bob Kirby vs. Frank Bowman; 3, Joe Brady vs. J. F O'Neal; 4, Marx Deal vs. E. R. Montgomery; 5, Nevin Kennedy vs. Lindy Ward; 6, Jim Dotson vs. Kenneth Hoffman.

The matches will be played on the clay courts. The court officials may not be as indicated, but there will be an Intramural official at the entrance to the courts to help you out with any problems.

All participants are to bring three new balls with them to their first match.

MONOGRAM MUSINGS

By Bill Pritchard

(Note: Bill Pritchard, Monogram mastermind, begins today a weekly column on what's going on in the Monogram club.)

In the Beginning

THE BEGINNING OF THE 1948 FALL TERM found the doors of the "new" Monogram club open to the campus for the purpose of serving the students both as a scuttlebutt and a dining room. The handsomely-furnished and beautiful "Circus Room" constituting an attraction which has already people and praise from far and near, and the soon-to-be-opened-to-the-students (about the 20th of this month) dining room in the basement have turned a once-dormant and virtually useless clubhouse into a lively and attractive building that would turn even Billy Rose green with envy.

Here, we would like to point out that the Monogram club was enthusiastic about this innovation and it desires to be of service to the campus, but—the clubhouse belongs to the club, and while everyone is invited and welcomed to use it, the Monogram club expects you to treat the Club as considerately as you would your own home.

The lounge will be furnished with numerous newspapers and popular magazines in time. Understand, please, the Monogram club is not a junior form of Graham memorial. We are buying these newspapers and magazines with money from our own treasury for your benefit, so if this benefit is abused, it will be abolished.

At the east end of the building is a room which is being reserved for Club members. It will not be open to the public, but will contain our records, files, personal property, and so forth. We ask you to observe the privacy of this room.

To sum this all up, the Monogram club, as benefactor, asks you the students, as benefactee, to make a good thing better through your care and respect.

Movies Tonight

TONIGHT THE MONOGRAM CLUB, through the efforts of hard-working president Gus Johnson, will renew the service of showing movies of the football game played the previous weekend as it did last fall. These showings will be open to the public and will be free of charge.

Tonight the movies of the North Carolina-Georgia game will be shown in Memorial hall at 7:00. Come early and get a seat.

Greeting Meeting

AT THE FIRST MEETING OF THE CURRENT YEAR the MC found its agenda full. First on the docket was the election of Dan Nimicz, golf and basketball star, to replace Jack Brasington, who has transferred to Miami University, as secretary-treasurer. Len Szafaryn and Tee Thorne were appointed to serve on the executive committee along with the officers, Bob Hutton, Dan Nimicz and Bill Pritchard.

Also, appointed last Thursday night were the MC representatives to the Big Four Monogram council . . . Nemo Nearman, Joe Bach and Mike Morrow. This Council is an up-and-coming organization formed last spring by the monogram clubs of the Big Four schools. With these men in there, you can look for something really big from this council before the year is over.

To Monogram Members

THIS YEAR'S ROLL OF ACTIVE MEMBERSHIP in the Club is now being drawn up by the secretary and will be put into effect within two weeks. As you can see, the Club has assumed a major position of importance and prestige on campus, but we need your active support to maintain that position. It's your Club and, as such, can only be as much as you make it. Therefore, I earnestly urge all monogram-winners to turn out next Tuesday evening at 7:30 at the clubhouse, and join in the year's activities. There'll be plenty of them.—Gus Johnson, president.

Several Changes Listed by Casey In Swimming Club

By Bill Burgess

Carolina's varsity swimmers are continuing to work out daily in Bowman Gray Pool, said Coach Ralph Casey and his assistant, Mike Morrow, have been pushing the boys extremely hard in an effort to get them in shape.

Casey, realizing the difficult task he has before him, is trying some new strategy so that the team may be able to get the maximum number of points in meets to come. In attempting to do this, Casey has switched some of his outstanding stars to different events.

Norman Sper, who failed to make the American Olympic squad by only a fraction of a point and who was Southern Conference diving champion last year, has been switched to the backstroke. This event, however, is not new to him, for he exhibited his ability in this stroke in several meets last year. Jim Thomas, who broke the Southern conference backstroke record last year, has been placed in the distance events because he has showed an excess amount of stamina.

Another Change

Another star acting in a new capacity this year is the team's captain. Dick Twining, victor in both the 220-yd. and 440-yd. freestyle in the Southern conference meet last year. Twining now is swimming the sprint events. These changes may appear rather drastic, but Casey is seeking to gain balance in all events.

The only promising news the Tar Heels have had this year is one of the prime factors that caused the mentor to attempt the changes referred to above. This news being that Buddy Crone, Carolina's Eastern Intercollegiate diving champion of 1947, has returned to the squad. Crone's return and the promising performances turned in recently by Gil Beam, Jack Whitchard, and Darrell Byerly, enabled Casey to switch Sper and set off somewhat of a chain reaction of substitutions.

Although most of the men are not in shape yet, a few of them have been more outstanding than others. Sprinters who have been doing well are Captain Twining; Floyd Drew, conference record holder in the 50-yd. freestyle; and Steve Osborne. Dan Breedon and John Bippart have been the leading performers in the breaststroke and backstroke, respectively. Ronnie Basescue has been doing well in distance events along with Noah Wilson, last year's manager, who has demonstrated what can be accomplished by hard work and initiative.

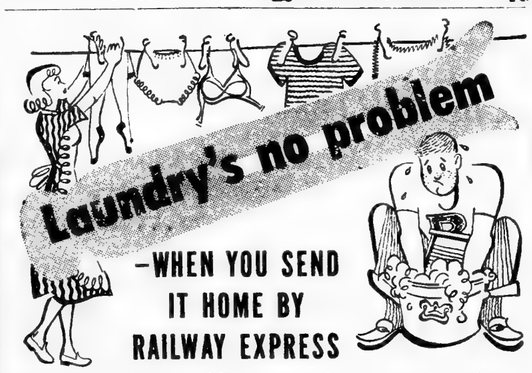
Justice Fourth

NEW YORK, Oct. 6—(UP)—The demon running of Arkansas' Clyde Scott and the passing of Charlie Justice of North Carolina today placed them third and fourth among the nation's football groundgainers.

Statistics of the National Collegiate Athletic bureau gave Scott a total yardage of 443 in three games played, and Justice a total of 431 yards. Scott made 340 of his by rushing on 38 plays, and Justice tallied 266 yards in completing 18 to 36 passes.



WAKE FOREST TICKETS

In yesterday's final ticket sales for the Wake Forest-Carolina game, approximately 4,000 students had purchased special rate ducats for the tilt, well fortifing the Tar Heel rooting section. These tickets must be accompanied by the student's passbook and identification or admittance will not be granted. The gates will open at 12:30.

however, still remains as the major job at the present time," said Coach Casey. "The boys are not even in good enough shape to swim time trials." Casey will seek to give the boys incentive to work harder by scheduling intra-squad meets the next two weekends.

Three of the stars, however still have not reported for workouts. Sper, the head cheerleader has been spending long hours working with the card stunts, but now that the initial difficulties have been worked out, it is expected that he will now find time to practice. Jim Thomas had a nose operation in August and still has not received the doctor's permission to enter the water. Jesse Greenbaum, last year's co-captain, is a standout on the soccer squad; hence, he will not report until November.

YOUTHFUL PROPHET

NEW YORK, Oct. 6—(UP)—Charles Hankinson, 7, first baseman for the third grade team at Public School 165, took on considerable stature as a baseball prophet today.

Before the World Series began, Charles announced, to the jeers of his school friends, that the Boston Braves would win four straight games. He went out on the slimmest of limbs by predicting also the exact score of each game.

His prediction for the first game: Boston 1, Cleveland 0.

Office Hours Listed For PL 16 Veterans

Wilson Honeycutt, Veterans administration training officer in charge of Public Law 16 veterans, will serve only part time for the next two weeks.

Office hours of the training office in room 111, Peabody hall, will be from 8:30 to 4:15 on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday.

Iredell Countians Meet This Evening

Students from Iredell county will meet this evening at 7:30 in Roland Parker lounge 3 of Graham Memorial to organize a club whose objects will be to form a closer unity among students from that area and to contact alumni.

All Iredell students are urged to be on time, as the lounge is reserved for a limited time only.

Veterans Urged To Check Office

Veterans who did not check with the Veterans administration in the womens gym during registration are urged to contact the veterans office in South building.

thus sparing them the ennui entailed by such trivialities — is more than I can comprehend. I am told that there are two cars in every garage in Russia, that the Russians eat chicken not only on Sunday but every day of the week. Compare this to our half-starved, ill-housed workers in America, who are but slaves of the fat, capitalist war-mongers!

You can imagine the impact with which this great expose struck my trusting nature. It was horrible! I thought of suicide. Only my cowardly lack of courage saved me from taking the "easy way out."

I am even now beseiged by conflicting doubts. Capitalism still has certain attractions for me. Being a college boy, I figure I shouldn't fare too badly in the awful "dog-eat-dog system" of the status quo. But, on the other hand, if I had some assurance of being among the more-equal-than-others cla—oops! — I mean group, then, I'd be willing to abandon capitalism altogether in favor of a class-less society.

But how can I be sure that I'll be among the "more equal" class in such a class-less society? That is my dilemma. Can you tell me, Bill? Or, should I sharpen my teeth and prepare to eat some dogs?

Community Club Will Show Display Today Of Arts, Crafts Produced in Chapel Hill

A display of arts and crafts made by townspeople will be featured at the first meeting of the Community club this afternoon at 3:30 in the Episcopal parish house. All women of the community are invited.

Former presidents of the club will extend greetings, and registration and payment of dues will take place. Mrs. J. M. Guthrie will lead a program of get-acquainted games, and a short business session will be held.

Refreshments are to be served by Mrs. G. W. Smith, Mrs. A. M Jordan, Mrs. S. A. Nathan and Mrs. Richard Jente.

The Community club is the Women's club of Chapel Hill, regularly affiliated with the North Carolina and General Federations of Women's clubs. Those attending this afternoon's meeting are asked to enter the parish house through the court between the two churches if the weather is fair, and in case of rain to use the side entrance of the parish house.

Boston Downs Cleveland

Holmes, the leadoff man and the top hitter in the Boston lineup. Sibby Sisti went in to run for Stanky, and Feller nearly got out of the jam unscathed when he wheeled around and rifled a gorgeous snap throw to Boudreau, almost catching Masi off base.

Boudreau tagged the belly-landing pinch-runner in the snatch of the back and stomped in rage when Umpire Bill Stewart called Masi safe.

That left it squarely up to the dark-haired wrist swinging Holmes, called a cheese hitter by enemy ball players because his hits frequently come with Dark back of third.

Disdaining that title, he scorched a single on the ground past third baseman Ken Keltner and Masi came thundering in to the plate, snatching his cap from his head and carrying it in his hand as he crossed the rubber standing up with a full head of steam. Sisti speeded to third and Holmes went to second on the throw-in.

It looked as if the Braves would go on from there, but Feller, even though the damage was done, bore down and got Rookie Alvin Dark on an infield out.

There was only one thing left after that. And the responsibility was all Sain's. As calmly as if he were facing the tail-end of the batting order on a second division club, he got the devastating Boudreau on a toy fly to center. Joe Gordon, who has broken up many a vital ball game, went out on a foul fly to dark back of third.

NCEA Wants Higher Pay For Teachers

RAEIGH, Oct. 7—(UP)—Education association officials today released the association's suggested legislative program for the next two years, calling for substantial boosts in the teachers' salary scale.

Frank C. Hill, chairman of the association's Legislation committee, said the program if pushed through would "go far toward removing our present educational deficiencies and inequalities."

Hill said the program was not yet in final form. It still had to go before the association's board of directors, he explained, and might be changed after the State Education commission's report was published.

The program proposed a minimum salary of 2,400 annually for beginning teachers holding A-1 certificates, plus a $100 per year increase annually for 12 years for teachers with A certificates.

Another proposal called for a minimum salary of at least $2,900 annually for teachers with G-2 certificates, and 11 salary boosts of $100 per year each for teachers holding graduate certificates.

The program also called for "proportionate increases" for principals, supervisors, superintendents, staff members of the State Public Information department and teachers in higher learning institutions. Another provision suggested "adequate" salary increases for other school personnel.

Other clauses in the salaries division proposed a cost-of-living increase for teachers below class A, and detroactive payment beginning with the 1948-49 year for all salary increases recommended. The program also recommended monthly salary payments, and sick leave.

Russians Held Bombing Raids Over Germany

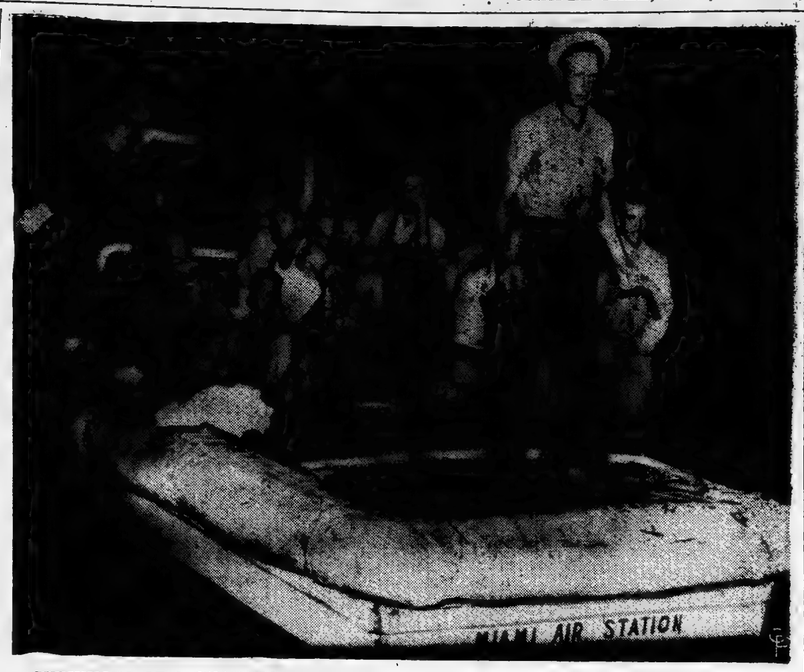
BERLIN, Oct. 7.—(UP)—Soviet authorities announced extensive day-long maneuvers would be staged in the air-lift corridors today and one British pilot reported Russian bombers dropped live bombs 10 miles from Berlin.

The British pilot said he saw bombs bursting beneath Soviet planes making practice runs 10 miles north of Frohnau, northernmost suburb of the French sector of Berlin.

Other pilots also reported seeing Russian bombers practicing, but said they did not see bomb bursts.

Live bombing practice was not on the list of maneuvers the Russians threatened to stage. They warned they would practice anti-aircraft fire, parachute jumping, bomber fire at sleeve targets and formation and individual bomber flights in the corridor areas and over Berlin.

The British-licensed newspaper Die Welt reported that from 50 to 60 four-engined Soviet bombers staged "simulated bombing attacks" on Erfurt, 125 miles northeast of Frankfurt.



It was the first report that the Soviet air force was showing its copy of the American B-29 in Germany.

Snake Snugglers

DURHAM, Oct. 7.—(UP)—The Rev. Colonel Hartman Bunn, Pastor of Zion tabernacle who was convicted of cuddling copperheads in his religious rites, today announced a three-day meeting here Oct. 15-17 and promised snakes for those who want to fondle them.

Bunn said he had invited snake-snuggling preachers and their cultists from North Carolina, Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee.

He said he was expecting a man who demonstrates his faith by playing a flaming blowtorch over his face, and others who take a nip of poison now and then.

SURVIVORS OF A CHARTERED DC-3 which made a forced landing on a small Bahamas island are brought ashore at Miami, Fla., after their rescue by two Coast Guard flying boats. Lost, and short of gas, the big plane was brought down on a narrow strip of beach with no loss of life, by pilot Richard R. Olivere.

Hurricane Sweeps In On Bermuda

MIAMI, Fla., Oct. 7.—(UP)—Hurricane winds hit Bermuda for the third time in six weeks.

The Miami weather bureau said the center of the storm which battered Cuba and southeast Florida passed over the vacation island about 6:30, with highest winds estimated at 90 miles per hour.

At 4:30, the hurricane was only 60 miles west-southwest of Bermuda, the weather bureau said, and was traveling east-northeast toward the island at 30 miles per hour. Hurricane force winds of 75 miles an hour or higher covered a diameter of 70 miles about the center.

It was the same hurricane, and Bermuda's third of the season, which roared out of the Caribbean sea Sunday, slammed across Cuba and the Florida Gold Coast and entered the Atlantic Tuesday night.

Dewey Requests 'Warm Welcome' For President

PAWLING, N. Y., Oct. 7—(UP)—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, the GOP presidential candidate, won't be at home in Albany when President Truman comes to call tomorrow morning, but he wants his state office employees to extend a "very warm welcome" to Mr. Truman.

Dewey drove here this afternoon for a quiet evening on his Hudson valley farm. Tomorrow he will motor from the farm to New York city where he will dedicate the Alfred E. Smith homes, a new low cost housing project. He will drive back to Albany after the dedication ceremonies.

Presidential Debate Slated by Di Senate

Five students will take to the rostrum next Wednesday night in Gerard hall to debate the qualities of their presidential candidates. The debate, sponsored every four years by the Dialectic Senate, will begin at 8:30.

Four of the speakers are members of the Senate and will speak in turn for Truman, Thurmond, Dewey and Thomas. A member of the Wallace Club will present the Wallace case.

Gran Childress, president protem of the Senate and former chairman of the Student party who will defend President Truman. Charlie Long, co-founder of the Republican club on campus and head of the Carolina Forum, will speak for Governor Dewey. Charlie Hodgson, one of the organizers of the Thurmond-for-President club this week will defend the States Rights candidate.

Al Lowenstein, recent delegate to the National Students association, will speak for Norman Thomas, candidate of the Socialist Party. The Wallace speaker will be named later.

The speakers will each be limited to 15 minutes and will be open for questions from the floor. Di President Jim Southerland, who will preside at the program, stressed the point that all students, faculty members and townspeople are invited to attend the debate.

The program will replace the regular session of the Di, which is usually held on Wednesday night at 9 o'clock in the Dialectic hall.

At the meeting of the Senate Wednesday night, members passed a resolution condemning the 80th Congress and failed to pass a motion in favor of the candidacy of President Truman.

Truman's Family To Be in State

RALEIGH, Oct. 7—(UP)—President Truman will bring his wife and daughter with him when he comes here for two appearances Oct. 19, Gov. Gregg Cherry said today.

Cherry said he had been informed that Mr. Truman was planning to bring his family on his visit to the state. The president will appear at capitol square in the morning at dedication ceremonies of the three-figure statue of Presidents Johnson, Jackson and Polk. Later in the day he was scheduled to speak at the opening of the North Carolina state fair.

Chancellor House Addresses Freshmen on Responsibilities

By Charles Pritchard

Speaking on moral responsibilites in college life, Chancellor Robert B. House yesterday during freshman assembly offered suggestions to freshman students for compiling creditable records while in the University.

"You are writing your own recommendations which open the door to your success in later life," Chancellor House said, adding that abiding by proper moral responsibilities "opens up an area of great joy."

Personal integrity, he said, will be the guide of each student in this "vast and complicated world."

For success he advised mastery in three subjects—reading, writing and speaking. He explained that his observations have shown him the curse of the college student is the curse of the outside world, being afraid of a book.

"Education is not what you ought to do. Education is what you do," the speaker said.

"Time wasted cannot be made up. It is a committment to yourself, your administration, to do each day's work as it is assigned," he went on.

"There is no substitute for giving yourself plenty of time to do your work," he pointed out, adding that he knew of no one who could do without the drudgery of study. "Pay for your recreation before you take it, and save time."

Traffic Jam

RALEIGH, Oct. 7—(UP)—State highway patrol officials today urged football motorists to get an early start when traveling to games in the state this weekend.

The patrol advised that football fans start before lunch if necessary to avoid congestion on the highways. They pointed out that traffic might become overly heavy in the Raleigh, Wake Forest, and Durham areas soon after noon.

No one way traffic lanes were scheduled on highways leading in and out of the major game cities, according to Sgt. R. S. Harris of Durham, officer in charge of traffic arrangements for the games. Harris urged fans to use alternate routes off U. S. 1-A leading into Wake Forest.

HPB Visit Rules Go Into Effect Today At Noon

The House Privileges board agreement on coed visiting hours will go into effect today at noon, it was announced last night by Interfraternity council president Jack Thompson. The agreement, containing the same privileges as last year's pact, was passed and signed last night by all fraternities except Kappa Sigma and Alpha Epsilon Pi.

Thompson said. "It shall be the duty of every fraternity man to insure that the regulations as prescribed in the house privileges agreement shall be inforced to the utmost. Any violations will be dealt with severely by the Interfraternity council."

In order to avoid misunderstanding, Thompson urged all coeds to familarize themselves with the regulations before taking advantage of them.

The agreement was approved by dean of students Fred Weaver and dean of women Katherine Carmichael Wednesday. Both Kappa Sigma and Alpha Episilon Pi are ineligible for the agreement because of violations of previous visiting agreements.

University Club Will Meet Monday

The University club will meet Monday evening at 7 o'clock in Roland Parker lounge 3 of Graham Memorial, Mike Loftus announced yesterday.

Oklahoma University Regents Reach No Decision on Negro

NORMAN, Okla., Oct. 8—(UP)—The Board of Regents for Oklahoma university broke up a four-hour meeting with top state officials here last night, with "no decision" reached in the case of a Negro professor who had applied for admission to the university's graduate school.

The regents indicated, however, that an official statement concerning the case of Prof. G. W. McLaurin would be issued from the residence of university President George L. Cross today.

During the meeting, regents were told by the state's attorney general that they can delay "for a very few days" their decision whether to admit the Negro.

Atty. Gen. Mac Q. Williamson delivered his opinion in person as the regents met with Gov. Roy. J. Turner to consider Prof. McLaurin's newest enrollment application.

Williamson asked the regents to note the remarks of Justice Felix Frankfurter of the U. S. Supreme Court, who commented in a hearing of the Ada Sipuel Fisher case that O. U. might allow her to attend the law school here on a segregated basis, giving her a private teacher.

The regents and Turner were expected to decide whether a special session of the legislature will be necessary to meet terms of the McLaurin decision.

Williamson told the United Press that the McLaurin case and that of Mrs. Ara Sipuel Fisher, another Negro who has applied for admission to the university, had "no distinct relationship."

Williamson said the university regents had two coures of action:

1. Enroll McLaurin on the came scholastic basis as white students until similar classes in substantially equal courses are established at the state's Negro university at Langston, or,

2. Refuse to accept either Negro or white enrollees in the courses sought by McLaurin.

Students, Faculty Members Receive 'Courtesy' Tickets

By Herb Nachman

Students and faculty members flocked to Chapel Hill police headquarters yesterday with "courtesy" parking tickets they had received for parking in areas without official University red stickers.

Chief W. T. Sloan said that no fines would be imposed until Monday when the new regulations officially go into effect. "The University is in the process of erecting the proper signs, and they will be set up by Monday," he explained.

According to the regulations which go into effect Monday, four parking areas on campus are designated as "red sticker areas" and will be only for the use of cars displaying red stickers. They are the parking lots by Phillips, Memorial halls, and Steele and Carr dormitories.

Cars with blue stickers or with no stickers at all will not be allowed to park in these areas. Chief Sloan said that if a student gets a ticket after Monday and ignores it, a warrant will be sworn out for him and the minimum penalty will be $8.75. However, a parking ticket will only cost the driver $1 if he attends to the matter immediately, Sloan said.

Assistant Dean of Students Bill Friday said yesterday that approximately 700 red stickers had already been issued to students who are eligible to have them.

The regulations allow commuters, administrative officials, faculty members and physically handicapped students to carry a red sticker on their vehicles. "Persons living outside the designated walking zone may obtain the red sticker," Friday pointed out.

But he went on to say that there are only about 585 parking spaces available in the red sticker area and that for this reason, a red sticker will not necessarily guarantee its holder a parking place. "However, we belive the plan will relieve the situation considerably," he said.

Under the plan, cars with blue stickers may park at any authorized parking place on the campus except the four lots named. The area in which blue stickers will be issued is bounded by Rosemary street on the north, Mallette, Ransom and Oransome streets on the west, Raleigh road, University drive and Vance streets on the south and the Country Club road and Boundary street on the east. Persons living within this area are considered to be in the walking zone. Those outside this area are entitled to red stickers.

Dean Friday said yesterday that all students who have not registered their cars must come to his office, second floor South building, and do so immediately.

In addition to the regulations, the committee presented three requests designed to further alleviate the parking and traffic problem.

These requests are:

1. That holders of blue stickers leave their cars at their residences.

2. That holders of red stickers try to avoid moving their cars from one area to another during class changes.

3. That speed limits be observed.

Legislature Condemns Armory Store Closing

By Bill Buchan

Accusing certain members of the University administration of "refusing to consult the will of the student body" in the Circus Room-Scuttlebutt controversy, the Student Legislature last night passed a strongly worded resolution condemning "that part of the administration for its policy and actions in regards to the issue."

The resolution, introduced by Joe Leary, was quickly passed after a suspension of rules in order that the legislature could act on the bill without sending it to committee.

Student legislators expressed no opposition to the bill, but Miles Smith took the floor to declare that "students have a will of their own" and that "students have a right to better facilities."

In introducing the bill, Leary declared that the Scuttlebutts on the east end of the campus are inadequate since the Armory Store was closed, and that the will of the student body was evidenced by petitions containing 700 names requesting the reopening of the store.

The bill further pointed out that "the administration has acted highhandedly in dismantling the store building in an effort to cease discussion on the matter."

Other business of the first fall session of the legislative body included a report by Parliamentarian George Rodman on summer activities and the introduction of a number of bills by other members which were submitted to committees for action.

Finance committee chairman Jack Girard made a report, giving the total assets of student funds as $8,618 at the end of the spring session. The unappropriated balance totaled with this gives the campus budget a total of $10,000 remaining in the budget for this year.

Among the bills introduced was one by Joe Leary authorizing the payment of $1160 to Graham Memorial to complete a debt owed that organization by the Student Entertainment committee. The bill further stated that no other organization in student government be allowed to borrow or lend money to or from other organizations, with the exception of Graham Memorial.

ECA Director Gets Parking Ticket

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—(UP)—Economic Cooperation administrator Paul G. Hoffman got a traffic ticket today—for standing his car in front of his ECA headquarters.

A squad car tagged the administrator's auto as his chauffeur, Herbert Brown, waited for him to leave his office.

The street is a "no parking or standing" zone between 4:30 and 6 p.m., and Hoffman's car was ticketed at 5:30 p.m.

Erwin Elected Speaker Pro Tem Of Phi Assembly

Wimp Erwin, senior from Charlotte, was elected speaker pro tempore of the Philanthropic assembly Tuesday night in the executive meeting of the group.

A resolution stating that the Nuremburg trials were justified was passed by a vote of 21-2 of the members. The visitors vote was 25-4 in favor of the resolution.

Dr. E. J. Woodhouse of the Political Science department led the discussion bringing up points in favor and against the bill. He reviewed the history of international law and brought forth the question, 'What would happen if we are aggressive?'

After the passage of the main resolution for the evening, the assembly introduced and passed a bill stating that the assembly agreed to loan a portrait to the art museum at the University of Richmond for a two-month period.

Bob Coulter, speaker of the assembly, presided.

Organization Set For Thomas Club

An open meeting will be held in Roland Parker lounge 3 on Tuesday at 4 o'clock, to organize a Norman Thomas-for-President club.

All students, regardless of political party affiliation, are invited to the meeting at which time officers will be elected and campaign plans made.

Acting chairman Jonathan Marshall said yesterday, "Many students are not satisfied with the candidates put up, by the Republicans and the Democrats; we do not feel that we can support Wallace with his Communist backing, and the only real liberal ticket is the Socialist ticket of Norman Thomas and Tucker Smith."

The agenda for the meeting will include a short discussion period, election of officers, plans for a mass meeting, and plans for a publicity campaign. All students, faculty members, and townspeople are invited.

No Comment

GREENSBORO, Oct. 7—(UP)—No information was available today on the outcome of a meeting of Women's college alumnae committee here yesterday to recommend a successor to the school's chancellor, W. C. Jackson, who will retire at the end of this academic year.

A spokesman for the committee said its recommendations would be forwarded to the Greater University of North Carolina Board of Trustees two other committees asked to make recommendations for Jackson's successor were scheduled to meet later this fall.

University Almost 155 Years Old

By Lincoln Kan

On Tuesday, the students of the University will have an opportunity to observe the 155th birthday of our alma mater. Most of us know that it is the first state university to open its doors to the general public; however, a considerable portion of the eminent history of the University has become lost in the archives of the library.

The tendency of colleges and universities to give their oldest possible ages, and sometimes over, raises a question as to the long accepted idea of their feminine gender. Carolinians, however, are proud that they have the oldest operating university in the United States, even though she was not the first chartered state university. The honor for the earliest charter goes to the University of Georgia.

Briefly, the University was provided for in the state constitution of 1776. She was chartered in 1789 and the cornerstone for the first building was laid in 1793. The portals to the University swung open on January 15, 1795, but for two weeks the University remained empty until Hinton James arrived on February 12, 1795 to become the first student body of the University of North Carolina. By the end of the term, the two faculty members had their hands full pounding learning into the heads of 41 aspiring students.

The "father" of our University was General William R. Davie. He introduced the "University bill" to the House of Commons on November 12, 1789. For nine days a reluctant legislature pondered the bill and finally on Nov. 21, 1789 the bill was passed.

Seven days later the trustees who numbered among them many Princeton men met to encounter their first problem and it was how to raise funds for buildings. For two years Davie, Rev. Samuel F. McCorkle,

Basic Philosophy

At the University day services Tuesday, the audience will hear the basic philosophy of this institution.

On Oct. 12, 1795 Rev. Samuel F. McCorkle said in his dedicatory address:

"Liberty and Law. . .call for general knowledge in the people and extensive knowledge in matters of the state, and these in turn demand public places of education."

Look--No Scuttlebutt

An administrative statement released through Assistant Controller C. E. Teague states that the decision to remove the Scuttlebutt from Emerson stadium was made after "thorough consideration." As an example of "thorough consideration" it highly recommends decisions made on the spur of the moment. The administration decided, the statement said, that the Monogram club was in the most convenient spot to serve the "east campus." It is hard to see how this statement could be true, unless there is an undisclosed plan to remove the upper quadrangle and the new dormitories into the Forest Theatre area.

This is not a slug at the Monogram club. It is a beautiful and timely supplement to the facilities of the Scuttlebutt, but as a substitute it just doesn't fill the bill.

Insult upon injury, in the estimation of student government officers is the manner in which the Scuttlebutt was disposed of. Information was given the office of W. D. Carmichael, Jr., University Controller, that students would present petitions, and an appointment was asked for discussing the subject. The appointment was supposed to have been for Thursday. On Wednesday a demolition crew began tearing down the building, and when student delegates went to Carmichael to protest, the Controller refused to see them because he was leaving town. Satirical humorists likened the situation to Pearl Harbor—while students engaged in diplomatic negotiations, the administration struck.

An advance announcement of the administration's intentions and reasons might have prevented the hard feelings.

Better Than War

It is too bad that students could not hear the talk Relman Morin made to the Chapel Hill Kiwanis club Wednesday night. Chief of the Washington bureau of Associated Press and former foreign correpondent in many parts of the world Morin had a clearer grasp of the factors involved in the present Russian situation than was exhibited by any of the three presidential candidates who have spoken here since last spring.

His forecast was not encouraging. Neither the Soviet Union nor the western powers will deliberately start a war, he thinks, but the atmosphere is conducive to an incident which may inadvertantly touch off a war. More probable, he believes, is an indefinite continuation of the present state of tension, with a resulting drain upon American pocket books and nerves. Soviet-American negotiations have reached a point of diplomatic bankruptcy because Russia is convinced that communistic and capitalistic states cannot exist side by side. She refuses to enter into United Nations because she knows that there she will always be outvoted. This is bringing home to the United States the realization that further talking is pointless.

Under these conditions, Morin deducts, the only alternative to war is for the United States to build up its military strength and remain in a state of preparedness and for the western powers merely to attempt to confine the sphere of Rusian influence to its present area. If this can be done, the Communist regime may eventually die of stagnation and the expense of maintaining its huge standing army. The Soviet Union is like a man on a bicycle—he has to keep going or else he falls off.

This analyses, if valid, forecasts sleepless nights and heavy taxes for a long time to come, but at least it is better than the prospect of another war.

Apt Definition

One of the best definitions of a politician we have ever heard was given by an 11-year-old participant in an Atlanta, Georgia, church council forum.

"A politician," the boy said, "takes money from the rich and he takes votes from the poor, and he promises to protect each from the other."

ON CAMPUS:

What about this boy in the Rendezvous Room Friday night—the one who went sound asleep right in the middle of the floor show? Looks as if the least he could have done was droop his weary bones on the floor as any Carolina gentleman, steeped in our alleged "Tradition."

Let's have none of these questioning looks. Just for that, we shall now have a short lesson in Hank Beebee's own version of tradition, which many of you probably already have heard the Sigma Chi sextet sing.

Carolina, Carolina, Carolina;
I go to college
To get some knowledge
Because the University
Is just the place for me.
There's something finer
At Carolina.
You can learn a lot of math
On a lonely path.

Chorus

Tradition, Oh how I love tradition.
I've got it in my sox and in my shoes.
Tradition, Oh how I love tradition.
That's why I've got those Carolina blues.
I'm taking botany,
But that's monotonous.
Now, biology is fun
But after all is said and done;
When I'm at freedom
The arboretum
Is the class where every test
Is nature's best.

Chorus

Now, all you smokers,
Let's not be jokers.
Cigarettes are really bad;
The things they do are often sad;
For once in Durham
A man was fur'em.
Duke was started by the seed
Of a filthy weed.

DANCES, TOO? University Party members got a good laugh up their respective sleeves at their first meeting of the year when chairman Thurmond Williams announced that he had drawn up a set of by-laws, modeled "on that of the Highland Country Club in Fayetteville."

TUNING UP. Is it true that wedding bells are getting in tune for Jim Godwin and Peggy Egerton?

IN TOWN:

SO SORRY! Seems we have a group of nine early risers over on Henderson street who want their paper delivered before 7:30 o'clock. We'll see if we can't do something about it and get the sheet there before breakfast is over.

CONTESTS. Johnson-Strowd-Ward, we hear, have a mighty big prize offer going to the winner of a 50 word essay on why you would like some sort of do-all gadget for your kitchen sink. You might drop in and get some more information about the contest rules. And another contest that's even easier is Wentworth and Sloan's offer of a watch to the winner on a lucky number list. Just go in and tell them about what silver pattern you like, or what type of jewelry you're fond of and have a friendly chat with, them.

WATCH THE FORD. Be sure to check the new English Ford that will be on display in Strowd's window beginning this Saturday. It's a special delux job not much bigger than an Austin.

Faulkner Ends Dry Spell

By Roy C. Moose

For the first time since the Thirties there seems to be some hope for American fiction. The heralding of a new "golden era" of American writing blared forth last week with the publication of a new novel by William Faulkner, past master of fiction, who has been in arid seclusion these past eight years. His "Intruder in the Dust" (Random House, $3.00) is a work that will rank among the very few top novels of the twentieth century in American literature.

Faulkner's own aridity seems symbolic of the low point reached in American literature during the past decade. While he, Hemingway, Dos Passos, and the other giants were absent, the scene was taken over by authors of historical novels, pouring forth those sophomoric regurgitations in such quantity that they threatened to drown us with print. Occasionally, someone would come forth with a fair novel which, compared to the mediocre mass of print, seemed great and was subsequently hailed as the "novel of the century," only to be forgotten when the newness wore off.

The desperation of the publishers for a good piece of fiction is illustrated by the story of Hemingway's promised novel. One day his publishers received a package from him. Surely, they thought this is his long awaited novel. To receive the manuscript in style and with much drama, the editors called in the whole staff who gathered around the bundle in breathless awe, anticipating the event of the century. When the string was cut and the paper wrapping pulled off, a bunch of dirty laundry fell to the floor with the note, "Rush this back, the laundry burned down." The story is that the novel will be more than a dirty piece of laundry.

But if Hemingway's new novel, due soon, is as good as Faulkner's "Intruder in the Dust," it will be well worth waiting for, no matter how long. For in his latest novel, Faulkner has reached the pinnacle of perfection. It seems that all those others were just a preparatory course for "Intruder in the Dust." Never before has he handled material with such sureness, with such conviction, and with such hope. The story is very simple: a Negro supposedly kills a white man and is waiting to be lynched; trusting no white man, he refuses to give the information that would clear him until a sixteen year old boy, Charles Mallison, coming in contact for the first time with mob violence and unjustice, befriends him and helps him. The greatness of the novel lies in this simplicity and in the unforgettable Negro character created by Faulkner. Lucas Beauchamp is a majestic character and one of the finest ever created. He is not as violent and sensational as the impotent Popeye who rapes a co-ed with a corncob in "Sanctuary;" but he is a more thought-out character, one that shows the maturity of the author. From the handling of the characters and the material, it seems that the long dry spell of Faulkner's was very helpful. Perhaps it gave him time to think more clearly and more soberly.

Moreover, it's good to see Faulkner come out and prove again that he is still master of his style and can still outdo his many imitators. It is to be hoped that the new Hemingway novel and also the much awaited Dos Passos novel will do the same to their imitators. At any rate, the literary scene is looking brighter. "Intruder in the Dust" proves that first rate writing can be done by American authors.

OF LOCAL ORIGIN: The pot of gold at the end of the rainbow for which all budding young writers on the campus have been seeking was reached this summer by Rixie Hunter, a reporter on the Winston-Salem Journal. Enrolled in Phillips Russell's creative writing class for six weeks, Mr. Hunter wrote a short story entitled "Girls Will Fool You." After reading it to the class in the bucolic surroundings typical of Mr. Russell's outdoor classroom, he was advised to wrap it up and send it off. Immediately Collier's wired him an offer of $750.00 for it. He accepted. Said Mr. Russell: "It was the well handled humor that sold the story." (Writers take note)

Carolina Shuns NSA Work

By Jess Dedmond

The Student Legislature finally ratified the constitution of the United States National Student Association in late May of this year. For two years the choosing of NSA delegates has been among the last minute acts of the Legislature. Between times the idea and the organization on our campus has been dormant. The work and the use of ideas gathered in Madison and elsewhere are forgotten until another year. We have joined the NSA. But we shall not really belong until some real campus participation is realized.

NSA at most schools is on the move. MIT brought seventy odd foreign students to America in their Foreign Student Summer Project. Yale, Harvard and others have had similar projects. One fraternity at Davidson College has taken in a foreign student and is providing room and board during his stay there. The Michigan region of NSA is organizing for 1950 a $2,000,000.00 World Student Exposition with the aid of Henry Ford III and other industrial magnates. At the University of Buffalo a Purchase Card Plan, effected by NSA, is saving students ten percent on almost all articles purchased, ranging from luggage and clothing to theatre tickets. At the University of no finger except to choose delegates and pay our dues.

Today the NSA has two students on the National Committee of the World Student Service Fund (WSSF). It has one member in the United States delegation to the United Nations Educational, Social, and Cultural Organization. That member now holds a seat on the Executive Committee of UNESCO itself. The NSA contributed greatly to the Tri-Nations tours which took hundreds of American students to Europe this summer. Also it arranged for two American ships to carry exchange students to and from Europe. Perhaps no student organization in the world is doing more to foster international good will and understanding than is NSA.

The national organization, paced by the Northern and Western members, is working diligently toward the advancement of student welfare and fundamental student rights on American campuses as well. The success of its efforts, however, require the interest and participation of all. Here at Carolina NSA is still in a deep sleep after two full years of participation. The unlimited opportunities which it offers are not being recognized. NSA can be a real contribution to our campus. But it will be only to the extent of what we make of it.

Vote For Reaction

Editor:

I am from Nashville, Tennessee. Tuesday evening I was among many who stood to hear Governor J. Strom Thurmond, Dixiecrat candidate for president. Admittedly, I went as a biased observer: still, I listened with close attention, hoping to hear some planks in his platform. I waited in vain.

J. Strom Thurmond has no positive program for America; at least he presented none on Tuesday evening. He said nothing about inflation; nothing about the housing shortage; nothing about federal aid to education, which the Lord knows his state is in great need of; nothing about any form of health insurance; nothing about minimum wage and the Taft-Hartley Labor law. How does he stand on such issues? Or does he have a stand? What is his foreign policy program?

No, Governor Thurmond said nothing about these issues; and I have not read in the newspapers anything that he has said about them. His program is negative. It is anti-Truman, anti-Dewey, and anti-Wallace. It is anti-FEPC, anti-Civil Rights, anti-communist, and anti-Northern. Maybe he should be called Auntie Thurmond! Does he stand for anything, or does he just stand for nothing? It seems he is opposed to everything decent and democratic. I wonder if he isn't just the spokesman for that slowly dying breed of reactionary Southern politics that favors the industrialist over the workers, the feudalistic landlords over the sharecroppers and tenant farmers, and that stays in power by virtue of Northern capital. Tennessee has rid itself of Ed Crump; let us hope the day is not too far distant when the Talmadges, Longs, and Thurmonds will also be given the gate. A vote for Thurmond is a vote for reaction.

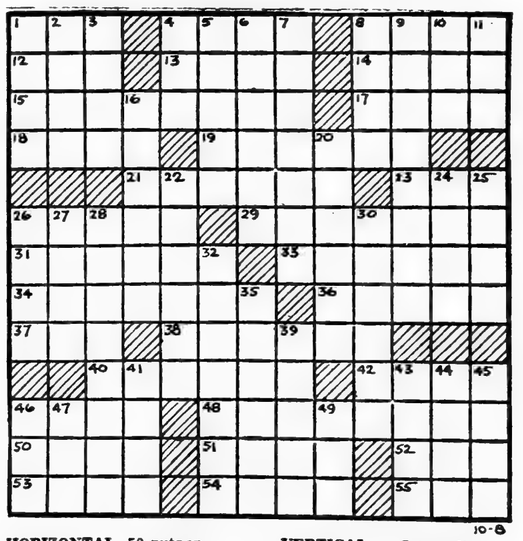
Civil War Rehash

Editor:

Tuesday night students listened to a highly emotional re-hashing of the Civil War for the umpteenth time. Before his Excellency arrived, Dixiecrat buttons were generously distributed to the students, who scrambled for them like a gang of ruffians going after pennies. Perhaps they didn't realize it, but their picture was snapped at that very instant; a picture which will make plenty of front-page propaganda for the "Real Democratic Party."

Then His Excellency went into his song-and-dance act. His subject: The President's Civil Rights Program. This program recommends abolition of poll tax laws. Mr. Thurmond said the Constitution does not give Federal Government power to legislate over elections, but, in the Constitution, Section 4, Article I, provides, "The Times, Places and Manner of holding Elections for Senators and Representatives, shall be prescribed in each State by the Legislature thereof; but the Congress may at any time by Law make or alter such Regulations, except as to the Places of choosing Senators."



With regard to lynching, Mr. Thurmond said there had been but one lynching in the United States last year, and there was no necessity for such a law as the President proposed. There should be no objection to such a law unless it is because the South wants to preserve the right to lynch when and where it pleases.

With regard to segregation, Mr. Thurmond said he had done more for the Negroes in South Carolina than any former Governor. If we consider what the other Governors have done, then Mr. Thurmond could have done more and still have done very little.

Mr. Thurmond's special target seemed to be the FEPC. He built up fabulous tales of the horrors which would come from such a commission and how it would hamper the employer in hiring workers. He also hit the proposed establishment of a Civil Rights Division in the Department of Justice. There is a Civil Rights Section already in existence in the Department of Justice, manned by about six lawyers who are absolutely unable to take care of the violations of Civil Rights. The President's report seeks to enlarge this establishment and give it the personnel with which to do its assigned job.

It is fortunate Mr. Thurmond wasn't able to stay for a question period. Speaking without the danger of having to face a group of enlightened college students, he made statements which no ordinary speaker would have dared make.

By BILLY CARMICHAEL III

They Wuz Robbed?

THE UNITED PRESS news wire which chatters away in this office throughout the day, brought news this week of three reported robberies which are supposed to have occured on football gridirons last Saturday.

Now, robbery in football is an unpunishable crime, but the three victims in this case seem to feel that they will exact some form of justice (you just can't keep that guy's name out of the copy) by issuing the strongest of strong accusations. It always helps to talk about it.

The schools in question have taken a quick look at the rushes of their weekend movies and entered claims that:

1) Jack Cloud of William and Mary scored a touchdown on a play where a quick-footing official ruled his forward motion had stopped on the Wake Forest one-yard line.

2) Alabama scored its last second touchdown to tie Vanderbilt on a pass to an illegal receiver.

3) A State college fullback crossed the Clemson goal line on a bullying buck that would have given the boys from the Academoo at least a Dook-lock with Clemson.

Saving the Soul

OF COURSE, FOOTBALL IS STILL being played on turf and not celluloid, but the pictures do give a little consolation, and leave the losers a little more to do than sit around, recite "In Victus" in hush tones, and wait for next Saturday.

They also settle a lot of arguments and prevent a galaxy of decapitations in numerous bars throughout the country. Carolina still has a pictorial proof of a partial victory over Georgia in the 1947 Sugar Bowl.

But the real usage of the pictures is not to arbitrate the arguments or prove what might have happened if what did hadn't. Their true value is also not a medium to keep the kiddies on the edge of the seats in the local cinema each week; but to serve as a pictorial guide to coaches and players alike on how to avoid making the same mistakes this week you made last.

They Don't Lie

THE PICTURES, IT IS SAID, don't lie. Of course, there are a few plays each week that look as if they were done with mirrors, but it is hard to fool or avoid the searching lens. The big tackle who swears he blocked on that goal line off-tackle play last Saturday soon finds he actually had his mind and eyes on the blonde sitting up in Row BB. Next week the blonde, it says here, will wait.

Tar Heel Carl Snavely was one of the first De Milles of college football photography. He realized its value early and has spent many a long winter evening in the projection room ever since. He gazes over each week's films with the piercing eye of the perfectionist. Sherlocking for the most minute details of error. The Tar Heels find it harder to pass their Monday screen test than the criticisms of the fans on the preceeding Saturday.

A Couple of Nag Players

THOUGH NO ONE seems to know exactly who first thought up the idea of using movies to improve football, the innovation seems to have been the brain child of a dubious horse player. The boys in the old days used to sit around arguing whether or not a horse gets all four legs on the turf when he runs. Came the motion pictures and those who said "yes" got the chance to clean their fellow man.

Then some football coach looking for a way to satisfy the alumni on the side, thought it would be a good opportunity to see if any of his halfbacks ran with their feet on the ground. Today, everybody's gotten into the act.

Use of pictures has spread to all sports today, proving you can't get away with a thing anymore. The camera checks on running styles, golf swings, basketball plays. Even swimming and wrestling have found the films have proved a great educational advantage.

It is an application of human nature. You never appreciate the performance of another until you've seen yourself in action.

Cleveland Tops Boston, 4-1, To Even Series

Lemon's Pitching, Hits by Boudreau, Gordon Clinch Win

By Carl Lundquist

....BOSTON, Oct. 7.—(UP)—Bob Lemon came through in the clutch today and pitched the Cleveland Indians to a 4 to 1 victory over the Boston Braves that evened the World series at one victory apiece.

A crowd of 39,633 saw the clash at Braves field.

Lemon had been batted out of games four straight times down the American league stretch. But today, when the Indians needed his strong right arm the most, he limited the Braves to eight scattered hits and was a master all the way.

Hurling his first victory in almost a month, the ace lad from San Bernardino, Cal., was stronger at the finish than at the start, giving up but three hits in the last five innings.

After 12 Innings

After 12 innings of futility at the plate, during which they not only couldn't score but couldn't even get a man to third base, the Indian batters came out of hibernation in the fourth today.

The Braves had a 1 to 0 lead, the margin by which they won yesterday's game, and it was beginning to loom very big since lefty Warren Spahn of the Braves was proving highly effective on the mound. But Cleveland's old pros, manager Lou Boudreau and jumpin' Joe Gordon, finally got to work.

Boudreau Hits

Boudreau, who had gone hitless in five straight times at bat during the Series, was up first in the fourth and he lashed one of Spahn's curves for a double deep down the right field foul line. Gordon followed with a single that tied the score at 1-all as Boudreau streaked home, not even bothering to

Head Mentor of Deacons

DOUGLAS (PEAHEAD) WALKER, Wake Forest's effervescent football mentor, displays a calm countenance in this picture. But Carolina grid faithful are hoping the Tar Heels will bring an element of constarnation to Walker's face following the Wake Forest-Carolina game this weekend. Walker, who in addition to coaching is in demand as an after dinner speaker, has installed the T-formation at Wake Forest this season.

Zetes, KA, Kappa Sig Triumph In Mural Tag Football Openers

The Tag Football league got a good start yesterday when 14 teams from the campus's fraternities classed with the vim and vigor of a varsity eleven. The games were all hard played and the final results showed some thrillers and some romps.

The defending champs, Chi Psi, got off to a bad start when they were nipped in an overtime tussle by fighting Zeta 2, 1-0, in overtime in one of the feature 4 o'clock games. In other games at that time, the KA 1 nine romped over DKE 1 to the tune of 18-0 while Pi Kappa Phi had no trouble with Phi Delta 2, 25-6.

Walt Jones paced Kappa Sig 2 to a runaway victory over the undermanned ZBT's 33-0. While Pika 2 managed to eke out a 7-6 win over Lambda Chi 1. In the two remaining games, the Phi Gams nipped the TEP's, 7-0 and blasted the KA 3 squad, 25-0.

In the 5 o'clock matches, the Kappa Sigma 1 outfit provided the biggest thrills when they tallied a TD in the overtime period to edge Kappa Psi, 6-0. Two other close decisions were registered when Beta 1 scored seven in the second half to nip Pi Lamb, 7-6 and Sigma Nu 1 protected an early lead to score a 9-0 triumph over Delta Sigma.

The other contests were not so close as DKE 2 humbled ATO 1, 18-0, and Lambda Chi 2 romped over Phi Delta Chi, 19-0. Both Chi Phi 1 and SAE 2 were content with two TD margins as they knocked KA 2 and Sig Eps, respectively, by counts of 14-0.

The first round of the fall tennis tournament was held yesterday and despite some confliction of schedules and a fast closing darkness, four matches were completed.

In the closest match, Walt Grimsley overcame an early deficit to defeat Bill Anderson, 5-7, 6-3, 6-0. Jim Hammerstein advanced when he humbled Bert Grossman in straight sets, 6-2, 6-2, and Lindy Ward demonstrated complete mastery when he swamped Nevin Kennedy, 6-0, 6-0. G. O. Tuck was the fourth to progress as he won on a forfeit from Rod Nicol.

Play will be resumed on Monday when the two matches that were postponed today because of the impending darkness will be completed.

After yesterday's rugged action there will be a three day respite for the weary before the pigskins fly again on Monday. Then the anxious dormitories will swing into action along with the fraternities and the two combined will provide plenty of excitement around Woollen Gym in the weeks to come.

Vic Seixas Upset

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 7.—(UP)— Vic Seixas of Philadelphia was the first seeded player to fall by the wayside yesterday in the third round of the first National Hardcourt Championships. He lost to unseeded Art Larsen of San Francisco, 6-3, 6-2.

The rest of the favorites came through unscathed. National Champion Dick (Pancho) Gonzales of Los Angles outstroked George Gosler, University of California, but not without an argument from the collegian in the first set. Gonzales was extended to eight games before he overcame Gosler, 8-6, but he had little trouble in the final set, 6-1.

Tar Heels Warned Of Wake's Gregus As Contest Nears

By Frank Allston

Coach Carl Snavely yesterday told the assembled Carolina football team that Wake Forest's talented halfback Bill Gregus is "the hardest running back I have ever seen."

With that note of caution, Snavely sent his Tar Heel charges back to their light drills on Navy field in preparation for Saturday's game. As in past weeks, the emphasis was on pass defense, but Carolina's offense also came in for a little polishing up.

The Tar Heel eleven rounded out their pre-game practice sessions yesterday for what is expected to be one of the toughest contests on this year's schedule. Although the Tar Heels are undefeated against two very tough foes, Wake Forest can never be considered a "push-over."

Two and One Record

To date, the Demon Deacons have compiled a record of two wins and a single defeat. The Baptists downed George Washington, 26-13, in the season's opener and last week upset defending Southern conference champion William and Mary, 21-12. In between, the Deacons journeyed to Boston, where the Boston College eleven shackled them, 26-9.

In all three of these games, the passing of quarterback Tom Fetzer and the hard running of Gregus have played important parts In last year's contest, Wake Forest caught the Tar Heels after a disastrous loss at Austin, Texas, and Peahead Walker's boys labeled the Carolina eleven with their second defeat of the year.

Figures released this week showed that the Tar Heels were rated fourth in the nation in rushing defense, giving up a mere 33 yards per contest. Snavely is figuring on his tough defensive line to halt the threat of Gregus' running and to force Fetzer into rushing his passing.

Charlie Justice, Carolina's triple threat tailback, rated the nation's number four position this week in total offense with 431 yards gained in two games. His punting

Little's Frosh Football Team Battles South Carolina Today

The University of South Carolina Jayvees will invade Chapel Hill today to meet the Tar Babies in their inaugural battle at 4 p.m. in Kenan Stadium.

Coach Crowell Little has been drilling his charges hard for the past few weeks and the boys have shown up well in recent scrimmage sessions. A number of the freshman prospects have outstanding high school records and will get their first chance to show their stuff in today's battle.

Carolina will field a hefty aggregation for this afternoon's opener. The line will average 191 pounds and the backfield will weigh in with a 188 average. Coach Little has combined speed with weight and general all-around ability to come up with he terms "a very good team".

The South Carolinians scrimmaged the Tar Heels before the opening of the season, several outstanding freshman players were spotted on the Gamecock squad.

South Carolina will run from the baffling T-formation, employing speed and deceptiveness as their main weapons. The Carolina Frosh, like the varsity, will use the single-wing offense.

A tentative starting lineup announced by Coach Little yesterday included Joe O'Brien and Joe McIntyre at ends; Ed Williams and Bill Kuhn, tackles; Dick Bestwick and Joe Dudeck at guards; and Andy Miketa at center. Bill Keslo, Skeeter Hesmer, Cullen White, and Dick Weiss will comprise the starting backfield.

Boo Ferriss Here

A celebrity walked into the DTH night office at Colonial Press the other night, but missed immediate recognition for lack of his usual attire.

It turned out to be big Boo Ferriss of the Boston Red Sox who had a major part in pitching the Beantown boys back into a tie for the American league pennant.

Ferriss was on his way home at the time and had stopped in Chapel Hill to visit relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Gene Byrd, and Orville Campbell, Colonial publisher.

FROSH CROSS COUNTRY

All freshmen who are interested in trying out for the freshman cross country team are asked to see Coach Dick Hollander any day between 3:30 and 5:30 on Fetzer field.

Cross Country Squad Prepares For Monday Opener With VPI

Coach Dale Ranson's cross country squad breezed through a six mile workout yesterday in preparation for their first meet of the season next Monday with the VPI harriers. The dual event will get underway at 4:00 p.m. at Fetzer field.

The Tar Heels, who went undefeated last season in conference competition, will be minus the services this year of Jack Milne, NCAA cross country champ, Jimmy Miller, and Alvin Smith, who have left school. However, Coach Ranson is expecting four lettermen, Sam Magill, Julian McKenzie, Frank Hooper, Jim Hunt, and also Norman Barringer to face the cinderman against the Gobblers. This quintet has shown up well in practice sessions and have led early trials.

Other harriers who will see action this season are Dick Gregory, a first year man, Jerome Lewis, George Harris, John Hoots, and Mark Burnham.

The VPI ramblers will be led by veteran runners, Shelton and Middleton. Little is known of the strength of the Gobblers, but if this year's team runs true to form, the Virginians will bring a top-notch squad here for Monday's inaugural meet.

Dick Hollander, former cross country and distance star at Carolina, will coach the junior varsity squad which has a five meet schedule, opening on October 18, against the N. C. State Jayvees.

Symphony Society Inaugurates Drive For Membership; Cordon Is Chairman

Headquarters At Y, Swain, Bank, Village

With cooperation from all fraternities and sororities on the campus, and under the direction of Deans Carmichael and Weaver the Chapel Hill and Orange county chapter of the North Carolina Symphony society drive for membership will begin today and extend through Oct. 16, it was announced last night.

Norman Cordon, chairman of the group, addressing approximately 20 members last night at Gerrard hall in a kickoff meeting to launch the drive, revealed that headquarters for the drive will be at the YMCA, in the lobby of the Bank of Chapel Hill, 118 and 120 Daniels Road in Victory Village and at the symphony offices in Swain hall.

Announcements concerning the drive will be distributed in all fraternity and sorority houses and all the dorms on the campus.

Albin Pikutis, business manager of the symphony, gave final instructions to the vice-chairmen in charge of different sections of town. New members who were voted on at the last meeting; officers of the Chapel Hill and Orange county chapter including Mrs. A. C. Burnham and Miss Emily Pollard, co-chairman of the chapter; representatives from Chapel Hill civic clubs and campus organizations were present.

Gordon reminded workers that prospective members should be informed that membership entitles the bearer to attend all concerts to be given by the Little Symphony as well as the full orchestra in the state.

A larger number than the 14,000 subscriptions last year is expected this year, according to Gordon.

"The people of Chapel Hill," he said, "have a special stake in the symphony and its future. It is here, back in 1932, that the orchestra was first founded, and its business offices have been located here ever since."

US DELEGATE to U.N. parley in Paris, John Foster Dulles, foreign policy adviser to Gov. Dewey, talks with reporters after his arrival at LaGuardia Field, N. Y., from Europe. Questioned about the Republican presidential campaign, Dulles told the newsmen that: "It couldn't look better."

Polio Report Lists 15 Cases, One New Death

RALEIGH, Oct. 7—(UP)—Fifteen polio cases were reported today to the state Board of Health, and one fatality was added to the polio death toll.

Today's reports made 2,270 cases in the state this year and six in October.

One death from Guilford county edged the death toll up to 122 for the year in the state's worst polio epidemic in history.

The Health department said of the 15 cases reported today, only three began in October. Ten began in September, one in August and one in June.

Four cases were reported from Durham county, three from Mecklenburg, two from Guilford, and one each from Davidson, Forsyth, Iredell, Jones, Rowan and Rutherford counties.

slide.

Gordon hustled to second on the throw to the plate. Then, after Ken Keltner flied out, Larry Doby provided an exact repeat of Gordon's performance, hitting a single to right that put the Indians ahead to stay. Gordon like Boudreau, came home without a slide and Doby went to second.

That was all for then and it would have been enough for today because Lemon, the kid who cried in the Cleveland dressing room when he lost a tough game to Detroit during the stretch drive made it plain that he would have to shed no tears today.

Time after time, when the Braves got men on the bases, he just rared back and threw his fast one.

Indians Lengthen

The Indians lengthened in the fifth when hale Dale Mitchell, pinged a line single into left flied to start the inning. Allie Clark sent him along to second with a sacrifice bunt and Boudreau, not to be denied today got his second hit in as many innings—a single that blasted Spahn off the mound and brought Mitchell home with the run that made it 3 to 1.

He was replaced by chucklin' Charley Barrett, a merry minstrel who is a fine ballad singer. Barrett stopped the Indians until he was lifted for a pinch hitter in the seventh.

But he came too late. The damage had been done and the way Lemon was pitching, the Braves were through for the day.

Waightstill Avery and the Caldwells labored to raise funds through private sources with little success. Finally Davie came to their aid and persuaded the legislature to appropriate $10,000 (which was later converted into a gift) to start the University.

Thus it was that on Oct. 12, 1793, a solemn and distinguished group watched General William R. Davie, later the first honorary Doctor of Law of the University, lay the cornerstone to Old East. Then Rev. Samuel F. McCorkle made the dedicatory address to the gathered throng.

The University of North Carolina was a reality and has since then given to the state which founded her many distinguished and prominent citizens of the United States of America.

average of 43.1 was good for the nation's number five spot.

Carolina's record against Wake Forest over the years shows that the Tar Heels have compiled an enviable record of 32 wins to 12 for the Deacons. One game has ended in a tie.

No matter what the outcome of Saturday's game, it will undoubtedly be one of the best in the Big Four and Southern conference competition this year.

Pearlman to Give Services Tonight

Rabbi Samuel Pearlman will conduct services for Jewish students tonight at 7:30 in the Roland Parker lounge on the second floor of Graham Memorial.

After the services tonight there will be a discussion on Hillel in retrospect and prospect.

The Indians picked up another inconsequential tally in the ninth when Alvin Dark, who had a shaky day at shortstop, started things off by bobbling Jim Hegan's easy grounder.

Kennedy Drives

Hegan moved to second when Lemon grounded out and went on to third as Mitchell also was tossed out on an infield hopper. Bob Kennedy, who had gone in to right field for Clark as a defensive measure, then drove home the final run of the ball game with a single to center.

With the teams ready to take off immediately for the third game of the Series tomorrow in Cleveland, Boudreau and Southworth announced they were sticking to their original pitching plans.

That means that lefty Gene Bearden, who pitched the clutch victory over the Red Sox last Monday in the playoff game to decide the American league pennant winner, will go for the Indians. Vern Bickford, a clever rookie right hander, who has been hard to beat when he had enough rest, this year, was the choice for the Braves.

Quarterly Staff Hears Report Of Mag Progress

Thirty student staff members of the Carolina Quarterly met in Graham Memorial yesterday to hear Editor Bill Sessions report on the progress of the new magazine.

Assistant business manager John Hough reported favorably on the progress of the subscription campaign.

Sessions explained that the editorial staff had received several good articles, but he asked that the drive for good fiction material be intensified.

"Because of the change in plans for the format, our fiction deadline has been pushed up to October 20," Sessions said.

Managing editor Charlie Gibson pointed out that the new magazine will be bound similar to standard commercial magazines, rather than simply slipped into a folded back.

Sessions also expressed the Quarterly's need for students to work in advertising.

"We need both those who have had some experience in advertising and those who are willing to learn," Sessions said.

He pointed out that staff positions are also open in the poetry and book review sections.

The Carolina Quarterly is now engaged in an intensive drive for subscriptions under the leadership of Hough. The campaign is being centered at present on the town and the womens dorms.

Y Cabinet Plans All-Day Retreat

The YMCA Cabinet will hold an all-day retreat Sunday to formulate Y plans for the coming year, meeting at Claude Shoots' farm from 10:15 in the morning til approximately 5:30 Sunday afternoon.

All cabinet members are asked to come to the Y court at 9:30 Sunday morning where transportation to the farm will be provided. Fifty-cent lunches will be served during the day.

5,220 at State

RALEIGH, Oct. 7—(UP)—Total enrollment at North Carolina State college this fall amounted to 5,220 students, registration officials reported today.

Of the total, 2,461 were registered in the School of Engineering. Another 1,079 were attending the School of Agriculture and Forestry; 923 were in the School of Textiles, 392 in the School of Education and 332 in the School of Design. Another 33 special, unclassified students were registered.

The senior class this year establishes an all-time record enrollment of 1,491, the registration office reported.

Prizes Are Offered In Display Contest

The Chapel Hill-Carrboro Merchants association will sponsor a window display contest next week in connection with Homecoming weekend and Founder's day.

Vic Huggins, president of the association, announced yesterday that prizes of $10 and $5 will be offered the first and second place winners respectively.

The contest is scheduled to begin Tuesday, Founder's day, and will continue through Saturday which is Homecoming day for the University. Judging of the contest will be done by three members of the Economics department.

Huggins pointed out that there are no restrictions as to the size or type of display that stores may set up in their windows. "Decorations may follow the theme of either Founder's day or Homecoming, or a combination of the two," Huggins explained.

A circular has been distributed to all merchants informing them of plans for Founder's day. Chancellor R. B. House has suggested that all merchants close up for the duration of the celebration and bring their employees to the ceremonies.

The circular says, "Chancellor House feels that this would be an excellent opportunity for the town and campus folk to get together in a very delightful celebration, all our own, without the masses of a football crowd or without any speech-making."

Huggins said that the association is doing its best to get the town to close off the block of Columbia street between Franklin and Rosemary in order that a street dance may be held on Friday night after the pep rally.

Two individual merchants in the community are sponsoring individual contests during the week of celebration of Founder's day and Homecoming. The two merchants are Wentworth and Sloan and Johnson-Strowd-Ward.

Walter P. Eaton Joins Playmakers

The Carolina Playmakers, busily engaged in launching their 31st season, planning a state-wide tour, and revising their policy governing original playwriting, received a valuable reinforcement this week. He is Walter Prichard Eaton, friendly pipe-smoking dean of American playwriting professors, who formerly taught at Yale university.

Eaton, who went to Yale after an invitation from George Pierce Baker to take over the famous 47 workshop for awhile, remained there for 14 years. He will be the guest lecturer in the department of dramatic art for the coming season.

Before teaching, Eaton made his living as a professional writer. He has over twenty books to his credit, along with innumerable plays and radio dramas.

Samuel Selden, head of the department and of the Carolina Playmakers, said, "We are very fortunate to have Walter Prichard Eaton to help us in our move to shift the emphasis on dramatic writing from the one-act play form to the full length form."

AEPi Kept Rules, Says Andy Cornish

According to Andy Cornish, chairman of Interfraternity Council court, Alpha Epsilon Pi fraternity has not violated the Coed Visiting agreement.

The group is not yet entitled to the privileges of the agreement simply because the members have not signed it, not because of any sort of ineligibility, as reported to the Daily Tar Heel yesterday by IFC President Jack Thompson.

Colonial Stores Has Fire Loss Of $3,000,000

DURHAM, Oct. 8.—(UP)—Fire completely destroyed the huge Colonial Stores grocery warehouse seven miles from Durham today, and store spokesmen estimated damage may "easily" reach $3,000,000.

First worry of store executives, however, was arranging emergency food supplies to replace those from the warehouse, which supplies nearly 100 stores in the Tar Heel state and part of Virginia.

District Supervisor H. B. Huston of Charlotte said the North Carolina stores would probably be supplied from warehouses at Norfolk and Greenville, S. C.

Fire, discovered at 2:45 this morning, raced through the huge steel and brick structure and firemen were hampered by lack of sufficient water.

The building, filled with merchandise, was a total loss. Several freight cars on a siding by the warehouse were burned, and a delivery truck was lost.

Marie Wicker Is Selected To Head UWF

Marie Wicker heads the slate of officers elected at a meeting of the student chapter of the United World Federalists Thursday at 5 o'clock in the Grail room of Graham Memorial.

Al Lowenstein was elected vice-president of the organization; Sandy McEachern, secretary; Sally Lineweaver, recording secretary and John Lineweaver, treasurer. These officers will serve during the fall quarter.

Discussed at the meeting were the theories of world federalism and the purposes of organization. Jake Wicker, temporary chairman, presided at the meeting, giving a brief talk on the principles of world federation and problems that confront a federated world government.

Among new members joining this quarter are Bill McLendon, John McCall, Sally Lineweaver, Winifred Meldrim and John Beshara.

According to the president, the club wants anyone interested in foreign affairs.

"We invite especially all those who would like to participate in our weekly radio programs, our speakers' programs, or in any of the other activities of the chapter."

Meetings are conducted weekly on Thursdays at 5 o'clock in the Grail room.

Mac Shaw Is MC For Floor Show

Mac Shaw, who played Orlando in "As You Like It" this summer, was master of ceremonies at last night's floor show in the Rendezvous room, and conducted, with Bob Barr and Alice Denham, what they called a "research campaign" on the Carolina Coed.

Sam Green, popular singer, offered several numbers, and the finale was a take-off on ballet done by Betsy Brunk, member of the University dance group.

Each Friday night finds a new group of entertainers presenting a floor show in the campus night spot in Graham Memorial.

WORKERS IN THE PROCESS of tearing down the Scuttlebutt were unaware day before yesterday of the student petitions and protests which were pouring into South building protesting that the building was being razed without consulting the will of the student body. The Student Legislature adopted a resolution in Thursday night's meeting condemning the administration for its action.

Kidnapings

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8. — (UP)—The FBI is making a preliminary investigation of charges that two groups of Progressive party workers were kidnaped and threatened in Georgia last month, it was revealed today.

The Justice department's Civil Rights section asked the FBI to look into the charges, made by associates of Progressive party presidential candidate Henry A. Wallace.

The complaint said that seven Wallace supporters were forced from their Columbus, Ga., hotel room at gunpoint on the night of Sept. 24. They allegedly were driven 30 miles out of town and threatened with violence if they returned.

Iredell Students Plan County Club

University students from Iredell county met Thursday night at Graham Memorial to hear Cowles Bristol of Statesville outline a plan through which a new organization could maintain good publicity concerning the University.

He suggested a good regional club for students from Iredell county, an alumni news letter, alumni get-togethers, and assistance in the orientation, socially and materially, for Iredell freshmen.

John Powers To Judge Yack Beauty Contest

Entries for the 1948 Yackety Yack beauty contest, which will be climaxed by the coronation of the queen and her court at the Charlie Spivak dance Nov. 20, will be accepted not later than 6 o'clock Thursday, according to Bill Duncan, Yackety Yack editor.

Offices of the Yack will receive the entries at any time before then, he said.

John R. Powers, model selecter deluxe, who has consented to judge this year's queen and her court of 15 girls, will make his selection from proofs of pictures taken after an appointment is made by a member of the Yack staff.

The dance will be sponsored by the Grail, and music will be furnished by Spivak and his orchestra. Sealed proofs, returned by Powers after his selection, will be opened during intermission on the night of the dance.

According to the proclamation issued by Duncan, any organization on campus, which includes fraternities, sororities, dormitories and other clubs, may enter as many as three girls each, and the deadline for submitting entries must be respected.

All organizations are requested to get their entries in as early as possible. Each entry should be accompanied by a $3 fee, which will be used to cover the cost of flowers, photographs and postage, Duncan said.

Negro Charged With Swindling In Real Estate

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 8.—(UP)—A Negro real estate dealer who allegedly sold houses in a white neighborhood to Negroes was bound over to criminal court today on charges of cheating and swindling.

The operator, J. H. Calhoun, sold houses on the pretext that the section would become all-Negro, witnesses said. Calhoun's attorney cited a recent U. S. Supreme Court ruling which invalidated titles restricting the sale of property to Negroes.

The warrant against Calhoun was sworn out by Geneva Allen, Negro, who charged that the agent sold her a house for $7,500 and refused to return her $370 deposit after she found the house was in a white section.

Whitfield Rules Shamley Must Pay

Judge Henry Whitfield ruled in a hearing Thursday night that Billie Shamley, charged with larceny of a car, must remain in jail until he can repair the damages incurred.

A student, H. B. Hines who lives in Whitehead dormitory, is owner of the car. Hines said that his car was parked in front of the Pines last Saturday night, the keys were in it.

Shamley allegedly drove the car off while Hines was inside the building. The car was found not far from the Pines off in a ditch. Hines reported that certain articles contained in the car were taken by Shamley before he could be apprehended.

Whitfield ruled that Shamley must be locked up until he pays Hines for the damage to the car and returns the articles he took.

In another hearing, Whitfield sent Herbert Canada of Chapel Hill to the road for six months on a charge of being drunk and a common nuisance.

PARIS, Oct. 8.—(UP)—Secretary of State George C. Marshall left for Washington tonight to confer with President Truman after asserting that a "black cloud of menace" would have spread over all Europe had not the Western Allies taken the Berlin crisis to the United Nations.

Terrorism Expected

LIMA, Peru, Oct. 8.—(UP)—Armored vehicles, jeeps cavalry and foot troops combed the metropolitan area today as the government intensified precautionary measures against "expected acts of terrorism" by the outlawed left-wing APRA party.

Strike Violence

PARIS, Oct. 8.—(UP)—Violence and sabotage flared for the first time today in the nation's five-day-old Communist-led coal strike. One person was killed and 80 others injured as strikers clashed with Republican security guards at two points in the northeastern industrial area of Lorraine.

Soviet Practice

BERLIN, Oct. 8. — (UP) — Two R.A.F. pilots reported today they had seen Soviet planes drop live bombs and engage in air gunnery practice near the crowded Hamburg-Berlin air corridor over which vital supplies are ferried into this blockaded city.

Burning Engine

HAMILTON FIELD, Cal., Oct. 8.—(UP)—Hamilton field flight service today reported that a B-29 based here had made an emergency landing at Spokane air base after one of its engines caught fire while flying over Medford, Ore.

Holiday

Chancellor R. B. House yesterday announced a partial half-holiday for the entire University in commemoration of the 155th anniversary on Tuesday.

The full text of his announcement read:

"On University day, Tuesday, Oct. 12, all classes will be suspended and all offices will be closed from 10:50 to 2 o'clock for memorial services to be held on the south facade of South building. The audience will group itself in front of the lower steps. Students are urged to attend; faculty, staff and townspeople are invited. No academic regalia is required."

Whale Invasion Only Fragrant To Soap Dealers

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., Oct. 8.—(UP—Florida's whale-invasion was a none-too-fragrant memory for seasiders today but a bonanza for the fats and oils business.

Truckers, using power winches, hauled 30 expired whales to the Florida Soap corp. plant in Jacksonville. The plant went on a 24-hour operation to render the mammals' blubber into fats for soap and their proteins into hog and chicken feed.

With its staff sweating and its vats brimming, the soap company said please don't send us any more whales.

Four whales, believed the only survivors among the 44 pilot whales which beached themselves in a mad suicide rush yesterday, were alive and healthy in tanks at Marineland studios near here.

The studios dispatched and butchered one whale into fillets and roasts. The meat was being cured in brine and vinegar for 72 hours preparatory to being served.

A fat-rendering firm from Tampa was trying to gather up the few remaining dead whales on the beach to transport them across the state.

SP Vacancies To Be Filled

Student party offices and executive council vacancies will be filled at the meeting of the party to be conducted Monday night at 9 o'clock in Roland Parker lounge 3 of Graham Memorial.

Ed Tenney, party chairman, explained that the resignation of Dick Allsbrook from the Student Legislature will necessitate the naming and election of candidates from the party to fill that vacancy. Everyone interested in student government is invited to attend.

Preceding the party meeting, the executive council will convene at 8:15 to discuss and determine party policies. Many new proposals which have been presented to the chairman will be before the council for consideration at this time.

Large Rally Is Scheduled At WF Today

The Friday night pep rally that generally precedes Carolina football games will be eliminated this week and in its place will be a giant yell-fest on the Wake Forest campus this morning at 12 o'clock, head cheerleader Norm Sper announced last night.

Sper plans to have the Tar Heel partisans gather at the Deacon cafeteria and then parade through the Baptist campus. This was done at Georgia and "With four times as many students present, it should be that much more successful, 'Sper stated.

The head Tar Heel holler guy added that the gates at the Wake Forest stadium will not open until 12:30 and studeents who get in line early will not necessarily obtain the best seats so Carolina ladies and gentlemen have nothing to lose by giving the Deacs a "lesson in yelling."

Two YW Groups Slate Officials For Speakers

Two of the 15 YWCA committees meeting for the first time Monday at 5 o'clock, will have popular members of the administration as guest speakers. Other committees have announced that plans for committee projects will be the subject of their first meeting.

Dr. Frank W. Hanft, professor in the Law school here and instructor for the Monday night religion classes held on campus, will speak to members of the Public Affairs committee, headed by Emily Baker.

Dr. Hanft, a lieutenant colonel in World War II, is widely in demand as a speaker. He is a member of the United World Federalists on campus and a student of world government. The committee will meet in the cabinet room of the Y building.

Members of the Campus Affairs committee, headed by Anne Wells, will hear Twig Branch discuss 'What student government means to students.' Miss Branch, who is employed as Coed Adviser working with Dean Katherine Carmichael, is a graduate of the University. The meeting will be held in the Y library on the second floor.

Both committees are open to the public and anyone interested is urged to attend.

Prizes Up to $6 Slated for Bingo

Cash prizes running as high as $6 will be awarded at Graham Memorial's bingo games tonight at 8 o'clock, John Van Hecke announced yesterday.

The original plan for the weekly games stated that they would be held every Tuesday night, but beginning tonight, they will be held on Saturday instead. The public is invited to attend.

Old Rivals Will Clash On WF Turf

By Dick Jenrette

Carolina and Wake Forest, two neighboring schools whose rivalry has produced some of the best football in the state's history, renew their colorful series this afternoon at 2:30 in Groves stadium, Wake Forest. The game will be the first Southern conference and Big Four test for the undefeated Tar Heels.

Carolina goes into the game regarded in most quarters as a two-touchdown favorite. But veteran sports observers are placing little confidence in these odds. Annually Wake Forest has made a habit of pulling the big upset each season, and Coach Peahead Walker will have his boys fired for the Carolina tilt.

Coach Carl Snavely and his Tar Heel charges certainly won't be bothered by overconfidence. Nearly every member of the present team was on hand one gray October afternoon in Chapel Hill last year when the Deacons turned in a surprisingly easy 19-7 triumph over the favored Tar Heels. That defeat probably cost Carolina a bowl bid—and it did prevent the team from capturing the Southern conference championship.

All Out To Win

So the Tar Heels can be expected to go all out to win today, but it will be no easy task. Coach Walker, deviating from his traditional single wing style of offense, has installed the T-formation at Wake Forest, and his big Deacons have been learning the system's intracacies rapidly.

Wake Forest started its season with a none-too-impressive 26-13, victory over George Washington. Boston College found the Deacons easy pickings the following week, grabbing a 26-9 win over the Baptists. But last Saturday, Walker's outfit demonstrated signs of greatness, checking William and Mary's conference champs, 21-12.

However, the 5,000 Carolina students who will journey over to Wake Forest for the tilt don't seem particularly impressed by the Deacon record. Tar Heel supporters point proudly to the 34-7 victory over Texas and the 21-14 decision over Georgia. With Justice, Rodgers and cohorts operating behind what probably is the best line in the country, the general consensus of opinion is that Carolina will get revenge for last season's loss.

The Associated Press grid poll, including last week's games, had the Tar Heels ranked second in the nation—only ten points behind first place Notre Dame. Carolina received 55 votes for first place to 50 for the Irish, but was

TMA Discusses DTH Delivery

The Town Men's association, meeting Thursday afternoon for their first formal meeting of the new term, began their task of working for town men by passing a resolution asking for "a more thorough and complete delivery service of the Daily Tar Heel to all town men." The resolution added that the DTH should be delivered by 7:30 each morning.

Nelson Taylor, member of the executive committee, was elected as a liaison man to work between the association and Dean of Students Fred H. Weaver in an effort to obtain representation for the group on various campus boards. Gran Childress stressed the importance especially of placing a town man on the Graham Memorial board of directors, since the student union building is the only place on campus that town men have an easy access to.

Truman Expresses Peace Hopes Before Large Buffalo Audience

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 8—(UP)—President Truman declared tonight that although present world conditions are a matter of grave concern "I believe . . . that we will have peace."

The president made the statement in a campaign speech at Buffalo which wound up a day-long swing across upper New York state.

Mr. Truman said there are two basic questions troubling the American people these days. He summed them up as:

"1. War or peace.

"2. Hard times or prosperity."

His speech was aimed primarily at the second question—hard times or prosperity—in line with his theme that the Democratic party represents economic progress and the Republican party leads to depression.

Before he delved into economics, however, he dealt slightly with the question of war or peace.

"I know that every right thinking American wants peace," he said.

"I believe that our prayers will be answered and that we will have peace.

"Of course, present world conditions are of grave concern to all of us."

Clean It Up

Enough is enough! The Carolina student has let himself and his University down.

We went out and took a look at the South building steps facing the library. They were filthy! Paper cups, discarded wrappers, and crushed cigarette packages were scattered over steps stained brown from coffee.

We wondered what a casual visitor or a homecoming alumnus would think when he saw the symbol of the University surrounded by filth left by careless students.

We would not protest if it were not for the fact that there are SEVEN trash cans within a few paces in the Y court area, one of them standing at the bottom of the South steps. They were placed there for a purpose, the purpdse of receiving trash. There is even a caretaker who shuffles about the area resignedly picking up cigarette butts which cannot be put into a paper-filled trash can.

Carolina is your home now. Will you respect her? You are your own government now; there is no authority to tell you what to do. Will you help yourselves?—L. K.

Case Of Misjudgment

Several letters have come to us regarding the speech made by Governor J. Strom Thurmond in Hill hall Tuesday night, most of them reflecting more or less bitter opposition to what he said or did not say. Be this as it may, the thing that impressed us most about the South Carolinian's appearance here was not anything he said but the fact that so many people had no opportunity to hear what he said. This is probably because we were among the several score people who never got beyond the front entrance of the music building.

Leaders of the Forum, sponsor of the speech, explained their use of the smaller auditorium by saying they thought it was of prime importance that the speaker should talk to a full house. Granted that this is nice for the speaker, we still think it more important that all who desire should be able to attend—even if it means the speaker faces a few unfilled seats in more spacious Memorial auditorium.

Anyboby Want A Coffin

It's just a whoop and a holler over the hill to Wake Forest—thirty-seven miles, to be exact, and usually there's a clear road and smooth riding between here and there. Before and after game time today, however, there will be a million and one cars zipping along that stretch of highway. The old school spirit won't be the only kind running high this afternoon, and a coffin is no vehicle to ride home from the game in.

In other words—DRIVE CAREFULLY.

Acting Like Yankees

Carolina has a great football team. That's no news to anybody at this late date, and it is also no news that the Tar Heels are going to beat Wake Forest this afternoon. But that doesn't mean the game will be a pushover; the Deacons have never yet fielded a team that didn't put up a darn good fight.

The South put up a great fight in the Civil War, too, and afterwards carpetbagging Yankees made themselves generally hated by rubbing in their victory. The University doesn't want to send any carpetbaggers to Wake Forest.

Odds And Ends

By Rita Adams

ON CAMPUS:

SNIFF. Triple cases of pneumonia (so help me, that's what it feels like) have hit this poor lil' campus worse than Sherman, both '61 and '48 variety, hit Georgia. The infirmary hall is filled to capacity with long, sad faces, and big boxes of Kleenex. And, then, there are the victims like Jim Blount, who keep struggling along to class moaning, "I almost didn't come to this morning; and when I finally did, I wished I hadn't."

TRAIL BLAZERS. Prof. Cathey gave his history class, 'specially a few Charlotteans, something to thank their lucky stars for this week, when he informed them that at one time a man getting to made a trip down Charlotte-way made out a will instead of a life insurance policy before leaving. Speaking of Charlotte, just when is the Carolina club from there going to have a meeting. Monroe Landreth is playing mum about that question.

LOGICAL? Brightest comment from Martin Lean's philosophy class was the statement that all women who dye their hair are hypocrites, since they try to deceive people. Incidentally, there has been a drop, but no add for that particular class. Frisky, true to his name as any dog could be, was dismissed from the course because Vickie, with her big brown doggy eyes, declared herself mistress of the class.

CONGRATS! to Becky Holton, new president of the Alpha Gams. What with her cheerleader job, she should be a mighty busy lil' gal around this campus.

MALE'S MAIL. Mary Beth Lockwood and Sara Turlington, 220 Alderman, are still wondering what to do with the letter they recently received addressed to W. C. Bostic III from Queens College.

SING-SONG. Old South gave forth with the opening chord in the women's glee club's first practice of the year. Just as the girls had settled on the steps of South and collected an audience from the men's dorms, Paul Young raised his arms in the shepherd's hook, and bang went the bell in the tower.

HIS HONOR "Judge" Luck must have gotten buried deep beneath his law books and documents this fall 'cause he hasn't darkened the paths of the "Y" in yea many weeks.

IN TOWN:

Mind if we get over on the sentimental side just a wee bit? That tree by the side of Carr dorm is the darn prettiest thing in this town. It gets redder and golder every day.

WEDDING BELLS have sounded for both the Reynolds sisters—Helen and Virginia—this fall. Congratulations and best wishes to them. You know, Helen has been holding down the mighty important position as Dr. Graham's secretary, and Virginia has been in the editorial department of the University Press.

MORE SOCIETY. Our celebrated alumnus, Lygette Blythe, has been honored with another party celebrating the advent of his new book, this one in Greensboro. And Mrs. Pete Mullis entertained about 300 people at the Carolina Inn in honor of Mrs. Norman Cordon this week.

Sorry, No Drum

Daffy Side Ot Politics

By Harman W. Nichols
United Staff Correspondent

W A S HINGTON,—(UP)—A lady in Colorado wrote to Republican headquarters here and said if Tom Dewey didn't put her son on the platform with him in Denver, by golly she'd vote for Harry Truman.

Her boy, she said, was a solo drummer—one of the best in the west.

The woman likely will go Democratic because all she got out of the GOP was a "sorry, we've got all the solo drummers we can use and thank you."

Much of the fan mail coming into the Republican high command is on the serious side. But some of it is a little silly, although it's all aimed at pepping up the campaign and maybe putting Mr. Dewey up on the White House balcony that Harry built. (Aside to the Democrats: I did a story about your boys last week.)

One fellow from southern Illinois said he thought the Dewey campaign was going along fine, except for one thing. He said "Tom" was no name for a presidential candidate.

"Change it to Teddy." He demanded.

Herb Brownell, the campaign manager, told one of his lads to write the fellow a nice note and say that good politics didn't call for changing names of the candidates in the middle of a campaign.

A lot of people got downright nasty because the Dewey train didn't make all the crossroads from here out there. Promises of getting "900 folks to show up and cheer and wave banners" couldn't change a schedule that was too complicated in the first place.

A woman called GOP headquarters and said wasn't it funny that after Mr. Dewey moved on west from Denver she never heard him on the air?

The man said it wasn't a bit funny. It was partly a matter of money and partly a matter of getting radio time—at the right time.

The woman, who was blind and couldn't read the newspapers, said she lost track of the candidate from Denver on and would the man please give her a review of what had been said. It took a bit of research, but the headquarters man called the lady back and gave her a "fill in" on what she had missed. Just part of the service.

All of the correspondents who write in on a campaign year get a polite reply.

The Republicans got a shock from a foreign country (Belgium). The writer said he had been reading about all of this free American money and enclosed a picture of Tom Dewey, ringed in porcelain. The kind you could buy for half a dollar or less. He said it was a gift to the Republican committee, but added that he had a lot more—which he was willing to part with for $50 each.

Republican leaders had a bad time at every stop where Mr. Dewey made a major speech on his recent tour. Local politicians who were doing the introduction, to a man, missed the cue. All of 'em had a piece prepared to read about "our next President," etc.

The locals were mike-happy and invariably began before they were on the air.

Tom Dewey himself loused things up once. He rushed back to the mikes in the back of the train and said he was glad, indeed, to be back in Denver.

Coeds, Calls And Clinics

By Bill Buchan

Two coeds — old coeds, mind you,—don't like the idea of the telephone ringing only for the new campus beauties. Or, at least that is the story that two of our more eligible young ladies poured out to me Sunday night.

The whole thing started when I was complaining my usual complaint that Carolina coeds let the phone ring 17 times, then they answer it. I made a survey this summer, sorta an unintentional survey, but I decided on the number 17 after listening to phones ring monotonously time after time. I started counting 'em and eventually arrived at the average of 17 rings per phone call. Interesting summer.

But getting back to those coeds. One of them informed me that she doesn't answer the phone "because it's never for me." Her room is directly next door to both the house phone and the outside phone.

Personally, I think my two coeds are exaggerating their case of no dates. Both are sorority girls and I doubt if they spend many nights home unless they are studying. They were complaining, though, or otherwise and I expect their words need airing.

"Seriously, It's just that the boys ignore us for the first month of the year, when they tire of the new faces, they come running back," quoted my other little girl who lives in a sorority house.

"Yes," replied the other cute thing, "someday they'll come back and we won't be around." (Here, I wanted to add that will be the day when the six-to-one-ratio is a fond remembrance.)

Now my two sweet young things probably were joking, but that psychiatarist told me that I wouldn't say things if I didn't think them and if I think them before I say them, then other people must too, 'cause I refuse to think I'm as nuts as that man said I was, if other people aren't nuts also.

But back to the coeds. They made me promise that I wouldn't give their names, and I keep promises — most of them anyhow, so I won't. But if some smart young character goes through the complete list of one thousand coeds, asking me their names for confirmation one by one, I can't help but say yes when he comes to their names.

They're really cute kids, personality plus. But getting back to my telephone complaint (which was the real purpose of this, not the coeds or my visit with the psychiatrist who said I was beyond hope), it seems to me that the girls could get to the phone a little faster. Maybe, after the 14th ring.

Spencer dorm (my apoligies, Mrs. Buchanan) has an unique system for answering phones. It goes like this: The girl who gets the last call on the phone is supposed to answer it the next time it rings. The only thing that complicates this little setup is that most of the time, after the girl has answered the phone, she scoots down the stairs (after 35 minutes of putting on lipstick to meet her hunk of muscles and isn't around to answer the phone when it blares forth. The other girls, especially those in the rooms next to the phone, don't know this, however, and they just sit there until it rings 17 times. After the seventeenth time, they are evidently convinced and they answer it.

Which to quote no one in particular, proves that Life can be lovely.

Of Song and Sound

Editor:

If, as Charlie Joyner says, (Oct. 6) the Rathskeller has "quiet conversation and an overall air of old-world respectability," I am glad I am from the "new-world." My conception of respectability is quite different.

The Rathskeller is anything but quiet and, in a sense, respectable. On this subject I feel more qualified to speak than those who patronize it. Should one walk out of the door and throw a bottle straight up, it would likely land on my window-sill. The same is true of less tangible but more annoying manifestations such as off-key song and off-color language.

Last night with both my windows and the Rathskeller door tightly closed I heard several choice verses concerning a gentleman who desired to be "lain in clover;" the song was punctuated with repetitious "hell" and "damn."

Exhibit B concerns the junior soap-box politicians, who, burning with alcoholic fuel and desire for notoriety, loudly exploit the merits of candidates for the presidency. Just as loudly they employ a select profane vocabulary in baring the ineptitude, social lapses and questionable antecedents of the other candidates.

Mr. Danziger financed this most wonderful addition to Chapel Hill and we bless him for establishing a "good" place to go with a "nice" date. But nice as the Rathskeller is now, if he permits these things to grow, it will degenerate into a low dive. If he checked the decay of standards and really made the "Amber Alley Paradise" what he advertises it to be, the increase of higher-grade clientele would more than compensate for the loss of a few obscene "rabble rousers."

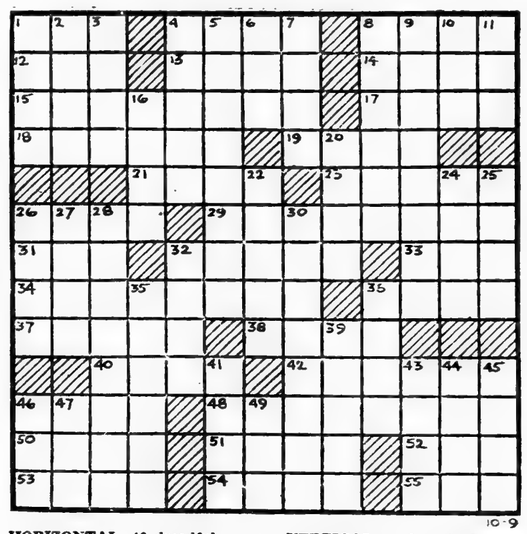
Ripping Robertson

Editor:

Since I know Bill Robertson's political views from of old, I was surprised at the tack he is following. But I think I can interpret it in light of his past performances, and those who haven't bumped into Robertson before might well take in a few words.



Robertson waxes lyrical over the dynamic nature of democracy, the common man, the struggle of the people (that vague mass) against their oppressors, etc. People who inject high-sounding phrases into their political arguments usually have some unsavory slop that has to be coated with sweetness before people will swallow it.

Robertson invokes the names of Paine, Jefferson, Jackson, Whitman in an effort to equate the great radical movements of our past with the Communist program: Americans have had to fight for gains they have made; have had to shock and upset people, utter heresies, endure the suspicions and persecutions of the "status quo" people. This process must and will continue. Only an idiot could imagine that our present political and economic situation can be perpetuated indefinitely. We must expect changes and, in fact, we must make sure certain changes do come, that the evils in our system are removed, and our system is discarded when its usefulness is over. That will not be the end of the world: another order will be born out of our present difficulties. It will rise to meet new problems and will be swept away when it cannot conquer its own flaws and adjust to the emergencies which beset it. And there must always be radicals to see the evils in our institutions and to guide us from reaction toward reform.

If we need radicalism, why shouldn't we swallow the Communist brew, and join the Communists in bringing "peace, freedom, and abundance" to the world? That's easy. Look at the slavery and low standard of living in Russia after thirty years of Communism.

So read Robertson's filchings from the Gospel according to St. Marx. You owe it to yourself, as this is the sort of thing real liberals have to guard against. They must not be distracted by siren voices on the Left or the Right. But they cannot stop there: they must work to remove the conditions which make people listen to the baloney of the phony liberals. They must keep their ideals alive and working, and still not "purge" the people who disagree with them. And when progress comes, they will bring it, and not the Communist phrase-makers.

The Tornadic Tar Heels

TWO SCORE OF TORNADIC Tar Heels will attempt a short jump on the long road to national fame and fortune this afternoon when the local constituency of football makes big tracks in the direction of neighboring Wake Forest to do somewhat dubious battle with the college of that scenic Southern village.

Said college, given a ready 14-point nudge from the bookies will be needless to say, ready and waiting for the Carolina invasion. The chant of "We did it before and we can do it again" has rung through the streets of the little hamlet for the first time since V-J day and the Deacons are out to prove that last year's game was no social error.

The lads of Coach Peahead Walker, says the form sheet, intend to stage their passing and running pageantry in a little different manner this season to prove if nothing else, that variety is the spice of the well-seasoned ball team. All of which boils down to the fact that the Tar Heels will face their third T-team in about the same number of weeks with the Deacons hoping to be able to T-off against the Carolinians with a greater degree of success than did their predecessors.

Tore Up the Clippings

BOTH UNITS OF ENDEAVOR are sporting relatively the same talent they had on display at the last meeting which for the uninformed, the Wake Forest team won by tearing asunder the Tar Heels' press clippings and outscored them three touchdowns to one. Even the weather was bad that day.

This year, foretells everybody but the Deacons and a few scattered long shot players, will be a different story with the happy ending swinging its spotlight of joy on the gallivanting Tar Heels. That such popularity must be deserved remains to be seen.

The physiologist will have a tough time with this one. Wake should be down after upsetting William and Mary last week, while the Tar Heels should be up after failing the Georgia state inspection for having no breaks in Athens. On the other hand, the Deacons should be up since they are the underdogs, while Carolina should be bending down under the load of national prestige. Then again, the Snavelymen will be up, figuring the revenge element from last year's orgy in Kenan. The physiologist should go back to pulling habits out of rats.

The Poor Man's Mati

A CONSENSUS OF ONE has a rare feeling that the Deacons will trouble the Tar Heels more defensively than on the offensive side of the ledger. The Wake Forest group has had their best observer on the Tar Heels for the past two weeks in the person of one Bob Kellog, the poor man's Mati Hari. Mr. Kellog, it is told, has almost parental knowledge of the locals and will be out to treat them like the red-headed stepchild.

The Tar Heels scored only once last year and that time only on a long forward pass that prevented a whitewash of which even Tom Sawyer would have been proud. They face the task of making up for lost time and tallies through a line that reputedly will be thrown raw meat shortly before the ball game.

On the offense the Deacons will venture a pleasing passing game that could be deadly effective. The Tar Heels have only one real weakness—their inability to handle the enemy's passes the way their coed sisters do. All three crossings of the Carolina goal line this year have been made on passes, including one we threw ourselves.

A Healthy Hypothesis

ONE HEALTHY HYPOTHESIS: no one will run through the Tar Heels this season. Some of the nation's better backs, regretfully representing Texas and Georgia, had about as much chance of survival with the Carolina line as a California pedestrian. It's the greatest thing since Mason and Dixon.

With ball in hand there is little doubt of the Tar Heels' obvious potency. They cut Georgia to ribbons for three scoreless quarters last week, and then tied the loose ends together for three quick rounds of scores. Given an inch they will take a mile. Texas tried this and wound up backed right into the end zone bleachers for the majority of the afternoon. That isn't much of a place from which to watch the game.

The ability to capitalize on breaks is one of the best signs of a better football team Great teams are not to be hampered or tampered with.

The Big Threats

CAROLINA'S BIGGEST OPPOSITION today and for the remainder of the season may not come from scheduled opponents. Three unslated foe are trying to get into the act and are making a grandstand try of doing so: 1) injuries, 2) the weather, 3) the Russians.

The injuries are playing havoc each week with the Tar Heels while the locals are stuck with the task of playing some of the best conditioned teams in the nation. Wake Forest is especially strong in the physical condition department. The Tar Heels have lost Hartig for the season and Flamisch for the game, with the majority of the rest being held together with string and bailing wire. There's not a team in the country who can limp as fast as the locals can.

The weather will make a definite difference in the type of game the Tar Heels will play. With a dry, fast track the Carolinians will play a dry, fast ball game. In the rain it will be many a slip between the snap and the goal line with young Charlie Justice losing much of his effectiveness.

Watch the Russians

DEFENSIVE LINE PLAY excels in the mud, says the good book, and that will suit the Tar Heels to a T—presumably Wake Forest's Rain will take the dazzle and color out of the Snavelymen, but should not dampen their ability to grind out a score or more when the blue counters go down.

The Russians bear watching. They are a potential powerhouse that might explode at any minute and ruin Carolina's best season since Kansas went dry.

Which brings one to the point of picking the Tar Heels to glide through by three touchdowns. The old school tie has gotten its second wrinkle after two hard weekends and should pull the locals through.

After all, the Choo Choo has been used as a passer, a runner, a kicker, a receiver, a tackler and a blocker by the Snavely, and as a noun, an adjective, and a meal ticket by the sports writers. Try him as a verb this week and the Tar Heels well Justify the entire situation.

Cleveland Downs Boston, 2-0, In Series

Bearden Pitches Five-Hit Victory In Third Contest

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 8. — (UP)—Lean Gene Bearden, with the build and the nervous system of a cucumber, pitched the Cleveland Indians to a five-hit, 2-0 shutout over the Boston Braves today and put them in front in the World Series, two games to one.

The calculating rookie lefty, who pitched the Indians to victory in the American League pennant playoff game against the Boston Red Sox, was even more effective today. He dashed the hopes of the Brave batters time and again with a tantalizing curve ball which egged them into swinging vainly.

What's more the cocky young purple heart veteran from Helena, Ark., won his own ball game with his bat.

Decisive Double

In the third inning, with one out, he smashed a double into deep right center field off Vern Bickford, Boston's starting pitcher. It led to a run which was all he needed to assure his victory.

Bickford might have gotten out of the jam unscathed even though he walked Dale Mitchell, who followed Bearden. He fooled Larry Doby with a low curve and the Indians' outfielder hit an easy double play ball to the Braves' Second Baseman Eddie Stanky.

Stanky tossed to shortstop Alvin Dark for the first out while Bearden raced down to third. But Mitchell coming down from first, blocked Dark out nicely and the rookie shortstop committed his third fielding blunder of the series by heaving the ball over the head of first baseman Frank McCormick. Thus Bearden came home with the biggest run he ever scored.

Keltner Scores

Then in the very next inning Bickford courted trouble by walking Ken Keltner, the first batter up. He struck out Walt Judnich, but Eddie Robinson followed with a sharp bingle which sent Keltner to second. Catcher Jim Hegan then rapped another single and Keltner scored.

Tar Babies 27-26 Victors Over South Carolina Frosh

By Buddy Vaden

A touchdown in the last minute of play gave the University of North Carolina freshmen a thrilling 27-26 victory over the Biddies of South Carolina at Kenan stadium yesterday. The game-winning touchdown came on a pass play from Skeeter Hesmer to Hilliard Knight, after a sustained drive from the Carolina 30-yard line.

The lead switched hands several times as both teams showed strong offensive power in their initial contests of the season. The Tar Babies were the first to score, as Fred Brady climaxed an 80-yard drive with a reverse from the 17, good for six points. Egbert Williams added the extra point.

However, the Tar Babies didn't hold their lead, for the first time the Biddies got their hands on the ball they marched from their own 29-yard line to the Carolina goal. Tommy Woodlee, who put on a brilliant exhibition of broken field running, climaxed the drive with a plunge through the center of the line for 17 yards and a TD. Kinkaid's kick for the extra point tied up the score at seven-all.

Hesmer Does Well

Before the first period ended the Tar Babies came back to score once more. They returned the SC kickoff to their own 43 and then started out on a 57-yard march that ended in the Biddies' end zone. Hesmer showed flashes of brilliance as he and Bob White alternated at carrying the ball down the field. Brady, who played outstanding ball all day, again carried the ball over, this time from the 12. Williams again booted the ball through the uprights.

With the second period drawing to a close, the Biddies got hot as John Boyle, hefty quarterback, flipped five passes to Shultz and Bob Kahle, the final one ending in another score for South Carolina.

Both teams fought on even terms throughout the third period, as neither team was able to score.

Tar Babies Lead

However, in the final quarter the Tar Babies went ahead once more when Brady returned a Biddie kick to the opponent's 44 and two plays later Hesmer swept around right end for the score. Brady set up the tally when he took Gantt's pass on the 40 and drove to the three-yard line before he was stopped. This time it was Carver who booted the point after touchdown.

Late in the final period the Biddies came to life again and upped their score to 26 points when Boyle flipped a long one to Woodlee that was good for 70 yards. Taylor converted.

Winning Tally

And then, with less than a minute to play, the Tar Babies came through with the winning tally to wind up a 70-yard march from the Carolina 30.

Carolina's starting lineup:

Ends: O'Brien, McIntire; tackles: Williams, Kuhn; guards: Bestwick, Dudeck; center: Shveda: backs: Cuba, Hesmer, White, Weiss.

Score by quarters:

Carolina Frosh	14	0	0	7	—27
S. C. Frosh	7	6	0	13	—26

Open House Is Slated At Woollen Monday

Woollen gymnasium will throw open its doors to the student body Monday evening when the Intramural Department sponsors its annual Monday night Open House program.

Everybody is welcome and there will be opportunities for all to participate in squash, badminton, table tennis and volley ball. Doors will be open from 7 to 9:30, and if the idea meets with favorable response, it is planned to enlarge the program to two evenings a week.

Navy-Duke Affair Shares Spotlight On Grid Program

Although the thoughts of most Tar Heels will be centered on Wake Forest this afternoon, there will be plenty of grid action throughout the nation as the 1948 grid campaign nears the halfway mark.

The Carolina-Wake Forest tilt is the number one game in the Old North State, but there will be plenty of excitement in Durham where the hapless Middies from Annapolis meet the Blue Devils. Duke is favored to break into the win column today, but the Navy eleven, which has the potentialities of a fine outfit, could pull an upset. Navy is overdue as far as victories are concerned, but the Devils are overdue for any kind of a decision; one way or the other.

State college goes down to Davidson with about a one-touchdown edge in the final Big Four contest.

William and Mary ought to romp over VMI while other future Tar Heel opponents, Virginia and Maryland should have little trouble with George Washington and VPI, respectively. Mississippi is rated as three points better than Vanderbilt, which is about as close as you can get. This game will pit two of the three powers in the Southeastern conference against each other.

The Southwest has three big games on the slate today. Arkansas and Clyde Scott face Baylor and "Smackover" will be the difference. Texas will go against a good Oklahoma outfit, but the Longhorns have too much for the Sooners. LSU faces Texas A. & M. in a close one.

There are three tough ones in the midwest also. A potential irresistable force and a potential immovable body will run into each other when Michigan faces Purdue. The Boilermakers will be out for blood after losing a heartbreaker to Notre Dame and being routed by Northwestern. Michigan is a little slow getting started, but the fur will really

Chapel Hill Wins

Chapel Hill high school won its fourth straight football game Thursday night defeating the Durham county eleven, 25 to 6 in the Bull city.

Collier Hill and Bill Butler paced the winners accounting for three of the four Chapel Hill scores. Joe Hoenig added the other on a 37-yard reserve.

Splash Club to Meet Monday Evening at 7

Splash club, coed swimming group, will meet Monday at 7 o'clock in the pool for its first fall session. Old members are urged to be present, and new members may try out at this time.

Meeting weekly to improve their form and increase their enjoyment of swimming, Splash club members prepare a water ballet which is presented in the spring. In order to try out, a girl should have a fundamental knowledge of the crawl, back stroke, breast stroke, side stroke, and surface dive.

Swimming intramurals, open to all girls, will be held later in the year, and will include relays and individual races in back stroke, side stroke, free style and breast stroke.

Larceny Case To Be Tried In Court Session Tuesday

Moody Durham, clerk of Recorder's court, said yesterday that Leonard Powell Jr., 16, of Chapel Hill will be tried on a larceny charge at Tuesday's court session.

Powell, who lives on Mitchell lane, was picked up near Emerson fieldhouse Saturday night by officers Blackwood and Blake. The officers reported that several large boxes of stolen goods were confiscated at Powell's home and taken to police headquarters.

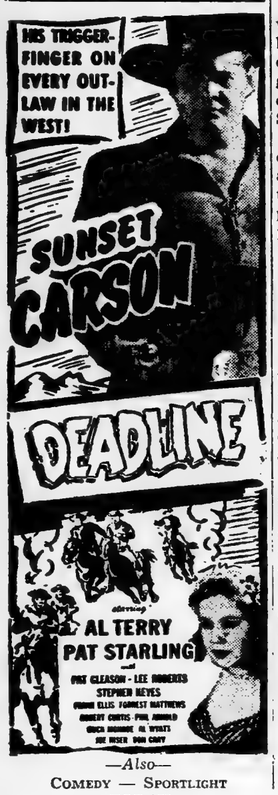
Chief W. T. Sloan yesterday urged that persons who believe articles belonging to them may be in the loot should come by police headquarters and claim them.

The list of stolen goods is as follows:

One Ronson cigarette lighter with wind breaker, one set of bicycle pedals, one set of studs, one small cameo ring, one bicycle gooseneck and sprocket, six bicycle fender braces, a carton of Spearmint gum.

Three decks of playing cards, one bicycle light assembly, two ankle braces, one roll of scotch tape, two small cameras, two ping pong paddles, three fountain pens, three fountain pen flashlights.

One bicycle seat, one bicycle chain, two pair of pliers, three wrenches, one hunting knife, three pair of hose, three new softballs, two new baseballs, two boxes football cleats, five pairs of athletic socks, one bicycle master lock, two teeth protectors, one pair football shoes, four sweat shirts, nine athletic supporters, one towel, one tee shirt, one cleat wrench, nine boxes black shoe polish.



Barber's Terms

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—(UP)—Barber Anthony Danton came to terms today with the Slattery Contracting Co.

The company, which is excavating the building next door, agreed to have someone telephone the barbershop before every jarring dynamite blast.

Danton will stop shaving until the blast is over.

He had complained that the dynamiting was making his work dangerous—for his customers.

Creative Writing Seminar Hears Address by Foster Fitz-Simons

Foster Fitz-Simons, author of the recently-published novel, "Bright Leaf," was guest speaker at a seminar of Phillips Russell's creative writing class Thursday at 7:30 in Bynum hall.

Fitz-Simons' advice to the aspiring writer was to know what they want to do, then do it. He explained that a definite plan of action would speed up writing of novel size.

"Bright Leaf," the author added, required 12 years of work, including nine complete drafts of the novel, three of which were completely rewritten. Working under adverse conditions, he managed to turn out 1,000 to 2,000 words on his best days. Much of the work, he said, was done in automobiles, on trains, in dressing and hotel rooms while he was on tour with Ted Shawn's dancing group.

A native of Atlanta, Ga., and a graduate of the University, Fitz-Simons had his early training under Russell, who advised him to attempt a novel. Author Fitz-Simons acted on this advice and labored for 12 years to produce this first novel, the background of which is laid in the tobacco country of Eastern North Carolina.

After leaving the University, Fitz-Simons went on tour with the Ted Shawn group, later forming a dancing team of his own. For the last two seasons he has been instructing in the Dramatic Arts department here and working with the Playmakers. He has also been the leading dancer in the Lost Colony play at Roanoke Island.

Fitz-Simons has found time out from all his activities to marry and raise a family. He lives in Chapel Hill with his wife and four boys.

Kellam to Speak At UDC Meeting

W. P. Kellam, assistant to the librarian of the University library, will be the main speaker at the meeting of the Leonidas Polk chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy Wednesday night at 8 o'clock, according to Miss Lena Mae Williams, president.

The meeting will be conducted at the home of Mrs. W. M. Pugh, 405 North street.

Kellam will speak on stamps of the Confederacy.

Williams Given Purchase Prize For Paintings

Ben F. Williams, Lumberton, assistant in the Department of Art, was awarded first purchase prize at the third Southeastern annual exhibition of paintings at High museum, Atlanta last week. The purchase award consisted of $500.

"Magnolia Leaves," the winning painting, took first place in competition with a group of 118 paintings selected from among 700 submitted works, probably the largest art show ever recruited from native southeastern artists. "The Wise and the Foolish Ones," another of Williams' paintings was also accepted for exhibition.

Among a number of well-known painters also exhibiting in the annual were: Lamar Dodd, Doris Rosenthal, Jerry Farnsworth, Mary Leath Thomas, Howard Thomas, Claude Howell, and Helen Sawyer.

Judges of the show were Millard Sheets and Gladys Rockmore Davis, both nationally known painters.

Army will further its bid for high national standing with a win over Illinois, the toughest team the Cadets have faced thus far.

Columbia and Yale will fight it out in an Ivy league attraction which should have plenty of scoring. Both teams feature a strong attack; Yale has Levi Jackson and Fred Nadherny, while the Lions are sparked by the Touchdown Twins, Lou Kusserow and Gene Rossides. Sugar Bowlers Penn State will have little trouble with Syracuse while Penn should roll up a score against Princeton. Brooklyn college is rated the underdog in its intercity contest with NYU, but the hardfighting Kingsmen may upset the form sheet.

Cars driven by Mrs. R. J. M. Hobbs and Theodore Aycock collided yesterday at noon on the corner of Cameron and Battle lane causing an estimated damage of $200 to the two vehicles.

According to Bob Thomas, State Highway patrolman, Mrs. Hobbs will be charged with failing to stop at an intersection. Aycock was going east on Cameron when the collision occurred.

Dixiecrats Denied

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 8.—(UP)—The Maryland court of appeals today denied the States Rights Democratic ticket a place on the Maryland ballot in November.

The court upheld a decision earlier this week by Judge Joseph Sherbow of Baltimore superior court that the new party failed to comply with a state law requiring that slates of electors be filed by April 12.

edged when Notre Dame copped more third and fourth place votes.

Wake Forest has been the winner in five of its last seven games with Carolina. But the complete series records show Carolina with 32 wins to 12 for the Deacons.

Coach Carl Snavely's Tar Heels won't be in top physical condition. Don Hartig, regular blocking back, injured his leg in the victory over Georgia and probably will not see further action this season. His replacement will be Bobby Weant, a veteran of a number of football seasons at Carolina.

Individual Duel

If the form sheet shapes up the game may turn into an individual duel between Charlie Justice and the Deac's Bill Gregus and Tom Fetzer. Gregus is particularly dangerous with his running, while Fetzer excels as a passer. But the versatile Justice should be able to surpass the Wake Forest twosome in both departments.

Justice's kicking also gives Carolina an advantage.

Other big men in the Carolina backfield are Co-captain Rodgers, Johnny Clements, Billy Hayes, and Fred Sherman. Sherman was particularly impressive with his kick runbacks in the Georgia fray.

Good Receivers

If the Tar Heels are forced to go to the air, Snavely can count on Art Weiner, Ken Powell, Max Cooke, and Bob Cox to handle the passes of Rodgers and Justice.

Other mighty important men in the Carolina line—both offensive and defensive units — are Co-captain Dan Steigman and Irv Holdash at center: Ted Hazelwood, Len Szafaryn, Chan Highsmith, Haywood Fowle, and Stan Marczyk at tackle: and Bob Mitten, Sid Varney, Larry Klosterman, and Bill Wardle at guard.

Reports from the Wake Forest campus indicate that the Deacons will be in good physical condition. Halfback Harry Dowda and Guard Ray Cicia were withheld from some of the heavy work early this week but will be on hand for the game.

A record crowd of 27,500 is anticipated. Late reports indicate that over 1,000 seats will be available just before the game for the general public.

FOLLOWING HIS RETURN to Washington from an extensive campaign tour, President Truman greets Dolores Silverthorne, 11, and Jimmy Peyton, 10, two "Red Feather Kids" from Chicago. The youngsters presented the chief executive with a golden "Red Feather Oscar," a small statuette awarded to volunteers for outstanding work in Red Feather drives of the Community Chests of America.

Tar Heels Endure Deacons To Take 28-6 Win

Michigan Tops Purdue By 40-0 In Big Nine Tilt

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Oct. 9.—(UP)—Mighty Michigan unleashed a sparkling areal attack and a ground drive to go with it today to smash inept Purdue, 40 to 0.

This was supposed to be a big battle, a titantic struggle of Big Nine giants. But, it turned out just a walkaway as Coach Benny OOsterban's youthful backfield stomped Purdue's championship hopes into the dust.

Halfback Walt Teninga, who can pass almost as far as he can kick, uncorked the highlight play of the game, a 47-yard pass to Dick Rifenburg on the Purdue four. Tom Peterson went over for his second touchdown a minute later.

Indians Beat VMI As Cloud Is Star

NORFOLK, Va., Oct. 9.—(UP)—William and Mary, with fullback Jack Cloud flying high, crushed hapless Virginia Military Institute 31-0 before 21,500 goggle-eyed fans today.

Cloud smashed for 75 yards in 15 tries and bulled over for two touchdowns in the third period. Back Buddy Lex passed 39 yards to blocking back Henry Blanc who squirmed over from the seven to climax a 75-yard drive the first time W&M handled the ball.

Back Tommy Korczowski scored the second tuochdown on a naked end sweep for 14 yards in the second period. Then Cloud took over.

Lex tossed 27 yards to end Vito Ragazzo at midfiled and Ragazzo scored the finale.

SMU 15-game Streak Snapped By Missouri

COLUMBIA, Mo., Oct. 9.—(UP)—Missouri smashed a giant today, breaking out a brand-new ground assault to upset mighty Southern Methodist University, 20 to 14, before 30,892 wildly cheering partisan fans. The defeat snapped the SMU undefeated string at 15 games.

California Wins

BERKELEY, Cal., Oct. 9—(UP)—The undefeated Golden Bears of California bolstered the shaky prestige of the Pacific Coast conference today and sent their Rose bowl kite higher by crushing the University of Wisconsin from the rival Big nine comference 40-14.

It was All-American candidate Jackie Jensen skirting endds and a trio of heretofore undercover backfield passing aces that dazzled the Badgers before 65,000 fans in fog-shrouded Memorial stadium.

Indians Take 3-1 Series Lead Behind Hurling Of Gromek

By Carl Lundquist

CLEVELAND, Oct. 9.—(UP)—Steve Gromek, a ham and egg hurler, got his chance to shine today and did, by pitching the Cleveland Indians to their third straight World Series victory over the Boston Braves. The score was 2 to 1.

And he did it before the largest crowd ever to see a World Series game—81,897 fans, who packed every cranny of Cleveland's big lake front Municipal stadium.

All season long, big Steve, a knuckle ball expert, had been over-shadowed by such notables as Bob Feller, Bob Lemon, and Gene Bearden. But today it was his show and he spelled out impending disaster to the sagging National League champions. If they lose again tomorrow, when they must face the great Feller again, the series will be over and the Indians will be World Champions.

Have to Be

Steve had to be good. His pitching opponent was Johnny Sain, who beat Feller in the first game and gave only five hits today, two less than Gromek.

But unfortunately for Sain one of those hits was the first home run of the Series, a prodigious poke in the third by Larry Doby whih went 390 feet into the right center field standing room assemblage.

The Indians had gotten another run in the first. And that was the last run the Indians got—or needed. Gromek, who won only nine games while losing three this season, had what it took today.

The only run the Braves could muster off Gromek—which incidentally was only their third in four series games—was the home run smash, by rookie Marvin Rickert in the seventh inning.

Two of Seven

He got two of the seven hits off Gromek and his home run was no cheap one. It was a rifle-shot deep into the right field stands, about 375 feet from home plate.

The Indians scored their first run in the very first inning. Their brilliant manager, Lou Boudreau, drove it in. Dale Mitchell, the first batter to face Sain got a single to left and moved to second on Doby's infield out. Up stepped Boudreau and, hitting behind the runner, he drove the ball down the right filed line to the fence, scoring Mitchell.

Boudreau reached second with ease and tried to make it a triple with a beautiful hook slide into third base. But Bill Stewart, called Boudreau out with an instantaneous thumbs up gesture.

As it turned out, the decision made no difference for Doby's homer just two innings later, gave the Indians a 2 to 0 lead and provided the winning margin.

Mackie Resigns Post On Dance Commitee

E. L. Mackie, dean of student awards and scholarships, resigned as faculty chairman of the University Dance committee, and will be replaced by Coach Marvin Allen. His resignation will go into effect tomorrow.

For the past ten years Mackie has served as faculty chairman of the Dance committee, a position appointed by Chancellor R. B. House. The primary function of the committee is to act as host and maintain order at dances sponsored by various campus organizations. The number of students on the Dance committee varies, but an average of 18 students make up the group.

Student chairman of the committee this year is George Kenyon, and Andy Williamson is secretary.

From September 17, 1938 to October 1, 1948, a total of 616 dances have been given on campus with the help of the Dance committee, according to Mackie. More dances were given from 1940-1941 than any other year. In this period 95 dances were given. Only 35 dances were given two years later.

The University Dance committee helps with any dance which reserves an orchestra, and a $2 fee is charged. This fee is put in a fund used to pay for space in expenses involved in the comthe Yackety Yack and any other mittees assistance with the dance. For the past ten years the total amount of receipts were $1,211, and expenditures amounted to $1,099.44.

Singers to Hold Special Practice

Kermit Albertson announced yesterday that the Men's and Women's Glee clubs will rehearse on the steps of South building Monday afternoon at 4:45. This will be the last rehearsal for the University day program, and all members are urged to be present and on time.

Danforth Fellow Will Lead Forum

Betty Carpenter, the Danforth Fellow on campus, will speak to the Baptist Student union tonight immediately following the student supper which will begin at 6 o'clock.

WF Rooters Find Revenge Is Merciless

By Frank Allston

Carolina revenge can be a merciless thing and a saddened group of Wake Forest supporters can attest to that fact after witnessing Carolina's power-packed Tar Heels run rough-shod over the Wake Forest eleven, 28-6 yesterday afternoon in Groves Stadium.

The Tar Heels were defeated twice last year. Texas and Wake Forest were the two elevens that toppled Carolina's bowl chances. Now both have been avenged—by wide margins.

After the game was over the joy of the Tar Heel partisans almost drowned out the bitter feelings they held against the Deacon players for what was termed "dirty playing."

Fans In High Spirits

The game ended yesterday on about the same note as that on which hostilities had begun. The Carolina fans had gone to Wake Forest in high spirits and the big Carolina team didn't let them down.

In spite of the limited seating facilities offered by Groves stadium, approximately 6,000 Carolina students fought their way to seats in the over crowded arena. By 2:15 it appeared as if the whole Chapel Hill student body had crowded into the little sports arena in Wake Forest.

Shortly before the opening whistle resounded through the pines, a slender gentleman dressed in top hat and tails, carrying an umbrella and representing the Demon Deacons, came on the field amidst cheers from the local side. A moment later, a clownish-looking fellow wearing number 22 came onto the other end of the field.

After a brief run up the field, he was tripped by the Deacon's umbrella. This little act brought numerous cheers from the Wake Forest section and a resounding "All the way, Choo-choo" chant from the opposite side of the stands.

Hosea Rodgers, who worked well with large holes made by the Tar Heel line and even better when making his own, was a tremendous hit with the crowd. When big "Hosey" plunged over

BOB MITTEN (left) and SID VARNEY, offensive guards, were standouts in the Carolina line at Wake Forest yesterday as the Tar Heels ran up their third consectutive win in thumping the Deacs, 28-6. Mitten and Varney both luckily escaped injury in yesterday's contest.

Carolina Takes Third Straight In Rough Fray

By Dick Jenrette

WAKE FOREST, Oct. 9.—Carolina's Tar Heels made their debut into Southern conference and Big Four play a complete success today, rolling to a 28-6 revenge victory over Wake Forest before 27,500 sun-baked fans in Groves stadium.

The victory was the third straight for Coach Carl Snavely's charges who still continue down the unbeaten path.

The boys entered the game with intent to avenge last season's 19-7 loss to the Deacons and, despite the roughing tactics of the Wake Forest players, managed a couple of touchdowns in both the first and last quarters to accord their victory margin.

Justice Downed

Coach Peahead Walker's Deacons tackled viciously throughout the afternoon, and succeeded in flooring a Carolina player on many occasions. Justice, who weaved, feinted, and ran in his best fashion in the early stages of the game, fell victim of an out-of-bounds tackle in the first half. Although he continued to play in the final period, his speed and ability to cut quickly were impaired. Rodgers handled most of Carolina's running on the last two touchdown marches.

The Carolina Choo Choo, however, had an average of 7.7 yards per try. He picked up 70 yards in nine tries. Rodgers gained a net of 78 in 21 tries.

Other Targets

Justice wasn't the only target for the rough play of the Deacs. During the course of the game, Fred Sherman, Len Szafaryn, Mike Rubish, and Johnny Clements were removed by injuries. However, none are considered serious.

Carolina went into the game considered a two-touchdown favorite and emerged with a three-touchdown margin. Although the Deacons were able to organize two long drives—one for a touchdown in the third quarter—the overall performance of the Tar Heels was pleasing. The team's work today certainly should maintain their billing as one of the top clubs in the nation.

The 22-point margin over the Deacons constituted the worst defeat the Tar Heels have handed Wake Forest since 1939, when the Chapel Hill entry won by 33-7.

Maceyko Makes Run

Sharing the spotlight with Justice and Rodgers as the day's best ground gainer was Bill Maceyko, although he carried the ball on only one play. That one effort, however, was a sweeping end run of 33 yards for the second Carolina touchdown. Maceyko also turned in his usual sparkling defensive job as safety man.

The Carolina line turned in another good performance, and the Deacons had to resort to a pass to score their lone touchdown. Szafaryn and Romano were outstanding for their work.

Carolina won the opening toss and elected to receive. The Deacs' George booted the ball seven yards into the end zone, but Justice brought the crowd to its feet with a twisting runback through the entire Wake team to the 47. He was nabbed by the last man after momentarily breaking into the open. However, Carolina couldn't make a first down, and the Asheville Ambler punted out on the Deac 16.

Wake Forest could do no better with the ball, and Fetzer punted to Maceyko on the Carolina 28 and Bill returned to the 33. From this point, Justice sailed wide to the left and cut up the field to the Wake 36 before being hauled down. But Wake Forest stiffened and took possession of the ball on the 30.

Fetzer booted out on the Car-

Duke Offensive Clicks To Defeat Navy, 28-7

By Chuck Hauser

DUKE STADIUM, OCT. 9—Duke university broke its two-game tying streak today by downing a fighting Navy eleven 28-7 under the leadership of backs Bill Cox and Freddie Folger.

The Blue Devils scored two minutes after the ball game began to take a lead they never lost. fullback Paul Stephanz crashed through center for four yards to make the touchdown, after Folger had run 56 yards with an intercepted pass of Navy quarterback Reaves Baysinger to set it up.

Approximately 20,000 persons saw Navy march 75 yards down the field to make their only touchdown of the game, late in the third quarter. Only one other time did Navy seriously threaten the Blue Devils, pushing to their five-yard line on a similar march.

Navy Threat

The Navy threat came when Duke kicked off after their first score. Halfback Alvin McCully took the kick on his own three-yard line and brought the ball out to the 25. Fullback Bill Hawkins carried the pigskin 45 yards and, sharing the honors with Baysinger and McCully, pushed down to the Duke five-yard line.

But the Blue Devils held firm. Folger kicked out to the 50, and two minutes later Duke Back Tommy Hughes intercepted a Baysinger pass and the Blue Devils drove to the Navy eight in seven plays. There Bill Cox fumbled to give the ball to Navy. The only Duke drive before the end of the quarter was stopped when the middies recovered another Cox fumble.

The Dukes got rolling again midway in the third quarter when Cox, on his own 41, faked a pass and sailed for 59 yards along the sidelines to make the score Duke 13, Navy 0. End Mike Souchak made it 14-0.

Duke threatened Navy again a few minutes later when Friedlund plucked one of Bill Earl's Navy passes out of the air on the Navy 27 and carried it down to the eight. After a one-yard gain and losses of six and eight yards each Navy took the ball over on downs on their own 21. A 15-yard personal foul penalty against the middies took the ball to the six.

Blocked Kick

Two plays later Duke End Bill Duncan blocked a Navy kick, snatched the ball from the air and plunged across the goal line for the third Blue Devil TD of the day. Souchak's conversion, as usual, was good.

Then the Navy march began. From the middie 25-yard line the gold-clad eleven steadily pushed over the mid-field stripe, into Duke territory and down to the one-yard line. Bill Hawkins sailed over into pay dirt, where he fum-

Playmakers Will Cast 'Egypt Land,' First Experimental Show, Tuesday

The first full length original play to be tried out as an experimental under the new policy of the Carolina Playmakers was announced yesterday by Samuel Selden, head of the department of dramatic art, and tryouts for the test production will be held next Tuesday afternoon. The play is "Egypt Land" by Robert G. Armstrong, Jr., last year's holder of the Frederick Koch scholarship in playwriting.

"Egypt Land," already considered by many as the most powerful play written by a student here in many years, tells of a man's search for happiness. The drama deals with the Southern Negro as he really is, although it is primarily the story of the man.

Evidence of the dramatic art department's faith in the script is the fact that Professor Selden himself is to direct the production. The play calls for a large cast, over 20 characters, and singers and dancers are also needed for some of the roles.

The play is set in seven scenes and a large technical staff will also be needed.

Selden, who is director of Paul Green's famous symphonic drama, "The Lost Colony," was a designer, director, and actor with the Provincetown theater at the same time Eugene O'Neill and Robert Edmond Jones were there.

Armstrong, who has had one of his one-act plays staged here, will be remembered for his roles in "Macbeth" and "Saint Joan." He is from Bessemer, Ala., and has attended school here for the past three years.

Great In Spirit

On Oct. 12, 1941, a few happy months before we sent many of our student body to battle and death, Dr. Robert D. W. Conner, the Archivist of the United States addressed a group of alumni on the 146th anniversary of the University.

In a few days, we will be commemorating the 155th anniversary of our University, and we feel that it is a great occasion. We want to write down what we think of the University, but we feel that what Dr. Conner said in 1941 fulfills our search for words so much better. We would like to quote in part.

"A University's greatness is a matter of spirit—the spirit of truth, the spirit of freedom, the spirit of service. Is ours a great University? Some years ago a well-known American publicist, not an alumnus of this University, not even a son of North Carolina, answered this question when he wrote: 'The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, is more than a picked battalion of youth shining their intellectual armor at the feet of learned men. (It) is really a great service bureau for the state, eager to serve, and eagerly sought for its counsel.'

"In 1789 North Carolina was weak and poor, but out of her weakness and poverty she found means to bring this University into being. In 1873 North Carolina was weak and poor, but out of her weakness and poverty she found means to resurrect it from the dead. Today North Carolina is strong and rich, but this University is not a child of strength and wealth; it is a child of faith. Through faith it was born; through faith it has grown old in honor, in excellence, and in service. It deserves our veneration, but more than that it deserves our faith—faith in its mission and faith in its purpose to accomplish its mission. But faith without works is futility. In the days immediately ahead of us, as in 1860 and 1917, she will ask us to manifest our faith by our works."

We of the University since 1945 have come to a new era, an era which is clouded by distrust and hate throughout a trembling world. More than at any time in the past do we need the faith Dr. Connor spoke about in 1941. We must have faith in ourselves, in our state, in our nation and in our fellow man or else we too shall succumb to the resignation and hopelessness which prevails over nations not as fortunate as our own. —L.K

Our Stand On Politics

With national elections now less than a month away, the project of choosing a president is becoming more and more the subject of most interest and most discussion with most Americans. Here at the University the situation is no different. Young Democrats, Republicans, Progressives and States Rights Democrats have formed partisan groups on the campus and each club is engaged in promoting the cause of its favorite candidate.

The official policy of the Daily Tar Heel favors the Democratic party and President Truman. This is so because the editor, who sets the policy, happens to believe that the Democratic party is the one which best represents the interests of the country and of the people. However, since this newspaper belongs to its readers and its readers hold a wide variety of opinion, the Daily Tar Heel wishes to present as fairly as possible the arguments of all four parties.

For this reason each official party club has been offered space on this page once a week to present its views. Letters supporting any party will be accepted from anyone, but will be rejected if they are longer than 300 words or are not signed with name and address of the writer. As many will be printed as space allows.

First of the official political columns appears on this page today.

Odds And Ends

By Rita Adams

ON CAMPUS:

SLEEPY-TIME GAL. Sho' felt sorry for that fair coed groping her way to Woollen the other morning at 11, eyes propped open. Either she had better catch up with her studies, or get a softer pillow. She was late for gym, too!

BRUTE STRENGTH. Mike Keiser and four othre boys grunting over the new strength-tester in the Village Grill finally took somebody's suggestion and put a coin in the gadget. The novelty of the episode was that they kept one eye on the passing coeds, one hand on the machine, and the other on a bottle of Pepsi. One boy quipped that Mike had better put his Pepsi down and use two hands. Mike's return was, "I ain't never dropped a drink yet."

EASY DOES IT. Y'all be sure to tread softly on the lawn in front of Graham Memorial and try not to step on any acorns lying along your way. You might enjoy the crunching; but, after all, the squirrels must eat . . .

ALPHA OR OMEGA? Will someone who eats at the surviving Scuttlebutt please tell us (Don Maynard in particular) which end of the wooden coffee spoon served with every cup of java is the handle?

PANHANDLER. The owner of the meal ticket book lost outside of Lenoir Hall needn't bother looking for it any longer: it has been eaten up by—yep, you guessed it—one of our Carolina gentlemen.

NOTHING NEW. Just happened to remember something—that "slosh", mentioned in Thursday's column by Dr. Brown of Douglaston, is nothing new to Chapel Hillians. Shucks, just take a look around the campus these fall days.

CRIL, the organization which is sponsoring Religious Activities week soon, has its ears tuned for outstanding speakers. If you have any suggestions for them, how 'bout dropping the name and address in the information booth in the "Y"? Maybe you'd like to have your hometown minister or a prof from another school come talk to us. Just let us know about him.

WE WONDER who "Turissa" could be! Seems an intended present of gobs of gooks of her monogramed matches got lost, strayed, or borowed at the Pi Phi house and have been circulating all over campus since then.

SWEET TRIP. It can happen only to a Carolina student . . . last Spring in an English 2 class Linwood Earl Smith, now a sophomore, turned in a paper a la "Amazing Story", a science fiction (emphasis on fiction) for an English paper. It was based on his hitch- hike experience from Kinston, when he caught a ride in a blazing comet straight to Mars.

The tail end of this story is that, dispite all his grammatical errors and bad punctuation, he got a B plus for an obviously F paper. The lady teacher must have had quite a ride, too! Fansasy in staid English!

IN TOWN:

THE EYES OF MARCH will be upon all Chapel Hill residents over 21 years of age next week when they will receive notices of 1948 taxes. Citizens under 21 who own some type of property will also be required to file returns.

BIG DOINGS we hear, are in store from the Merchants' Association for homecoming decorations. They must have been more than somewhat pleased with the praises heaped upon them about their cooperation in orientating new students.

BUMP! Even with all the extra roo mthe students' cars—or maybe we should say the lack of students' cars—have left Mrs. R. J. M. Hobbs rammed into some man's car down on Franklin street this week. Now, why don't we see how matters would be if just the students brought their cars into town?

CPU Roundtable

Truman Is Inflation Cure

(Although a non-partisan organization in purpose and scope, the Carolina Political Union is composed of partisan members. Various members of the Union will contribute to the Roundtable Column their opinions on the topic to be discussed each Sunday evening at 8 o'clock in the Grail room, Graham Memorial.)

By R. E. Giles

Last Sunday evening the Union considered several various economic factors which seem to have contributed most to present-day inflation. There seemed to be a general unanimity of opinion that the one big and rather inescapable fact on inflation was World War II.

The question now follows: What action against inflation now—the inflation occasioned by World War II and the subsequent definite actions of individuals and groups in this country? My answer to this question will assume that any action taken to guide a modern industrial economy around the pitfalls of boom and bust is governmental action. No one individual enterprise or isolated group of businesses has the power to be effective in this respect throughout the entire national economy—even if the inclination were there.

Recognition must be given to the fact that the U. S. still adheres to the general idea of private enterprise. This means that the burden of production and distribution of goods and services is largely accomplished by businesses owned by private citizens, although such businesses are subject to governmental regulations in many areas. In any discussion as to what should be done now, the facts of our present way of doing things must be recognized if we are realistic in any suggestions for improvements.

First, as a matter of record, there is a great difference between the two major parties with respect to the role government should have in the nation's economy. The Republican party is considered the champion and spokesman of "free business," and "business-as-usual" philosophy. It is also a matter of record that the Democratic party has traditionally espoused the belief that government must and can act in the interests of the entire nation in the field of political economics.

Further, the records reveal that the 80th Republican-controlled Congress did willfully, and in effect, maliciously, take those actions calculated to prevent any real brake on inflation. This Congress destroyed price control, credit controls, reduced taxes, all at the very time when the opposite actions were in order. Today, the pronouncements of the Republicans arise to mock them. Senator Taft: "OPA prevents prices from seeking their normal natural levels." President of NAM: "The danger of inflation comes from OPA. If OPA is finally dead, women will use the canned meats and other goods they have on their shelves to see them through any temporary period of price rises. . ."

Finally, the actions of Truman in an effort to do something about inflation, the manner in which he is conducting his campaign for re-election and the contrasting position of "Doctor Dewey" with his unity goose grease as a balm for all our ills, is convincing evidence that the action to take against inflation is to vote—for Truman and a Democratic Congress on November 2.

States Rights

Speaking About The Race

By Walt Arnold

Lots of our friends, neutral acquaintances, etc. have been telling us it's time we got a column in the Daily Tar Heel and stated our case. That's a mighty timely suggestion, but it will take the space of several columns to cover it all. A point or two at a time, one column a week, are our limits.

We have a lot to say, and we believe it will sound reasonable and worthwhile to many persons whose political thinking hasn't crystalized and who aren't cowed by empty, slanderous squeals emanating from the left corner.

Take, for instance, the label "reactionary." Attach it to a situation outside the South. Detroit has a race problem. The northwestern tradition was impartiality when the Negro began imigrating there. Then all the differences between the Negro culture and the white culture took effect. Every attempt at understanding wrought a greater toll in dissatisfaction and riot. It has come to the point where its affect can be noticed in Congress. It is notable that Michigan senators often agree with southern senators concerning bills dealing with the race question. Where we approach the people, we find a great deal of the most earnestly expressed agreement with the southern concept of racial segregation. (If Detroit isn't cosmopolitan enough for you, apply it to Philadelphia or San Francisco.)

Now, as we understand the use of the term reactionary, In that event, considering the apparent evidence that only expendient politics and a great helping of propaganda keep certain cities outside the South from changing their racial pattern toward stricter segregation and stricter supervision, then we can label as reactionary that self-proclaimed "liberal" potitical philosophy which promotes the whims of a minority against the wishes of a majority who want a change.

The point is that we consider the stand of the South as being not reaction against a wise change, but action for the protection of a racial policy which, as compared to the policies of other sections of this country, is the one most productive of contentment and happiness for the greatest number—including the grudgingly supervised minority.

We States Rights Democrats stand where we have always stood on this question. It is the National Committee, capitulating to hard dealing block-vote minorities, which left the Democratic philosophy.

Our mission is the promotion of the states rights principles through the only type of political action that can pay off—showing where the votes go. Think this over.

To DTH writer B. Buchan, our campus' favorite columnist, yak, yak, we say, judge our crowd on a night when there is no cloudburst. We invite B. B. to look in on our showing at the meeting of States Rights Democrats Monday afternoon at 5 o'clock in the main lounge in Graham Memorial.

Write Away

On One Extreme. . .

Editor:

I wish to point out to the author of the editorial "Thoughts of Dixiecrats," a few points he seemingly didn't know. The Young States Rights Democrats haven't organized on this campus as was so emphatically stated in this ridiculous editorial. The organizational meeting will be held Monday night.

The author stated that the States Rights Democrats bolted the Democratic party. They haven't bolted from the party but are faithfully carrying on the principles of the true Democratic party principles laid down by Thomas Jefferson and Andrew Jackson.

Probably the most idiotic statement, of which all were punching hard for first place, was that the States Rights Democrats haven't condemned Senator Barkley but have only taken their wrath out on Truman. If the author was present at Governor Thurmond's speech, he could hardly have missed hearing Thurmond condemn Senator Barkley as an enemy of the South.

The writer also stated that the States Rights Democrats were unwilling to discuss the damage it would do to the Democratic party. The States Rights Democratic party is the true Democratic party and it has no deep regret if damage is done to the Truman-Barkley ticket.

This editorial would have been of more interest if the author had presented his arguments on facts rather than radical thoughts. But it is not the purpose of this party to condemn every phrase slinging writer that comes along. It is our desire to point out to Southerners the good points of the States Rights Democratic Party platform.

It is time the South fought for recognition on the table of equality rather than to fight within the national party for the few scraps thrown out by ambitious Northern Democrats.

Every good Southerner knows we were given a raw deal, but the South does not have to vote for a Republican to ease her feelings. Instead she can vote for a true representative of the southern and democratic way of life.

—Bob Smith

. . .And The Other

Editor:

With the voice of Henry Wallace the only effective warning sign raised against the growing corporation monopoly control of our government and its attendant drive toward Fascism and war against the democratic, common people of the world (including Americans), it seems worthwhile to take stock of the trend which, the political pollsters and commentators tell us, is lessening the support of Wallace's Progressive party. Both George Sokolsky and Joseph Alsop say the reason is that people are becoming convinced that the Progressive party is Communist-dominated.

The word "Communist", in America today as it was in Hitler's Germany, is the "Open, Sesame" to the minds and pocket-books of the common people. As was the case in Nazi Germany, the word "Communist" cannot be used as an effective weapon against the people in an atmosphere of peace. Thus, we have the current and recurrent war hysteria and spy scares. In such a state of domestic tension the word "Communist" becomes, in the hands of our imperialist, economic royalists, a powerful weapon for suppressing free speech, free thought, and leaders who advocate such freedom. It isn't necessary to prove anyone a Communist. The Red-smear, war-scare conspiracy was so ingeniously executed that, now, mere insinuation of association is sufficient to take away a man's constitutional liberty, his job and actually jail him for his political thoughts. (Witness the Hollywood trials and the writers who are now serving jail sentences.)

Such a condition cries for redress. It is a cry from the dead voices of our thousands of boys who died in the last war . . . a cry to the American people to wake up and demand full knowledge of what is transpiring behind the panelled doors of Wall Street where the strings of our foreign and domestic policies are being manipulated. It is a challenge to speak up for peace.

—Claude V. Dunnagan

'The Man Who Wins'

By Harmon W. Nichols

WASHINGTON—(UP)—Mr. H. Truman didn't know it, but he had a Republican in to visit him the other day.

It happened in Mr. T's private office. The president was all spruced up for the occasion in a gray suit, blue tie, and black shoes with such a gloss a Republican could see his picture in 'em.

The "enemy" was 10-year-old Jimmy Peyton, his light-brown haid snipped close and the cow-lick glued down. Jimmy was accompanied by 11-year-old blond Dolores Silverthorne. Both flew in from Chicago and visited the White House to do the first citizen a big favor. They presented him with an "Oscar" for the part he played in kicking off the Community Chest drive in such fine style.

The president was in a gay old mood, even though there are rough days ahead on the campaign circuit. Mr. Truman told the kids he was mighty proud of the honor and, as a special reward, asked both to do HIM a favor and sit right up there on his desk. He personally hoisted them up.

Jimmy said later that the Man from Missouri asked them not to look at those old photographers.

"The president told me he was a lot handsomer than the picture guys anyhow," Jimmy said.

I had been informed that skinny little Jimmy is an authority on astronomy, which he learned mostly from looking up at the stars and down at his books like the teacher said.

"Did you ask the president anything about astronomy, kid?"

"Naw," said the boy. "He seemed like a pretty nice fellow and I didn't want to take any chances of embarrassing him. He wouldn't have known the answers."

Jimmy said he was a little disappointed, though, because the president didn't come up with any presents for him and Dolores.

"Where's all that government long green stuff I've been reading about in the papers?" he said.

Dolores said she didn't care whether the president gave her a present or not.

"I think he's the nicest man I ever met. Besides he took our autograph books and promised to write something nice in them and mail them back to us. I hope he keeps his promise because I'd hate to lose the one I got from Henry Morgan."

Dolores told the president all about her girl scout work. He seemed to be impressed.

"But was I really impressed!" she said. "One of the reporters had to show a special card to get into the White House. All Jimmy and I had to show were our Community Chest red feathers in our hats. The guards sent us on in and said that Mr. Truman was expecting us. He said it was nice of our teachers to let us out of school so we could fly out here from Chicago to see him."

Jimmy thought the president was nice enough, all right.

"But what this country needs is a change, I figure," he said, cupping his hand and stage-whispering so that nobody else would hear. "I'm for that Dewey fellow."

Dolores looked at her friend in disgust.

"Shame upon you, Jimmy," she said. "I'm for the man who wins."

By BILLY CARMICHAEL III

Battered and Tattered

GROVES STADIUM, WAKE FOREST, Oct. 9—It was strictly black and white victory for the battered and tattered Tar Heels of North Carolina here today. For the seemingly unpopular visitors left the majority of their color at home while unleashing their now famous—or imfamous if you prefer—attack to subdue a group of "I'll murder the bums" young gentlemen from Wake Forest.

It was one of the greatest acts of self-defense ever witnessed. If there was a color combination in the Tar Heel movement today, it was black and blue. The Deacons did more knocking on them than they did on the Carolina goal line.

This turned the game into something of a matter of self-survival for the Tar Heels as the Wake Forest boys went through an assortment of Carolina shock troops, leaving the Snavely men strewn here and there on almost every play. There were numerous intermissions to carry out the wounded, mostly Carolina's.

An Awful Ambush

ONE OF THE FIRST to be caught in the rush was the phantom figure of Charlie Justice. It seems there was one particular play where young Charlie slipped unnoticed up the Wake Forest middle after being presented with some fine blocks by his team mates in the nature of a going away present. When next seen by the slightly baffled Deacons he was in the neighborhood of the Deacon 18 and on hearing the thundering herd of pursuers closing in from all sides, Justice stepped out of bounds.

It turned out to be a pretty rough neighborhood, for the Tar Heel ace found little security off the playing field, being hit by two Deacons as he entered row D of the concrete stands. The act went unpunished.

From then on, it was dog eat dog, with the Wake Forest outfit doing most of the howling. Fred Sherman went the way of some flesh early in the game and Carolina found in hard to keep a wingback on the field, with Johnny Clements getting more than his usual share of the bludgeoning.

A New Find Found

JUSTICE WAS NEVER too effective after his unfortunate ambush, looking as shaken up as a good Martini for the rest of the afternoon. He did, though, carry on in the spirit and letter of the game.

His substitute and usual understudy, Bill Maceyko, went on without rehearsal and turned in one of the great performances of the year. He harassed the Deacons' attempt to give an airlift to their side of the scoreboard with a lovely display of how to lose friends by breaking up pass plays.

But the feature of Maceyko's day was his spitting image imitation of La Justice in the nature of a 33 yard touchdown undertaking in the first period. The Ohioan started wide to the right with seemingly little chance of survival. He escaped from this trap right into another, but again succeeded in avoiding the enemy with the gracious help of blocking fellows who escorted him to within walking distance of the goal line. Hence he wandered home for a score.

Came the Revolution

THE TAR HEELS HAD IT when they had to have it. They scored twice in the first period before lunch had quite digested and tallied twice in the last period just to work up appetite for supper. In between, the game was mostly the routine of block and tackle, block and tackle, except at one point in the third period when the Deacons forgot their social position all together. At this time the Wake Forest lads tallied an acceptable six points and then roared back down the Tar Heels' throats a few plays later with the remains of a Carolina fumble. The drive went to the visitors' 11, where resistance stiffened and the Carolinians took over when Fetzer tossed a fourth down pass to a friend in the stands.

Wake Forest has a fine team, but look at the beating you have to take to prove you've got a better one.

STATE ROMPS, 40-0

North Carolina State's Wolfpack scored their initial win of the season last night when they smashed the Davidson Wildcats, 40-0 at Raleigh.

Rough Play Mars Carolina Victory Over Wake Forest

olina 44, and the Tar Heels marched to the goal in 12 plays. Three line plays by Rodgers produced a first down on the Wake Forest 45. Justice ran to the 15, but a penalty nullified the play and moved the ball back to midfield. Charlie repaired the damage with a neat sprint down the sidelines to the 18. It was on this play that the much discussed out-of-bounds tackle occurred. Justice had to leave the game as the Deacons were booed vociferously.

Rodgers and Clements worked the ball to the six in three plays for a first down. Justice re-entered the game and passed incomplete to Weiner but interference with the receiver gave the Tar Heels a first down on the six. Choo Choo dashed off tackle for the final yardage after 11:00. Bob Cox' conversion made it 7-0.

Cox, of Course

A Deacon fumble by Bill Gregus, the standout all afternoon for Wake Forest, gave the Tar Heels the ball on the kickoff after the touchdown. Szafaryn recovered on the 33. Then Maceyko headed wide to the left, evaded two tacklers with a burst of speed, and raced to the goal behind good interference for another score—only one minute and a half after the first TD. Cox, of course, converted for a 14-0 count.

The game resolved into a punting duel for the remainder of the half. However, Walker's outfit drove from its own seven to the Carolina 15 before running out of downs. Justice temporarily stymied the Deacs with a marvelous quick kick—from the 15 to the Wake 11, or 74 yards.

Concerted Drive

Trailing by 14-6, Wake Forest picked up its only score on a concerted drive of 75 yards, negotiated in 14 plays. A pass from Gregus to O'Quinn ate up the last 14 yards. The ball was batted around by both Maceyko and Clements before O'Quinn hauled it in. The third quarter ended 14-6, Carolina.

With the necessity of a couple more touchdowns just for a complete revenge and prestige, Rodgers led the Tar Heels 89 yards for a third TD. Kennedy climaxed the drive with a touchdown plunge after 4:30 of the fourth quarter. Cox again added the extra point from placement, with Gus Purcell holding the ball.

An intercepted pass by Guard Bill Wardle gave Carolina the ball on Wake's 39. After Clements lost eight yards on a reverse, Rodgers passed to Weiner on the 35. Art lateralled off to Bobby Weant, who went to the 14.

Three running plays by Rodgers and one by Billy Britt scored the fourth TD of the day. Rodgers, charging like a snorting bull, carried the pigskin over with less than four minutes remaining.

—Revenge—

for the fourth Carolina T-D, a tremendous roar went up for the big fullback.

Bill Maceyko, the blond Tar Heel tailback, got off a beautiful 33-yard scoring gallop in the first period that put even Glen Davis and Buddy Young to shame.

Charlie Has Good Day

And, of course, the Asheville Ambler had another good day. Charlie scored his sixth touchdown of the year and got off a 74-yard quick kick despite the fact that he was pretty badly shaken up on one play. That play incidentally brought a thunderous note of discord from the Carolina cheering section.

All in all, it was a great afternoon. The fans were happy, the players were happy and the coaches were happy. Yes indeed. Carolina revenge can be a merciless thing.

bled, but the officials ruled the touchdown good.

Then the Dukes rallied with a march of their own, moving relentlessly down onto Navy turf. Friedlund took the ball in a handoff from Stephanz on the 21-yard stripe and carried it around left end for the fourth Duke touchdown. Souchak made the score 28-7.

Navy looked dangerous again as they pushed down to the Duke 17-yard line, where the Blue Devils took over and brought the ball out to their own 25. The third Cox fumble of the day gave the ball to Navy, but the middies did not take advantage of the recovery as Baysinger let the pigskin slip from his fingers into Duke hands with only one minute of playing time left.

Parties, Pledging, And Pinnings Feature Activties Of Sororities

By Violet LaRue

On Monday night the local chapter of Delta Delta Delta entertained their new pledges with a coke party. Also the Tri Delt's have a new housemother. She is Mrs. LaVergne Drake of Glascow, Kentuckey. Welcome to Chapel Hill, Mrs Drake; we hope that you will love the school as much as your girls do. All you lads gather round. The Tri Delts have invited everyone to attend the open house which they are giving for their pledges on Sunday night at seven O'clock.

At a formal ceremony last Wednesday night the ADPi's pledged 26 new girls to their chapter. Jane Hunter, South Orange, N. J., and Ann Royster, Shelby, were initiated last Sunday. The new Patroness of the ADPi sorority is Mrs. O. Max Gardner, Jr. Two new ADPi transfers are Varina Lewis, Greenville, S. C., who attended the University of South Carolina and Lucy Whitehead, Charlotte, who transferred from Queens College. The ADPi's were right in the running as far as "summer pinnings" go. Mary Moore was pinned to Gene Graham, Sigma Chi.

Over at the Pi Phi house there are nine pin-ups as the paper goes to press. The latest pinnings were: Roberta Huffman to Bob Scott Langley, Sigma Chi; Jane Pointer to Wilson Vaughn, SPE at State; and Jean Marie Lester to Willie Edwards, Phi Delt. Gladys Cottrell is pinned to Hunt Hardisty, a former Sigma Chi here, who is now a plebe at Annapolis. Three Pi Phis were married during the summer: Laura Rowe to W. E. Fonville, Sue Everette to Swanson Graves, Jr., and Louise Dodson to John Meades. Anna Black has returned to Chapel Hill after three months in Europe. She went to England, France, Switzerland, Belgium, Holland, and Italy. This year two transfers are gracing the Pi Phi house. Charleen Greer from Oklahoma A and M and Ruth Butler from Randolph Macon are the new additions. Bootsie Taylor who was initiated here two years ago has returned from a stay in Japan where her father was stationed. Thursday afternoon the Pi Phis pledged their new girls. The pledging was followed by a buffet dinner for the actives and pledges.

The good word has been passed along from the Chi O house that everyone is invited to their open house between seven and eight o'clock this Sunday night. This is to be the first of their traditional coffee hours.

The Alpha Gams entertained their new pledges with a reception at Crystal Palace on Monday night. The house was decorated with yellow zennias and ferns. Several fraternities on the campus were present during the evening. Wednesday night the formal initiation of the new pledges was held. News comes from the Crystal Palace that Becky Holton, Senior from Belmont, was elected President of Gamma Epsilon chapter of Alpha Gamma Delta in the meeting on Wednesday night. She was elected following the resignation of Pris Moore who was elected president in the Spring elections last year.

Coeds Display Their Ingenuity In Decorative Rooms, Fashions

With the end of orientation and sorority rushing, Carolina co-eds turned their attention to other things. Leaving studying out of the picture a little longer, the gals are now using free time to decorate their rooms.

Three proud inhabitants of third floor McIver gladly offer their room as an example of Carolina handiwork. "Take a look now," one of them exclaimed, "it'll never look the same again. What gave the room that Better Homes and Gardens look was a bulletin board set in wood with three shelves on each side. The girls have potted plants on the six shelves.

Yellow organdy curtains hang in the window and yellow and black plaid bait spreads cover the beds. "And notice our orange crate," another said proudly, "we've covered it, too, with our bedspread material."

Other features in room fashions were paper drapes and a special type of table placed between two beds. The table was made of three suitcases with a dresser scarf draped across. The effect was one of a graduated table.

As always the co-eds's interests go to the current fashions and styles of clothing. A free-for-all look predominates this year when girls can wear almost anything and look stylish. This gives the girls a chance to economize, to make last year's "look" into a newer, 1948 look.

Among the many made-over garments, skirts perhaps offer the best examples. Besides widening skirt bands, girls work extra pieces into their skirts. A McIver co-ed added to a black skirt a piece of red wool. Explaining the process, she said she had "scalped, I mean, scalloped the added material." "Just like a medieval castle," a friend offered. Pockets of the same style and material were placed on the skirt. Quilted chintz added to the length of another skirt.

Suits offered co-eds another chance to economize. One of the girls reluctantly brought a "new-looking" suit from her closet. "I hate to admit that it's made-over," she said, "but just for a little publicity . . . . ." She had lined the pockets of the jacket and the slits in the skirt with contrasting color of woolen material. Out of this same material she had made a hat and a shoulder pocketbook.

One of the girls brought a gray suit-dress up-to-date with red plaid material. She placed a binding of the woolen material around the collar and the sleeves and two bands of the material in the flared skirt.

Ruffles and bustles have given the "dressy" dresses a newer, longer look. One enterprising co-ed removed three-quarter length sleeves from one of last years's styles and made from them a set-in belt with a bustle effect.

In skirt lengths, almost anything goes, from just-below-the knee length to the ankle-binders.

Church Groups 'Spark' Campus With Great Variety of Activities

Science Fiction Club Will Meet

Covering various subjects of scientific nature, Charles Odell, Fred Burgess, Banks Mebane and other members of the Carolina Science Fiction association will speak at the second official meeting of the association Thursday night in the Grail room of Graham Memorial at 9:30.

Subjects in the talks will range from the Brookhaven atomic pile to Korzybski's "A" logic.

All old members of the association as well as prospective members and interested visitors have been extended an invitation to attend by Director Richard L. Bowen.

Jewish Services Begin Tuesday

Services for the Jewish Day of Atonement (Yom Kippur) will be conducted by Rabbi Samuel Pearlman in Gerrard hall Tuesday night at 7:30; Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock, at which time there will be included the memorial services, and Wednesday afternoon at 3:30.

Yom Kippur is considered the most important Holy Day of the year. This day is spent in contemplation and prayer for a better year to come. The 10 days of repentence between the New Year and the Day of Atonement is completed. Jewish people strive to start their new year with clean records before God and man, praying to live a proper life through the year.

BAPTIST: Dr. C. Sylvester Green, editor of the Durham Herald-Sun and president of the Council on Christian Education of the Baptist State convention will speak at 11:00 o'clock on "We Lay Waste Our Powers." And come Sunday night Baptist students will be quizzed on their Ecumenical I. Q. by Betty Carpenter, who is the university interfaith religious director. She is sponsored by the Danforth Graduate fellowship. The Baptists, incidentally, had quite a picnic Friday, according to some of the comments.

PRESBYTERIAN: At an informal early service today at 9:45 and a later one at 11:00 "Procher" Charlie Jones will speak on an undisclosed subject. Mr. Jones says that he has a hard time with topics because thay are either so sensational that people come expecting too much and are disappointed, or the title is so sick no one comes. At 6:00 o'clock this evening both a student supper, and a married students' group will meet. At the former will be the first in a series of two panel discussions on "Being a Christian on Campus." Speaking tonight are Jackie Goodwin, George Worth, and Al Lowenstein. Mr Jones will speak to the married group.

EPISCOPAL: Episcopalians will celebrate Holy Communion this morning at 8:00 o'clock and 11:00 and the Rev. Mr. Yates will speak tonight at evening prayer. Tuesday evening at 6:00 Mr. Yates will speak to the Canterbury club. Wednesday morning at 7:15 Episcopalians will have early Communion.

METHODIST: "The Ministry of the Pulpit" is the topic of the Rev. Mr. Henry Ruark's sermon at 11:00 this morning. This evening at 5:45 the Methodist students group will be the jury when "Wesley goes on Trial". With Bob Bunch as the judge, Ken Lowry as the prosecutor, and various committee chairmen as witnesses in the mock trial, the spirit of old man Davie is going to come back and judge the value of the work of Wesley. The jury will deliver the verdict after the trial. Vespers is at 7:30 Thursday night.

Chapel Hill May Not Be Sunny, But Socially It's One Busy Place

Chapel Hill may not be the sunniest spot in North Carolina, but it is one of the busiest.

Mrs. J. Maryon Saunders, local Girl Scout commissioner has announced that the seven Girl Scout and Brownie troops of Chapel Hill will hold their opening meetings on Monday afternoon, Oct. 11, in various church rooms. The 140 members will follow a program of gathering "clothes for friendship" to be sent abroad.

The Scouts are fortunate this year in having such able leaders as Miss Sarah Umstead, who has been doing executive Scout work in the West for the past two years. Other competent leaders are Mrs. T. M. Johnson, Mrs. Charles Redout, Mrs. John Fuller, Mrs. W. G. Morgan, and Patsy Winslow, who will head the Brownie troops. Mrs. Tyndal Harris, Mrs. Chris Fordham, Venita Sanders, Mrs. Victor Bryant III, Pat Sullivan, Betty Earnhardt, and Mrs. "Pete" Hobson will lead the Scout groups. The local council is still in need of one Brownie and one Scout leader; anyone interested can contact Mrs. Saunders.

The Chapel Hill chapter of the American Association of University Women will hold its first meeting on Tuesday, Oct. 14, in the parlor of Keenan dormitory to welcome all new and prospective members. Any college graduate who would like to join the association should call Miss Mary Cobb or Mrs. A. W. Hobbs.

Mrs. Moffit Fuller is in Chapel Hill for a visit of several weeks with her mother, Mrs. Sarah Rains. Mrs. Fuller is the former Alice Lee Meritt.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Craver have moved to Lexington, where Mr. Craver is opening his law office.

The Left-handed Golf Association of the Carolinas is holding a tournament on Sunday afternoon, October 10, at the Hillandale Golf club in Durham. Chapel Hill participants will be Vic Huggins, secretary of the Association, Noel Houston, Bruce Whitmire, Carl Smith, Bill Poe, Bud Perry, P. L. Burch, Duke Williams, and John Gouger. A trophey and other prizes will be awarded.

Fraternities Give Entertainment As Social Season Commences

By Faith Adams

The Sigma Chi fraternity dining room was converted into a "corner drugstore" Friday night when the boys entertained their dates at an informal dance to celebrate the near completion of the remodeling of their house.

Pepsi-Colas, advertised by signs set up by representatives from the soft drink company, plus ice-cream concoctions from cones to banana splits were served at an improvised fountain, while a flashy Wurlitzer juke box furnished music for dancing.

During the rainy second day of formal sorority rushing seven Sigma Chis ran a complimentary cab service to deliver the be-hatted rushees from one house to another. Drivers were: Bill Russell, Wake Dunbar, Joe Ruzicka, Jack Thompson, Bob Lee, Jim Blount, Walt Arnold, and Bill Lyon.

On Friday afternoon last week thirty PiKA's organized a five-car motorcade, the "Lumbo Special," headed toward the land of Georgia's "peaches." Upon victory over the vicious Bulldogs the next day the PiKA's were again custodians of the derby which has become a traditional wager between the two chapters. However, this prize is in no way as dear to the fraternity members as the sheepskin Pi Kappa Alpha's Carolina chapter won from her Texas brothers two weekends ago. PiKA is anticipating another sheepskin from the Wake Forest members in return for the one lost to them last year.

Serenading new pinups in the dormitories and sorority houses last night were the Phi Delts and Sigma Chis. Coeds wearing the Phi sword and shields of Fred Houser and Willie Edwards are Louise Alsup and Jean Marie Lester. Roberta Huffman pinned to Bob Scott Langley, Mary Moore who wears the Sigma Chi cross of Gene Graham, and Fran Angus Sweetheart of Sigma Chi, were the other honorees.

Ed Davenport's KA fraternity serenaded his pinup Martha Manning Tuesday night. Other recent pinnings in the fraternity are that of Dick Wright to Marietta Thompson of High Point, and Carl Braswell to Jean Hunt of Monroe.

Plans have been flying left and right in the TEP house the past few weeks as the rushing season and fall house party are rapidly approaching.

The party is scheduled for the weekend of the William and Mary game and arrangements are being worked out by the committee headed by Sandy Korshun and Irv Silver.

Elections to fill two offices were held at the last meeting and Eddie Blankstein, senior from Greensboro, was chosen bursar. Silver, a High Point resident, is the new Warden.

Brothers scattered throughout this country and Europe this summer. Harvey Weinstein visited Murray Friedlander, a former TEP and University alumnus, who was studying at the Sorbonne. Gerry Marder traveled to the Near East as a Naval Reserve officer.

Larry Fox and Marv Nathan spent the summer in Maine as counsellors in a camp.

Norm Galinkin went to the other end of the country and sparked the Waycross, Ga. baseball club to a pennant and playoff victory. Galinkin hit .310 for the season.

Coeds will be sorry to hear that the number of eligible bachelors on this fair campus has declined since spring quarter. Over the summer orange blossoms bloomed and church bells rang for many a Carolina gentleman, and here are some that fell.

Chi Phi fraternity reports the marriages of Jack Girard to Sarah Kime of Liberty. Bob Kavanaugh to Rose Marie Goodhues of Baltimore, Md, and Vic Perry to Catherine Long of Franklin

Lambda Chi Alpha has acquired four new "sisters" through marriage since the end of last school year. The newlyweds are: H. G. "Hank" Hankins and Betty Henshaw of Manteo, Bill Prince and Ann Hamlin of West Palm Beach, Fla., Steve Roberson and Claudia Boswell of Charlotte, and Talmage Rose and Barbara Winslow of Hertford.

Kappa Alphas who took the leap during the summer months and their new brides are: Tom Foister to Roma Williams of High Point, Karl Kurojohn to Mimi Barron of Franklin, Va., Ralph Phillips to Marie Hinton of Scotland Neck, and Pete Ebersole to Anne Duncan of Salisbury.

Three Tau Epsilon Phi brothers have become husbands since June. They are: Ben Josephson who married Irma Blacker of Petersburg, Va., Stan Mark and Connie Ketz of New York City, and Stuart Peltz and Shirley Jaffe of Danville, Va.

S & F Rehearsals To Begin Tomorrow

Singing chorus rehearsals and line rehearsals for the Sound and Fury Mardi Gras presentation will begin Monday night at 7 o'clock in Memorial hall. Jerry Weiss, president of Sound and Fury, said yesterday.

The singing chorus will be held on the stage at the hall, while the line rehearsal will be held in a room at the hall as scheduled.

Committees for the production will be posted Monday on the Memorial hall bulletin board backstage, Weiss said.

Orchestral Group Will Rehearse

In preparation for the concert to be given in November a schedule of rehearsals for the University orchestra has been announced by Director Earl Slocum and Harold Andrews, orchestra president.

Rehearsals will be conducted Monday nights at 7:15 and Wednesday afternoons at 5 o'clock.

A good season for the orchestra is expected, according to Director Slocum, who invited all interested students, faculty members or townspeople to join the orchestra.

The first political newspaper of national importance began publication in 1789 in New York City with the backing of Alexander Hamilton.

Troops Ready

PARIS, Oct. 9.— (UP) — Troops were rushed into riot-torn Eeastern France tonight as Premier Henri Queuille declared that the Communist-led strike movement "is taking on the character of an insurrection." Queuille said the government would use all necessary means to crush mushrooming work stoppages which have erupted into violence htree times in the past two days.

Taft, Eccles Schedule Speeches Here This Week

University Will Hold 155th Birthday Celebration Today

THE UNIVERSITY, shown above in a recent air view, is 155 years old today, and looked quite a bit different from the picture. In 1793, the cornerstone for Old East building, still in use as a dormitory, was laid. The cornerstone laying will be re-enacted today by "William R. Davie," represented by John Hinson, member of the University Buildings department.

John L. Lewis Orders Work Stoppage Nov. 2

CINCINNATI, O., Oct. 11.—(UP)—John L. Lewis today ordered his 400,000 miners to take the day off on election day, Nov. 2, so they can cast ballots against Congressional candidates who voted for the Taft-Hartley law and other political "enemies."

He issued the nationwide mine shutdown instructions from the rostrum of the United Mine Workers 40th convention a few minutes after President Truman left here after a campaign talk. The convention has called Mr. Truman an "enemy" and indirectly endorsed Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, his Republican rival for the presidency.

Lewis directed district presidents to notify coal operators that "Production of coal will cease" on Nov. 2.

Union leaders expect that the mine holiday guarantees the turnout of large blocs of mine votes in strategically important West Virginia, Kentucky, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Ohio, Indiana, Oklahoma and Missouri.

Delegates cheered the election holiday order and then put on a roaring 2½ hour debate during which they fixed Lewis' salary, union dues and initiation fees at the highest level in the world for a labor organization in mass industry.

Lewis needed almost all his powers to win adoption of his proposal to double monthly dues from $2 to $4 and hike the initiation fee from $10 to $50. Delegates refused to close off debate and there was one demand to return the plan to committee.

The recommendations were finally adopted by standing votes.

University Budget For Year 1949-50 Is Filed In Raleigh

University officials announced yesterday that the 1949-50 University budget was filed yesterday with the State Budget commission in Raleigh.

Although no details could be revealed, the budget will contain appropriation needs of the University for the maintenance and the planned improvement of existing facilities and projects which are awaiting funds.

The first hearing on the new budget will be held on Nov. 4 in the Revenue building at Raleigh. The meeting will be open to the general public.

Late News Bulletins

For Truman

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—(UP)—Former Interior Secretary Harold L. Ickes, who broke with President Truman in an angry dispute two years ago came out today for Mr. Truman's election, but he said he wished he could vote for someone else.

Marshall Back

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—(UP)— Secretary of State George C. Marshall headed back to Paris today to try to ease what he said was the "harmful influence" caused by confusion over President Truman's abortive idea of sending a peace mission to Moscow.

Discloses Plan

LONDON, Oct. 11.—(UP)—Sir Stafford Cripps disclosed Britain's economic plans for the next four years to British Commonwealth leaders today in asking them to support the Mother country's role in the Marshill plan and the Western European Defense Alliance.

Anti-DeGaulle

PARIS, Oct. 11—(UP)—Five million French workers will block any move by Gen. Charles Degaulle and his rightist rally of the French people to seize power, Benoit Frachon, French Communist labor chief, warned today.

Norman Thomas Club Slates Meet Today

The Norman Thomas for President club will hold its first meeting of the fall quarter this afternoon at 4 o'clock in Roland Parker lounge no. 3. The meeting will include a discussion period, election of officers, plans for a mass meeting and a publicity campaign. Committees for these activities will be appointed by the president.

Power of the Press

SPARTANBURGH, S. C., Oct. 11.—(UP)—For the first time in 94 years, a female will be the center of attraction on Wofford college's campus Nov. 6, officially, that is.

It will be the first time in history of the all-male school that a beauty queen has reigned over homecoming festivities.

The decision for such a surprise move for the rock-ribbed male college was engineered by the student newspaper, the Old Gold and Black, edited by Bill Rone of Spartanburg and Francis Nicholson of Greenwood.

Phi Assembly Will Discuss Berlin Topic

The Philanthropic assembly will meet this evening at 7:30 in Phi hall on the fourth floor of New East.

Privileges of the floor will be extended to all present, and applicants for membership may deliver their qualifying speeches.

The topics for the discussion will be the subject of withdrawing the present United States forces from Berlin, forming a United Nations commission to govern Berlin, and authorizing the commission to recruit such armed forces as they may deem necessary.

GI Insurance May Be Renewed

All veterans whose GI insurance has lapsed less than three months may reinstate without a physical examination, the Veterans administration announced yesterday.

Provided their helth is as good as when their insurance lapsed, veterans can still reinstate their lapsed policies by paying two monthly premiums and submitting a simple statement on their health.

Any veteran wishing to inquire about his GI insurance may visit VA contact offices at 302 Morris street in Durham, or the Capital Club building in Raleigh.

American Veterans Committee Slates Election of Officers This Evening

Election of officers and a discussion of the program for the coming year will be the order of business this evening at 7:30 when the American Veterans committee meets in the Presbyterian church.

Offices to be filled, and their present incumbents are: chairman, George B. Tindall; vice-chairman, John P. Van DeVelde; Corresponding secretary, Henry B. Adams; Recording secretary, Aubrey Williams Jr.; and Treasurer, Mike Pochna.

A delegation to the AVC national convention, to be held in Cleveland, Ohio, will also be chosen at tonight's meeting.

All members are urged to be present for this meeting and veterans of World War II are invited to attend whether or not they are members of the local chapter.

South Steps Site of Meet At 11 Today

By Lincoln Kan

A serious group of students, faculty and townspeople will gather today before the south facade of South building to honor the University on the 155th anniversary of its founding on Oct. 12, 1793.

Services will open promptly at the 10:50 bell when the University band will play several selections as spectators gather in the area between the library and South building steps.

Chancellor R. B. House and Faculty Marshall Dr. J. C. Lyon will lead the faculty to the temporary stand from which the services will be held.

The procession will be preceded by a color guard carrying the national and state colors. The color bearers will be members of the NROTC under Cmdr. Allen G. Schnabel. Behind them will be Jess Dedmond, president of the student body; Earl Wynn, director of the Communications center, who will take the part of the historian; Rev. J. C. Herrin, Baptist minister who will portray Samuel F. McCorkle; and John Hinson, member of the University Buildings department, who will act the part of "William R. Davie" the father of the University.

After a salute to the national anthem, "McCorkle" will lead the audience in an invocation, which will be followed by the singing of the University hymn.

After a responsive reading, one minute of silence will be observed for the University dead. The Glee club will then sing "Interger Vitae," followed by "Credo," from "Messa Papae Mercallus" by Palestrina, sung by the combined University choir of over 300 voices led by Paul Young.

Toward the end of the program, a mock cornerstone laying will be enacted depicting the scene which took place on Oct. 12, 1793. "William R. Davie" will take the trowel after "Samuel F. McCorkle" gives the benediction. The entire action will be described by the Historian, Earl Wynn.

Norm Sper, head cheerleader, will then lead a march to Davie Poplar, where "Hark the Sound" will be sung.

In case of rain, the program will take place in Memorial hall. It is requested that only downstairs seats be used, as the balcony must be kept free for the Glee club and choir.

Vic Huggins said the Merchants association has requested business establishments of Chapel Hill to close if possible in order that the townspeople may participate in the program.

Evils of Alcohol

BURGOS, Spain, Oct. 11.—(UP)—Five winepressers were killed today in the village of Fuentespina when the bottom fell out of a vat in which they were trampling wine grapes with their bare feet.

The workers fell into the pipe used to drain off the juice and were suffocated by the fumes of the half-fermented grapes.

CPU Discussion Reveals Support For New Controls

Overwhelming support for the temporary reinstitution of price controls characterized the discussion of inflation cures at the Carolina Political union's round-table discussion Sunday night.

A vote of 15 to 1 in favor of price controls indicated the solution desired by the visitors and CPU members present Many participants in the usual Sunday night discussion indicated, however, that they felt price controls were a political impossibility in the event of a Republican party victory in November.

Bob Giles in the opening report insisted that only the government could cope with the inflation problem. He urged those present to recognize the political realities of the two-party system and to cast their votes for President Truman.

A small minority of the participants expressed the belief that price controls could be at best only a stop-gap measure and urged a fundamental change in the American economic system. The many different types of socialism will be considered at the next Sunday night discussion.

Chairman Herb Alexander announced the election of Edlyn Freerks as treasurer for the coming year.

Dependency Status Must Be Clarified

All student-veterans whose dependency status changed during the summer vacation are reminded by the Veterans administration to submit proof of additional dependency to the VA regional office.

Veterans with dependents who are studying in schools and colleges under the GI bill are eligible for additional subsistence payments because of the dependents.

However, legal proof, such as certified copies of public records of birth, baptism, or marriage must be in their VA training file in order to qualify for increased subsistence payments.

University Day

"This is October 12, the birthday of the University of North Carolina, the anniversary of the laying of the cornerstone of Old East, October 12, 1793.

"The University is the child of the American Revolution. The story is too long to tell here. We had to win our freedom as a nation before we could build our University. The University of North Carolina is the mother of the schools and colleges, the professions, the arts and sciences, the railroads, the roads, the hospitals, the economic, cultural, political, and social institutions of North Carolina. This is a long story too, and I hope you will read it.

Today you are asked simply to lay aside your work from 11 to 2 o'clock, to pause for a brief memorial exercise, and there to feel and think the significance of freedom and education under God.

"In your imagination, return to the little village around the New Hope chapel on the hill in the pristine forest of Orange county one hundred and fifty-five years ago, and see the physical beginning of that spiritual power you love today in Chapel Hill and our University."

Mural Debate Will Be Held In November

Plans for an intramural debate tournament to be held on Nov. 16, 17, 18, on the topic, Federal Aid to Education, were announced yesterday by Marcellus Buchanan, chairman for the tourney.

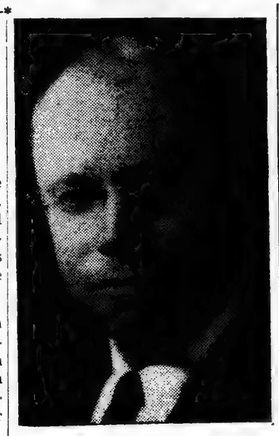
Entrance forms have been distributed to intramural managers of all organizations on campus. Students interested in entering should contact their intramural managers for further information.

The tournament will be run so that all teams will be given the opportunity to debate throughout the event without eliminations. Experience is not necessary to enter.

The awards will be the same as last year, a rotating cup, given by the Dialectic senate and the Philanthropic assembly, and a second cup, to be held permanently by the winning team, awarded by the Debate council. The rotating cup is now in the hands of Whitehead dormitory, defending champions.

Requests for information on the tourney should be addressed to Marcellus Buchanan, Chi Psi house.

Public Tryouts For 'Egypt Land'



Public tryouts for Robert G. Armstrong's full-length drama, "Egypt Land," will be held this afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Playmaker theater under the direction of Samuel Selden, head of the department of dramatic art, who is to direct the test production. If necessary, the tryouts will be continued tonight.

The play calls for a large cast —approximately 20 characters— and several singers and dancers are needed. The drama is set in seven scenes, divided into three acts, and a large technical crew is needed, especially for the stage crew, shop crew, lighting, and sound effects.

Professor Selden made it clear yesterday that tryouts are open to all students, townspeople, and faculty members, and that all interested persons were cordially invited to attend.

The play contains only two white characters. The rest are Negro, and the play centers around "Mose Rivers'" search for happiness. "Egypt Land" is not a social problem play, but deals with the emotional life of the people involved.

The searching drama is the first production under the new Playmaker policy of emphasizing full length original plays. It will be presented admission free on November 2 and 3 in the Playmaker theater, and follows the major production of the professionally written "I Remember Mama," which opens for a four-day run on Oct. 20 through 23.

SEN. ROBERT TAFT, former candidate for the Republican nomination for the presidency, will speak in Memorial hall Friday afternoon on behalf of the Republican party.

Recorder's Court Faces 75 Cases In Session Today

Judge Henry Whitfield's recorder's court will go into session this morning at 10 o'clock in the court room, second floor of Town hall.

Clerk of Court Moody Durham said yesterday that there are approximately 75 cases on the docket that will come up for hearing during the session.

Some of the outstanding cases will be larceny, forgery, and assault. Durham said the docket is too large to be completed today and will probably run into Wednesday. He added that several cases will probably be bound over to Superior court in Hillsboro.

Veterans' Checks Due in November

Most veterans attending school in North Carolina will receive their first subsistence checks for the fall term early in November, the Veterans administration has just announced.

The checks will represent subsistence allowances for the period from the day the veteran enters school through Oct. 31.

The next checks will be delivered on or about Dec. 1 to cover November allowances, and payments will be made monthly thereafter during the remainder of the school year.

Some veterans will receive checks during October to cover their September subsistence, but only if their registration and papers were received by the VA before Sept. 20.

Veterans with one dependent may receive $105 a month, and veterans with two or more dependents may receive $120 a month.

Varsity Debaters Practice Tonight

The varsity debate program will get under way tonight with the first practice debate on the second floor of Graham Memorial

Eccles Talk Scheduled Tomorrow

By Sam McKeel

Senator Robert A. Taft and Marriner S. Eccles will speak here this week, Herb Mitchell, publicity director of the Carolina Forum announced yesterday.

Taft, making a three-state tour of the South for the Republican party, will speak Friday afternoon. Eccles will speak Wednesday night at 8 o'clock in Hill hall.

Eccles, sponsored by the Carolina Forum and the Carolina Political union, campus nonpartisan political organizations, will speak on inflation, its causes, effects, and cures. Former chairman of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve system, Marriner failed reappointment when his term expired in February and was made vice-chairman of the board.

Taft, who is to speak in Tennessee, Florida, and North Carolina will arrive in Wilson on Friday, Oct. 15, and will motor directly here for a 2 o'clock appearance in Memorial hall. He will then return to Wilson for an 8 o'clock speech. There he will speak on the Taft-Hartley Labor-Management Relations act, and the Republican farm program.

Taft, who is famous for the part he played in the Taft-Hartley act, is also well known for the Republican national convention in Philadelphia. There he ran Governor Dewey of New York a close second on the first ballot for the Republican nomination for president. On the fourth ballot he withdrew in favor of the governor.

Senator Taft's speech from Wilson will be broadcast over WPTF of Raleigh and WGTM of Wilson.

More Students Become Eligible For Dorm Rooms

The following students are eligible for dormitory rooms and should contact the housing office immediately if they desire rooms.

If the eligible students do not contact the housing office by Thursday it will be assumed that they do not want the rooms and their applications will be cancelled. They are: Sidney Apple, Julian Barker, Bruce B. Beddington, John S. Bennett, James Alton Croom, Tom M. Davis, John A Dellinger, Murdock Dowd, Jr., William B. Dunn.

Jay W. Sanders, Theodore E. Sellers, Charles W. Schultheis, Aubert C. Snow, Francis M. Strock, Jr., Brooks F. Snyder, Elmer B. Tripp, Rhesa R. Tull, Edd L. Utley, Robert W. Warmbold, Isaac J. Wicker, Gene T. Wilson, and William C. White.

CICA Slates Party For New Coeds

The Carolina Independent Coed association will have a "coke" party for members and new coeds at the Episcopal parish house at 4 o'clock this afternoon. Old members of the CICA will gather in the parlors of the various women's dorms at 3:45 o'clock in order that they may accompany the new girls to the party.

Bennett Says 15 Long Distance Lines Laid to Durham From Here This Year

J. S. Bennett, supervisor of service plant operation for the Chapel Hill telephone company, said yesterday that 15 new long distance lines have been laid between Durham and Chapel Hill this year.

Two lines replacing last year's one cable set-up have been connected to each of the large dorms, and as soon as possible each of the smaller dorms will have one and a half lines.

Bennett said that this will mean one phone in each of the smaller dorms will be sharing a line with a phone in another dorm.

According to Bennett, everything possible is being done to alleviate the telephone congestion in this area. He requested that students please be patient when making long distance calls and not to overload the lines unless necessary.

Plaques In Memorial

As we pause for a few hours today from our class-room work and gather to celebrate the 155th anniversary of our University's founding, we will keep one minute of silence in memory of the University men and women who have died.

Along the walls of Memorial hall there are plaques immortalizing the great men who have given the University honor and glory. Some of them were Edward Kidder Graham, eighth president of the University, James K. Polk, President of the United States and Roland Parker, a young student who never got the opportunity to show his mettle.

Three times this University has sent her sons into battle, and three times she has mourned for those who will never return. Three times this University has set for herself the great duty to state and nation, that of training new men to take up the responsibilities of re-building a torn and angry world.

Today we have escaped the destruction destined for us by the brute wrath of men like Hitler, and we have retained our freedom so dear to us through the sacrifices of fellow students, now sleeping within the soil of distant lands. In 1943 on Oct. 12 the president of our University said;

"The father of our University helped the father of our country to found the United States. Today thousands of the sons of this University have offered their lives to help our present great president to make the United States of America a cornerstone of the United Nations to include in God's good time all peoples in the world neighborhood of human brother hood. On this day of commemoration and dedication we pledge anew the peoples' university in the peoples' war for the peoples' freedom and the peoples' peace."

The war has been over for several years now, yet to us the pledge still holds great significance. The dead are buried and gone, but the prayers and the wishes of the dead still live on in the hearts of freedom loving peoples.

Let us remember the pledge when we observe the minute of silence, and let us also give a thought to those who helped to keep the pledge. We are here because of the grace of the men of this University who gave their all whether great or small and passed on to their destiny.—LK

On Smoking Probation

Students who go to hear Marriner Eccles speak in Hill hall tomorrow night will be, in a manner of speaking, on probation: If they smoke during the speech, it will mean that Hill hall will no longer be available to speakers sponsored by student groups.

The no smoking rule in Hill hall has more behind it than a desire to keep the air free of smoke. Chair upholstering and floor carpeting is expensive, and smokers who drop sparks on the seats and mash cigarette butts on the carpets add to the expense. Moreover, the fire inspector has declared smoking in the auditorium a fire hazard.

The appearance of Strom Thurmond last week showed that students have no regard for no smoking signs, and as a result the music department cancelled the reservation made by the Carolina Political Union and the Carolina Forum for Eccles' speech. Since Memorial and Gerrard halls were both scheduled for other uses, Dr. Haydon of the music department finally agreed to let the hall be used once more on a trial basis.

Need for an auditorium with a capacity greater than Gerrard and less than Memorial is definite at the University. Conduct of students in regard to smoking tomorrow night will decide whether Hill hall will continue to fill that need.

An early patriot editor carried legal government notices in his newspaper free of charge, refusing to accept payment until finally George Washington thanked him for his generosity to the fledgling government and insisted that he accept pay.

Odds And Ends

ON CAMPUS:

SAD 'N LONESOME is Dick Bunting since his little black cocker spaniel vamoosed into thin air. He and his roommates claim home just isn't home anymore without "Tar Heel." So if you happen to come across this friendly, lost pup, how 'bout letting Dick know?

WEDDING BELLS. We received a mighty nice note telling us about a marriage that will be of news to all of you—that of Jack Fitch and Mary Jane Lloyd, October 14 in Pittsburgh, Penn. Jack is now playing professional football with the Pittsburgh Steelers, but the couple will be back at the Hill in January, when Jack will resume his studies. Mary Jane, as you remember, is a Carolina graduate.

YOU NAME 'EM. Seems as if inhabitants of the men's dorms are getting ahead of us coeds by leaps and bounds in originality. They even have mottos for themselves—such as, "You've got to be a wheel if you wanna' live in Steele." .....or, "We're the men with the great big chests: we hail from that dorm. Old West." More power to them, but how 'bout, "She's the' girl from McIver: he just can't bear to leave 'er!"

FIX IT CLINIC. Caroline Bunner has done such a swell job of taking stock of the attractively decorated rooms in the coed dorms that she could certainly drop a few helpful hints to any of you men interested in developing the comforts of home in a nine by nine cubicle. And especially a word to the Sigma Chi's who thought they hit the top in the world of interior-decoration by setting up a "focal point" at the head of their stairs. Never did they dream a coed would glance up at this center of attraction at the very minute one of the brothers stepped from the shower into the path of the reflection on the window panes. Yes, there was a towel in the picture.

DOMESTICITY PERSONIFIED. While we're talking about those fellows and their newly decorated house, we simply can not resist branching out on the subject a bit. Say whatever you please about the matter; but when you get right down to brass tacks and coffee pots, the men around this campus know their way around housekeeping heaps better than we give them credit for knowing. Take for instance Nat Williams, who, in the middle of a schedule jammed full of books and politics, finds time to care for a couple of African violets. And you should hear one of his conversations with Tom Wharton about "Chinese grass." Then, there were the aquarium custodians—Bill Watson and "Fuzzy," who claimed he did all the feeding last year. And, of course, we must not leave out the scores upon scores who are so adapt with can openers. We'll not begin to name those.

FRUSTRATION PLUS. Now we've seen it all. Remember last week we remarked about that boy who fell asleep during the GM floor show? Well sir, this past Friday we spotted two Carolina gentlemen DANCING together down Rendezvous-way. Girls, what have you done????

ARTIST TEMPERAMENT. Dick Stoker, we hear, got too wound up about a proposed trip to Georgia and just took off last week and left his painting contract. No way to hold a job!

This Changing World

Let Us Go To The Library

Bill Robertson

(The circumstances of the world are continually changing, and the opinions of men change also.—Thomas Paine)

"In the world of 1938 the teaching of Karl Marx is an ideological force of profound significance. By its accurate forecast of the decay of capitalism. . . . it is forced upon our attention whether we like it or not. It can be intensely hated, violently attacked, cleverly bowdlerized. . . .it cannot, however, be ignored."

This quotation is taken from the writings of a Marxist biologist, Marcel Prenant, at one time just an ordinary college professor, (although very brilliant in his own specialty.) who became a hero of the French underground during the German occupation.

Note the date of this quotation—1938. At that time a leader in Nazi Germany said "Marxism has been destroyed." Needless to say, in Fascist Italy, and Imperialist Japan Marxism had also been outlawed. In Spain, Franco, in the name of fighting Marxism, was wiping out democratic liberties. Everywhere the "forces of decay" were spreading over the world.

And what is the situation today? In Germany, Italy, and Japan there are powerful Marxist movements. In Spain there is a growing underground movement of workers and peasants, led by Marxists, heroically resisting the vile system which is receiving more and more open support from American Big Business-because it is a "bulwark against Communism."

In other words, the last ten years have further confirmed the accurate forecast of Karl Marx concerning the decay of capitalism. In Eastern Europe, 100 million more people have taken the road to socialism. In China, the People's Liberation Army, under the leadership of the Communist Party, is freeing 450 million Chinese from capitalistic imperialism and its lackeys in the Chinese ruling class. In Burma, Marxism has become such a powerful force that the defenders of capitalism have to pose as Marxists in order to maintain their power!

Here in America, where there were Marxists before the Civil War, (thirty years before they were in Russia), Marxism is steadily growing—and every newspaper, every radio station, attacks Marxism. People who formerly didn't care, are now getting interested.

The ideas of Karl Marx cannot be crushed by force. Hitler, Mussolini, and Tojo tried it and failed. So really Big Business, by its red-baiting, is hastening the awakening of the American people to the true nature of Marxism. The Communist party in America does not have the facilities to do a really good job. So at present it must be content to let Big Business get the American people good and tired of red-baiting. When this happens these facilities will then be available to the Communist party.

In the meantime, we might answer the general question: what is Marxism? Originally, it was the system of views and teachings of Karl Marx. But today it is more than that. Today it is a powerful material force, because it has gripped the minds and hearts of hundreds of millions of ordinary people throughout the world-and it is instilling in them "fanatical" confidence in the final liberation of all mankind from economic crises, depressions, fascism, and wars.

Let us all go to the library and read the writings of Karl Marx.

University Does Its Part

Editor:

As two shy, reticent lads of some twenty plus years we hesitate to write now for fear that we will embarrass some of the modest but deserving South Building occupants with our praises. Nevertheless, when praise is due, it must be given. I agree, George agrees.

Several prominent economists of recent years have advanced the theory that inflation can best be dealt with by restricting the purchasing power of the American Public. I'm no economist. George swears he isn't either. Our profs swear we both aren't But we agree with economists. Limit the purchasing power and pretty soon everything begins to level out. Plenty of houses, cars, food, clothes at reasonable prices. The first movement directed in this channel has been initiated by our university, and the next month or so should begin to show the effects of such an intelligent, foresighted step in the right direction. Yes students, and especially you veterans of $75 per, your money is going to go farther than your fondest dreams. And although they may hang their heads as do all those modest souls upon whom praise is heaped, they know deep down that they carry always our undying gratitude, those men of South.

Not the least important aspect of this new move to curb inflation and prevent depression is the new proven ability of a united group of citizens do correct an error made by our national government. As everyone knows, the Veterans Administration, A.V.C. American Legion, V.F.W. and others bulldozed Congress into passing a law increasing the subsistance pay of the veterans from $65 to $75 per month. (Of course this was election year) Now all of us realize full well that $65 was enough for the veterans. As Mr. Davis said to his old hound dog under the poplar, and it is no less true today: "Sixty-five dollars goes a long way if wisely spent, especially here in Chapel Hill."

The only possible result of that $10 increase was a further increase in the Veterans' purchasing power—a threat to our national economy, leading to inflation and chaos. The thought in itself is terrifying. However, our ever-alert heads in South Building, anticipating such a disasterous move, acted with the speed and assurance that typifies that body. To reduce the purchasing power of the Veteran after the boost in pay, the University has raised the dormitory room rent an additional $5.00 per quarter. We are sure that with a little more planning they will be able to devise some method of absorbing the surplus $5.00 and thus eliminate the slightest chance of Inflation's rearing its ugly head.

In case anyone asks, the $5.00 received from the increase in rent is being well spent. Here in Aycock, at least, we can vouch for it. Our windows have been washed (every pane), and there is now a light in every room. Yes, we are all happy with our well-painted, elaborately furnished, cozy dorm rooms for which we have to pay only $29.50 this quarter. And as a suggestion to South Building officials, why not make an additional increase this Winter, to say $34.50, and avert all possibilities of having the inflationary wolves howl at the bottom of Our Revered Hill?

Problems Are Valid

Editor:

Robertson's now rather famous ravings have frequently served as a source of amusement to me, but I think articles like Mr. Baldwin's cute little sally into the affairs of the world and the East versus West struggle in particular are a waste of space in what might become a valuable column in the Daily Tar Heel.

Certainly Mr. Robertson displays a not unpeculiar blindness in his apparent refusal to see all the facets of the problems he so violently writes about, but the problems he poses (as distinguished from his answers) are certainly valid and vexing problems in our time. I don't know the answers (if I did I should surely make use of this column to rave too) but with me as with many other people problems are pressing problems that can not be answered by the dilettantish, pseudo-literary satire that Mr. Baldwin thinks fit to urge upon us. Rather, I would like to see some constructive criticism of Mr. Robertson I almost wrote Mr. Wallace—or better yet a positive statement by Mr. Baldwin (or anyone else) of his own solution of the too apparent ills in this country. To play hop-scotch with a naively conceived conception of the Marxian dialectic seems a great waste of type, talent, and energy unless, of course, Mr. Baldwin believes he is living in the best of all possible worlds.

Against Them All

Editor:

Concerning your editorial on Thursday, "Thoughts on Dixiecrats," whatever your thoughts on Dixiecrats may be, it would be helpful to keep the facts straight. You state, "The Dixiecrats, however, are against President Truman, and President Truman alone. They haven't bothered to condemn Senator Barkley, his running mate, who must believe in the same civil rights program that Truman proposes if he consented to be his running mate."

Where were you on Tuesday? Governor Thurmond has stated the objections of the States Rights Democrats to Dewey as well as Truman in emphatic terms. As for the Wallacites, the antithesis could not be plainer. Barkley also has been condemned by the States Rights Democrats, not only for alliance with Truman but on his record, especially his attempts to stop southern filibusters in Congress, as was pointed by Thurmond in his talk in Durham. As to whether Barkley "must believe" in the civil rights program because he consented to run with Truman, that is as indeterminable as what many southern Democrats believe who are consenting to support and vote for Truman.

Open letter to spaghetti lovers:

Do you enjoy the thrill of sitting down to an exciting dish of real Italian spaghetti? You do? Well for pete's sake don't look for it in a certain restaurant on Franklin Street, which ironically features this dish as a special on Thursdays. The "special" turned out to be a glutinous blob of ruptured macaroni! My pancreas will gladly verify this statement since, after three mouthfuls, I went home and spent a night out of bed. However, I will attest to the fact that the service was excellent and the coffee luke warm.

By BILLY CARMICHAEL III

A Dismal Monday

IT WAS A VERY DISMAL Monday afternoon in Chapel Hill and everybody sat dismally around discussing the football games of the past weekend. Talk, as usual, didn't change the scores of any of the contests, but a few comments of interest moved to the front.

Seems most of the local fanatics were all but satisfied with the proceedings at Wake (whose?) Forest including some poor fellow who got a little too much of the Carolina spirits and gave 20 points. The defeat was not too enjoyable in the process of exacting; there was always the anxiety of who would be the next Tar Heel to be carried from the field.

All agreed that Wake Forest had a good football team, including Charlie Justice who tagged them the toughest and roughest we'd met all season. Young Charlie should know. The special eye opening feature was the end play of Deacon forwards, greatest since the days of McKinney's cotton pickers. They rushed Justice's passing and somewhat hushed the Asheville Ambler's running game. The end was always in sight from the standpoint of both teams.

The Bud Blossoms

HOSEA RODGERS, THE PERENNIAL budding tsar of the Tar Heels, blossomed forth to the delight of the sun-kissed spectators and the flowery phrases of the assembled sports writers. It was his greatest show of athletic fission since a memorable day in Philadelphia some years ago when the stands of Franklin field boomed with the cries of "Hosanna for Hosea." There were hoarse Tar Heels at Wake Forest again Saturday.

Rodgers changed from a question mark to an exclamation point by his performance against the pugilistic lads of Peahead Walker. With his ramroding tactics forcing opponents to strengthen their middles or get trampled in the rush, Justice's running at the wider spots will increase in success and effectiveness. It will be a question of pay and take your choice of how you will like to be scored upon.

The rest of the Tar Heels deserved more than the satisfaction of winning. With colds and injuries cutting their efficiency to a margin that scared Tar Heels fans back to religion in the third period, the Snavelymen rallied their efforts to stop a Deacon attempt to re-enter the ball game. Then for the benefit of the late arriving fans, they repeated their first period touchdowns, leaving nothing to do but play "Hark the Sound" and go home.

Practicing Hornerisms

MEANWHILE, SCATTERED here and there, future Tar Heel opponents were enjoying their last few nights ashore before meeting the Carolina grid machine. Duke put the practice of Hornerism into full use at Durham and lived right up to and then beyond their press clippings in scuttling a previously sinking Navy.

The Blue Devils had Fast Freight Fred Folger, previously sidetracked by injuries, running full blast on the mainline to the Middie goal line. Then they unveiled a bunch of other seemingly capable performers to prove that the numbers in the program really stood for someone. The Dukes seem to be coming long fast, but from the reports of their earlier games, they had a long way to come.

The Blue Devils, though Dooklocked by State and Tennessee, have yet to lose a game, and might come up to Carolina undefeated. Needless to say, Georgia Tech could turn this dream into a nightmare, but the Dukesters do bear watching if you've got the time and the energy.

Of Things to Come

YOUNG STATE COLLEGE, opponent extraordinary for the weekend to come, unleashed the wrath of Raleigh on healthy but hapless Davidson last Saturday night to toss a cinder in the Tar Heels' Wheaties bowls. The boys from the Academoo will be searching in dead earnest for the victory needle in their football haystack next Saturday and seem to have about that much of a chance to find it.

The Cow College entry talks victory with the confidence of a man betting on football games in the newsreels. They are talking financially as low as six points which ain't hay even if you do attend an agricultural institution. They look to have found themselves, say the press releases, but the question is just how will they find the Tar Heels come Saturday.

Nobody is taking the Wolfpack lightly around the local football establishment. It is still easier to lose grid games than it is to win them. Football practice was held yesterday as usual with no rest for the weary.

It isn't easy to be a champion.

Cross-Country Team Defeated By VPI, 31-26

Magill Is Winner In First Defeat Of 17 Dual Meets

By Frank Allston

Virginia Tech's speedy cross-country tracksters yesterday afternoon handed the Carolina harriers their first dual meet defeat in 17 outings when they toppled the Tar Heels, 26-31 at Fetzer stadium and in the nearby woods.

Sam Magill, however, turned in a superb performance for the locals when he did a speedy 21:45 for first place. Magill took an early lead and maintained a steady pace for the first two miles of the gruelling four-mile course. "Bev" Middleton, VPI's number one man, passed the Tar Heel entry at the two-mile mark, but relinquished the lead to Sam with three-quarters of a mile to go.

Middleton and Curtis Shelton came in in 21:56 to give the Gobblers the number two and three positions. Middleton and Shelton crossed the finish line holding hands in a two-way tie for the second spot.

Get Fourth and Fifth

Frank Hooper and Julian McKenzie finished fourth and fifth for Carolina while James Hunt was ninth and Jerome Lewis twelfth. Ken Mattox, Ter Heel runner, went along on an unofficial jaunt and placed eighth, ahead of Tech's Bob Brooks, but his finish did not count in the scoring.

Tech, Southern conference cross-country runner-up in 1947, appeared to have a well-balanced squad. Coach Lou Honesty was well pleased with the work of his Gobblers and Tar Heel mentor Dale Ranson was likewise very satisfied, although his runners were defeated.

Sam Magill looked as strong as ever and Frank Hooper and Julian McKenzie also looked very good.

Navy Is Next

Ranson will take his boys to Annapolis, Maryland Saturday morning to tackle the strong U. S. Naval academy harriers. The contest is slated to begin at 11 o'clock.

Summaries for yesterday's meet:

1., Magill (UNC); 2., Tie between Middleton (,VPI) and Shelton (VPI); 4., Hooper (UNC); 5., McKenzie (UNC); 6., Ken Loving (VPI); 7., Joe Beard (VPI); 8., Brooks (VPI); 9., Hunt (UNC); 10., Prongay (VPI); 11., Buddy Harvie (VPI); 12., Jerome Lewis (UNC); 13., Nicofiton (VPI); 14., Dick Gregory (UNC); 15., Rhyme (UNC); 16., Barringer (UNC).

Indians Defeat Braves by 4-3 To Capture 1948 World Series

By Carl Lundquist

BOSTON, Oct. 11—(UP)—The Cleveland Indians won the World Series today by defeating the Boston Braves, 4 to 3, in the heart-throbbing sixth game finale.

Gene Bearden saved it for the Indians. Warren Spahn almost kept the Braves in the series. The thrilling action of this climatic game, before 40,103 crushed fans at Braves field, was packed into the last two innings.

In the eighth and trailing 4 to 1, Tommy Holmes led off for the Braves by lashing a single to right. It was a ray of hope—though a faint one because the Cleveland pitcher, Bob Lemon, had been untouchable with runners on base.

Torgeson Doubles

Rookie shortstop Alvin Dark flied out and hope flickered. But big Earl Torgeson dropped a double down to the right field corner, sending Holmes to third. Up came the Braves' mighty man, Bob Elliott. He got two homers yesterday and had already collected three straight singles off Lemon.

The Cleveland hurler didn't dare give him anything good. His first three pitches were balls. He shot in a called strike and Elliott swung on the next pitch and missed. Finally he walked.

Boss Lou Boudreau of the Indians instantly removed Lemon and put in Bearden, his chips down hurler who had won eight straight games including the American league championship playoff over the Red Sox and a series game in Cleveland.

With a lefty now pitching, Boston manager Billy Southworth called on a rookie right-hander, Clint Conatser, to hit for left-handed rookie, Marv Rickert. Conatser responded with a fly to deep center, which scored Holmes and sent Torgeson to third.

Masi Slams Double

Phil Masi, called in to bat for Bill Salkeld with all the blue chips riding, doubled against the left field fence. It missed being a home run by about two inches.

The blow scored Torgeson, making it 4 to 3 and Elliott went down to third. But Masi might just as well have struck out, for the Braves still were one run short of a tie and two short of a victory.

Mike McCormick came up next and it was his chance to be a hero. But he muffed it by grounding out and ending the inning.

The Braves' desperate ninth began with Eddie Stanky working the count to three and two and finally drawing his third walk of the game and his seventh of the series.

Speedy Connie Ryan went in to run for him and Sibby Sisti went up to bat for Spahn. He tried to sacrifice Ryan with a bunt, but instead popped up weakly. Indian catcher Jim Hegan caught the ball and rifled a throw to first that doubled Ryan by 10 feet. The groan that came up from the stands sounded like dull thunder. Everyone realized it was all over and it was. The final anti-climactic out was Holmes' toy fly to left field.

SAE and Emerson Are Impressive In Mural Football

Intramural tag football at Carolina went into its second day of play yesterday with several dormitory and independent teams swinging into action for the first time, while fraternity teams took up where they left off last Thursday and continued to fight it out for the championship.

The easiest victories of the afternoon were claimed by Stacy, AROTC, and Everett, when Graham, Wes. Rocks, and Manley, their respective opposing teams, failed to show up with enough men to take the field. As a result the teams present were awarded 1 to 0 forfeit games.

C Dorm got off to a good start with a 9 to 6 win over Quonset Hut 356. The Town team took a 12 to 6 decision over the Stanley Steamers. Steele whitewashed Mangum, 6 to 0, and Emerson held the Medical School 1 to two safeties in winning, 13 to 4. The Y Cab team defeated Old East, 12 to 2, in another hard fought contest.

In fraternity arguments SAE 1 crushed AE Pi by a 39 to 0 score. Sigma Chi edged Zeta 1, 6 to 0, in a tight contest, and Sigma Nu 2 handed Phi Gam 2 a 6 to 0 shutout. Phi Delt 1 stopped Phi Kap Sig, 26 to 13, while St. Anth. blanked Chi Phi 2, 13 to 0, and PiKA took a 14 to 0 win over Beta 2.

Archery Club Meeting

There will be a meeting of the archery club at the east end of Fetzer stadium tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock. All people on the campus interested in participating in the fall tournament are urged to attend. In case of rain the meeting will be held in Room 302, Woollen.

Monogram Meeting

There will be a meeting of all members of the Monogram Club in the dining room of the Monogram Club at 7:30 tonight, announced secretary Dan Nyimicz.

Jenrette, Jeff Tied

Dick Jenrette, Daily Tar Heel sports writer, and Jeff, the perennial Chapel Hill grid expert, are in a deadlock for top honors in the football prediction contest after the first three weeks of play. Each has a record of 39 correct picks to 16 incorrect for a .709 percentage.

Jenrette and Jeff both had records of 15 correct and six incorrect this past weekend. It was the third straight week in which the two have tied.

Jake Wade, Carolina sports publicist, is a close third, with 37 right and 18 wrong picks. Trailing are Billy Carmichael, sports editor, and Publisher Orville Campbell, with 35 and 32 correct choices respectively.

Aerial Offensive Sharpened For Homecoming Tilt

With three quick victories under their belts, Carolina's Tar Heels began drilling yesterday for Saturday's Homecoming clash with N. C. State. The Tar Heels pasted a 28-6 defeat on the Wake Forest Demon Deacons in Baptist Hollow last week while the Wolfpack slapped a 40-0 loss on a comparatively weak Davidson eleven.

Yesterday's practice session was featured by a lengthy passing drill with Charlie Justice and Hosea Rodgers doing the tossing to rt Weiner, Bob Cox, and Max Cooke. Both Rodgers and Justice were hitting their receivers with accuracy throughout the drill and State may witness Carolina's biggest aerial display of the year on Saturday.

After battling through two tilts without scoring, the Wolfpack let loose with a six-touchdown barrage to swamp Davidson's undermanned squad for their first victory. The Wolfpack's offensive had been without punch in their first two outings and their ground attack was rather poor against the Wildcats, but a strong air offensive brought the Statemen their first victory of the season.

Bill Flamisch and Len Szafaryan worked out in light clothing yesterday but both are expected to be ready by Saturday. Flamisch was injured in the Georgia tilt two weeks ago and didn't see action against Wake Forest. Szafaryan was injured slightly in the Deacon clash but will be ready to go in a few days. Don Hartig and Wingback Fred Sherman are still out and neither is expected to be ready in time for the State game. Hartig will be out for the season.

Wrestlers To Report

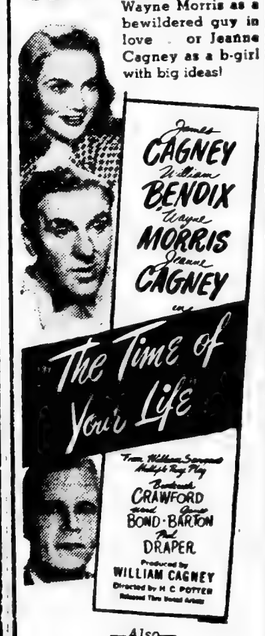
All men wishing to participate in freshman and varsity wrestling are to report to Room 101, Woollen gymnasium this afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Tar Heel Booters Prepare For Test With Loyola Here

Still nursing the memories of Wednesday's 2-0 defeat by Navy, Carolina's booters turned their thoughts to preparations for their home opener against Loyola Friday afternoon.

The Tar Heel offense wasn't up to par against Navy and as a result the Middies shut out the visitors. The Allenmen were good enough on defense, although Navy tallied two goals too many, but the offense wasn't able to dent the cords for a single marker. The Carolina forward line advanced the ball into Navy territory only about 15-20 times during the entire contest.

Faulty passing was the main reason for the Carolina defeat and Coach Marvin Allen will have his men working on that phase of the game in preparation for the Loyola contest. In practice yesterday afternoon the first string forward line worked against the defensive alignment in an attempt to sharpen up their attack.



There will also be some lineup changes when the team faces off against Loyola Friday afternoon. Allen is experimenting with several new combinations of forwards in order to come up with the most effective quintet.

All was not disasterous at Annapolis, though, and the soccer mentor had praise for the defensive players and especially co-captains Jesse Greenbaum and Frank Nelson.

Nelson pulled a muscle against the Middies, but will be ready for action Friday.

Columbus, University Celebrate Same Day

By Alice Sharp

Today being Columbus day as well as University day, Dr. W. W. Pierson, dean of the Graduate school and professor of history and political science, will speak at 8 o'clock this evening is Murphy hall, under the auspices of the Spanish club.

Dr. Federico Gil will introduce Dr. Pierson and the subject of the talk will be "El dia de la raza." Translated into English, this means "The Day of the Race," as Columbus day is known in Spanish-speaking countries. It is marked by fiestas in honor of the occasion.

"The fact that our University day falls on Columbus day is an interesting coincidence," says Dr. Pierson. "As far as I know, in the thirty years that I have been at this University only one other orator has alluded to this fact. Both are important historical events but our University does not suffer any loss of prestige by sharing its founding date with that of the discovery of America."

Dr. Pierson is an authority on Latin American affairs. Between his duties as an administrator and an educator, he has found time to make two trips to Cuba and three trips to South America. His last trip was under the sponsorship of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

Fall Quarter Registration Hits Record High Of 7,603

By Margaret Gaston

University enrollment for fall quarter this year reached the highest number in the history of the school, with a total of 7603 students enrolled. This figure includes 6,719 male students and 884 coeds.

Chancellor R. B. House announced the enrollment at yesterday's University day exercises. September enrollment for last year was 7,428, which is 75 students less than enrolled this year.

Ten years ago this quarter, only 3,509 students were registered here.

According to a report from Central Records office, 1,360 freshman students are enrolled, including 34 coeds. There is a total of 982 graduate students in Arts and Sciences, Public Health, and Social work.

The number of veterans this year is 4,331, which includes 76 women veterans. There are 2,464 non-veteran men and 808 women.

The residence status of North Carolina reached 5,915, and from the other 43 states represented there are 1,631 students. There are 57 foreign students on campus this year, representing 30 countries.

Oklahoma University Admits Negro Student

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 12.—(UP)—State officials today bowed to a federal court order and announced that Prof. G. W. McLaurin, a Negro, will be admitted to the University of Oklahoma Wednesday "on a segregated basis."

Attorney General Mac Q. Williamson in a surprise announcement disclosed that the university regents met secretly two days ago to wipe out Oklahoma's 40-year-old policy against interracial education.

Last week the regents instructed the university president to make plans for separate classes for the Negro professor. Williamson said Gov. Roy J. Turner and state regents for higher education had concurred in the university regents decision.

Williamson said the action was taken on the basis of a court ruling of Sept. 29 which held that Oklahoma's statutes prohibiting racial inter-mixture were inoperative and void in McLaurin's case.

The statement released by Williamson with the approval of the other state agencies involved said the elderly Negro professor has been notified to appear at the campus in nearby Norman for registration Wednesday.

Weaver, Cordon Speak to Alumni At Durham Meet

Dean of Students Fred Weaver and Norman Cordon, head of the University Music foundation, were guest speakers at a dinner meeting of the Durham county alumni association of the University at the Washington-Duke hotel in Durham Monday night.

Egbert Haywood, Durham attorney, was elected president of the association at the meeting which was attended by approximately 125 alumni in observance of the 155th anniversary of the University.

As a special feature, Clyde "Pete" Mullis of the University athletic staff gave a talk on the handling of crowds at Carolina football games, and showed movies of the Carolina-Georgia game.

Ralph Strayhorn, University law student, also spoke at the meeting.

Elected to serve with Haywood for the forthcoming year were Allstron Stubbs, vice president, and B. W. Harris, secretary-treasurer.

Charles Eaton Delivers Talk To Coed Group

"The glorious thing about the United States is that we can combine the ideal and the practical," said Charles Eaton, writer and English department faculty member, speaking Monday night at an open meeting of Chi Delta Phi, coed literary group.

Stating that for the writer the ideal is perfection of skill—"the mythical, perfect story that he never writes"—Eaton urged the young writers to concentrate on their work, approaching it in a "spirit of love, persistence and patience."

First open meeting of the year, it was planned especially for girls interested in joining the local chapter of the sorority. Manuscripts submitted in the membership contest must be turned in to the information office in Graham Memorial before Wednesday, Oct. 20, it was announced.

Tickets on Sale For Weed Dance In Wilson Oct. 20

University students may secure tickets in the Y on Monday to the annual Tobacco Tamasha to be held at Wilson Oct. 20.

The Chapel Hill agent has been limited to 200 tickets, which will be on sale at the Y during the hours from 10 to 4 o'clock. Tickets may be obtained before Monday by contacting Jack Edwards at 318 McCauley street.

"Miss North Carolina of 1948," Patty Osborne of Shelby, will be Queen of the Tamasha. She will wear a dress of tobacco with a crown of cigarettes during the ceremony.

Highlighting the pageant will be an informal dance from 9 o'clock until 1:30 featuring Perry Como, Mitchell Ayres and the Chesterfield orchestra, and Larry Clinton and his orchestra. The NBC Chesterfield Supper club at 7 o'clock, a repeat broadcast at 11 o'clock, and two Arthur Godfrey CBS morning shows will originate from Wilson Friday.

Life and Parade magazines will cover the event, and other events besides the dance will include an auctioneering contest, hog-calling contest, and a window-decorating contest. Proceeds from the affair will go to the North Carolina Polio fund.

Official Rings May Be Ordered

Orders for the official senior class rings will be taken in the Y today from the hours of 11:30 until 2 o'clock. The order of the Grail has awarded the official contract for class rings to the L. G. Balfour co. Monroe Landreth is the Order of the Grail's representative in charge of class rings for this year. The official class rings can not be obtained through any other source, he announced yesterday.

Playmaker Show Tickets Available Beginning Today

The sale of reserved seat tickets for the Carolina Playmaker production of "I Remember Mama," a gentle comedy of American family life, is the first major production of the Playmaker's 31st season. It was written by John Van Druten, who adapted the story from the novel, "Mama's Bank Account," by Kathryn Forbes. Lynn Gault is directing the production.

The play was a decided hit when played at the Music Box theater in New York during 1944, and it was later made into a movie.

Gault, who is designing the settings as well as directing the presentation, is using a large revolving stage to help eliminate some of the biggest problems in scene changing.

Dramatist Van Druten summed up the major problems himself when he said. "It's physical production. . .demands facilities infrequently met with in amateur theaters. Revolving stages, platforms, backdrops, traveller curtains and the like are things to discourage even the hardiest group."

Costumes for "I Remember Mama" are being designed and made under the direction of staff costumer Irene Smart, lighting will be handled by graduate student James Byrd, and Marty Jacobs is serving as stage manager.

SP Legislators Will Meet Today

George D. Colclough, secretary of the Burlington Chamber of Commerce, will be the guest speaker at the first meeting of the Delta Sigma Phi professional commerce fraternity in the banquet room of the Carolina Inn tomorrow evening at 7:30.

The meeting will be open to all commerce students. An informal smoker will be held immediately after the meeting at the Delta Sigma Phi house, 211 Pittsboro street, to which commerce students are also invited.

Colclough, a native of Durham county, received his A.B. degree from Elon college and did special work at the University of North Carolina and at Duke university. He is a member of the Board of Directors of the North Carolina Chamber of Commerce Executives, and is state editor of "Southern Executives."

Freshmen Should Get Pictures Made

All freshmen who have not yet had their Yack pictures taken are requested to come in today by Fred Blair, freshman class editor of the Yack.

"I want this to be the best freshman class section we have ever had, and the only way we can do it is with the cooperation of the whole class. I would like to stress again, fellows should wear white shirts, ties and coats, while the girls should wear white blouses," Fred said.

He reminded all freshmen that there are no lines, the hours are 9-12 o'clock in the morning, and 1:15-5 o'clock in the afternoon, and also that "freshmen will not be allowed to have their pictures taken after this Friday."

Marriner Eccles Will Speak On Inflation This Evening

University Day Program Has Simplicity As Theme

Simplicity was the keynote for ceremonies which yesterday marked the 155th anniversary of the laying of the cornerstone of Old East building Oct. 12, 1793.

Students, faculty members and townpeople gathered in front of South building at 11 o'clock to participate in the brief exercises. After the University band opened the program with the national anthem, and the singing of the University hymn, Chancellor R. B. House led the large assemblage in a responsive reading from the Apocrypha. The Men's Glee club sang Integer Vitae, following a minute of silence in memory of students, faculty, trustees and alumni who had died since the last University day.

The University Glee club, under the direction of Paul Young, made a very favorable impression on the audience in their first appearance of the year. They sang the Credo from Palestrina's Missa Papae Marcellus.

The program at South Building ended with a re-enactment of the laying of the cornerstone by John Hinson, A. C. Gaskill, and L. B. Collins, representatives of the local Masonic lodge. The original cornerstone laying was conducted by Masonic Grandmaster William R. Davie and a group of Masons in 1793.

After the pantomime, Cheerleader Norman Sper and the University band led the way to Davie Poplar where the final tribute to the University's founding was made. The crowd sang "Hark the Sound."

With Chancellor House on the platform was the Rev. J. C. Herrin, who gave the invocation; Jess Dedmond, student body president, and Earl Wynn, director of the Communications center. Classes were suspended from 10:50 until 1:50.

Will Discuss Cause, Effect Possible Cure

By Sam McKeel

Marriner S. Eccles, vice-chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve system, will speak on inflation, its causes, effects and cures tonight at 8 o'clock in Hill hall.

Former chairman of the board, Eccles failed reappointment in February of this year, and was made vice-chairman. Thomas Bayard McCabe, Philadelphia Republican banker, and head of the Scot paper company, was his successor as chairman. Eccles was first appointed chairman of the board in February of 1936.

Eccles will be co-sponsored by the Carolina Forum and the Carolina Political union, non-partisan campus political organization. He will appear at a banquet given by the CPU at 6 o'clock in the Carolina Inn.

Born in Logan, Utah, on September 9, 1890, Eccles attended district schools and Brigham Young college. In 1943 he received an honorary LLD from the University of Utah.

Long a figure in national politics Eccles has been a member of the National Advisory council on International Monetary and Financial Problems since June, 1945. He was a member of the Board of Economic Stabilization from 1942 until 1946.

Eccles will arive via Eastern Airlines at the Raleigh-Durham airport at 4:47. He will be met by Herb Alexander, president of the CPU.

Rally, Street Dance To Spark Homecoming

A pep rally, street dance and elaborate displays by all fraternities, dormitories and sororities will highlight homecoming weekend in Chapel Hill, according to an announcement by Joe Ward, acting chairman of the University club.

The pep rally for the Carolina-State game will begin at 7:30, followed by a street dance, co-sponsored by the Chapel Hill-Carrboro Merchants association.

"The street dance is something new," Ward stated. "We are expecting a large crowd down on Pittsboro street, which will be roped off down as far as the police station."

One of the highlights of the dance will be the presentation of the Homecoming Queen during intermission. She will present a cup to the winning organization for the best house decorations during half-time of the Saturday classic. The displays will be judged by a special committee appointed by the University club.

The club has had two successful planning meetings for the important weekend events, according to Ward.

Stray Greeks Set Meeting Tonight

A meeting of the Stray Greeks, an organization composed of sorority women whose chapters are not represented on this campus, will be held tonight in Alderman hall at 7 o'clock.

The primary purpose of the meeting is to discuss financial matters and to select a sponsor for this year's Yack.

Officers of the Stray Greeks for this year are: Molly Craig, president; Beth Deaton, vice-president; Alice Sharp, secretary; Lindsay Tate, treasurer; and Molly Craig and Kay Holding, Panhellenic representatives. Mrs. Cobb, housemother of Alderman hall, is their sponsor.

The Stray Greeks were organized in 1945, under the leadership of Twig Branch, the first president. The group now has 25 members, representing 9 sororities.

Shmoos Take Off On Food Mission Into Frankfurt

NEW YORK, Oct. 13—(UP)—One hundred shmoos took off for Berlin from LaGuardia field today on "Operation Do Good."

They were "parashmoopers" ready to float down over the city and turn into food packages for hungry Germans.

Their creator, Al Capp, author of the comic strip "Li'l Abner," handed a carton of 12-inch plastic shmoos to the crew of an American overseas airlines flagship for delivery to the 17th Military Air Transport squadron in Frankfurt.

It was Lt. Col. James Haun of the airlift outfit who cabled recently, "Will you ship by air immediately one dozen shmoos to the 17th Military Air Transport squadron rein main. We will fly subject shmoos to Berlin at once and assure world crisis will be ended immediately."

The parashmoopers will be dropped by the 17th over Berlin. Each German who picks one up can trade it for a package of food at the CARE office in Berlin.

Other shmoos, filled with candy, will find their way to hospitals and orphanages.

Newman Renders Musical Preview Tuesday Oct. 26

Students, faculty, and townspeople who attend the lecture-recital of Dr. William S. Newman in Hill hall, Tuesday, Oct. 26, at 8:30 will get a prehearing of some of the music he is going to play on tour in early November.

Well-known member of the music faculty, Dr. Newman has been scheduled to give 10 concerts in six Midwestern universities, over a period of 12 days. He goes as a "visitor" for the arts program of the American Association of Colleges.

He will also present a lecture recital on "The Sons of Bach" at the annual meetings of the Music Teachers National association during the Christmas holidays. During the summer he gave a series of six lecture-recitals at Juilliard School of Music in New York while teaching graduate music courses at Columbia Teachers college.

From the music played at Juilliard, Dr. Newman has chosen three sonatas for the Tuesday night recital, all of them to be heard here for the first time. Included are a sensitive work by the Italian, Giovanni Platti: a work by W. Rust, a German who figured in one of the most intriguing hoaxes of music history: and an extended expressive sonata by the Frenchman, Vincent d'Indy.

Harland Addresses Whitehead Meeting

Dr. J. P. Harland, head of the Archaeology department, addressed the first meeting this year of the Whitehead Medical society in the Rendezvous room of Graham Memorial Sunday afternoon.

The new officers announced for this year are John Kirkland, president; Spinx Marsh, vice-president: Charles Melchoir, secretary; and Maxine Dark, treasurer.

Hubbard Picks Sixteen Right In Grid Contest

Hampton Hubbard, Box 348, was the winner in the first 1948 Graham Memorial football contest last Saturday. Hubbard distinguished himself by picking 16 out of 20 winners and predicting the score to be 28-7 in the Carolina—Wake Forest game, only one point off.

Four others tied Hubbard in the number of winners, but were further off in their prediction of the score. Leslie Yelverton, T. S. Adams, J. F. Colvard and Charlie Kauffman were the other experts last week.

For his winning efforts, Hubbard will receive a carton of Chesterfield cigarettes through the courtesy of the campus Chesterfield representative and a pass to the local theatre.

Other standouts in last week's contest were O. H. Allen, who picked 15 winners and got the exact score: Kenneth Moore, Harold Rollins, S. W. Miller and Richard Sutton, all of whom picked the exact score in the Wake Forest game. Seven others picked the Missouri—SMU upset and one person correctly picked the Oklahoma—Texas reversal.

Harris Exhibiting Painting Collection

Kenneth Harris, professional artist of Chapel Hill, is currently exhibiting his collection of paintings in the Meredith art gallery. The collection includes water colors by Harris, and water colors and sketches by Mrs. Wallace, associate professor of history at Meredith college.

Mrs. Wallace's paintings have been completed since her last showing in September, 1947, and includes a series of lake scenes and sketch books done around Lake Chautauqua.

The gallery is open to the public, including Sunday, during daylight hours, according to Douglas Reynolds, head of the department of art at the college.

Eisenhower Officially Installed As New President of Columbia

NEW YORK, Oct. 12—(UP)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower was installed as 13th president of Columbia university today before an audience that included presidents and representatives of more than 300 of America's leading universities and colleges.

The former Allied supreme commander in Europe formally took over as head of one of the nation's largest universities in a colorful ceremony in Low Memorial library as his wife, son and four brothers looked on.

In his inaugural address, Eisenhower pledged Columbia to present the "full truth" in its primary role of teaching the values of human freedom and warned that education must not become overly engrossed in highly specialized knowledge.

"There will be no administrative suppression or distortion of any subject that merits a place in this university's curricula." he said. "The facts of Communism, for instance, shall be taught here—its ideological development, its political methods, its economic effects, its probable course in the future.

"The truth about Communism is, today, an indispensable requirement if the true values of our democratic system are to be properly assessed."

Garbed in long black robe and mortarboard cap, Eisenhower marched across the campus along with hundreds of other similarly dressed college presidents, including Harold Stassen of Pennsylvania university, Dr. James Bryant Conant of Harvard and Maj. Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, superintendent of the U. S. Military Academy at West Point from which Eisenhower was graduated.

DTH Society Staff Will Hold Meeting

There will be a meeting of all members of the Daily Tar Heel society staff in the kitchen of Graham Memorial today at 3 o'clock.

Chest, Council Goals At $20,000

With their combined goals set at $20,000, workers for the Chapel Hill Community Chest and the Chapel Hill Council of Churches are making final plans for this year's drive which will get underway Sunday afternoon and continue for one week.

For the Community Chest a goal of $12,000 has been set by the evaluation committee, headed by Paul W. Wager. For the campaign for overseas relief funds, sponsored by the Chapel Hill Council of Churches, the goal is $8,000.

Paul Wager Heads Chest Fund Drive

Roy Armstrong, director of admissions for the University, is chairman of this year's drive. He is being assisted by Mrs. U. T. Holmes, president of the Chapel Hill Community council: Mrs. J. B. Linker, collector; Rev. B. B. Munger, representing the Chapel Hill Council of Churches; Mrs. George Shepard, chairman of captains; T. A. Roseman, head of the business section drive: Mrs. Anna P. Cates, who will be in general charge of headquarter's office in Strowd Motor company building.

Mr. A. C. McAllister is acting as permanent treasurer; Collier Cobb has charge of the special gifts section, Mrs. W. W. Pierson is the representative from the executive board of the community council, and Kenneth Jones heads the drive among the colored people of the community.

Question Of Ownership

The following item appears in the current issue of "Future," the official publication of the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce:

An American labor delegation visited the Skoda works in Czechoslovakia. The Americans asked: "To whom does this factory belong?"

"We, the people, own it," said the guides.

"Who owns the machinery?" asked the Americans.

"We, the people, own it," the guides answered.

"Who gets the profits?" the visitors demanded.

"We, the people get them," was the reply.

Then the Americans saw three large cars parked nearby, and asked who owned them. "One is owned by the commissar for defense, the second belongs to the chairman of the worker's committee, and the third to the representative from Moscow who is visiting here," the guides told them.

Then a Skoda delegation arrived in America to tour industrial plants. An American labor leader showed them the Ford factory.

"Who owns this factory?" the visitors asked.

"Mr. Ford does," said the American.

"Who owns the machinery?" they demanded.

"Mr. Ford," they were told.

"Mr. Ford does," said the American.

Then the visitors saw 30,000 cars parked in a nearby lot, and asked: "Who owns all those cars?" The American grinned. Then said: "We, the people, own those cars."

We wish that story could be put before the eyes of every American who is leaning towards Communism. It says so much in so few words.

Get Your Info Here

Who is your choice for President? Are you going to do anything about it? Are you old enough to vote? If so, have you registered?

Most of us do have a preference as to the party and candidate we would like to see in office. And if we were living under conditions which denied us the right to a choice and the right to vote for that choice, we would probably be yelling our heads off about it. Nexertheless, for one reason or another, many of us have neglected to register to vote in November.

Do you know the requirements for voting? Do you know about absentee ballots? From 9 o'clock until 11 today through Friday Students for Democratic Action will man a booth in the Y lobby to give all needed information about voting regulations in most of the 48 states. Get on the stick, troops—election time is coming, and if you don't vote you've got no right to kick about what happens.

Can The Jazz

A carillon's strains, wafting gently across a campus at dusk inspire contemplative moods as a fitting end to a pleasant college day. Our chimes here at Carolina are played with precise skill, but somehow their clear tones when entangled in the tune of "Camptown Races" or "Good Night, Ladies" have a rather incongruous sound, like a harmonica playing a symphony.

Most of the selections are well chosen, however, and certainly well rendered. If only the daily program indicated as much taste as skill and confined the choice of rapid melodies to "Hark the Sound" its effectiveness would be even greater in an inspirational sense. —BF

ON CAMPUS:

NOT THE WHIP! We'll start the day on our knees begging the forgiveness of James O. Pickard, Reynolds Tobacco Company representative, who smokes Camels, NOT Chesterfields. We're terribly sorry we branded Mr. Pickard incorrectly last week. It was just one of those cases when a big, blank page was staring us in the face; and somebody breezed by with a snappy remark that we immediately latched onto.

KRINKLE OR WRINKLE? Helen Hord is just one of the many girls worrying themselves into a tizzy at this point because those goofy, baby-accordian scarves they brought to school are beginning to need something of a cleaning job. The question is, how the dickens does one ever get them back into the pleated stage?

TOPSY-TURVY. It's getting to a pretty bad stage when folks don't know on which side to wear their clothes. And if you don't believe such things happen around here, just talk to Colen Thomas, who went into tail spins when his cable-knit sweater came back from the cleaner's with "holes in it." He blazed a trail to the friend who knitted it for him and turned all shades of purple when he discovered the sweater was merely turned wrong-side-out.

LACK A YACK? Bill Duncan tells us that only a few of last years Yacks are on hand for those students who haven't yet gotten their copy. So don't fail to get yours.

DUCK! Seems as if this is the season for throwing any and everything. Not so long ago it was Wallace and his eggs; Monday Cleveland tossed a lemon at Boston; and, of course, we always have those mud-slinging politicians around. Guess we best get those right arm muscles in shape.

WHO DUNNIT. Bert Kaplan is mighty anxious to thank the yahoodie who has been doing Yack typing from 9 until 10 o'clock every morning. Don't be shy; turn yourself in 'cause Bert is kinda' cute!

FURY TO YOU! Jerry Weiss says to tell you organizations and various and sundry other folks who put on any kind of floor shows or performances that Sound and Fury will be more than somewhat glad to furnish skits—for free!

WE'RE SORRY to hear that Cynthia Johnson's brother, Hooper, got pretty badly smashed up in a wreck Sunday night when he was headed back to Bowman Grey med school.

GET CLIPPED in Graham Memorial's newly opened barber shop if you want to be one of the better trimmed men on campus. The door is open from 8:30 o'clock in the morning 'til six at night.

IN TOWN:

WELCOME HOME, Dr. Jacques Hardre! For those of you who aren't up on the doings around the French department, Dr. Hardre has returned to Carolina after spending the summer studying at the Sorbonne.

NAVY HOURS? Have you noticed the sign hanging on Jeff's door, "We close Mondays at 1 o'clock noon."? No wonder Aggie moved out.

RED HOT and raring to go are the members of Chapel Hill's fire department. Seems they have just got 1000 feet of brand-fired new hose. So when you hear those toots coming over the alarm system, you can bet your saddles there's going to be some real action.

MEETINGS. The Chapel Hill board of aldermen will meet tonight at 8 o'clock in an open session. Guess that means all of us can go, too. Last week, incidentally, they held a special meeting to discuss the bond issue.

UP--First Campus Party

By Lincoln Kan

Within a week or so, the students of this campus will see posters announcing candidates for various offices within our student government structure.

If one talked to the members of the various parties involved in campus politics, he would be amazed at the acrimonious statements about the rival parties which are opposing the party of the gentleman speaking.

This will attempt to be a clear and unbiased analysis of how the three parties on this campus started, what their purposes were and are now, and what may be their future. There will be no attempt to sway readers toward any party.

Some members of the parties which we will discuss may think we are being unjust and biased in the telling of the history of our campus political organizations. We do not intend for the past of any of the three parties mentioned to be linked with their future performances. We have always hoped that they will improve and live up to the ideals they profess.

Since the University Party is the oldest, we shall begin with it. This party had its start back, in the twenties soon after the fling of the "lost generation."

Prior to formation of the party, campus elections were based upon individual support (of roommates and buddies.) In the meantime there was a rapid ascendancy of fraternity men to responsible positions on the campus. In order to insure political prestige, freshly imposed upon the basic social and fraternal purposes of fraternities, and also because the finest leadership was then being found among the "frat" men, the fraternities began to organize and form the first political party on the campus.

Their purpose at the beginning was to insure a student government that would be respected by other colleges in the country by providing the tops in leadership. At that time University enrollment was not what it is today, and it was reasonable that leadership should be taken by a group as long as it satisfied the demands of the remainder of the campus..

During the period of the thirties, the fraternities provided every type of leadership, social, extra-curricular, and in campus politics. The men whom the UP selected, trained and then powered into office were of high caliber. Offices such as the student body presidency, leadership of the Athletic association, Debate council chairmanship and a host of plums belonging solely to the only party on campus which had any organization.

The UP's first defeat came in 1939 when the neophyte Student party made it's appearance and began to take offices once held by the fraternity men. For a long while the UP fought the increasing power of public opinion which regarded only that which was progressive and constructive to be of any worth. Gradually, leadership waned, and when the war came, the UP went into a decline.

When the fraternity men got back to finish their interrupted schooling, they found it difficult to re-entrench themselves without a change of ideas and standards. Even up to 1946, the emphasis of the "greeks" was still on the social aspects of their life. But in the last two years the fraternities have come to realize that they are as much part of the entire campus life as the non-fraternity men. They have come to realize that leadership is expected of them and they are beginning to make their pledges conscious of the fact.

It is fortunate also that in the time elapsing between formation of the UP and the present day, there have been other student political parties arising. The competition has increased and the caliber of the University party men who seek office has improved because of rivalry.

Presidential Comments

Numbered In The Missing

By Jess Dedmond

The University club has been conspicuous for its absence from the campus during the past three week-ends. The reason has probably been two-fold. First, Chuck Voight, its last president, left school in the last academic year; and Emile Saleeby, its vice-president, has been incapacitated due to illness. The other officers are either gone or are too deeply involved in their own affairs to revive the organization. Second, it is understood that Norm Sper has his own rally committee to perform the task of whipping up school spirit and does not want the University club to function for this purpose.

It should be pointed out that the student constitution provides for the University club. Because of this I must insist that it perform its duty. The work of organizing pep rallies and meeting visiting teams may well be done by the club in cooperation with Norm's rally committee as is provided for in the constitution. But the club cannot fail in its responsibility under the constitution to take an active interest and part in this work.

It is encouraging to note that by the initiative of Joe Pete Ward and Tookie Hodgson a meeting was called on Monday night. Traditionally the club has made an annual award for the best Homecoming day decoration. This year it will have little time to arrange for this. Also the services of the club were badly needed in organizing the University day celebration yesterday. Any success the activity had was certainly not because of the University club's activity.

The campus will be looking to a rejuvenated club for leadership in school spirit this year. The time for its rejuvenation is now.

A smoldering fire of student sentiment still burns as a result of the scuttling of the Emerson field scuttlebutt Many students have asked me to sponsor a boycott of the present Monogram club facilities. This I will not do as it seems to me that nothing is to be gained thereby. However, like all students, I feel that the administration owes students a full explanation of the situation and whatever adjustments are necessary in keeping with student welfare and sound finance. Never before in my career at Carolina has student sentiment been so flagrantly flouted by our administration. An honest explanation should be forthcoming.

Today almost every progressive or liberal thought or action—every demand by the American people for peace, lower prices, decent social legislation and civil liberties, and, indeed, every effort to resist the onslought of a growing corporation dictatorship in our country, is branded "Communist." The increasing success of this gargantuan conspiracy against American Democracy by our native imperialists is forcing decent, thinking Americans into a choice of one of two alternatives: One, accepting total regimentation and control of our government and our lives by a corporation monopoly dictatorship (which is the essence of Fascism) and resigning ourselves to going down the road so recently traversed by Hitler's Nazi Germany. Two, rejecting this stampede toward Fascism and war by a concerted campaign to awaken the American people to the danger of accepting as bad everything promiscuously labeled as "Communist."

I, for one, choose the latter course, knowing full well that the great majority of social advances made by our country were, at one time or other, called Communist.

To better understand the source of the fantastic Red-smear campaign, it may help to read what one of its most ardent proponents has to say about it, as published in Liberty magazine a few years back. The writer is that great rugged individualist, the late Al Capone, then of Alcatraz: "Bolshevism is knocking at our gates. We cannot afford to let it in. We've got to organize ourselves against it and put our shoulders together and hold fast. We must keep America whole, safe and unspoiled. We must keep the worker away from Red literature and Red ruses; we must see that his mind remains healthy."

Being an eminently successful business man, Mr. Capone spoke of Communism with authority as, being afflicted with paresis, he knew a healthy mind when he saw one.

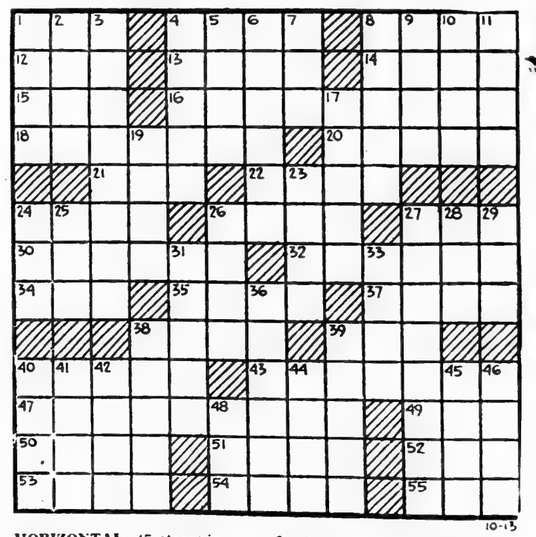
Politics Is Politics

By Charlie Joyner

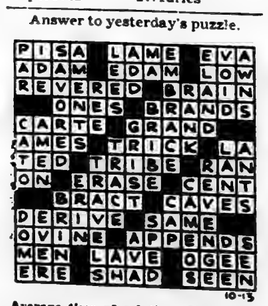


Upon returning to school this year, my roommates and I learned that a member of the student legislature had been assigned to our room. When he didn't show up the first several days, we didn't worry, but after seeing "Rope" at friend E. Carrington Smith's local Popcorn Paladium (" Rope" was one of our friend's flickers) we rushed back to the room to see if the Legislature had anything to do with raising the stink from our windowseat (Yes, we really have a windowseat.) It turned out to be a rat, and not the legislator, so we began to make inquiries as to what had become of the character.

Now, as you know, it is necessary for a dormitory representative to live in a dorm, which seems to us to be a reasonable requirement. The representative in question, however, had decided he wanted to live in his fraternity house, but he was willing to pay rent on a dormitory room to establish legal (?) residence there. He says he was carrying on this little white subterfuge only to please his mother, who didn't want him to live in the fraternity house. This may well be true, but whatever his reasons, we felt that if we were living in a quonset hut, we wouldn't like the set-up too well.

The situation has been cleared up now that the Senator has moved in with us, and again we have four men in our room, and a clear conscience. Still, it would have been nice to have more room and less rent, Senator. We appreciate what you were trying to do.

A friend of mine happened to be walking behind the head linesman as he left the Carolina-Wake Forest game Saturday, and he couldn't help overhearing the discussion, which concerned the Demon Deacon right end, Earl Bradley. Bradley, as everyone on the Carolina side could plainly see, had been lining up off-sides during almost the entire game, and my friend interrupted to ask why this hadn't been called. Well, he was told, Bradley wasn't charging off-sides—he was lining up off sides!



That's earl, brother!

By BILLY CARMICHAEL III

Copyright 1948, The Daily Tar Heel.

Those Who've Gone

THEY'VE HAD A LOT OF FOOTBALL players at Carolina since the University introduced the sport some many years ago. Most of these have come and gone, known only to those of their own day as the stars that they were. A few live on to be glorified and talked about whenever and wherever Tar Heels gather, but even these few seldom received the after plaudits they rightfully deserved.

That is one of the fallacies of the American sporting picture. You're here today and gone tomorrow with no one but Bill Stern to remember the day you singlehandily established the glory of Carolina while thousands all but tore the stadium to the ground chunk by chunk.

Carolina, with the rest of its tradition, has had its great football stars who live today only in the minds of some of the elders and possibly on a few feet of treasured film stacked away in a vault somewheres. One such Tar Heel is Andy Bershak.

Opportunity Knocks

ANDY WAS ALL THAT TYPIFIES Carolina. He came from little—a poor, but respectable family in a small coal town of Pennsylvania. He was smart, alert and he could play football. Bershak got his chance in life through Big Time football. It offered him a college education in return for services to be rendered on the Carolina gridiron.

Andy came to Carolina when the University was at half its present size, but it was still large and cosmopolitan for a fellow who had not known too many of the pleasures and comforts of life. He must have felt funny those first few days and even a little out of place, surrounded by many who had come to college for fun more than education.

He received a pleasant surprise, though, when he found that he would be accepted for what he did at Carolina, not for who he was or from where he was. He was a student of the University of North Carolina with all the privileges and opportunities offered to anyone else.

The College Try

ANDY DIDN'T MISS his assignment on this biggest play of his life. He rivalled his All-American on the gridiron with All-Academic performance in the classroom. He tackled Phi Beta Kappa and made this team in a walk. He even found time to help his less endowed team mates to solve the intricacies of college work.

On the playing field he played as he did everything else—with heart and soul. On offense, he blocked with fervor and seldom missed anything in the nature of a pass that was thrown in his direction. His defensive play was a marvel to behold, the crashing type of end play that only those of the All-American stature can execute with any degree of success.

He would knife on one play to tackle a ball carrier, who was left wondering from hence this streak of lightning had come. A few plays later with the enemy moving his way in full strength, he would roll the flurry of interference and many times even reach far enough to spill the man with the ball. His "59" proved many times to be the number that was up for Tar Heel opponents.

His play was clean and hard. He knew and understood not only the mechanics of the game, but the fundamental principles behind the greatest contact sport the world has ever known. Bershak was truly a ball player's ball player.

Break of The Game

ANDY GRADUATED WITH the majority of the honors his school could afford him. But he couldn't and didn't leave the place he had come to love so dearly. He remained a name in Tar Heel football—a coaching name—and became one of South's leading scouts.

Tragedy then suddenly interceded. Andy Bershak was the victim of an incurable disease. He carried on at Chapel Hill as long as it was possible. Then he went home to die.

I remember the night I heard that Andy Bershak was dead. It was the eve of a Duke-Carolina game and a crowd of Tar Heel rooters had packed Memorial hall to lend assistance to an underdog Carolina of which Andy would have loved to have been a part.

Some tearful person rose and made the simple statement that Andy Bershak had died that morning. There were no "Win this one for old Andy"; in fact, the Tar Heels were beaten by Duke the following day. Carolina had lost an individual, but to balance the books, gained a new spirit.

An Ending in Sight

THE STORY HAS AN ENDING. And a satisfying one at that. The spirit that Andy Bershak personified at Carolina will go on in the form of a living memorial—a scholarship to give others without the opportunity a chance at a real start in life.

The fraternities of the University have banded together to offer a four-year full scholarship that after the initial four-year period will maintain four students in the University at the time. The Interfraternity council has deemed that the grant-in-aid will bear the name of the Andy Bershak memorial scholarship to carry forth the ideals of a great Tar Heel.

No monetary subsidy, however large, can take the place of an individual, however small. It can, though, remind us of the athletic and academic standards set by those who went before.

Tar Heels Ranked First In AP Football Poll

National Scribes Give Locals Edge Over Notre Dame

The Associated Press, in the second of its weekly football rating polls, picked Carolina's Tar Heels as the top team in the nation yesterday. Carolina jumped from last week's second place behind Notre Dame to a firm top spot, 20 points ahead of Notre Dame.

A total of 153 sports writers from coast to coast participated in the poll, giving the Tar Heels 1,200 points and the second-place Irish 1,180. Northwestern finished third with 1,172 points and the fourth spot went to Michigan, 49-0 conqueror of Purdue, with 1,103 points. Army was far behind in fifth with 733 points.

The AP writers gave the Tar Heels 52 first place votes, three less than they received the previous week. Notre Dame received 34 firsts, 16 less than last week. Carolina was placed somewhere on every one of the 153 ballots except one.

Preparation for Saturday's Homecoming clash with N. C. State entered the second day for the Tar Heels yesterday afternoon on Navy field. Coach Carl Snavely continued to drill his charges long and hard with the accent on the offensive phase of the battle.

Choo Choo Charlie Justice teamed with Hosea Rodgers and Billy Maceyko in a spirited passing drill that saw the Carolina aerial attack click with great accuracy. The Tar Heel ground offensive came in for its share of brushing up also with Justice, Rodgers and Wee Johnny Clements figuring largely in the overland attack.

Pass Defense

King Carl did not concentrate entirely on offense, however, as a goodly part of yesterday afternoon was spent on pass defense and line play. The Wolfpack hasn't shown much in the way of an offense thus far in the season, despite the fact that they romped over Davidson's hapless Wildcats by a 40-0 score last week. The State ground attack netted them very little, and the Wolves' passing tactics were little better. In this instance the old adage of a good defense being the best offense was certainly true, but unless the Statemen come up with a greatly improved team on Saturday they might get another dose of the bitter medicine handed them by the Tar Heels in last year's encounter in West Raleigh.

The Tar Heels should be in top physical condition for the game with the exception of Wingback Fred Sherman and Blockingback Don Hartig. Sherman was injured in last week's Wake Forest tussle and Hartig, who suffered a torn ligament in his knee two weeks ago, is out for the remainder of the season.

GET RESERVED SEAT

Passbooks and ID cards will be required for entrance for the State-Carolina game Saturday. Freshmen and new students are cautioned that after having their coupon detached they must get a reserved seat stub at the window before entering the stadium.

Carolina Soccer Team To Face Nation's Top Stars on Friday

By Larry Fox

Three names, which are famous up in Baltimore will probably make a great impression on Tar Heel soccer enthusiasts by the time night falls Friday afternoon and the Carolina-Loyola contest has reached its conclusion.

Biggest, as well as longest, of the names belongs to Nick Kropfelder, rated by many as the best center forward in the business. Tar Heels who remember last season's 4-0 debacle are inclined to agree, for Kropfelder only tallied three of the quartet of markers, one of them a 50-yard boot.

In addition to pacing the collegiate ranks, Kropfelder was high scorer in the National Professional Soccer league last season with the Baltimore Americans. According to rules in force then, but recently rescinded, an amateur player could compete with a professional team if he was signed to an amateur contract.

More Pro Play

The high scoring forward is slated for action with the Americans as soon as the collegiate season draws to a close.

Kropfelder missed making the U. S. Olympic eleven when he had a bad day in the final tryouts in St. Louis after advancing to the last hurdle.

Bill Lintz is another Loyola booter ticketed for service with the pro Americans at the close of the current campaign. He played inside forward last season, but will be making the transition to halfback this year.

6-4-1 Record

In spite of their abundance of name stars, Loyola didn't have a particularly outstanding season last year. However, its 6-4-1 record was better than it seems.

Playing top-notch soccer outfits, Loyola bowed only to West Chester, Pa., Rider college, Washington college, and Virginia. All but the first defeat were by one point. West Chester triumphed by 3-1.

The Tar Heels spent most of yesterday afternoon scrimmaging, the first team against the reserves. Earlier in the afternoon the first stringers practiced certain play situations, such as goal kicks while the remainder of the team engaged in an intra-squad contest.

TENNIS MEETING

There will be a meeting of all participants in the fall quarter intramural open division tennis tournament at the varsity tennis courts at 2:30 Wednesday afternoon. Charlie Rice will represent the intramural department and will arrange first round matches in both the singles and doubles division of the open tournament. In case of rain the meeting will be in Woollen gym.

PROTEST COMMITTEE

There will be a meeting of the Protest Committee at the Intramural office in 311 Woollen Thursday, October 13 at 3 o'clock.

Game Broadcast

The Carolina-State homecoming game here on Saturday will be broadcast by the Columbia Broadcasting system over its national network. CBS sports director Red Barber will be on hand to handle the play-by-play.

Here Is Summary Of Games Played In Mural Leagues

The Intramural Tag football league underwent its second full day of both dormitory and fraternity competition yesterday. All the previously idle dorm teams swung into action, and the results of the frat play produced some early loop leaders.

In the fraternity league, Chi Phi 1, Lambda Chi 2, Phi Gam 1, and Zeta 2 won their clashes and remained among the front-runners of this still budding season. Chi Phi 1 defeated Phi Delta Chi on Jim White's TD, 7-0, while Lambda Chi 2 romped in the second half to swamp Sig Eps, 25-6. Robinson Hicks scored a touchdown that was enough to nip KA 1 for Phi Gam 1, 6-2, and Zeta 2 maintained its pace by taking SAE 2 by the score of 12-0.

Other fraternity action resulted in the initial victory for Chi Psi, defending campus champion, which slaughtered KA 2, 40-0. Jim Kelly kicked four extra points despite the handicap of having his hand in a cast. TEP gained its first win over the Phi Delt 2, 15-6, and Delta Sigma shaded DKE 1, 12-0.

In the dormitory games, Whitehead came back strong in the second half behind the efforts of Bill Slack and beat the AROTC 2, 25-12 in a feature contest. The Mud Dobbers scored early to take the Hut Dwellers, 13-0 while both Law and Med School 2 emerged victorious over their respective foes, Law over Miller, 7-0, and the Meds over QH 9, 6-0.

WAA Sports Card, Plans, Activities Released for Fall

By Wuff Newell

Coed volleyball practice will be held every afternoon this week in preparation for the games which will be played Tuesday and Thursday nights in Women's gym.

Each dorm and sorority may enter as many teams as it wishes. Names of players on each team must be turned into WAA by this afternoon at four. At this time representatives from each dorm and sorority will meet to draw for their team schedule.

No girl may play for both her dorm and sorority in any sports that are being played during the same season.

Play in the tennis tournament begins today, and each dorm and sorority may enter as many participants as it wishes. In the totaling of points for the trophy, however, each group will receive credit for only ten entrants.

Hockey Practice

For coeds who wish to practice for hockey intramurals, the hockey club will meet every Tuesday and Thursday at four. These practice games are mainly for girls who have a fundamental knowledge of the game but need to become better players.

Coeds interested in joining the hockey club are asked to sign on a paper which has been placed in Women's gym.

The Splash Club, which meets each Monday at seven, will hold its first meeting next week. Tryouts will be held for new girls, and all old members are asked to attend.

Swimming intramurals will be held later in the quarter

Carolina Is President

Because Carolina is president college of the North Carolina Athletic Federation of College Women this group will meet at the University this spring. Representatives from the Athletic Associations of every member college in the state will attend the meeting.

As president college, Carolina will schedule all playdays throughout the state. One will be here sometime this fall.

Individual records are being kept this year on each girl and her participation in intramurals, clubs, sports days, demonstrations, or as an officer. At their spring picnic the WAA will present awards on the basis of points earned in this participation.

Blazers will be awarded to the three senior girls who contributed most to the association. Letters and numerals will be awarded to other participants.

To the dorm or sorority that has accumulated the greatest number of points will go the all sports trophy. Pi Beta Phi has won the trophy both years that it has been awarded.

GI Temporarily Lifts Soviet Berlin Blockade

BERLIN, Oct. 12.—(UP)—A U.S. Army Sergeant, using soft soap and phony props on Russian troops, temporarily lifted the Soviet blockade of Berlin last week, it was disclosed today. Staff Sgt. Felling, 26 year old combat veteran of McCook, Neb., drove his automobile over the main highway from Frankfurt to the former German capital.

"I just wanted my automobile up here in Berlin," he explained. "It wasn't doing me any good down in Frankfurt." Felling appeared unimpressed by the fact he had done what Western diplomats had been unable to do.

Twenty-five feasting Russians permitted Felling to cash in on a 1000 to 1 chance when he showed them his "special credentials"—automobile insurance papers and a four-language U. S. Army pass authorizing him to be absent from his billet.

He had been unable to get a Russian permit for the trip.

Felling drove his automobile over the blockaded Berlin highway.

Second Negro May Attempt Registration

NORMAN, Okla., Oct. 13. — (UP)—G. W. McLaurin completed his enrollment at the University of Oklahoma today and the organization which sponsored his fight to gain entry said another Negro would apply for enrollment shortly.

McLaurin signed up for 12 credit hours of classwork and was instructed to appear at 2 o'clock tomorrow for his first lessons. All his classes will be held in one room, 104 Education building. It appeared that the university would arrange for him to sit in a room with whites but not in a chair next to them.

The room was being remodeled today but officials would not explain how it was being arranged.

Amos Hall, Tulsa, attorney for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said the group plans to have a Negro woman who sought admission to the university last spring renew her application in view of McLaurin's victory over segregation policies.

The woman, Mauderie Hancock Wilson, is now employed as a secretary in Oklahoma City. She wants to study social sciences in the OU graduate school.

McLaurin expressed complete satisfaction at the reception given him here today.

"Everything seems to be natural and usual and I really enjoyed being here today," said the 54-year-old one-time college professor. "I am pleased with the way the university officials have received me and their attitude in giving me information."

Allen Says Street Dance Will Not Be Held Friday

By Lincoln Kan

Coach Marvin Allen, newly appointed chairman of the Faculty Dance committee said last night that the pre-game street dance scheduled after tomorrow night's pep rally had been cancelled.

Allen said, "It would be extremely difficult to enforce the Dance committee regulations in an open area. In addition it would be hard to keep the dance at the same level as the usual University dances, because of the unlimited attendance expected."

Vic Huggins, president of the Chapel Hill-Carrboro Merchants association which was to have sponsored the dance, commented, "We are sorry to hear the news; however, we wish to abide by the administration regulations. We will cooperate in any way possible if in the future similar plans are contemplated."

The change of plans will cancel the proposed dance contest which would have netted the winners a set of free movie tickets for an entire week at the Carolina theater, donated by E. Carrington Smith.

Norm Sper, head cheerleader, announced that the beauty contest originally scheduled to be held at the street dance will be judged instead at the pep rally which will still be held in Memorial hall 7:30 Friday night. CBS Announcer Red Barber has been invited to participate.

Each sorority and woman's dormitory may select three girls to participate in the contest. The winner will be announced before Saturday's game and "Miss North Carolina," Patsy Osborn, is expected to crown the Homecoming queen with a garland to proclaim her reign.

Dean E. L. Mackie, Dean Fred Weaver, Dean K. K. Carmichael, Mrs. Carl Snavely and Jess Dedmond, president of the student body, are expected to be the judges at the beauty contest at the rally. The entries will wear evening clothes.

Another feature of the Homecoming activities will be the Homecoming Cup competition for the best display by fraternities and sororities. Joe Ward, acting University club chairman, reminded participants that the $2 entrance fee must be in by 8 o'clock this evening. All fees should be turned in to Ward between 11 and 12 o'clock at the Y or at the Sigma Nu house this afternoon.

Graham to Speak

The freshman class will hear Dr. Frank Porter Graham, president of the Greater University, speak at freshman assembly today.

Although Dr. Graham was scheduled to speak to the incoming freshman when they arrived, University affairs prevented him from appearing.

It is expected that he will arrive in time today from an important trip to New York to speak to the freshmen.

President Truman and Gov. Thomas E. Dewey stumped the Midwest yesterday, swapping angry charges of double-talk and incompetence.

Swinging through Wisconsin and Minnesota, Mr Truman unleashed his most furious attack on the Republican presidential nominee so far in a nationwide broadcast from St. Paul, Minn.

Accusing Dewey of trying to win the election with "catch phrases" and "mealy-mouthed political speeches," he said Dewey has "little foresight" in world affairs and that it would be too risky to entrust the white house and bi-partisan foreign policy to "recent converts who now come along and say 'me too, but I can do it better.'"

The New York governor, campaigning through Oklahoma, assailed the "incredible incompetence" of the Truman administration and pledged that, if elected, he would give the country government adn foreign policy so strong "that no dictator will dare attack us."

Their invective was matched by their supporters around the country.

Chairman J. Howard McGrath of the Democratic national committee accused Dewey of endangering bi-partisan efforts for peace by "loose talk."

Fraternity Bids Available Today

Freshmen, transfer students and all other men students may pick up fraternity rushing bids at Gerrard hall today and tomorrow from 10 o'clock in the morning until 5 o'clock in the afternoon.

Unlike last year's procedure, each man is directly responsible for picking up his own bids. The fraternities will not deliver them. Last year was the first time the other method was ever used, and it was decided not to continue the practice this year.

Interfraternity council spokesmen said yesterday that all freshmen and other students should check by Gerrard hall to ascertain whether or not they have received bids to visit any fraternities, even if tney are not expecting any bids.

Formal rushing for the fall quarter will begin on Sunday from 7 o'clock until 9:30 in the evening, and between the same hours on Monday and Tuesday.

Then an informal rush period of a week and one half will follow, from Wednesday through Sunday, Oct. 31. Men may visit fraternity houses between 2 o'clock and 8 o'clock any day during the time except Fridays and Saturdays.

On Monday, Nov. 1, the second formal rushing period begins. The hours on Monday will be 7 o'clock until 9:30, and on Tuesday, which is shake-up day, from 7 o'clock until 10:30. This is a correction of the printed rush period rules which state that the second formal rushing period lasts through Wednesday, Nov. 3.

Fraternity rushing rules explicitly state that all rushees are forbidden to signify their intentions to pledge any fraternity until the official shake-up day, Nov. 2. A violation of this rule can result in the ineligibility of the rushee to pledge any fraternity for a period of six months.

Final bids to pledge a fraternity will be issued in Gerrard hall on Thursday, Nov. 4.

CHARLES OLIPHANT

Revenue Counsel To Speak Tonight In Gerrard Hall

Charles Oliphant, chief counsel for the Bureau of Internal Revenue, will speak this evening at 7:30 in Gerrard hall, Mike Carr, president of the Law School association, said yesterday.

Tax policies of the United States and the lawyer's opportunities in government service will be the general theme of Oliphant's talk.

The speaker, a native of Indiana, received his L.L.B. degree from the University of Maryland in 1934. Since completing his work there, Oliphant has been associated with the Federal Land Bank, the Regional Agricultural association and the Farm Credit administration. He was confirmed chief counsel by the U.S. Senate March 29, 1948.

Other speakers brought to the campus by the association include former governor J. C. Ehringhaus, Senator Clyde R. Hoey, Joseph O'Connell, chairman of the Civil Aeronautics board, and David Lilienthal, chairman of the Atomic Energy commission.

The public is cordially invited to attend tonight's meeting.

Gives Facts On Inflation Before 600

By Sam McKeel

Stating "I am in favor of a short term offense, even at the risk of war, in order to insure peace," Marriner Eccles last night depressed a Hill hall audience of 600 with his pessimistic view of the future.

"Unless the present generation does better in the future than my generation has done so far, I can't be very optimistic about the future of the world," Eccles said.

Speaking on inflation, its causes, effects and cures, Eccles spoke under the auspices of the Carolina Forum and the Carolina Political Union.

"Our postwar inflation," Eccles said, "is traceable in the first instance to the excessive money supply which we created to finance war. The adjustment of a peacetime economy to this large money supply almost inevitably would have involved some general price increase." "The transition could have been eased by a continuation of direct controls," he said, "for a period after the war until the supply of goods had been reestablished. But we took off our direct controls and let prices go their own way, which was upward."

"The amount of money we had when the war started was about one-third of what we had when it ended," Eccles said. "Unless federal expenditures are cut, or taxes increased, we face a budgetary deficit next year."

Speaking of price controls during the war Eccles said "Price controls were ineffective, unworkable, and played right into the hands of the black market. Millions of dollars were made after controls were taken off. Black marketeers strongly advocated price controls, just like bootleggers strongly advocate prohibition."

"We need now to do something to bring our monetary inflation under control," he said. "Admittedly, the Federal Reserve could check the inflation by abandoning its support of the government securities market. This would be very strong medicine indeed."

Other courses of action should be tried first, Eccles added. Additional authority should be granted to the Federal Reserve System by Congress, so that the Federal Reserve could offset the credit-easing effects of sales by institutional holders of Government securities.

"We need to restore a budget surplus by increasing tax revenues and decreasing government expenditures," Eccles said. Obviously government expenditures cannot be decreased in the present international crisis."

Grail Dance Is Scheduled For Saturday

A dance, with members of the next North Carolina State and Tar Heel football squads as honor guests, will be given Saturday night from 8:30 to 12 o'clock in Woollen gymnasium, sponsored by the Order of the Grail.

Admission will be $1 per couple or stag, and the student body at State has been invited to attend. Johnny Satterfield and his orchestra will play. There will be no advance sale of tickets.

The Grail will sponsor dances on Saturday nights following all home games, except the German weekend, a policy reactivated since the war.

Deadline Tonight For Yack Contest

The deadline for all entries in the Yackety Yack beauty contest is 6 o'clock this evening, yearbook officials warned stragglers yesterday.

The name, address, telephone number and $3 for each entry must be turned into the Yack office, Graham Memorial, before the deadline.

John Powers, well - known model-moulder and beauty judge, will choose the queen and her court. The crowning will take place in Woollen gymnasium at the Grail dance Nov. 20.

The queen and her attendants will appear in the 1949 edition of the Yack. Each girl, photographed by Laverne Johnson, beauty photographer for the book, will be given a full page.

Library Group Names Officers

J. I. Copeland was named president of the University Library Staff association at a meeting Tuesday afternoon.

Other officers named were Mrs. Margie Jo Fortescue, treasurer, and Miss Jean Ericson, secretary.

Plans for the year include entertaining the Duke library staff.

Dedmond To Discuss 'State Of The Campus'

Student Body President Jess Dedmond will deliver his annual "State of the Campus" address tonight before the Student Legislature at 7:30 in Di hall.

Dedmond said yesterday that he will make recommendations for the improvement of the financial structure of student government. It is expected that he will ask for an increase in the student block fee structure, and will call for the abolition of the appelate power of the Student council to review cases tried by the honor councils.

As part of the president's program the following bills will be introduced on the floor tonight with his approval: (1) A measure to give the Budget committee more power in the financial structure of student government: (1) A bill providing for the establishment of a National Students association committee on campus. (3) A bill to make the office of attorney general permanent. At present this office is filled at the discretion of the president.

A bill will also be introduced providing for the conducting of freshman elections.

Two Student party nominations for vacancies in the Legislature will be passed on by the group: Dortch Warriner to replace Dick Allsbrook and Jim Southerland to replace Bob Allen.

State Director Of Unemployment To Discuss Jobs

Earnest C. McCracken, director of the State Unemployment service, will speak this evening at 8 o'clock in room 103 Bingham hall on "Job Trends and Opportunities in North Carolina."

McCracken's address is the first program being presented by a group of students who are reactivating Alpha Kappa Psi professional fraternity on the campus. All students and faculty members are invited to attend.

The meeting is designed particularly for commerce students who will be seeking jobs in industry and business upon graduation.

Court Is Asked To Nullify Act

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13—(UP) The Supreme Court was asked today to declare unconstitutional the Portal-to-Portal Pay act of 1947.

American, British Foreign Policies In Wrong Direction, States Frazer

Prof. K. C. Frazer of the Department of Political Science told members of the International Relations club Tuesday night that American and British foreign policy would best be directed toward evacuating Berlin.

"There is no point in our staying in Berlin," he said. "This has become a matter of strategy, not of appeasement. To clarify this point: We have two men—one sitting in an armchair smoking a cigarette, the other in the center of a table standing on his head—the question being which one can hold out longer.

"I do not intimate that Soviet activities elsewhere in Eastern Europe and in other parts of the world have not been agressive—they most certainly have. However, the conflict over Berlin is an episode in a world-wide contest. The occupation of Berlin," Prof. Frazer maintained, "does not involve the prestige of the Western Powers. The present situation is the result of decisions reached by powers who were at the moment united. The policies of the Russians and the Western Allies no longer coincide."

Colclough Talk Slated Tonight

A large audience is anticipated for an address this evening by George D. Colclough, secretary of the Burlington Chamber of Commerce.

Colclough's speech, highlighting the first meeting of Delta Sigma Pi, professional commerce fraternity, will begin at 7:30 in the banquet room of the Carolina Inn.

After the meeting, an informal smoker will be held at the house, 211 Pittsboro street, to which all commerce students are invited.

Women Smoking More Cigarettes

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—(UP)—The government sees nothing but good times ahead for tobacco growers, because more women are smoking more cigarets than ever before. And they start younger than Mother did.

At least, that's the expert opinion of Authur G. Conover, an Agriculture department statistician who discussed tobacco today at a conference on the outlook for crops between now and 1954.

Officers Announced For Pi Kappa Alpha

New officers of Pi Kappa Alpha were elected or appointed by President Len Szafaryn at the last meeting of the fraternity, as follows: Wallace Kirby, secretary; Bill Allison, master-at-arms; Ed "Pappy" Darnell, pledgemaster; Ed Moran, rush captain; Duke Willard, correspondent and alumni secretary; Joseph Maurice and Duke Willard historians; and George Miller, assistant dining room manager.

Freshmen Council Of YM To Meet

The YM Freshmen Council will meet at 7 o'clock this evening in Room 304 of Woollen gymnasium. A temporary chairman and committees for the year's work will be elected. For entertainment two movies will be shown.

At the first meeting held last Wednesday, the Council discussed the Y program and the freshman program.

All freshmen are invited to attend this meeting.

Engineer Says Dewey 'Just as Dumb as Me'

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Oct. 11—(UP)—Lee Tindle, 54, locomotive engineer who backed Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's campaign train into a crowd last night, said today he was sorry about the incident but that he didn't believe Dewey should have called him a "lunatic."

He said Dewey was "just about as dumb as I was to make a mistake like that."

However, he said Dewey's remark would not influence his vote in the November election.

"I wasn't going to vote for him anyway," Tindle said.

The incident occurred last night when the train stopped at Beaucoup, Ill. About 1,000 persons crowded around the rear of the train to hear Dewey. Suddenly the train jerked and started backwards.

Lem Whitsett Is Elected President Of Charlotte Club at First Meeting

Lem Whitsett was elected president of the Charlotte-Carolina club at the group's first meeting Tuesday night in Gerrard hall.

Other officers chosen include John Pyron, vice-president; Rita Adams, secretary, and Bob Kirby, treasurer.

Monroe Landreth, retiring president, presided at the opening session. He was warmly applauded by the members for his work the past two years. Lem Whitsett gave the treasurer's report on the financial condition of the club, which sponsored two large dances in Charlotte last year.

Plans for the traditional Christmas dance will be worked out by the new officers and special committees at an early date. The Charlotte-Carolina club cotillion is a highlight of the yuletide season. It was also announced that the club has 306 members on the campus this year, a new record.

We Can Do It Again

In previous years the University produced the best debating teams in this section of the country. Then for a period interest waned and the University's reputation for forensic excellence died. Last year debating was again instituted and the squad won about half its matches.

New life was injected into debating as a major activity last winter when Earl Fitzgerald and the Debate council set up the first intramural debate tournament. The program drew immediate interest, with 75 participants representing dormitories, fraternities and organizations taking part.

Announcement has been made that the tournament will be held again this year on November 16, 17 and 18, and that tomorrow is the deadline for organizations to enter teams.

Since the subject is the same as that of the intercollegiate debates — federal aid to education — the intramural tournament should produce several promising candidates for the varsity teams, and if as much interest is shown this year as last, the University should soon again be in the forensic limelight.

Students who wish to take part in the tournament should see their intramural managers right away.

If the World Goes Poof

Beethoven produced his mighty symphonies to compensate for his deafness and lack of success with women. Byron was a poet of merit, an athlete of note, and a success with womankind by virtue of a club foot. Thomas Hardy, one presumes for lack of concrete information in the matter, authored his excellent tomes because he hated his mother—or loved his school teacher.

At any rate, the psychologists and psychiatrists would have us believe that these men's deficiencies caused them to over-compensate to a point that they became great men as a consequence. There is no need to argue with them. As a matter of fact, it may be a good thing they brought it up. It helps establish a little authoritative background for the following:

Man would become great to compensate for a subconscious knowledge of his own insignificance.

Man is to the world what fleas are to a dog; they would destroy their host. The world is to this particular suburb of the universe it occupies what that flea-ridden dog would be to, say, Pilot Point, Texas. The world is to the galactic rural district it occupies what Pilot Point is to the hemisphere. And that galactic rural district is to the galaxy what the western hemisphere is to a Trappist monk in Tibet.

Now, man does not consciously realize how insignificant he really is in this "scheme of things," but, subconsciously, he does. Just as Beethoven, Byron, and Hardy did not realize they were great men because of their deficiencies—not in spite of them—man does not realize that, because of his insignificance, he is causing a considerable amount of uproar way out here in this hinterland he tenants.

Some of the more nervous confide that they fear for the universe if this atomic bomb business is permitted to continue. Their contention is that setting off too many such bombs will start a "chain reaction" which will cause the world to go poof and float off in the form of cosmic dust.

What difference would it make? Like the Trappist monk, in the event of the Pilot Point dog's death, the universe would not be disturbed.

And it should prove the greatest show yet produced by man—provided its advance critics give it a chance to run!

Odds And Ends

By Rita Adams

ON CAMPUS:

COUNT 10. What with another football game getting closer and closer, we sincerely hope Len Szafryn is practicing his scrimmage tactics on somebody besides his date. Last week he was seen socking Bobbie Bess first on one cheek, then on the other.

IN THE ACT. We've just gotta' tell you this one now because if it comes through, tickets will be sold out the first hour. Billy Carmichael, our number three man, and Charlie Gibson have announced that they are going to combine their wits (maybe the two halves will make a whole) on a musical comedy for Sound and Fury.

LADIES IN WAITING. We'll leave the significance of this remark to you. A feminine voice coming from 220 McIver one night this week said, "I wish I could find a knight." Maybe this Chaucer course is getting her down, too.

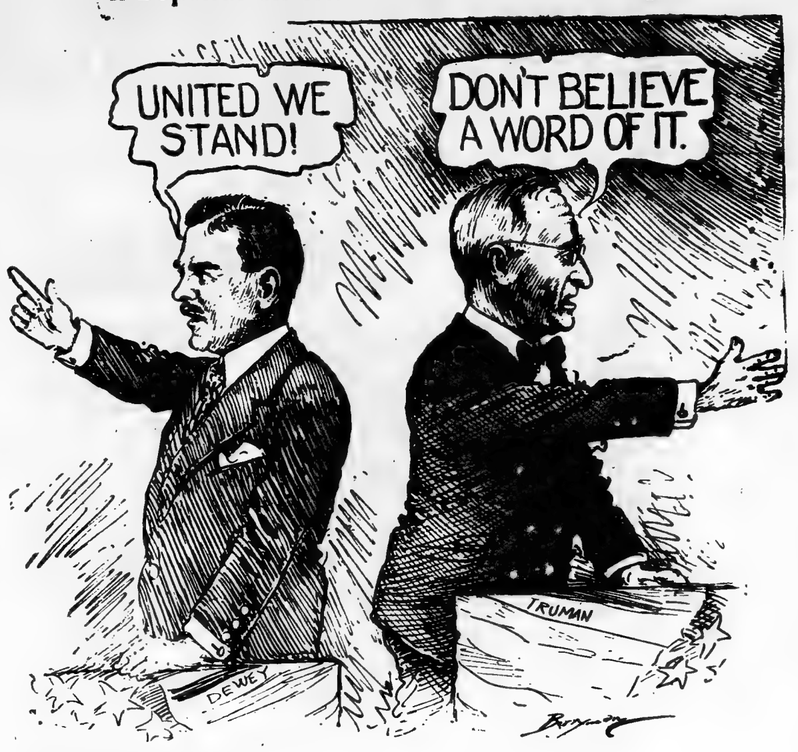
REBEL YELL. Ruth Whalen found a sure fired way of identifying KA's, whether they be at Duke, Carolina, or where have you. "Just look for that Confederate flag," she says.

LONGHORN TOOTS. Tom Abell's visitor for the Texas week-end proved to be a mighty thoughtful somebody by sending his fraternity brothers a set of great big tumblers, with pictures of Texas on them. Thing is, they're so big that the boys are planning to use them for pitchers.

SPOOKY IDEA. Why doesn't somebody give us a Halloween dance? As far as we can find out, there has never been a masquerade ball around this place on that week-end when all good witches trot out their brooms and cats.

STATISTICS. Norm Sper tells us the crowd of spectators present for the convocation was the biggest group ever to assemble around the steps of South. Everybody seemed tremendously well impressed by the program; but the loudest exclamations came from Emily Ogburn, not about the program itself, but about the NROTC man holding the American flag.

RIDDLE OF THE WEEK. We've been asked to find the three roomates in McIver who neither smoke, drink, cuss, or chew. How 'bout helping us?



IN THE HAT. Steve Riggs, we hear, is one fellow on this campus with a hobby that just won't stop. Seems he got interested in a magician's show when he was serving in Germany and proceeded to find out how to make all sorts of things disappear.

IN TOWN:

We're all looking forward to a mighty big week-end for homecoming; and from what we hear, the merchants in town are doing their share to keep things clicking. Fr'instance, McGinnis at the Carolina Sports Shop is even going so far as to knock down prices on his records. If the merchants' association does just half as good a job as they did for University day; it should go over with a bang. Which reminds us, many thanks, Vic Huggins, for the cooperation you and your friends gave us.

MAYOR BOB MADRY and Vic Huggins both are disappointed because the street dance cannot be held this Friday. They offer full cooperation if there are future plans for such. Thanks anyway.

Chollie's Follies

Beauties And The Beast

By Charlie Gibson

It is pure folly, by golly—the idea of daring publicly to predict the fifteen coeddolls whom John Powers will select this year for the beauty section of the Yacketty Yack. I won't do it. Instead of women I can write about other things.

CAROLINANTICS: The new cheerleader bouncing about industriously at the game Saturday is Bill Ayers. . .Anybody who noticed the four pessimistic faces on the programs Wake Forest printed would think that the hallowed Baptist Hollowites expected such a score. . .wonder if the Betsy Ross here has met the local Robert E. Lee? And maybe "Red" Green is allergic to stop lights. . .Ruth Whalen wears a clever tourist's kerchief these days which makes it possible to use the head for an English-French sentence dictionary. Don't panic, Honor Council; she is not studying French. . .Willie P. Miller on Sunday morning: "My teeth taste as if they have on fur coats."

However hazardous it may be, the thought of window-shopping among our women is diverting. Mr. Powers makes glamour girls a million dollar project, but somehow all yours unruly can ever make the opposing sex is mad. Mine is the face that launched a thousand hips, all heading in the other direction but fast. Women and politics I am through with. From now on I'll pick on something more sound, less furious, and morally cleaner.

What Sin, A Name!—Wm. Shakespeare. Should our musicomedians be rechristened Unsound and Fury? It seems highly unwise to hang on to the almost irrelevant title of a summertime misfire for an entirely rewritten, recast show that should be a hit this fall. Since S & F recently gained more friends than ever through a fine Freshman night revue, now is no time to gamble with the public. Folks who saw the old "Mardi Gras" will stay away from the new one, probably telling their friends that such an egg rescrambled will be just another omelet.

Speaking of dishes reminds me of women again. Oh, well, here goes. At great risk to my rePHEWtation, these are the coeds whom I think someone should lay three-dollar entry deposits on around at the Yack office today. Today is the deadline. Alphabetically and without telephone numbers or vital statistics, here are: Marilyn Blackwell, Betty Brown, June Fleenor, Pat Frizzell, Gene Hines, Marty Hinkle, Becky Holden, Lorraine Howard, Eloise Jacobi, Jackie Lewis, Martha Manning, Mary Louise Powe, Nan Reid, and Betty Smith.

All women of the female species not listed in the past paragraph who bother to speak to me today get nylon good conduct ribbons.

Reprints Reach New High

By Roy C. Moose

One of the most significant facets of the fall book publishing scene is the great number of reprints that will be on the market. The rush to reprint certain favorite books seems to have reached a new high this year. Ordinarily this would be good news for readers who have been unable to keep abreast of the scene due to excessive prices of original printings. However, a look at the releases for this fall will throw the cautious buyer into a state of despondency; for a great many of the reissues are priced as high, and some even higher, than the original edition. To be colloquial, we can safely say that it looks like the publishers are out to fleece the public while the purse is still lined.

Heading the list of "deluxe" reissues is Ernest Hemingway's "A Farewell to Arms" at the $6.50 price level. This can be compared with the Modern Library's version of the same book at $1.25 for the 355 pages of large print. The novel is one of the shortest ever to be classed as a masterpiece, and how any publisher can expect the public to pay $6.50 for it is a problem for a press agent.

Most conspicuous of the "get them while they have money" group is the forthcoming publication of the "10 greatest novels of all time" according to the gospel of W. Somerset Maugham. For years new anthologists, scholars and amateurs have been concocting the "10 best" in everything printable; but not until now has anyone been reckless enough to attempt to turn the idea into a million dollars amid the echoes of disagreement. Moreover, Mr. Maugham went everyone one better and by cutting the books and sticking his name beside the title so they would sell at the price of $3.50.

Here are the ten books Maugham chose to emasculate: Tolstoy's "War and Peace;" Balzac's "Old Man Goriot;" Fielding's "Tom Jones;" Jane Austen's "Pride and Prejudice"; Stendhal's "The Red and The Black"; Emily Bronte's "Wuthering Heights;" Flaubert's "Madame Bovary;" Dicken's "David Copperfield"; Dostoevsky's "The Brother's Karamazov;" and Melville's "Moby Dick."

The first one on the market is "W Somerset Maugham presents Henry Fielding's "Tom Jones" and what Maugham did to that book approximates what Life said Orson Welles did to Shakespeare's Macbeth. The original "Tom Jones" was a masterpiecee of plot construction, and its fame rested on that trait. From beginning to end it was carefully constructed so that each incident fitted into the plot like a piece fitting into a jigsaw puzzle. Removal of any incident would send the plot tumbling. When Maughan cut the book from it's 700 pages to 400, that is exactly what happened. But to compensate for the loss of pages Maugham wrote an essay. The original text was better.

And if anyone cares to participate further in this great shakedown he may purchase another book by Maugham giving his reasons for selecting the ten best novels. It too costs $3.50. But I must confess that it is a better bargain than the emasculated novels.

For those, like myself, who believe that Maugham himself needs cutting — where it hurts most — there remains the Modern Library which gives the greatest selection of classic reprints for only $1.25. These are probably the most authoritative reprints today. Perhaps the most handsome reprints for the price are those issued by the Living Library, also at $1.25. These contain permanent library bindings and are illustrated as well.

Among the newcomers in the reprint field is Hartsdale House, which is putting out a series in colorful eye-catching bindings for $1.50.

Write Away

Easier To Slander

Editor:

I would like to ask (and answer) a question which I deem of vital importance to the American people. Why is it that nearly all highly-paid syndicated columnists, such as George Sokolsky, Westbrook Pegler and Joseph Alsop (or it it spelled All slop?) practically never mention Henry Wallace without going to considerable lengths to associate his name with the word "Communist"?

The answer is simple. It is easier to call someone a slanderous name than it is to argue when you're on the wrong side of the question. That is why so few columnists and commentators ever take issue with Wallace's ideas or the platform of the Progressive party. They know that once they begin discussing Wallace's ideas and goals they show themselves (and their behind-the-scene supporters) up for what they really are—enemies of real democracy. Thus, instead of trying to analyze and refute with reason Wallace's plan for peace, freedam and abundance, they find it easier (and apparently more profitable) simply to join the pro-fascist fad of branding Wallace and his party "Communist" and consider their argument won.

This, they hope, will not only frighten away many liberals who are sincere but uncertain, and suppress most vocative support of the Progressives, but will serve the more important purpose of casting discredit upon the things Wallace advocates, such as price control, peace, civil liberties, farm price support, cessation of arms export to pro-fascist governments, nationalization of armaments manufacture and a strong, effective United Nations.

As to those so-called public opinion pollsters, such as Herr Gallop, who are loudly proclaiming that Wallace's support is slipping because the Red smear is beginning to stick—well, these gentlemen, if their tablets are down to four, had better plan to get some more, as they may well have a bad case of Literary in-Digest-ion on the morning of November 3. It should be remembered that these syndicated pollsters are not paid fantastic salaries to tabulate public opinion; They are paid to make it.

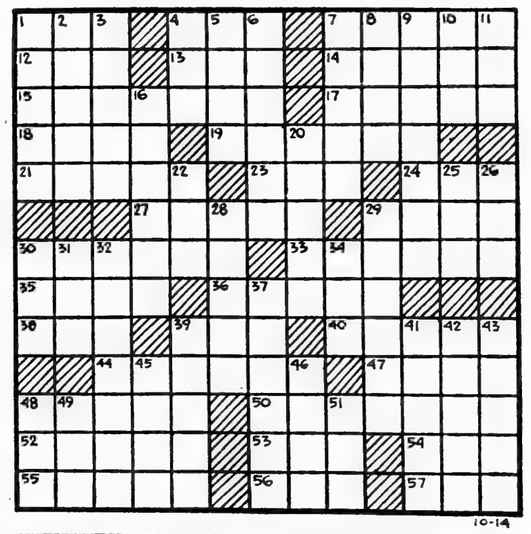
The Proper Answer

Editor:



One piece of propaganda deserves to be answered by another. That is the reason, Mr. Nielsen, that I think "Mr. Baldwin's cute little sally" is the proper response to make to the words found in the column "This Changing World."

I feel, as you probably do, that a factual and reasoned analysis of world affairs should be answered seriously. But Mr. Robertson's function (as indicated by his column) is to sway the masses and not to search for truth. Therefore a humorous piece such as Mr. Baldwin's is more to the point than anything scholarly or intellectual could be.

One thing more. I got the impression from your letter that you viewed the human situation as a problem to which a wise man can subscribe the Final Answer like we do in trig. class. Our objective, "question and answer", educational system fosters that opinion on us if we do not guard against it. Think for a moment. Has there ever been a time known to man when sustenance and human relations were not a problem? Can we say, then, that our predecessors solved none of their problems? Emphatically not. This gigantic civilization stands in testimony of the millions of individual problems of production, communication, transportation and group dicipline that have been solved through the centuries. But for each question that was answered two appeared to take its place. This is a fact of life which the Communists and other utopian day-dreamers would like to avoid. There is no stopping point to this situation in history. And, if you postulate the basic selfishness of men, there is no conceivable end to this process in the future.

Therefore, solve each problem as it presents itself to you. Don't expect final, complete and simple answers that you can write in a notebook. Look for changing answers in a changing situation. Above all, don't expect that there will ever be human existence on this earth without problems.

MONOGRAM MUSINGS

By Bill Pritchard

Worthy Cause

Tonight, at 7:15 in Memorial ll the Monogram club will pre-nt the second in it's weekly es of football movies. This me there will be a double-fea- of the Texas and Wake rest games. . .two games which re worth seeing again, although have seen them in reality. wever, this week the club is aking an old precedent and ing a new one. There will be fee of $.25 per head for the owing. Now, before everyone omes highly indignant and ers to the high heavens, let explain the reason for this.

Recently, Mr. E. C. Smith, airman of the local polio fund nich, at present, is on the old ck-bottom) came to the club in n effort to enlist its support in sing said funds. Now, it was ly natural that Mr. Smith uld come to the Monogram lub for this support after all he as done for Carolina athletes and thletics. As manager of the local theatre, he has opened it to men participating in varsity athletics n certain days of each week nce as far back as 1946. Also, president of Chapel Hill Mer-hants association he did much benefit both the club and in-ividuals connected therewith. Therefore, when he asked for help in this undeniably worthy cause, President Gus Johnson came up with this idea. Tonight, the two aforementioned movies will be presented at a charge of $.25. Following this, all future games will be shown, with a similar charge being levied for pictures of games played away from home namely: Tennessee, Maryland and Virginia. All revenue derived from this source will go to the local polio fund. PLUS $250 from the treasury of the Monogram club that the members voted to donate at the meeting last Tuesday night. The least you, as individuals, can do is to help make this campaign a success by turning out and enjoying yourselves.

1946 Championship

As most of you are well aware, the '46 football team won the "Official" Southern conference championship. For examples of "official" and just "plain" Southern conference champs, you may use the currently accepted 1947 variety which gives William and Mary for the former and North Carolina as the latter. However, due to confusion of the Sugar Bowl (we will bow our heads in prayer) the Athletic council neglected to make awards befitting the conference champs. In the meeting last Tuesday, this error was rectified, as gold footballs were voted to all members of that year's squad.

Also, passed at this session of the council was the installation, as recommended by the Monogram club, of soccer as a full-fledged varsity sport. Last year, soccer was officially begun here with the understanding that it would be considered a minor sport until it had proven itself. After the very fine season in '47 (won 6 lost 3) plus the extreme player-interest, it was decided that soccer was well worth a major letter. It's a rough, hard sport, and I would recommend that you take the first opportunity you can find to go down and see the boys play, which, incidently, will be tomorrow afternoon when they meet a tough Loyola team.

With soccer a major sport now, no minor sports remain at UNC. However, don't be surprised if, come this spring, you find the very-manly old Indian game of lacrosse reinstated here on the same basis as was soccer. . .a year of trial and then permanent acceptance, if successful. George Levine (AEPi House, phone 7036) paid a visit to the council Tuesday night in the interests of the game and the feelings of the members toward the possibilities of revival were favorable. Lacrosse was played here as late as 1941 and had been here for several years. It was growing in popularity when the war cut short it's chances of survival. . . and talk about thrills. Here's a game with no holds barred, so come on all of you coed-killing cavemen, help reestablish this fine sport by contacting George Levine at the above address and letting him know you're interested, for it is upon your interest, as students, more than any other one thing, that will cause the rebirth of lacrosse.

Did You Know . . .

Did you know that the only change on next year's grid schedule is the replacement of Texas by South Carolina. . . .that the Monogram club is having the Sutherlands, parents of the late "Cotton" Sutherland, voted honorary football captain last year, as it's guests to all of the home games this fall, as it did last fall

Tar Heels Prep For Homecoming Battle

Hold Spirited Drill For State Game; Accent on Offense

Another tough session was the order of the day for the Tar Heels on Navy field yesterday afternoon as preparations for Saturday's Homecoming battle with N. C. State entered the final stages. Today's drills will close out the week's heavy work for the Tar Heels and Friday will be tapering-off day.

Wide Open Affair

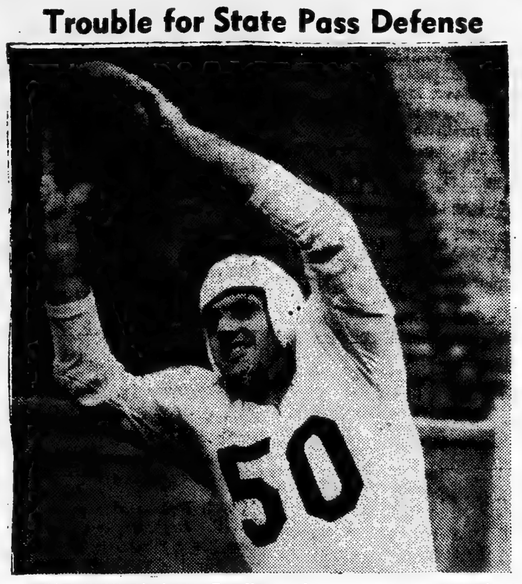
Many people expect the annual Homecoming tilt to be a wide-open affair this year with both teams rolling up big scores. This theory is based on the fact that State's offensive attack sprang violently to life last week to trample Davidson 40-0. Those in the know are wondering whether a decidedly mediocre State eleven can muster enough offensive power to amass a higher point total against the Tar Heels than the three strong teams that have already gone against the Carolinians. The Wolfpack had scored only one touchdown in two games prior to their uprising against the weak Wildcat eleven last Saturday, and it is not likely that the Pack will cause much eyebrow raising in Kenan stadium on Saturday.

The game might very well be a close one, however, The Wolfpack line has turned in a fine overall performance throughout the young season in allowing State opponents to cross the goal only twice in three games. When the powerful State line squares off against Carolina's twin forward walls there should be action a-plenty on the front line.

Backfield Picture

The backfield picture should be a good deal different, however, with Justice, Rodgers, and company romping for the Tar Heels. Ogden Smith, Roland Eveland, and Ed Mooney came to the front in State's first victory last week, but ailing Gwynn Fletcher and Bill Thompson will be sorely missed if they are not ready to go by Saturday.

Bobby Weant and Eddie Knox will continue to fill the gap left at blockingback by injured Don Hartig. Fred Sherman will be missing at wingback, but Bill Flamisch, out last week, will be back to understudy Johnny Clements.



The Carolina forward wall will be intact for the game, but State's Tom Joyce may be missing from his guard post again this week.

Game Movies Slated At Memorial Tonight

The Orange county polio fund will get a boost tonight when the Texas and Wake Forest pictures will be shown at Memorial hall at 7:15 under the sponsorship of the Monogram club with an admission fee of 25 cents being charged.

Thus, those who didn't believe what they saw on September 25 or didn't happen to see what went on at the Baptist College last Saturday, will have the opportunity to do so tonight.

Trouble for State Pass Defense

ART WEINER, hefty Carolina end, ranks as one of the best pass receivers in the Southern conference this year. He is the favorite target for the aerials of Charlie Justice and Hosea Rodgers. Weiner is also a threat as a runner. He carries the ball frequently on end-around plays.

Soccer Team Holds Scrimmage To Prepare for Loyola Game

With the first string offense against the starting defensive team yesterday afternoon at Fetzer field, the Carolina soccer aggregation continued preparation for tomorrow's important tilt with Loyola.

The halfbacks and forwards on one eleven, the Blues, were starters against Navy, while the fullbacks and goalie were drawn from the second string. The opposite held true for the Yellow outfit.

In this way, both the offensive and defensive players got practice against top opponents. In spite of the strong defense set up against them, the Blues, sparked by Dave Boak, Dave Ferrebee, Gus Johnston, and co-captain Jesse Greenbaum, controlled the play most of the afternoon as the Yellows were unable to threaten Blue goalie Dave Sobel more than a few times.

The play of the revamped forward wall hit its peak when the Blues dented the Yellow cords for two quick goals midway in the scrimmage. Big men, literally and figuratively for the Yellows were co-captain Frank Nelson and goaltender Al Williams.

Although the forwards carried the play through most of the contest, Coach Marvin Allen substituted freely in an attempt to come up with the right combination to outscore Loyola. The Tar Heels were shut out by Navy, 2-0, in their opener and will be out to avoid another whitewashing in their first airing before local fans. Game time at Fetzer field is 3

(See SOCCER, page four)

Tar Baby Drills

Coach Crowell Little's Tar Babies, who entertain Virginia here next Friday, Oct. 22, have been drilling hard on defensive play, primarily blocking and tackling. Although they took a one point, 27-26 win over South Carolina, they showed definite need of strengthening their defense.

The Tar Baby backfield represents a powerhouse on offense. With the passing of Skeeter Hesmer and the running of Cullen White, the Tar Babies could well swing their way to victory over future opponents.

Referring to the initial performance, Little stated that "With all those mistakes, we've got a long way to go and there'll have to be lots of work put on the fundamentals of the game."

Skip Hoyle Triumphs In Ping Pong Tourney

Climaxing Graham Memorial's ping pong tournament in which 16 people participated, Skip Hoyle mopped up the final prize of a book of theater tickets.

The first elimination was a single game, and the rest of the games were two out of three. A one dollar prize was awarded for each game won. Hoyle's opponent in the final game was Jim Jackson, who defeated Bob Grubbs.

The next tourney will be held in downstairs Graham Memorial at 2:30 o'clock Monday, Oct 25. All students are invited to participate.

Overtime Contests Feature Mural Tag Grid Competitions

Yesterday's Intramural tag football was featured by some red hot action both in fraternity and dormitory leagues, with overtime games and other close contests being the order of the day.

Two overtime games were necessary, with Jerry Allen's extra period touchdown giving C Dorm a 12 to 6 win over the Hut Dwellers, and the Graham Dwellers earning the one point needed for a 7 to 6 victory over Old East, by gaining the most yardage in overtime play.

In other close dormitory league tilts, Jim Hayworth scored twice as the Grads edged Lewis, 13 to 6, and Y Cabinet stopped Ruffin, 14 to 6, in another tight contest. The Meds shut out Stacy, 13 to 0, and Mangum blanked AROTC 1, 12 to 0.

The Stanley Steamers rolled to a 26 to 0 win over Steele, while Town and Nash gained 1 to 0 forfeit victories over A Dorm and Quonset Hut 356, respectively. Larry Holt, with a touchdown and a safety, and L. C. Couch, with a TD and an extra point, led the Mud Dobbers to a 17 to 0 decision over Everett 1.

The powerful SAE 1 aggregation held the spotlight in fraternity competition as they racked up a 37 to 0 win over ATO 2 to remain undefeated and unscored on in two games. Bill Furgurson scored a touchdown and a safety as Pi Kappa Phi defeated Sigma Nu 1, 16 to 6, George Bush and W. Reed accounted for all the scoring as Beta 1 whitewashed DKE 2, 12 to 0. ATO 1 was awarded a 1 to 0 forfeit over ZBT.

Tar Heel Cross Country Team Prepares for Saturday Meet

Carolina's cross country track team took their last heavy workout before the Navy meet yesterday afternoon in Fetzer field.

The Tar Heel harriers, who lost, 31-26 to Virginia Tech's Southern conference runners-up on Monday, will be favored to win the dual meet at Annapolis on Saturday morning.

Coach Dale Ranson said yesterday that "Navy is right tough to handle at home. I hope our boys will be ready for an improved performance." When Ranson spoke of improved performance, he was referring to the Monday meet. He was pleased with the Tar Heel showing, but still prefers to win.

Magill Leads Carolina

Sam Magill, who finished first in that met with Virginia Tech, will lead an eight-man Carolina team at Navy Saturday. Frank Hooper and Julian MacKenzie are two other top-notch runners expected to give Carolina added strength against the Middies.

Hunt and Barringer are the fourth and fifth men on the traveling squad this week end. The other three men to make the trip Saturday will be chosen from the quartet of Lewis, Gregory, Ross and Culpepper.

Ross and Culpepper are freshmen, but are running with the varsity harriers this season. Under Southern conference rules, a freshman who has had military service is eligible to compete in varsity athletics.

Jim Oberholtzer, Navy distance runner, is the number one man of the Middie cross country team and is expected to give the "fu-

Veeck Says He'll Stay with Indians

CLEVELAND, Oct. 13—(UP)—President Bill Veeck of the Cleveland Indians today laid at rest, at least temporarily, rumors that he will leave the Tribe for another baseball post.

"I'm not going anywhere," he grinned.

Rumors have been strong that Veeck will leave the Indians to either (a) go into the racing business (b) buy the Chicago White Sox or (c) buy the St. Louis Browns.

But Veeck tried his best to stop the current rumor crop with the lone statement that "I'm just not going anywhere but here."

His manager, Lou Boudreau, also appeared to be set with the Indians for at least another year. Although Veeck once attempted to get rid of him as manager, Lou's contract runs through 1949 and number five undoubtedly will be back as shortstop and manager of the Tribe next year.

The World Series top hero, Gene Bearden, will barnstorm with Satchel Paige. Later he expects to get a tryout in the movies. Bob Feller has decided against barnstorming.

Three Indians from the West coast—Bob Lemon, Johnny Berardino, and Walt Judnich—will play some exhibition baseball along the Pacific Coast. Al Rosen, the rookie infielder, will be married next Sunday in Kansas City to Evelyn Silverstein.

Ken Keltner has headed back to Milwaukee where he will open a bicycle shop. Larry Doby, first Negro in the American league, has turned down offers to make an exhibition tour and will go home to Paterson, N. J., to rest most of the winter.

Tragedy almost struck at about the halfway mark of the workout when Pete Hexner collided with his opponent and both men tumbled to the ground. However, both men resumed playing and although good-natured cries of "Get Hexner" rang through the stadium, no blood was spilled.

Flunked

Nelson Cassievens, Duncan Brackin, and Flo Morris, UVA quiz show finalists, all flunked out on the $35 jack-pot question Tuesday night.

The question was "Can you name three of the four commonwealths in the United States?" Each contestant was given four tries, but none succeeded in naming more than two of the states.

The $35 jack-pot will be carried over to next week and $10 will be added to it to make a total of $45 for next week's quiz show.

Coach Ranson also announced that the freshman cross country team has a meet scheduled here next Monday. The frosh will take on N. C. State at 3:30 on the local course, starting and finishing in Fetzer field.

Freshman time trials have been scheduled for today at 3:30. Frosh cross country men are to report to Fetzer field in time to begin at that time.

Senator Taft To Address Student Body Today

Student Block Fee Increase Is Endorsed By Dedmond

By Jim Dickinson

Student Body President Jess Dedmond last night told the Student Legislature that "expanded activities and increased costs of operation makes necessary a consideration of additional revenues," and asked for passage of a bill which would increase the student block fee by 50 cents per quarter, effective September 1, 1949.

In delivering his "State of the Campus" address Dedmond said he is asking the Board of Trustees for full legislative authority under the constitution with the recommendation that all student fees be increased with the exception of coed fees, "which should be reduced an equal amount."

Freshman Class Elections bf

A bill to provide for freshman class elections was introduced to the floor and passed by a unanimous vote. This bill evolved from the recent introduction of the freshman assembly on campus and is designed to provide freshman the opportunity of becoming acquainted with their prospective officers prior to the elections.

Herbert Mitchell was elected to the chairmanship of the Ways and Means committee over Dortch Warriner. Mitchell, varsity Debater and publicity chairman of the Carolina Forum, was elected by a vote of 22-13.

Revision of Honor System bf

Other recommendations by Dedmond called for (a) the establishment of a Greater University of North Carolina student council to include Woman's college and N. C. State college, (b) the functions of the Non-partisan board to be expanded to include the selection of candidates for the Student Council and the editorship of the Daily Tar Heel, (c) a bill to establish a National Student association for purpose of keeping the campus informed on outside events and as a means to defray the expenses of delegates. (d) a bill to make the office of attorney general a permanent office on campus, (e) a more efficient honor system to replace the system which now gives appelate power to the Student council to review cases tried by the honor councils.

In calling for a revision of the legislation regarding the honor system Dedmond stated, "I recommend a clear revision of the honor and campus codes in the Student and Men's and Women's councils."

Other bills introduced on the floor and sent to the committees would provide for (a) transfer of funds to the University Club, and (b) extending the Student Budget committee authority to transfer funds from one committee to another.

Freshman Assembly Hears Talk by President Graham

By Lincoln Kan

"This is a free University, and where there is freedom there will be responsibility and honor," stated Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of the Greater University, to a capacity audience at freshman assembly in Memorial hall yesterday.

The convocation was opened with a short prayer by Professor Warren Ashby of the Philosophy department. Jess Dedmond, president of the student body, then announced that there would be action in the Student Legislature soon concerning freshmen elections which will take place a week after nominations on Nov. 11. Freshmen will take over the convocation hour at the last meeting when the new class officers are introduced.

Fred Weaver, dean of students, then introduced Dr. Graham. Since Dr. Graham graduated from our University in 1909 when he was the president of the senior class, which is the same as the president of the student body today, he has inspired and led this University to greatness," Weaver said. "Dr. Frank has the love of his fellow man, the greatest virtue of all," he continued.

Dr. Graham described the reopening of the University five years after the cessation of the Civil war. He told of how Mrs. Spencer rang the South building bell which had remained silent through the war. "With the ringing of that bell, a new era and turning point for the new South began, which has formed the basis for the great University we have today," said Dr. Graham.

He then discussed the policy of freedom of education and thinking in North Carolina. "Differences in opinions are not expressed by tomatoes, eggs or contradictions. The answer to errors is not terror." He said it is through deeper understanding reached by serious study, and the search for truth which is the basis of society that a honorable foundation may be reached.

In a discussion of student government and the Honor Code, Dr. Graham said, "Students of this University do not want to cheat, not because they are afraid to cheat, but because they want to be honorable."

Building Code Is Presented To Aldermen

A new proposed building code for Chapel Hill was presented to the Board of Aldermen at their meeting Wednesday night by Vic Huggins, chairman of the Chapel Hill Planning Board committee which drew up the recommendations.

According to Mayor R. W. Madry, the new proposal is modeled after Durham's building code, but there are a number of important variations. Madry also stated that the Board of Aldermen will take action on the code after further study.

Members of the committee which worked on the project were Vic Huggins, chairman, N. J. Demarath, P. D. Haney, Giles Horney, Brodie Thompson and James Webb, assisted by P. L. Burch and Joe Sparrow.

Johnny Satterfield Slated to Play For Informal Grail Dance Tomorrow

The Grail dance scheduled for tomorrow night from 8:30 to 12 o'clock in Woolen gymnasium will be informal. Men are to wear coats and ties, and coeds are to dress in street clothes. Johnny Satterfield and his orchestra will play for the dance.

Tickets will be sold at the door only, at $1 per couple or stag.

Both State and University football teams have been invited as honor guests for the occasion. Also the student body at State has been invited.

This is the second in a series of dances sponsored by the Order of the Grail, which sponsored a dance the night of the Texas game. The organization will sponsor dances on Saturday nights following all home games, except the German weekend.

The Grail is not a dance organization, but is a service organization. It sponsors low-priced dances at a minimum charge to students, and if any profit is made, it will be put into a scholarship fund. Last year the Grail awarded five $200 scholarships.

Candidates Hurl Blows Back, Forth

By United Press

The Democrats started a new getout-the-vote drive, publishing a brochure showing how a mere handful of votes have won or lost past elections.

The Republicans called on their party's faithful to shell out another $1,500,000 to assure a GOP victory.

Mr Truman delivered one of his most stinging indictments of the Republican nominee in a speech in Milwaukee, Wis.

Replying indirectly to the New York governor's charge that his short-lived "Mission to Moscow" was a "blunder," the president said Dewey himself "blundred" by bringing atomic energy into the presidential campaign.

He said he thought atomic energy was above politics "but the Republican candidate has brought it in." This was a reference to Dewey's Phoenix, Ariz., speech Sept.23 in which the GOP White House contender objected to the "dead hand of government" keeping permanent control of atomic energy development.

More Students Eligible For Dorm Space

Twenty-eight men became eligible for dormitory rooms yesterday, according to an announcement from the housing office. These men must contact the housing office, 22 New East annex by Monday, or it will be assumed that they are no longer interested and their applications will be cancelled.

They are: Barry Baker, Robert L. Bristow, Bill A. Burleson, Gerald N. Bryant, Fogle C. Clark, Billy G. Clodfelter, Albert F. Cole Jr., John M. Curlee, Lindsay C. Ferguson, William A. Fryar, Rex C. Hall, Charles L. Jones.

James E. King, Billy W. Lassiter, Paul F. Lincke, Thomas L. Maness, Samuel H. Meares, Donald S. Morris, James C. McGee Jr., Francis E. Price Jr., Robert J. Randall, Julian W. Ross Jr., Charles E. Sasser.

Ray B. Smith, Harry A. Teele, Hassel L. Vester, Alvin B. Willis, and Virgil A. Wilson.

Picture Taking Has Increased

Since the announcement of cancellation of picture appointments for the Yackety Yack the number of pictures made in a single day has increased steadily, according to Bill Duncan, Yack editor.

State College Cheerers Will Be Here For Rally

Student Prexy From State Is Also Expected

Two cheerleaders from State college will be in Memorial hall at 7:30 this evening to lend a helping hand with the Tar Heel "Beat State" cheers, and University Cheerleaders Wray and Sarah Jane Farlow will be on the State campus to do the same thing.

Also expected here this evening is Fred Kendall, president of the student body at State. Kendall was scheduled to pay a visit in return for one made to his campus last Friday night by Student Body President Jess Dedmond, who spoke at the pre-State-Davidson game pep rally.

Head Cheerleader Norm Sper said yesterday that the Homecoming Queen beauty contest would also be held in Memorial hall tonight. He added that two contestants would be presented from each sorority and women's dormitory, and that they would wear street clothes for the contest.

Tomorrow judging will take place on Homecoming displays which are being erected now by dormitories, fraternities and sororities. A Homecoming cup will be presented to the winners by the University club. Judges for the lawn displays are Dr. W. A. Olsen, Mrs. L. V. Huggins and Noel Houston.

Judges for the beauty contest are Dean Katherine Carmichael, Dean E. L. Mackie and Jess Dedmond.

Sixteen girls have been listed so far as contestants for the beauty contest. They are Marty Hinkle and Betty Lokey, Spencer; Ann Bumgardner and Jean Ogburn, Archer house; Martha Hughes and Jean Frances Carraher, Smith; Sarah Jane Farlow and Peggy Martin, Alpha Delta Pi; Becky Holton and Barbara Thomas, Alpha Gamma Delta; Helen Bouldin and Frances Poe, Chi Omega; Joan Lucas and Betty Smith, Delta Delta Delta; Charlene Green and Mike Merker, Pi Beta Phi.

Dedmond announced yesterday that another feature of the Homecoming weekend would be a luncheon meeting tomorrow between student leaders of the University and State college. Local students scheduled to be present other than Dedmond are Vice-President Jim Godwin, Att.-Gen. Ed Davenport, Student Council Chairman Bill Mackie, Men's Council Chairman Page Harris and Orientation Committee Chairman Bill Miller.

Play It On The Field

"We are all proud of our football team and rightly so, because it always plays a clean, hard-fought game. It represents our University in a way that reflects nothing but credit upon it. We the students who are not members of the team, do not want to do anything to injure the good work being done by it.

"Last year pre-game vandalism was stopped almost entirely by us, the students, because we realized that the game should be played on the field—not with paint brushes the night before. We recognize vandalism as a very serious violation of our Campus Code, and to that effect, any offenders will be severely dealt with by the council. Any student who damages another university or college's property will be subject to suspension from school.

"Ticket scalping and playing parlay sheets are violations of state statutes and are in direct opposition of our Campus Code. Any student doing either is liable to action by the student councils.

"We know that everyone will conduct himself as a Carolina gentleman in these respects and by doing so make our University a better place."

JESS DEDMOND
President of the Student Body
THE MEN'S HONOR COUNCIL.

It's Just Like Any Other Day In the Life of a Working Man

A modest little man spent his day yesterday working and attending to the duties of the Greater University of North Carolina.

After a hurried trip home from New York where he attended the inauguration of Dwight Eisenhower as president of Columbia university, he stood before a group of students and delivered an address about the greatness, responsibility and honor of a university which he helped to build.

In the afternoon, without pausing for lunch, he left Chapel Hill to go to Greensboro on more University business.

Late in the evening he returned home tired, but with the knowledge that he had done his day's work.

That was how Dr. Frank Porter Graham celebrated his 62nd birthday yesterday.

Good Grades Defer Draft-Age Students

All draft-eligible students who maintain satisfactory grades will be able to complete the current school year, F. Carlyle Shepard, veterans adviser, said yesterday.

"If students are reported unsatisfactory, either in conduct or work, or drop out of school for any reason, they will be subject to immediate call," said Shepard

In order to secure a postponement of active service, the student will be required to submit a statement from the University to his local draft board. These statements may be obtained from room 316 South building between 8:30 and 4:30 daily, except Saturdays, when they will be available from 8:30 to 12:30.

When a student receives his orders to report for induction, he should consult Shepard immediately and secure the required postponement statement.

Draft-age students are warned that after submitting a postponement certificate, it is their responsibility to notify their local draft boards if they change their status or withdraw from school. -Afis5

Legionnaires Need Workers

More legionnaires are needed to work at the American Legion concession stands during football games, Legion Commander Jake McDade announced today.

During the Texas game, the Legion operated one stand on Fetzer field, but two concession stands will be run by Legionnaires for the State game this week. The new concession stand will be located east of Woollen gym.

Rendezvous Slates Floor Show Tonight

On the slate for the Rendezvous Room floor show tonight are two new students who show promise of going places in the musical world. Jo Bissell, local freshman who has had experience in radio work, will share the program with Parry Edwards. Parry formerly sang in the French Cassino in New Orleans.

Conant Suggests National Militia For 18-Year-Olds

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 14—(UP)—President James B. Conant of Harvard suggested today that the nation's military needs be filled by enrolling every boy of 18 in a national militia for 10 years.

There would be no exemptions except for physical disability, Conant said, and the military training would be obtained in three or four summer camps of two or three months each and evening drill throughout the year.

Conant's suggestion was made in his new book, "Education in a Divided World," in which he recommended changes in public education to provide "a greater degree of equality of opportunity for the youth of each succeeding generation."

He reiterated his contention that in planning for the future, the United States must assume an "armed truce until at least the middle fifties and a divided world for a long time to come."

In this period, he said, America will need to train its best men, both for peace and war. Conant said the present draft law was only a stop-gap and that the 10-year militia plan was preferable since it would not wreck a college educational year.

Education itself, the Harvard president said, must include a "dissection of Soviet philosophy and an exposure of its methods."

This, he described as the number one educational need at the present time: "We study cancer in order to learn how to defeat it. We must study the Soviet philosophy in our universities and elsewhere for the same reason."

Guidebook Awards '48 Yackety Yack First Class Rating in Six Divisions

The 1948 Yackety Yack has been awarded a first-class rating by the Yearbook Guidebook, it was announced yesterday. Last year's Yack, edited by Gene Johnstone, was credited this high place among the nation's yearbooks on the basis of planning, coverage of school life, classes, organizations and athletics, and technical qualities.

The report, compiled by the National Scholastic Press association of the University of Minnesota, said that the prize-winning Yack was "a generally good book with a few weak spots." The Guidebook gives helpful criticism, adding points to the final score for good composition, however not taking points from the score for poor composition.

Acquiring 1,600 points, most of them for "excellent" content, the '48 Yack was 11th in the nation, missing the "All-American" rating by only 100 points.

According to Yack officials, this is the first year that any Yack has received such praise since Dean Fred Weaver worked on the 1932 yearbook.

Will Make Two Stops In State

By Sam McKeel

Making North Carolina the last stop on his three-state Southern tour of Tennessee, Florida and North Carolina, Senator Robert A. Taft, Ohio Republican, will make two appearances.

Arriving in Wilson this morning, Taft will drive directly to Chapel Hill where he will speak at 2 o'clock in Memorial hall.

Senator Taft is well known for the part he played in having the Taft-Hartley Labor-Management Relations act passed. At the Republican national convention in Philadelphia he was one of the leading contenders for the Republican nomination for the presidency. On the fourth ballot he withdrew in favor of Governor Dewey of New York.

The son of the 27th president of the United States, Senator Taft has been in state and national politics since 1920, when he was elected to the Ohio house of representatives. In 1938 Taft announced his candidacy for the United States senate. He stumped every county in the state and won the Republican nomination by a majority of 75,000 votes. Even though running against a seasoned campaigner, Senator Robert J. Bulkey, who was running for a third term, Taft won the election by a majority of 170,000 votes.

Senator Taft will speak in Wilson on the Taft-Hartley act and the Republican farm program. His speech there will be broadcast over WPTF of Raleigh and WGTM of Wilson.

The senator's wife, who has been ill in Cincinnati, hopes to join him in Wilson for an appearance at Atlantic Christian college.

Taft's address here is co-sponsored by the Carolina Forum and the Young Republican club.

It's A Question

Last week we mentioned the shameful conditions evident on the steps of South building. We are sorry to say, the condition has remained unchanged. The litter of paper cups and empty cigarette packages is still dirtying the steps.

Let us point out again that there are seven trash cans within the immediate vicinity of the steps. It takes only very little energy to dispose of used cups and wrappers in the proper place. . .the waste-bin!

It seems that on a campus which takes such great pride in self-government, the Honor code and the Campus code, carelessness such as is evident should hurt the self-pride of the individual student, as well as the pride in our University. One certainly cannot for long believe that the administration will regard us as grown men and women with a sense of communal pride, if we keep acting like unmindful children who leave things for others to pick up.

One suggestion has reached us that large placards be put up next to each of the trash bins to call attention to its purpose. How obvious must we get? —L. K.

Wrong Time and Place

Ill-timed and ill-mannered was the scheduling of the University band and Norman Cordon to make recordings at the same time and place that Marriner Eccles was speaking Wednesday night. Fanfares and fight songs emanating from the building adjoining Hill hall provided quite a distraction to the speech by the Federal Reserve board member.

Speeches and band recordings both have a place at the University, but that place shouldn't be side by side and at the same time.

October at the Hill

Those of us who have been here for several years always look forward to the coming of fall weather, some to get respite from the hot summer heat, others to see the football team in action and still others just to watch nature put on her leaf-sequin evening gown of golden rust trimmed with flaming scarlet before she settles down to her winter sleep.

All along Cameron avenue and elsewhere on the campus, we will be walking through carpets of these golden leaf-sequins looking a little like golden coins scattered by some carefree millionaire. Then later the autumn breezes will drift the scent of burning leaves into the classrooms, making us wish we were out in the warm sun enjoying the last yawn of nature before she hibernates.

Then another fall will have passed into the little nooks in our memory chest. We start looking for the green spring. —L.K.

Spice Aplenty

Announcement this week of an organizational meeting of a Norman Thomas for President club was not surprising in view of the political clubs already active in the causes of Democrats, Republicans, Progressives, States Righters and Communists.

At their meeting, however, the Socialist party backers found that no one had time to organize and lead activities of a club. They still wanted to put their cause before the campus, though, so they asked for and got the same space privileges in the student paper as the other political groups.

Variety is the spice of life, the old saw says, and in variety of political views this campus is plenty spicey.

Odds And Ends

By Rita Adams

ON CAMPUS:

SNIFF. Just for the information of Betty Lasseur, new coed from Florida, who wanted to know what the poignant smell around campus is—wild onions are little green plants which sniff up the whole town when cut—and are even harder to bear when dairy cows get hold of them.

COME ONE 'N ALL! Henry Reynolds wants to remind all of you Greensboro students that the Greensboro-U.N.C. club will have a meeting soon to discuss plans for a Christmas dance that will have "even more people than the 700 crowded into the Plantation last year—Sugar Bowl or no Sugar Bowl."

THAT'S CHARLOTTE! Brightest suggestion at the Charlotte-Carolina club came when Dick Nuness piped up. "What with all the parties the Western North Carolina club has, we should get on the ball. Why don't we throw one in the arboretum?"

EYE FOR EYE. We've found one dog—Dick Bunting's Tar Heel—but now we're on the search for another one. Nemo Nearman says he has gotta' have one of the two—either Tenn Mason or Tenn the Puppy. Since we're afraid we won't be seeing the real Tenn around for another quarter, it will have to be the dog.

GOODBYE. LIL' COED. Sarah Kincey liked her first few weeks of Carolina this fall but not enough to refuse a wedding band from Bob Wilcox. Sorry to see her go but congratulations, anyhoo.

NAMESAKE? Have you heard about Glenn Taylor over in Old East? Just wonder if he's going to start politicking up here.

THE SCORE'S A TIE. We almost didn't know the face behind a yellow sweater and white "T" shirt this week. Dogone if it didn't turn out to be Tal Jordan, minus one of his snazzy ties.

PERMANENT FIXTURE—but a pretty one, to say the least, is Tiny Royall in the basement study room of McIver. She really holds the lamp posts up in that slave shop.

LAMP POST—That reminds us. Which was holding up which one afternoon this week? Neal Forney or the post? Seems Neal's asthma has just about gotten the best of him.

DRAWING CARD. The crowd watching the Battle-Pettigrew-Vance football team this week is soon going to be big enough to merit a stadium.

CULTURE CORNER. Don't forget the North Carolina Symphony representatives in the "Y" and in each dorm. We guarantee you'll really enjoy the programs. And we'd like to add a special good word for the people in the symphony who are making it possible for children to hear the concerts without admission.

HELP WANTED. The Carolina Quarterly staff is still howling for more copy; so if you have anything to offer them in the way of fiction, poetry, etc., please let them know about it.

MORE POWER to the SPE's and their newly decorated house. We hear by way of Bill Hood that they've put out an awful lot of work on that place and are looking forward to showing it off at a big party.

OUR MORALE BOOSTERS, the dressed up folks who have been lining second floor hall of Graham Memorial will certainly be missed when the photographers leave us. It's enough to restore your faith in humanity to look out there and see stiff, white shirts, gay ties, clean-shaven faces. The question is, how do they feel when they look over this way?

IN TOWN:

Those window displays have taken shape beautifully. Fact is, it's almost tempting to jump through Wentworth and Sloan's plate glass and take off for a first down.

Be sure to check the good pictures outside the Varsity.

Many thanks to the Carolina Dames for inviting the students to their recent meeting.

Democratic Dicta

Honesty And Politicians

By Hugh Wells

The pages of our daily press being rife with Republicanism, it has become evident that there is a need here for some declaiming for Democracy. Most North Carolina newspapers are Democratic to some extent, some of them Republican to all extents, and some of them sit right on the fence simply because they don't care to say. The DTH has been being one thing and saying another lately, and so now the Democrats of these parts must have their presence made certain and their case made clear.

We are of the opinion that local Democrats are a bit too sure of their position and therefore have not paid enough heed to their political rivals for the primary position in the hearts and heads of the voters hereabouts. It would seem to any good Democrat that a thinking man would hardly vote any other way; but a couple of things are left out when we reason in that direction.

First, not all voters think. There are lots of people who would certainly be Democrats and good ones if they thought very much or very intelligently about politics. But they just don't. They consider politics as something to be shunned; something to talk about and something that Sam Jones is always mixed up in, and something to leave alone because people like Sam are in it.

This line of reasoning leaves out the essential fact that politics is actually the art of government and something, therefore, which is just as good or just as bad as we-the-people choose to make it. If Sam Jones is in it and shouldn't be, then it is your job and mine to get him out of it. We contribute to clean, honest politics by honest participation, and we contribute to dishonest and corrupt politics by honest non-participation.

That brings us to the second reason why not all thinking voters are good Democrats, to wit: some voters think, but, thinking entirely selfish thoughts, they cannot qualify as good Democrats or good anything else. They are the Sam Joneses we talk about. They are the ones who reason that "since people generally don't like politics and don't want to mess with it, then I'll relieve them of that little chore, do their thinking for them and therefore insure myself of very little interference with my unsavory plans."

Thoughts such as this occur to selfish men, men who seek to undermine the faith of the people in their government so that it will be an easy task for the dishonest and selfish to use the government for their own evil designs. This type of voter does a lot of thinking, and thanks to the nice people who stay at home on election day he has pretty much of an open field for his rat race.

There are selfish men and women in every political party: the Democrats lay no claim to the whole herd of honest public servants. But we do believe that the honest Democrat is a better public servant than the honest Republican or Progressive or Socialist because the Democratic party as a party has been more honest in its endeavors to serve the people. The honest Republican has a harder time being a good public servant because he has too many dishonest brothers trying to help him do his job. This would certainly apply also to the Progressive. We have not so far mentioned the sometimes heard of and more seldom heard from Dixiecrats in connection with honesty because in the eyes of most good Democrats there is a minimum of honesty to be found in the political "movement" in question.

At this very time, the main opposition to the Democrats, the Republicans are doing everything possible to encourage a small vote this fall. They are counting on the voters to stay at home for they are convinced that if such is not the case, the party of the people the Democrats, will be assured of victory, and the party of the mossbacks, the Republicans, will be once again and perhaps forever denied the license of the American people to carry on the work of their federal government.

Free Talent Now On Tap

By Bill Buchan

If entertainment has been lacking for various programs conducted by campus organizations, program chairmen can sit back in their chairs and relax, for news from the Sound and Fury office reveals a new—and free—campus entertainment committee which will furnish needed pep for any program for any campus group that desires it.

According to Sound and Fury president Jerry Weiss, the organization will furnish singers, dancers, comedians and other talented students who will, as their main purpose, give performances for any organization desiring them free of charge.

Plans for the program are not complete at the present time, but Weiss promises that the program will be worked out and available in the very near future.

The all-campus entertainment plan is just one part of the new "pick-up" organization of Sound and Fury. Their members will continue to take an active part in Rendezvous shows with Graham Memorial's new talented dance lady, Lib Stoney.

A straw that is waving in the wind and that is being groomed into reality also is a possible radio show originating from the Rendezvous Room under the direction of Mark Barker.

Sound and Fury will make it's formal fall debut on campus this month with the production of "Mardi Gras," a musical production which was first presented last summer. Members of the cast say that while the show will have some of the same jokes of the summer production, a complete new plot has been incorporated under the guiding hand of Pete Strader, performer extraordinary.

A complete background story on Sound and Fury will be forthcoming under the current "This Is Carolina" series, but the work of the group thus far this fall and especially their commendable plan for campus-wide entertainment rate a special mention. They are undertaking a big order if they sincerely try to furnish all entertainment requested. There is little doubt but that the program will be carried out to a successful finish.

All the members of Sound and Fury who developed the new ideas are deserving of a special round of thanks. More power to 'em, and may they continue to grow in University service.

Write Away

Good Sportsmanship

Editor:

I know much has been written in the Daily Tar Heel on good sportsmanship by your staff and by contributors to Write Away. Anything more said along that line might be overdoing it; nevertheless, I would like to comment in relation to two incidents I have observed this fall.

The first has to do with an incident witnessed the weekend of the Texas game. After the game, I walked across the triangle (or whatever you call it) enclosed by Alexander Dorm and the two new dorms, "A" and "B." On passing Alexander, I heard loud and excited voices coming from windows of the upper floors where some of the occupants were having a good time replaying the game. I noticed that there were several ladies standing in front of the dorm, probably mothers and sisters of men living there.

Nearing "A" Dorm, I heard the voice of a man student call in a polite but determined voice, "Watch your language, men, there are ladies in the area."

It seems the men discussing the game were now both "cussing" and discussing it. They answered the man's request with assorted oaths, whereupon this gentleman went in the dorm and probably upstairs to where the others were, for shortly after he entered the oaths ceased.

I think the man who stopped the vulgar talk is a Carolina gentleman in the true sense of the expression. He certainly had courage. I am afraid most of us would have turned a deaf ear to the whole affair. I would like to thank this gentleman whom I do not know for helping to protect the good name of the University.

The second incident happened at the Wake Forest game when a player on the Wake Forest team was injured. When he got to his feet, our cheerleader, Norm Sper, led us in a cheer for the "Deac" player. Almost all of us responded all right; however, some students thought "it was a hell of a come off." Some said they hoped the "Deac" player never got up and others called Norm Sper unbecoming names.

In my opinion, Norm Sper is a good sport and a cheerleader extraordinary! I think that those who do not agree with the principles of good sportsmanship should have enough common decency to keep their rude remarks to themselves.

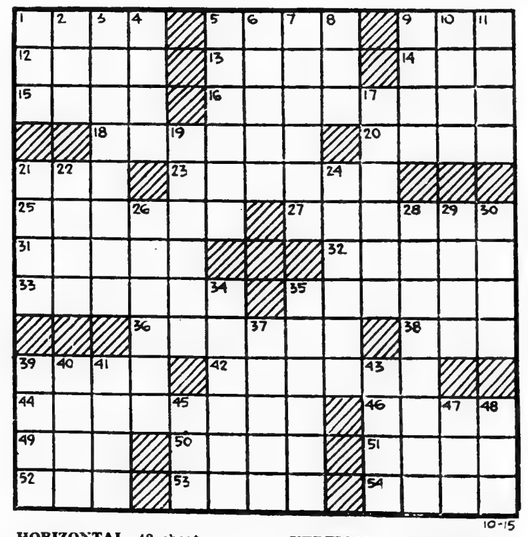
Pray For Poor Bill

Editor:



Columnist Bill Robertson manifests typical Soviet audacity in using as an epigraph to his column a quotation from America's distinguished godfather, Thomas Paine. If, by chance, innocent readers of Robertson's hogwash are misled into accepting a false analogy, this is to serve notice that Paine was not a pro-Communist advocate, nor was he in any way connected with the fanatical and diabolical movement which is "filling the world."

Neither were Franklin and Jefferson Communist theorists, as every school boy knows, although there are in this country Communist front organizations known as the "Paine Society," "Jefferson club" and "Franklin society." Such naked affronts are, of course, not only a great insult to the lofty principles of those men, but an insult to the intelligence of the informed reader as well.

But can we any longer expect honesty and fairness to emanate from the Kremlin hoodlums—whom columnist Robertson would fashion us after were it within his power?

Mr. Editor and fellow students, what say we utter a prayer for poor ole befuddled Bill—"God forgive him, for he know not what he doeth."

The Right to Kick

A GROUP OF GENTLEMEN who really have a legitimate kick coming will wander onto Fetzer field at an appropriate hour this afternoon to engage in the fine old continental game of soccer. There will be two teams in question with the home town boys attempting to make good, while entertaining Loyola of the gay Eastern city of Baltimore.

The Loyalists, not a team to be kicked around, are expected to cordially accept the invitation of Coach Marvin Allen's fellows. Not only will they show up, says the press clippings, but they will also be out to show up the Tar Heels. And they have the All-American talent with which to do it.

Strangely enough, Master Allen does not maintain too much of a worried look. He seems to figure that the Tar Heels may lose, but they might not, and anyhow, think of the experience that will be gained. His quiet look of satisfaction would bother old Beelzebub himself, proving the local legmen may have something up their sleeves besides their T-shirts.

The Man Behind

NEEDLESS TO SAY, the scoreboard is but an incident, and regardless of today's outcome, soccer is a growing sport at Carolina. It has outgrown its original baby shoes and shot up in some three years as a varsity sport to the definite clodhopper stage. One doesn't worry, but often stops to wonder how big it can get.

Much of the growth of soccer on the Carolina campus is due to one man—Marvin Allen. The bespectacled tutor of the manly art of putting the best foot forward has done everything to promote the game on the Carolina campus short of playing himself—an action prohibited by the current eligibility rules. His quiet attitude prevents his receiving the notoriety afforded some of his publicity-seeking colleagues.

Coach Allen has long been a graduate of the do more, talk less, school of athletic endeavor. Previous to taking on his duties as head of the Tar Heel bootery, Allen was the drive shaft in the smooth-working Carolina intramural machine. For something to do these chilly fall mornings, he also scores a couple of times a day in the classes taught department. An Allen "C" is taken and appreciated.

History Mystery

THE HISTORY OF SOCCER is a rather dull picture in the mind of the Faithful scribe. The game, like most, looks to have had its origin many long years ago. Seems the Barbaric tribes throughout the world got the idea of introducing a token of competition to battle over in place of just conking each other on the head for some prescribed period of time.

Out of their efforts came the ball, although in the early days, it is said, the boys used a human skull for their play toy. They had to give it up finally because the hard noggins played havoc with their bare feets, and then was substituted something softer in the nature of stuffed animal skin. It did wonders for the world athletic picture.

With the refinement of society in general, came the polishing up of the game into something with rules and a definite purpose. Today's soccer is quite an art like its athletic brothers, but you still primarily kick the ball with the foot through the goal. Times haven't changed much as people would have you believe.

Up and Coming

GOOD OLD FOOTBALL is something of an outgrowth of the soccer family. The Americans merely took the game, made it over into the world's most complex sport and renamed it football. Some of the old signs still show through the numerous coats of paint that have been slapped on. The Europeans call their rugby-soccer football for the benefit of Continentals and the general confusion of American sports writers.

Collegiate soccer is catching fast throughout the country. It has long found a tower of strength among Eastern schools and now moves forth in all directions. They even tried to introduce the sport at Notre Dame one time, but it didn't fit the Irish temperament too well.

As the story goes, the new coach met the candidates on the first day of practice, explained the rules of the game and closed his remarks, "If you can't kick the ball, kick one of the opponents." Whereupon he called for a ball to begin scrimmage, but none was currently available.

"Forget the ball, coach," one of the recruits replied. "Let's get on with the game."

Compound Interest

THE INTRODUCTION AND GROWTH of soccer on the Carolina campus typifies local efforts to present the complete athletic program to fit all tastes and abilities. Soccer helps to build up a slightly lean fall sports schedule which features only football and cross country.

The real college athletic program should have all the sports well represented. A great football team, in some ways, is a very dangerous instrument for it can overshadow and crush many minor sports as it has done on many a college campus.

The solution is some, if not equal interest in the minor sports. Soccer in England has outdrawn any football game ever played in this country, proof positive that there's something more to the game than 22 players. Some Tar Heel fans may not know what they are missing.

It certainly is one way to get your kicks.

Booters Meet Loyola; Swim Card Released

Tar Heel Team Faces Tough Foe At Fetzer Field

By Larry Fox

A revamped Carolina soccer team will take the field against Loyola this afternoon at 3 o'clock on Fetzer field in the Tar Heels' first home game of the campaign.

The local booters dropped their first contest of the season to Navy last week in Annapolis by a 2-0 count to the Naval Academy team.

The forward line is the subject of the most drastic changes with only two members of the quintet which saw action against the Middies sure of starting berths this afternoon. In addition, neither will be playing in the same position as last week.

Dave Boak and Dave Ferrebee are the two positive holdovers. Boak will open at center forward instead of his old position of outside left and replace Ferrebee, who will occupy the inside right slot.

Bach or Moore

Joe Bach, who formerly performed at inside right may move over to right wing. However, if the sore toe which hampered him during practice this week is not healed, Bill Moore will get the nod. Moore was on the wing against Navy.

Pete Hexner is the incumbent at inside left but John Langley has been looking very good in practice during the week and may start. Hexner has the edge, though.

Tommy Jordan, who has been coming along very well in recent weeks will fill the empty left wing post. Jordan was discovered in the intramural five-man soccer tourney last spring when he played with ATO. Hexner is another product of mural competition.

Halfbacks the Same

The trio of halfbacks will probably be the same with co-captain Jesse Greenbaum, Gus Johnston, and Mac Hagaman comprising the line. Bob Plumb has been pushing Hagaman for the right half spot and will probably see action even if he doesn't start.

The defensive set-up will be the same with co-captain Frank Nelson and Wally Vreeland at fullback and Al Williams guarding the nets.

The visiting squad arrived in Chapel Hill late last night and stayed in the State Police barracks by Intramural field.

Referee for today's contest will be Worth Hedrick of High Point.

U. of Choo-Choo It Says Here

Further proof that the fame of Charlie Justice and the Tar Heel powerhouse is widespread, comes from a local student. On Tuesday this student received a letter postmarked Seattle, Washington.

However, this was no ordinary letter. The address contained only the student's name and "The University of Choo-Choo."

The letter reached the addressee in record time.

Tar Heels Climax Heavy Work; Wolfpack Top Defensive Team

A day of tough and thorough drilling climaxed the week's hard work for Carolina's Tar Heels on Navy field yesterday afternoon. The pace-setters of the nation go against the N. C. State Wolfpack in Kenan stadium on tomorrow in their annual Homecoming game. A crowd of better than 40,000 is in prospect for the perennial affair, and this week's sales indicate a possible sellout.

The Tar Heel's powerful offensive machine will be up against the nation's top defensive club on Saturday and may find the going rough. Latest Associated Press compilations show that the Wolfpack has yielded no more than 407 yards to Clemson, Duke, and Davidson, an average of slightly less than 136 yards per game.

No Scoring Punch

Despite their great defensive record, the Raleigh boys have won only one game this season. In their first outing they lacked the scoring punch to go with stout defense and managed only a 0-0 tie with Duke. The following week the Pack dropped a 12-6 battle to Clemson's tough eleven. Last week's 40-0 defeat of Davidson was the first time that the Pack had shown an offensive spurt all year.

The Tar Heel's staunch forward wall outranks the State outfit, however, as it has allowed an average of only 58.3 yards per game against three strong opponents. With this and the fact that Coach Carl Snavely will be using his two-team system in view, it appears that the Wolfpack will have to cope with a front line on Saturday far more powerful than any it has encountered to date.

Tar Heels Ready

Coach Snavely realizes that the Statemen might be a great deal tougher than a lot of people think and has cautioned his Tar Heels all week about over-confidence and lax playing. Yesterday's drill reflected the Snavely influence perfectly. The Carolinians were working hard and showing up well. The team as a whole seems to have improved greatly over last week and should give their neighboring rivals more than they have bargained for tomorrow afternoon.

State Works Out In Secret Session As NC-Day Nears

RALEIGH, N. C., Oct. 15.—(UP)—North Carolina State coach Beattie Feathers scheduled his Wolfpack's toughest drill of the week yesterday, as the State squad continued its secret practices to ward off North Carolina scouts.

Feathers bore down heavily on defensive maneuvering in yesterday's sessions, working on strategy to stop the 16-cylinder North Carolina passing and running attack. Trainers indicated that tackle Ted Dostanko, still limping with injuries, may miss the North Carolina game.

High Gridders Idle This Week

Coach Bill Grice's Chapel Hill high Wildcats, unbeaten in four starts, will take a well earned holiday today, which is the first open date on their rugged schedule. However, the Wildcats are already putting in plenty of hard work in preparation for next Saturday's tilt with the strong Oxford Orphanage eleven on the local field.

The Wildcats have shown plenty of strength in early competition, rolling over Methodist Orphanage, Oxford high, Mebane, and Durham county in succession, and local fans are hoping for an undefeated season.

VOLLEYBALL LISTS

All dormitory and sorority volleyball captains must turn in the lists of their teams and players to Peanut Baine, 404 Spencer Hall immediately. The tournament will begin Tuesday.

Casey Arranges Tough Schedule For Local Pool

By Bill Burgess

Coach Ralph Casey, local swimming mentor, today released the Tar Heel swimming schedule for the coming year. There will be four meets away from home and four of them will be in Bowman Gray Pool. These, however, include only dual meets, for the Tar Heels will participate in other larger events.

This new lineup of teams is doubtless the most ambitious schedule ever arranged for the locals. They will not only engage the usual top flight competition, but also some additional foes.

The first new foe to be met will be La Salle University on January 22 in Chapel Hill. La Salle has been one of the leading teams in the country for the past few years. They have many individual stars, the most outstanding of them being Joe Verdeur. He holds the world's record in the breaststroke and was Olympic champion in his specialty. Verdeur is rated as one of the best swimmers ever produced in the United States, and Carolina students are fortunate in having a chance to see him perform.

Top Outfit Scheduled

The other new opponent and the highlight of the dual meet schedule is Ohio State. Every year they have one of the best aggregations in the nation. Their string of eighteen consecutive triumphs in the three most important national meets was only broken last year. For six straight years they had won the National Intercollegiate championships, both outside and indoors, and the National AAU; hence they have reigned over all swimming outfits in this nation.

Ohio State, also, has furnished

Kappa Sig 2 Earns Second Win By Blanking Lambda Chi 1 Crew

Kappa Sigma 2 levied fair warning on the rest of the Fraternity Tag Football league when they trampled on their second straight foe, Lambda Chi 1, yesterday to the eye-opening score of 47-0. In two contests the torrid Sig's have amassed 80 points while holding their opponents scoreless.

Phi Kappa Sig also rolled up the count against St. Anthony, 25-0, while Ott Evans led a hustling Phi Delt 1 crew to victory over PiKa 1, also by 25-0 In another rout Sigma Chi arose with a strong second half to subdue Beta 2 to the tune of 33-0.

In clashes that were a bit closer, AEPi nipped Sigma Nu 2 in an overtime tussle, 7-6, and Kappa Psi triumphed in a thriller over KA 3 that was decided when KA's Jack Jackson stepped out of the end zone for a safety that awarded the Kappa Psi's a 2-0 win.

John McCary's touchdown gave Kappa Sig 1 a 7-0 decision over Phi Gam 2 and Pi Lambda Phi overcame a halftime deficit to edge PiKa 2, 12-7.

The Dormitory competition resulted in much closer games. The Bombers managed to nip Aycock on a second half tally by Jack Tilley and in another tight affair, Med School 2 eked out a 6-0 win over BVP.

The Termites, competing with only seven men, shaded Alexander Dorm, 8-0. Law School suffered its initial setback at the hands of Oakwood Drive, 12-7, and the AROTC 2 squad succumbed to the onslaught of the Fireballs, 14-0.

PROGRAM SELLERS

There will be a meeting of program sellers this afternoon at 3 o'clock in 109 Woollen.

The same personnel that sold programs for the Texas game will be used for the Saturday game with State.

Final Cast Announced For Playmaker Comedy

By Mark Sumner

The final cast list for the Carolina Playmaker production of John Van Druten's two act comedy, "I Remember Mama," was announced last night by Lynn Gault, play director. Nineteen students and four Chapel Hill residents are taking roles in the play, which opens next Wednesday for a four-day run.

The leading role of "Katrin" will be played by Edna Dooley, who played in last summer's presentation of "As You Like It" in the Forest theater. "Mama" will be acted by Louise Lamont. Miss Lamont, who has returned to the University for special courses, has appeared professionally with Tallulah Bankhead, Fred Stone, and Glenda Farrell.

James Geiger takes his 38th role with the Playmakers as the rough talking but kindly "Uncle Chris," and Julie Johns will play "Dagmar." Ellen Smith will portray "Christine," and Harry Davis appears as "Papa."

Four newcomers are making their appearances with the Playmakers. They are Margaret Healy as "Sigrid," Estelle Ritchie as "Trina," Charles Williamson as "Nels," and William Buckley as "Mr. Hyde."

Josephine Sharkey, local resident who formerly acted with the famed Ben Greet players, is taking the role of "Jenny," and Frank Groseclose, who played the Dauphin in "Saint Joan" last year, is "Mr. Thorkelson." Nat White is appearing as "Dr. Johnson," Paul Valentine is appearing as "Arne," and Louisa Mustin will portray "Florence".

Others in the cast include: Martha Pierpont as "Madeline," Carolyn Green as "Dorothy," and Marty Jacobs as the "Intern." Nurses are Patricia Peteler and Jantha Smart. Small roles are being acted by James Byrd, Catherine McDonald, Georgiana Spellvin, and John Kirkman.

Reserved seat tickets for the play are available at Ledbetter-Pickard's on Franklin street, and at the Playmaker business office in Swain hall. Season ticket books are also available, and tickets will be sold at the box office on performance nights.

more men for the Olympic swimming team than any other squad in the country. Two of these Olympic champions, Bill Smith, distance swimmer, and Bruce Harlan, diver, are still members of the team. This meet will be held at Ohio State this year, but they will come South next year.

Carolina will also inaugurate an invitational swimming meet during the Thanksgiving weekend. It will be a three day meet with a member of outstanding teams and stars participating. The teams, however, have not been announced yet.

Georgia Tech Here

The Southeastern conference champions, Georgia Tech, will also be engaged here. Another swimming power coming up from the deep south is Emory university.

The Tar Heels will meet again four of their traditional Southern conference foes. They will start the dual meet schedule by invading Duke in early December. The other three conference foes are VMI, State, and Virginia Tech.

Carolina has not yet definitely been assigned the Southern conference championships, but it is probable that they will be held in Bowman Gray pool in early March.

Before launching their schedule, Coach Casey has arranged for the locals to obtain some outside competition by holding two practice meets with State in the first two weeks of November. State, coached by Willis Casey, brother of the local coach, will again be one of the top-flight teams in the conference.

Schedule: November 25-27—Invitational, here; Dec. 9—Duke, there; Jan. 8—VMI, there; Jan. 22—La Salle, here; Jan. 29—Ga. Tech, here; Jan. 31—VPI, here; Feb. 5—Ohio State, there; Feb. 18—Emory, here; Feb. 25—State, there.

Carolina, State Battle In Homecoming Contest Today

'Pack, Strong On Defense, Tops Nation

By Dick Jenrette

The nation's number one team—Carolina—and the nation's number one defensive team — N. C. State — renew their long and colorful rivalry in Kenan stadium this afternoon in a Big Four and Southern conference battle before an expected homecoming crowd of 44,000. The kickoff will be at 2 o'clock.

The Tar Heels, undefeated in three starts this year and winners of their last ten starts over a two-year span, are regarded in most quarters as a 20-point favorite over the visitors from Raleigh. State can boast no more than a record of one win, one loss, and a tie. Duke and State tied, 0-0, in the Wolfpack's opening game, Clemson defeated them, 6-0, the following week, but last Saturday, State found itself in taking Davidson's measure by the convincing score of 40-0.

Despite the mediocre record, Coach Beattie Feather's Wolfpack tops the nation from a defensive standpoint, according to statistics released this week. Carolina's ranking as the leading grid eleven in the land provides a perfect billing for the afternoon.

Revenge Motive

The Wolfpack has a strong revenge motive to fire it for today's encounter. Last year the Tar Heels romped to a 41-6 victory, surprising even their most ardent fans by the ease with which the win was scored.

Carolina will be minus two of its key performers. Don Hartig, regular blocking back, has been out with a leg injury since the Georgia contest. He may not see further action this year. The second casualty is more recent. Fred Sherman, the youthful wingback who has been particularly impressive recently, has a bad knee which will prevent his playing today.

Sherman sustained his injury in last week's 28-6 conquest of Wake Forest. It will keep him on the sidelines for a couple of weeks at the least.

Only One Injury

In the State camp, Tackle Ted Dostanko is the only player that may miss the game because of injury. He has missed all the drills this week but may get into the action. Ace Tailback Gwynn Fletcher also has been slowed up somewhat by injuries but will be ready to go against Carolina.

Although the State offense did click for 40 points against Davidson last week, most Wolfpack supporters are basing their victory hopes on a strong defensive game. Coach Feathers, in his drills recently, has emphasized this phase of the team's play.

Pi Phi Entry Is Selected Beauty Queen

By Herb Nachman

Memorial hall rocked to the tune of "Dixie" and "Beat State" last night as 1,800 Carolina students touched off the Homecoming weekend festivities.

The barely-filled auditorium was the scene of a pre-game rally that held more surprises in store than even Head Cheerleader Norm Sper expected.

Charleen Greer of Tulsa, Oklahoma was chosen as Homecoming Queen from sixteen contestants by judges Katherine Carmichael, E. L. Mackie and Jess Dedmond. Charleen represented Pi Beta Phi sorority.

Several times during a lull in the rally, the students rose to their feet and began singing "Dixie." The first time, they were accompanied by the band, but after that, the highly spirited group persisted in rising at every opportunity and hoarsely singing what one student described as "Our National Anthem."

Once during the program, two students stood on the Memorial hall platform bearing a banner which read "We want the Seutlebutt." The demonstration was accompanied by loud cheers.

Three State college cheerleaders, Warren Smith and Johnny and Worth Barber, were on hand to join in leading the cheers.

Four girls were chosen to serve in the Homecoming Queen's court when she is crowned before the game today at 1:30 in Kenan stadium.

Members of the court are Patty Ann Frizzell, McIver, from Bristol, Tenn.; Helen Bouldin, Chi Omega, Clarksdale, Miss.; Sarah Jane Farlow, ADPi, Augusta, Ga.; and Betty Loke, Spencer, Raleigh.

Charleen will present the Homecoming cup to the fraternity, sorority or dormitory which wins the lawn display contest. Judges for the contest are Dr. W. A. Olsen, Mrs. L. V. Huggins and Noel Houston. The cup is given by the University club and will be presented at halftime.

State UN Week To Be Observed

State headquarters of the CCUN announced yesterday that the week of Oct. 17-24 is being observed as United Nations week throughout the state.

Programs for use in churches have been sent to all college chapters of CCUN for distribution in their sections, Roberta Sterling, state head of CCUN said.

"GRANNY" ENGLISH has been following the conquests of the Carolina football squad for 23 years—not in Kenan stadium where she'd like to be, but close to her radio and in the sports pages of the Daily Tar Heel. Today, 75-year-old "Granny" will see her first football game, with flowers and all the trimmings.

Granny To See Game After 75-Year Wait

By Lincoln Kan

For 23 years, 75-year-old Mrs. "Granny" English of Carrboro has been an avid fan of the Tar Heel football team.

She has followed every game the team has played, through the sports pages and the radio. Last week she complained vehemently after the Wake Forest debacle, "I wish visitors wouldn't come during the football broadcasts. I missed the entire first half. Weren't the boys wonderful?"

Although "Granny" is an ardent fan, she has never actually seen a football game. So today when the team plays State at the Homecoming day contest, Mrs. English will see her first game as the guest of the Daily Tar Heel.

Norm Sper, head cheerleader, has special plans for "Granny" and one of the plans is that she will receive a corsage with all the trimmings.

"Granny" has more than the average lady-listener's knowledge of the art of football. In fact, she recently asked if the clipping penalty wasn't a little too severe since "in the old days, the boys use to do a lot of straight-arming, and I'm sure they would call that illegal if they could. Clipping hmmph! The boys were just getting a little rough-that's all."

She sang high praises of this year's eleven, saying she felt that the team is really playing like a team and not just individual stars. "Of course, I think that Hosey, Choo-Choo and Szafaryn are wonderful . . . and so are the rest of the boys. I wish I could meet them all," she added.

As to the prospects of seeing her first game "Granny" said, "I wish you hadn't told me so early. Now I won't be able to sleep at nights." Granny will be escorted to the game by her 12-year old grandson Jimmy Campbell.

Halftime Program

The University band will appear at half-time today in a coordinated maneuver with the North Carolina State college band. Earl Slocum, director, said yesterday.

First formation will be a huge staff and pennants, with each band forming the letter of its school—"C" for Carolina and "S" for State. Final formation will be an American flag, with the red, white and blue of the two groups' uniforms providing color, and music provided by the playing of "Stars and Stripes Forever."

Ten Librarians Depart Tuesday For Conference

Six members of the University library staff and four members of the Library school will leave for Louisville, Ky., on Tuesday to attend sessions of the Southeastern Library association, to be conducted through Oct. 23.

J. I. Copeland of the documents department is chairman of the association's reference section, and Miss Frances L. Yocom of the catalog department will take part in a round-table discussion on cataloging.

Others of the staff who will attend include C. E. Rush, head librarian; W. P. Kellam, assistant librarian; Miss Georgia Faison, reference department; and George Bentley, circulation department.

Representing the Library school will be Dr. L. R. Wilson, who will speak on the findings of the Southeastern States Cooperative Library survey; Miss Mary E. Anders, who will present a paper at the meeting of the reference section; Dean Susan Grey Akers, who will give a report on the meeting of the Division of Cataloging and Classification in connection with the A. L. A. Atlantic City conference; and Miss Elaine von Oesen.

Quonset Base Repair Shop Razed by Million-Dollar Fire

QUONSET POINT, R. I., Oct. 15.—(UP)—The huge engine repair shop at Quonset naval air station was destroyed by fire tonight with a loss of "more than $1,000,000."

The fire started in the cleaning and repair section and spread rapidly as it fed on cleaning materials and grease.

It was sweeping out of control before base firemen arrived from their station, only about 200 yards away.

Lt. Comdr. R. W. Glasgow said that engines in all stages of repair were destroyed and that total damage would be "well over $1,000,000" when their value was added to that of the building and equipment.

Five persons were injured slightly when the west wall of the building, which covers an area about the size of a football field, collapsed.

The most severely injured was a civilian fire fighter who suffered a broken right ankle. Four sailors also were injured and treated at the station hospital.

Glasgow said that the flames were stopped by a firewall before they could damage the other parts of the overhaul and repair building, the largest structure at the air base.

Quonset's 67-man fire department was on the scene almost immediately and help was called from North Kingstown, East Greenwich, Warwick, West Warwick and Hillsgrove. There were several minor explosions as the flames gained in intensity and sent up huge columns of black smoke that darkened Narragansett Bay.

Glasgow said the engine shop was in complete operation when the fire broke out. He said the exact number of engines in the building at the time was not known, but that the value of those lost would reach a "considerable figure."

Hull Calls Dewey Claim Dangerous

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15. — (UP) — Former Secretary of State Cordell Hull said tonight that Gov. Thomas E. Dewey was "incorrect" when he claimed authorship of the bi-partisan foreign policy and that such statements were endangering U. S. foreign affairs.

He said the "melancholy importance" of the Dewey statement is that it is "Only the latest of many" in which credit was claimed for "patriotic effort by members of both political parties."

"If these competitive claims continue," he cautioned, "they will inject partisanship into the conduct of our foreign affairs quite as effectively as though the debate were directed toward the substance of our policies."

The venerable Tennessean recalled that Dewey told a Louisville audience during the 1944 campaign that the American people would be so fully informed on efforts to keep the peace that such efforts never would be subjected to partisan politics.

"I heartily agreed with that statement then and recommend it now to all who speak for either party during the remainder of this campaign," he said.

Dixiecrats Name Earl Fitzgerald To Top Position

Earl Fitzgerald, president of the Young States Rights Democrats, was installed at the meeting held Thursday night in the Grail room of Graham Memorial.

Other officers installed were Robert Goodwin, vice-president; Charlie Hodson, secretary; Ben Erdman, treasurer and Bob Smith and Douglas Carter co-chairmen of publicity.

Fitzgerald said, "We must talk, and talk sensibly to the people on the campus who we know are interested. Our influence will be more than we realize. We do not want a 'hip-hip-hooray' program but we are trying to get the Democratic party to be Democrats themselves. We must let the Democratic party know that when the platform is being made we are still here."

Material recently received from national headquarters was distributed and will be made into displays and placed on the bulletin board of each dormitory.

The meeting was adjourned by the vice-president, Bob Goodwin.

Charges Democrats Are Disrupt, Split

By Sam McKeel

Senator Robert A. Taft, speaking before a Memorial hall audience of 1600, yesterday charged that President Truman is trying to run for president against the 80th Congress.

SENATOR ROBERT A. TAFT

"He cannot do this," Taft said, "he must run against Mr Dewey."

Taft said that Truman denounces the 80th Congress "not because of its faults, but because it utterly disagreed with his political views."

"The New Deal wants to spend and spend and tax and tax," Taft told his audience. "I have never heard Mr. Truman mention economy or waste. He goes around ordering so much money to do something, and says if we cut the appropriation by one cent, we'll ruin everything."

Speaking of the Taft-Hartley act, Taft said, "Our act was to restore the balance to collective bargaining. Just as an employer was forced by the Wagner act to negotiate and sign a contract, employees under our act must do the same thing. It is an act to restore equality."

Taft charged that the Democratic party is disrupt and divided into three parts. "On one hand," he said, "is Wallace, with his extreme rational views. Then is Thurmond and his States Rights, who have completely broken with Truman. Then there is the Truman wing and the balance of the Democratic party, largely now a labor party, dominated by small groups."

"The Democrats have no adequate leader," Taft said. "Roosevelt held them together by the force of his personality. It is not Truman's fault altogether that the party has divided." On federal contrals, Taft said if price and wage controls are adopted during peacetime "I don't think we'll ever get rid of them."

On states' rights Taft remarked, "I have covered most of the difficulties between Truman and the 80th Congress, and as usual I always get back to the same point. I believe that the federal government should be held down as much as possible. The federal government should leave the states and communities to run their own affairs. If it weren't for the theory of states rights, we'd be telling every county and every school district how to run their affairs."

Continuing on states' and individual rights, Taft said, "I think that we should see that every family has a minimum standard of living, and that every child has an equal opportunity." As for free medical attention Taft said that he thinks that the government should approve federal grants to the states, if they need it to provide them free medical attention. "But I do not agree, he said with Truman's concept of taxing the people five billion dollars, putting this money into a federal bureau, and letting this bureau pay all doctors in the country. This cuts off the freedom of the medical profession."

Taft concluded his speech by saying, "I can't understand why a Southern Democrat who disagrees with Mr. Truman on every issue that I have presented shouldn't vote Republican this year."

Sponsored by the Carolina Forum and the Young Republican club, Taft was introduced by John Wilkinson, Republican candidate for the United States Senate.

Colclough Talks To Delta Sigmas

Delta Sigma Pi launched its professional program for the year on Thursday night with an address by George D. Colclough, executive secretary of the Burlington chamber of commerce.

Colclough's subject was "The Chamber of Commerce Executive and his Job." He pointed out the qualities and personality characteristics required of the executive and the duties and functions of the executive secretary and his committeemen.

This was the first of a series of such programs to be given during the year. Others will include discussions on accounting, labor, politics, and marketing.

Interdorm Council To Meet Monday

The Men's Inter-Dormitory Council will meet on Monday evening at 6:30 in the main lounge of Graham Memorial, it was announced yesterday. Advisers and last year's dormitory presidents are urged to be present.

'Best To You' Beats Date Taboo

By Jim Dickinson

"Old songs bring back beautiful memories—like this one from a boy at Carolina to a girl on third floor at Meredith." Then softly forth from your radio flows the voice of Frank Sinatra and the familiar strains of an old melody, "I"ll Never Smile Again."

It's somewhere between 11:05 o'clock and midnight, and you—along with several thousand other students on campus—have dialed your radio to WPTF in Raleigh for a few restful and smoothing moments with Jimmy Capps and his program of popular and concert recordings, "Our Best To You."

Capps' program is aired nightly Monday through Friday and features a wide variety of songs new and old, popular, symphony, waltz and almost any other type tune the requestful public so desires.

Disc Party Gives Lovers More Time

The program is for the most part a request show and all it takes to be presented is a penny postcard and a million dollars worth of love you'd like to send via recording to that dream girl or Lochinvar who rates a little higher than average in your address book.

Capps describes his program as "music which is designed to be heard with the heart." In making the dedications his soft, velvety voice has a quality which creates for the listener an atmosphere drenched with sentimentality.

The program goes on the air at just the appropriate time for the folks with a flair for romance. "Dating" hours have slipped by and through compulsion boy and girl have torn themselves away. Gaily she trips her delightful way up the Spencer staircase while he dances away, song in heart, toward the lower quad. In a matter of seconds both have flicked their radio dials and are "sending their best to each other."

This program through dedications undoubtedly accomplishes many deeds which otherwise

Local Hi-Y Group Meet Tomorrow

The University Hi-Y association of Chapel Hill will meet tomorrow afternoon at 4:30 in the upstairs lobby of the campus YMCA building, to organize their plans for the coming year.

It is hoped that four clubs will be formed, but since the advisors who were active last year are not available, planning will depend upon finding replacements.

Men interested in being advisors should see Buddy Crone, graduate student of education, or Bob Barrus, member of the University YM staff, who are in charge of planning this program.

Barrus and Crone met last Thursday with 54 boys interested in developing campus Hi-Y activities.

Late News Bulletins

Tomato Target

ST. PAUL, Minn., Oct. 15.—(UP)—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey made a farmer-to-farmer bid for Republican votes in agricultural Minnesota tonight by promising that his administration would give farmers "less politics and more practical help."

Dewey spoke from the St. Paul auditorium after a day-long tour through southern Minnesota marred by a second tomato-throwing incident and by a chorus of boos when Sen. Joseph H. Ball, (R) Minn., was introduced.

The tomato-throwing occurred as the campaign special pulled out of Albert Lea in southern Minnesota. The tomato struck Ball on the shoulder and part of it spattered on Mrs. Dewey's dress.

Trade Increase

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15. — (UP)—The Commerce department today reported a big rise in American trade with Russia and her eastern European satellites during August.

The department said this country exported $14,000,000 worth of goods to the iron curtain states in August, almost tripling the July volume of $5,300,000.

Support Withdrawn

HENDERSONVILLE, N. C., Oct. 15—(UP)—North Carolina State's Rights Democrats, who have no candidates for state and congressional offices, have withdrawn their endorsement of regular democratic candidates for the posts, Chairman Philip S. Finn, Jr., announced today.

Lost in the Rush

So you're a freshman and you got a bid to be rushed by a fraternity, and even after reading the rushing rules you are still a little confused as to what to expect and what will be expected of you; yet you hate to ask questions of upper classmen because everyone else seems to know what the score is and you don't want to appear dumb. Well, don't let it worry you. You aren't the first person who found himself in the dark during a rush period. Most of the men sporting fraternity pins couldn't have told you the exact score when they were being rushed, and some would have been happier had they asked questions before instead of after they pledged.

You weren't born knowing everything, and there's a lot of information the rushing rules didn't cover, so go ahead and ask questions. For accurate and unbiased information call Jack Thompson, president of the Inter-fraternity Council, at 3031, or go by the office of the dean of men and talk to Bill Friday. When you visit fraternity houses, ask questions of the members. Fraternities know it only hurts them to take in members under false pretenses, so they will be glad to tell you anything an outsider has a right to know. Ask the same question of several people in the same fraternity and if their answers don't jibe, steer clear of that group.

Although you should consider the national reputation of a fraternity and the strength of its alumni association in the area in which you intend to live, the main criterion in making a choice should be whether you like the men in the local chapter, for they are the ones with whom you will be associated for the rest of your college career. Don't be too impressed by a big house until you check the amount of the mortgage on it, and if a fraternity asks you to join, it is a good idea to find out what the approximate total cost will be to you.

Above all don't be rushed into committing yourself hurriedly. If you don't get a bid from the group you like, you can always wait awhile and be rushed again later. And if you aren't asked to join a fraternity, just remember that fraternities are just a sidelight in college life and not the most important thing here, as some would have you believe. You can have a lot of fun in a fraternity, but you can have just as much outside.

Back Home Again

One of the remarkable things about the University is its ability to belong to so many people. Students, faculty, alumni and even people in the state who never went to any college speak of it possessively as "our" University, and all are happy to share it with as many others as possible. It is a University that truly belongs to the people of its state.

Today, Homecoming day, many alumni will come to Chapel Hill to revisit their alma mater, and today "our" University belongs particularly to them. May they feel as much at home here now as they did when they were here as students.

Might Make A Democrat

Senator Robert Taft of Ohio was a creditable representative of the Republican party when he spoke here yesterday. In the short time he had he did a good job of presenting his views, and on most points the reasoning behind his views was acceptable.

In fact, if the senator would drop his isolationism and some of his conservativeness, he would make a pretty fair Democrat.

ON CAMPUS

EAGER BEAVERS. Members of the Young Democrats Club are about to decide to knock themselves out to form a motorcade to go meet Truman in Raleigh. All they need is cars, and more cars—so that's where the knocking out comes—not in order to find people to fill the cars.

PRIDE AND JOY of Nelson Benton is his new bass drum—"the smallest one in captivity!" Leave us hope we hear more from him.

IN MEMORY of those poor mortals who are still sniffling from the woes of the triple cases of pneumonia that have hit the campus, we have a mighty helpful suggestion. Try some of the tomato or grapefruit juice in the Rendezvous Room. We had been guzzling down cokes and coffee; but after that discovery, we were converted to the ranks of fruit juice imbibers.

OH SO GENTLE! Our imagination lacks the necessary elasticity to stretch this far. Maybe yours can do better. Can you picture last week's touchdown man Bill Maceyko walking the floor with a homesick puppy at 4 o'clock in the morning?

WHO DAT? Bill Duncan's pride, egotism, and complacency must have dropped at least 50 per cent when he tried to maneuver his way into one of the photo rooms and got all sorts of remarks such as, "Who the blah, blah, blah does he think he is?"

ON THE AIR. Looks as if we've really hit the bright lights, what with Bob Watson getting a wire from CBS for permission to broadcast "Tar Heels on Hand." "Carolina Victory March," and "Carolina Fight Song" today. Incidentally, Graham Memorial has the copyright on those numbers.

SERVING JUSTICE. If you get too hungry after mealtime around this place, just look up Choo Choo. Seems he and several friends were up at the Inn a few days ago after the dining room had closed. The head waiter got so excited and gave such a sales talk to the manager about the "most important man in North Carolina is out there!" that they finally let the party in. 'Course the manager still can't understand why he never did get to see Governor Cherry.

ELOISE JACOBI, we hear, has done a good enough deed to keep her on the Girl Scout role for the next 10 years. This is hard as heck to do, but that's all we can say.

YOU TELL US what in the sam hill the "quiz committee of the Coed senate" could be. Everything from another Dr. I. Q. program to a question and answer booth for Old Well has been suggested.

IMPORTANT IMPORT. For once in our Carolina life we are sincerely happy to hear about a girl's coming in town for the week-end. Guess that's because Pete Gerns looks so happy about Mary Lou Mason's coming over for the Taft address. Pete says she's going to cover it for her column in the WCUNC Carolinian.

CAFE SEVILLE. We put that first 'cause you might possibly be like us and know only one name for same—Steve's Place, that is. Anyhow—reports have it that the Irish tenor singing in cockney sounded mighty good.

IN TOWN:

PIONEERS. Did you notice that piece in Time or Newsweek about the big change in the Yale Daily News? We got a personal angle on it from Owen Marsh, son of Dr. English Bagby. He said in a letter home, "We got tired of paying huge printing bills and bought $22,000 worth of equipment—and now we do every step of the process of publishing our own paper. We are the first daily paper in the country to employ this particular publishing technique—combining Variatype with photo offset."

Why I Am Backing Thomas

By Jonathan Marshall

Jumping on the bandwagon is becoming a tradition with many people; however, voting for a winner is not essential to democracy. I do not feel that voting for Norman Thomas is throwing my vote away—it is voting for the only candidate in whose principles I believe. It is an honest vote.

In supporting Norman Thomas, and working for a large Thomas vote, I believe that there is a chance of helping to bring about a new political realignment for the next election. At present there is no other choice for "progressives."

What does Norman Thomas advocate? He is for expanding social security to cover all people, improvement of minimum wage standards, the adoption of a national health insurance program, the development of low cost public housing, a working program of civil rights, encouragement of family size farms and large scale cooperatives, and the building up of more valley authorities like the TVA.

In the field of foreign policy Thomas is for peace, but unlike Henry Wallace he is not for appeasing Russia. For many years he has fought to have peacetime military conscription outlawed throughout the world. A strong United Nations should supervise a world disarmament program; Norman Thomas also opposes the Security council veto.

Norman Thomas does not advocate these things because of political expediency—as the other candidates do—but he has been fighting for the same issues for twenty years. Many of the reforms of the New Deal were a result of this untiring struggle by a man who sincerely believed in what he said.

Truman's record has been one of blundering and reversals, and he has proven himself incapable as a leader. A Republican government would be governed by powerful lobbies, and the past record of Republicans forfeits their right to govern. Wallace, with the support of a group that does not believe in democracy, does not have the beautiful record that his followers claim. The only candidate remaining is Norman Thomas.

Robert M. LaFollette's old paper, "The Progressive" in coming out for Thomas said, "A vote for Norman Thomas is not only a vote for the most progressive ticket and platform in 1948, but . . . a call for immediate post-election organization of a genuinely progressive party."

As a New Deal Democrat, I have only one choice in this election — Norman Thomas. The Socialist candidate stands for a strong United Nations and European aid, and for a domestic policy of economic security.

A strong vote for Thomas will counteract Wallace's communists; and at the same time it will show the world that America wants and needs a new and virile liberal party, a party that all people who believe in democracy can support.

SP--Birth Of A Party

By Lincoln Kan

The campus political winds began to whirl and gather strength in 1938. They grew to hurricane strength and started to blow heavily against the formally unchallenged University party. The dorm men, led by Bill Cole had formed the Student party. The campus was suddenly faced with a two-party system which has, by giving the student body a choice, increased student government power and ability.

The Student party was formed as a result of constant mutterings about fair and representative treatment. It expressed the desires of the enlarging enrollment, of which only a small segment was fraternity men and members of the UP. They (the dorm men) wanted a strong voice in the matters concerning the campus.

The SP set up many planks for its platform. Most notable element was the demand for and adherance to an open meeting plan to nominate candidates. A plan which directly opposed the closed steering committee nominations of the then ruling University party. The SP also demanded increased representation of the non-frat men in non-political appointments. Its political philosophy was at that time based on the dorm men versus frat men angle, but nevertheless the new party was badly needed.

With the advent of a second party on the campus, politicing became fast and furious. Old time methods were discarded for newer campaign tactics to get the students to the fall and spring elections and to make sure that they voted right, or just plain voted.

There was a heated struggle over the many publication offices with loudspeakers blasting across the campus between Graham Memorial and BVP dorm in 1939. Finally the student government had to enact a campus election act modeled on the Hatch Act restricting campaigners to certain methods, funds, and ways.

The SP grew in strength, sweeping election after election, because they were truly representing the majority of the students. The opposing party fought a losing battle, because the old die-hards could not change their ways fast enough to meet the new demands.

Then came the call to service for Uncle Sam. Both parties lost their spark-plugs; however, politics went on under the constantly shifting leadership of those who were reaching draft age and the more permanent leadership of subtle coeds.

V-Jay day came and the men poured back to Carolina. Campus politics were at a low, and student government was tottering dangerously. Under the competent and intelligent sparking of men like Bill Crisp, Al Lowenstein, Charlie Long and Jimmy Wallace the Student party made a quick recovery and began to dominate the campus scene. By the fall of 1946 the SP became strong enough to make a determined bid for the major offices of the student government. It was during the years following the war that the SP prodded for action until a new constitution was written for the student government, making the University of North Carolina the only university with a complete and respected self-government.

Although the Student party has lost some ground in the past two years due to the formation of a third party, the Campus party, which we will later discuss, and also due to strong opposition of the UP, the members of the SP are confident that they will once more regain their vitality in order to better serve the campus. It was the Student party, as we have said before, that initiated the open meeting for nominations of campus leaders. This year should be interesting to watch to see what new planks the SP will have to offer the student body.

Atom and Atlantis

'There are strange things done beneath our dying sun
By the men who strive so bold.
The Siberian trails have their secret tales
That would make your blood run cold.
The heavenly lights have seen queer sights
But the queerest they'll ever see
Is when U.S.S.R. goes a little too far
And makes an inactive verb of "to be." '

I was talking to one of those fellows from Mars the other day (thought I'd better let you know). He was telling me how interesting he was finding the earth, especially the United States. Said he had a ten-to-the-minus-four uncle who had conducted a Mars-Earth expedition way back before we got around to sending a rocket ship out their way. His uncle had landed at a place called Atlantis a little over sixty thousand years ago, earth time, found things in pretty much of a mess and went back to tell a story that had discouraged any return to earth since.

I told him he needn't look for Atlantis as it had been given up as lost. He said he didn't mind much and he was sure that we were more interesting. . . .

I told him I'd like very much to visit his planet sometime. He expressed his enthusiasm to have me come to see him and then turned to leave. Just as he was about to enter his rocket ship, he paused, handed me an object and said; "It's something my uncle picked up in Atlantis when he was here before. I'd like to show my appreciation and return it."

When his ship zoomed out of sight in the direction of a very red star, I examined the small ring lying in my still open palm. It was solid gold and bore a very delicate inscription of an exploding atom.

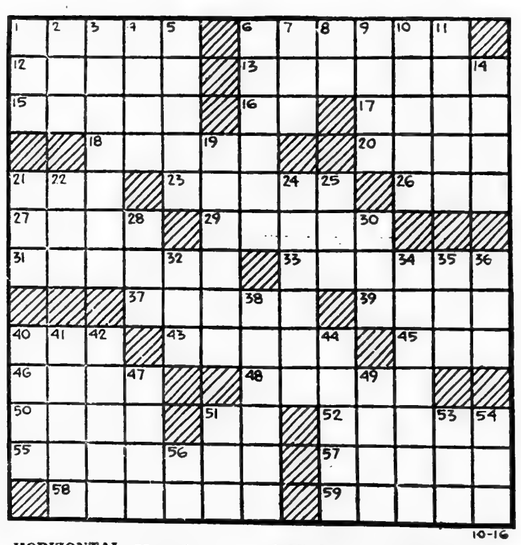
Talk to Uncle Joe

Editor:



This is to acquaint new students with some of the people who hide under the cover of "Write Away." I realize that this column is especially for the purpose of expressing one's feelings or for issuing a gripe, but who are the people that write in this column?

For the past few days, articles have been appearing in "Write Away" signed by one Claude V. Dunnagan. Who is Claude V. Dunnagan?

Mr. Dunnagan is an active member of the Progressive party. He is a personal friend of Junius Scales, who is affiliated with the Communist party. Mr. Dunnagan, as his articles state, is a disbeliever of Communism and a true American—but do Americans go around quoting Al Capone's politics? "We must keep the worker away from Red literature and Red ruses; we must see that his mind is healthy," so said Mr. Capone, then of Alcatraz—a true American. What could be more against the democratic way of life than to keep the American people in the dark, and it is in the dark if we're not allowed to see how the Reds operate.

If Mr. Dunnagan believes that everything bad has been labeled as "Communist," then I suggest that he have a heart to heart talk with "Joe" and find out what he thinks. If Mr. D escapes the salt mines, there will be one more human that failed to go over to the Communist way of life. If Mr. Dunnagan persists in writing about the "fantastic Red-smear campaign," may I suggest that he confine his articles to Wallace newspapers. Students at Carolina are not stupid and will not be taken in by this undercover method of Communist propaganda.

President Truman Accuses GOP Solons Of Ignoring 'The Fires Of Inflation'

80th Congress 'Plays Checkers' With Real Issues

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 15. — (UP). — President Truman tonight accused Republicans of playing "political checkers" when they should have been fighting the "fire of inflation."

He made the charge in a campaign speech in Indianapolis as he pushed his running attack against the Republican-controlled 80th Congress.

"For two long years we have been turning in fire alarms," Mr. Truman said. "And for two long years the Republican firemen have been too busy playing a game of political checkers to go put out the blaze.

"They figured that maybe the fire of inflation would burn itself out, or that it was un-American to put water on the flames.

"Now, that is a terrible way to run a fire department. But that's the way the Republican 80th Congress met the problem of inflation."

The speech, in some respects, was a defense against GOP attacks on his previous warnings that a Republican victory in November would plunge the nation into depression.

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, his GOP opponent, has claimed that Mr. Truman's depression talk is sabotaging the Marshall plan for European recovery and the United Nations meeting in Paris.

Republicans have claimed that the Russians use such campaign speeches to convince wavering Europeans that the United States is nearing the "bust" phase of a "boom and bust" cycle and will not be the strong ally they need for full recovery.

In response to that argument, the President said:

"Apparently I have offended the Republican gentleman who wants to be President. I'm afraid I have startled him by talking about depressions. Republicans don't like people to talk about depressions. You can hardly blame them for that."

Church Series Slates Lecture For Oct. 18

The first lecture in a series to be sponsored by the Chapel Hill Council of Churches has been set for Oct. 18 at 7:30 in the First Baptist church.

The Christian Education institute, official name of the program which will continue through Oct. 22, is one of the major activities for 1948 by the local Church council.

According to Rev. Charles Jones, dean of the institute, "The purpose of the institute is to make possible a deeper understanding of our Christian faith and to provide instruction in methods of interpreting this faith in our church schools and in our homes."

Dr. Preston Epps, professor in the classics department of the University, will present "A Guide to Understanding the Old Testament," and Mrs. E. H. Ould, widely known counselor and specialist in the field of the Christian home, will lead "Christian Home-Making Today."

Others to take part in the five-day program include Mrs. J. E. Adams, whose topic will be "Guiding Beginners in Christian Growth;" "Growth and Guidance of Primary Children," has been assigned to Mrs. C. D. Mohaffrey, Bristol, Tenn.; and Miss Sara Little of Charlotte, assistant director of the Presbyterian Synod's office of religious education, will study with her class "Teaching Juniors." The final speaker in the panel will be the executive secretary of the Fellowship of Southern Churchmen, Miss Nellie Morton.

'Get Clipped Cheap' Is Barbers' Motto Down in Graham Memorial Basement

The latest addition to Graham Memorial's agenda of services to students is the reopening of a shining, well-equipped barber shop designed to keep the men on campus well clipped. Under the management of James Wilson, the shop opens its door in downstairs Graham Memorial at 8:30 Monday morning and remains open six days a week.

At the present time Wilson, who spent six months in Shufford's Institute of Barbering in Durham, is assisted by June Lemons. Both men have had varied experience in the field of barbering. A graduate of the Winston-Salem barber school, Lemons has been with "25 or 30 different barber concerns since 1940." Wilson barbered in the infantry division of the Army for three years and later worked in a Pittsboro barber shop for six months.

Offering a complete line of barbering, the shop is equipped with five chairs and every detail of modern equipment. "If there's any service we can't offer the students; then we'll make new provisions," said Wilson.

If the volume of business demands it, the management plans to employ a sufficient number of barbers to handle it efficiently, said Wilson.

Dr. Kwong Soo Lee Discusses Korea

Dr. Kwong Soo Lee of Soel university in Korea led an informal discussion of social and political conditions in Korea at the YWCA-sponsored Coffee Klatsch Tuesday night at 7:30 in the Y office.

Dr. Lee explained that, resulting from an agreement between the late President Roosevelt and Joseph Stalin, Korea has been divided into an American and a Russian sector for a period of five years. He explained that when this division was made several million freedom-loving people left the northern sector migrating to the American controlled section of the south.

"Most of the large rivers and so the power plants are located in the Russian zone," he said, "while the American zone has the largest number of people."

Reception Set For Students Of Other Lands

A reception for foreign students, under joint sponsorship of the YMCA and YWCA will be held tomorrow at 4:30 in the main lounge of Graham Memorial.

All foreign students on campus are invited, and invitations have been sent to those whose addresses are on record in the Y office. Anyone knowing of a foreign student who did not receive an invitation is asked to report his name and address to the Y information office.

Administration officials have also received invitations, and all students interested in meeting people from other countries are invited to attend. YM and YW cabinet members and advisory boards will also be present. The entire purpose of the affair is to welcome foreign students to the campus and help them to feel at home here.

Co-chairmen of the affair are Anne Carlton and Bill Brown, who will also be working with a Cosmopolitan club thorughout the year. Made up of foreign students, the club will arrange trips to leading industries of North Carolina, historical points of interest, and other activities designed to acquaint the members with American life.

Williams, Adams Get AVC Offices

Aubrey Williams and Henry Adams were elected as chairman and vice-chairman respectively of the American Veterans committee during Tuesday night's meeting in the Presbyterian church.

Other officers elected were Louella Van Every, recording secretary; John Webb, corresponding secretary; and Maude Thomas, treasurer.

John Myers and John Webb were appointed to attend the AVC national convention to be held in Cleveland, Ohio, Nov. 25-28. George Tindall and Aubrey Williams were chosen as alternate delegates to the convention.

Colonel William R. Nelson made the Kansas City Star a powerful influence for civic improvement.

American Drama Depends On Region, Says Playwright Dean Walter Eaton

By Mark Sumner

"A true theater renaissance in America depends upon the regional theaters achieving a fully professional basis," says Walter Prichard Eaton, dean of playwriting professors, who is to be guest lecturer in the department of dramatic art of the University of North Carolina this year.

"If an upsurge in American drama is to be enduring and is to really amount to something, it can't stop at 56th street." He cited the Pasadena Playhouse, the Barter Theater of Virginia, the Dallas Little theater, and the Cleveland playhouse as examples of fully professional regional theaters. "The Theatre Guild tours 24 cities with their productions, and the enthusiastic response proves that the desire for good drama is growing in all sections of the country."

Eaton, who went to Yale University after an invitation from

Colleges Can Do Important Job

George Pierce Baker to take over the famous 47 workshop in dramatic writing for awhile, stayed as professor of playwriting for 14 years. He was a professional writer before going to Yale, and was at one time a drama critic for the New York Sun and the American magazine.

Eaton, who has written many books and plays since that time, explained that he became engaged in a fight with the once powerful "syndicate" which operated most of the New York theaters of the time. "The syndicate withdrew its advertising from the Sun," he said, "and the Sun withdrew me from its staff."

"I got so much free publicity from the fight that I never had to do newspaper work again," he laughed. After the incident he became a successful writer.

Eaton, now in his late sixties, loves to smoke a pipe. It is a constant friend, and he took time to carefully fill and light it before telling why he turned to theater work and to writing.

"I think I have always been stage struck," he said, "For years I wanted to be an actor. A boy named Frank Craven and I used to get a group together and put on plays in Reading, Mass. where I grew up." (Craven later became famous as an actor, writer, and producer.)

Students Will Receive Opportunity To Apply for USAF Cadet Training

University students interested in the United States Air Force will have the opportunity to receive information from a procurement team due to arrive on Monday, Oct. 25.

Lt. Col. Ralph E. Keyes, advance agent for the procurement team said the group will remain through the week and will be available in the Aviation ROTC building between 9 o'clock in the morning and 4:30 in the afternoon. He added that due to the "necessarily high level of intelligence and physical fitness required to operate modern military aircraft" only men who can meet the high Air Force standards will be accepted.

Requirements for elegibility in the USAF are: Unmarried men, 20 to 26½ years old, physically fit, with two or more years of college training. These men if accepted will have the opportunity to provisionally qualify for flight training immediately when the traveling Aviation Cadet team meets here in the Air ROTC building.

Those who meet requirements, and take the preliminary examinations from Oct. 25 to Oct. 29, will need only to take a final physical examination and complete an interview before acceptance and assignment to a class.

Suddenly the King realized he was going to starve

You remember how King Midas thought he had a short cut to financial security.

When granted one wish, he asked that everything he touched be turned to gold. It was fun until he tried to eat, and all his food turned to solid gold. He suddenly realized that he was going to starve to death.

Midas was glad to cancel his wish, and look for a better way to provide for his old age. What he discovered remains true today.

The only sure way to financial security is systematic saving. And the best method is buying U. S. Security Bonds, automatically!

If you work for wages or salary, you can sign up for the Payroll Savings Plan. If you are in business or a profession, and have a checking account, you can sign up for the Bond-A-Month Plan at your bank.

Start now—during the Security Loan Drive. The money saves itself, and after 10 years you have $4 for every $3 you have saved.

And your Security Bond dollars do their part to insure a stable economy. Wise saving means less money in the market place to bid up prices of goods.

It's too bad that Midas had so much trouble because he couldn't save this easy way.

But isn't it lucky you can!

WISE DEBT MANAGEMENT—Every bond dollar that is built up in your Government's Treasury is used to retire a dollar of the national debt which is potentially inflationary.

The Daily Tar Heel

This is an official U. S. Treasury advertisement—prepared under auspices of Treasury Department and Advertising Council.

With The TAR HEELS

By Dick Jenrette

While the football atmosphere still prevails over the Carolina campus, Coach Tom Scott has been quietly making preparations for the coming basketball season. The Tar Heel cage mentor has only three lettermen with which to mold his club, and the return of the freshmen ineligibility rule prevents possible help from this source. The team will be composed largely of boys from last year's jayvee squad and transfer students.

The three lettermen—Nemo Nearman, Coy Carson, and Dan Nyimicz—will form the nucleus of the club. Also expected to play important roles are two newcomers, Hugh Kappler and Red Bennett. Kappler, a blond 6-3 performer, comes to Carolina as a transfer from an extension of the University of Georgia. He seems to be a real hustler and has a good variety of one-hand shots, executed while on the move. He probably will be Carson's running mate at forward.

Nearman May Be Shifted

Bennett, the other transfer, made quite a record for himself as a junior college player last season. He stands 6-4 and gets most of his points on shots from under the basket. If Bennett comes through, he could get the starting nod at center. In this instance, Nearman, the regular center, would be shifted to guard, along with the veteran Nyimicz.

Bill White and Charlie Thorpe have been showing up best among the aspirants from last year's jayvee quint. Both are guards.

Although pre-season basketball experts rate Carolina behind Duke and State, the Tar Heels are expecting to surprise a few teams in this area. And one encouraging thing about the team is its youth. There's only one senior on the squad, that being Nyimicz.

If you're wondering why we refer to the Carolina basketball team as Tar Heels, the answer is that it's a new policy of the Daily Tar Heel. The players are no longer White Phantoms.

Here's Mural Rule On

When play started in Carolina's intramural football league last week, there was quite a bit of discussion about the ruling governing tie games. Briefly, here's the rule on the situation. If the game ends in a tie, the ball is put in play at midfield for eight downs. The two teams alternate possession of the ball—four downs to each team. At the end of eight plays, the team nearest its opponent's goal is declared the winner.

On the opening day of play, one of the games ended in a 0-0 deadlock. At the end of the eight overtime plays, the ball was on about the 49-yard line, giving the game to the team which had possession of the ball. Frankly, we think it hardly fair to decide the winner on the basis of a one-yard gain. Moreover, a few ties might add interest to the championship race. Tie games are an old football tradition.

Football and Geology

Short notes on Tar Heel sports: Vic Seixas, Carolina's nationally famous tennis performer, writes that he will participate in a tourney in Mexico City this month. Vic is hoping to make a South American tour after the Mexican excursion, but isn't sure of his plans yet. Seixas will be back at Carolina next quarter. He has one more year of varsity eligibility . . . Ham Crowder, who made All-State in just about every sport while playing high school ball at Wilson, is now enrolled at Carolina. . .Ted Hazelwood, the big tackle on the local football team, doesn't spend all his time practicing football. He is the capable instructor of a couple of Geology 41 classes during the day. . .

Vinny DiLorenzo, who last year pitched Carolina to the finals of the Eastern NCAA baseball playoffs, compiled a won-lost record of 8-4 in his first year as a pro with Trenton, N. J., a Class B club. . .Jim Kelly, also a member of that team, batted .286 with Charlotte of the Class B Tri-State league. Frank Robinson notched a 5-1 mark as a pro for Goldsboro in the Coastal Plain. . .John Tandy, a standout end on last year's football team, is now head coach at Reynolds high in Winston-Salem. Like a true Carl Snavely pupil, he has installed the two team system at Reynolds.

State Seeking To Avenge 1947 Loss Here

Locals Rated As Favorites In Loop Game

Mainstays in the State line are a pair of scrapping guards, Bernie Watts and Charlie Musser. Both are strong contenders for All-Southern honors. Other big men in the Wolfpack forward wall are George Blomquist, an outstanding pass receiver, and Freddie Miller, also an end.

If State succeeds in halting the Carolina offense today it will mark the first time since the William and Mary-Carolina game one year ago that the Tar Heels have not scored at least three touchdowns per game. This season alone the locals are averaging 27.7 points an outing. The Tar Heels have amassed 83 points to 20 for the opposition. Charlie Justice is the top man in the scoring column, having crossed the goal line on six occasions already this year. The Carolina Choo Choo accounted for two touchdowns against Texas, three against Georgia, and one more in the Wake Forest game last week.

Carolina Leads

The overall records for the state-Carolina football series show the Tar Heels with 27 wins to five for State. Last year's meeting between the two clubs was the first since 1943, the series between the two schools having been halted by a lack of manpower on the State campus during the war and a hostile attitude on the part of both student bodies toward the other.

A large throng of State students will begin arriving in Chapel Hill this morning. Saturday classes at State will be ended at 11 o'clock as a special favor to the football-conscious of the West Raleigh school.

WAA Announces Coed Managers

Duke Meets Maryland Today; One Dark Horse Due to Fall

RALEIGH, N. C., Oct. 16 — (UP)—One of the two big dark-horses in the Southern Conference title race will probably be scratched this week when Duke and Maryland meet in Washington.

Neither team has yet shown everything it's got. But as the season goes into its fifth week, they loom as a couple of tough cookies.

Duke finally blossomed out with Wallace Wade's favorite kind of football last week and pushed Navy all over the place, scoring once on a blocked punt and setting up several drives with intercepted passes.

This technique of play-for-the-breaks - then - smack - 'em - silly pretty well characterizes the Wade method. If Duke has got it, fine. But it should be remembered that Wade's Dukes were judged the heavyweights in their first two games and ended up tied.

Meanwhile, it is not devastatingly clear that Maryland has a punchy football team, with or without Bambino Lu Gambino, the shattering 1947 halfback who went out on an ineligibility ruling this fall.

Gloomy Jim Tatum, Maryland's coach, talked up a storm of unhappiness as his season approached Gambinoless. Then he took his Maryland Terps out and quietly flattened two conference teams — Richmond and Virginia Tech and one incautious outsider, Delaware.

Again it is important that neither Richmond nor VPI are real tests for a title-minded team. So this week both Duke and Maryland are getting their first chance to gnaw on a really tough chunk of conference gristle.

Duke's Blue Devils were lumped up considerably in the Navy game.

They showed it in early, painful practices this week, but the chances were still unlikely that many varsity players would hit charleyhorse row before the Maryland game.

Tigers Pin Hopes On Trio of Backs

BATON ROUGE, La., Oct. 15. — (UP) — LSU's Coach Gaynell Tinsley normally would believe that two men are better than one, but against Georgia Saturday night, he's going to put his hopes on three.

The Tinsley trio will be composed of two beefy fullbacks and one who is not so beefy but can kick like a maddened Mississippi mule.

Tinsley hopes that the line-bucking of Zollie (Tugboat) Toth and Bill (Steamboat) Schroll, and the fancy punting of Harrell (Rip) Collins will offset the dead-eye passing of Johnny Rauch, the formidable Georgia quarterback.

The Civil War developed an appetite for news among the people.

ID Cards Must Be Presented With Athletic Passbooks

The Department of Athletics announced yesterday that all students must present their ID cards along with their athletic pass books today in order to secure admission to the Carolina-State game. This action has been taken so as to discourage students who are not abiding by the "non-transferable" regulation under which the pass books are issued.

When the athletic pass books are issued the student accepts them with the understanding that they are not transferable, and that "the book is for the student's personal use only. In accepting it the student agrees to provision." If the pass books are presented by any person other than the owner, they will be forfeited, taken up at the time of fraudulent presentation, and the owner shall be called upon to explain its fraudulent use.

The purpose of the pass book is to identify you and thereby entitle you to privileges of membership in the Department of Physical Education and Athletics which are: (a) use of facilities, (b) use of equipment, (c) instruction, and (d) attendance."

When the books are transferred they no longer serve the purpose of identification, therefore the additional use of the ID card becomes necessary.

By BILLY CARMICHAEL III

Cavorting Cow College

CAVORTING COW COLLEGE, tassels in hand, will migrate into hallowed Kenan stadium this afternoon to attempt repudiation of all this talk about brotherly love and prove without any doubt their physical and numerical superiority over the homesteading Tar Heels.

The topic for the afternoon will be football with the State college crew elected to take the negative side of the question: resolve: that North Carolina is the No. 1 football team in the nation. It will be a full day's chores for the birds of a Feathers from West Raleigh who look to be espying the Tar Heels in a manner a lot like the little boy whose eyes turned out to be bigger than his tummy.

The Wolfpack, though, if nothing else, has one big clipping to wave in the faces of the not-too-easily-impressed Tar Heels. State is the leading defensive team in the nation, an honor which comes for no extra cost from some national news bureau. They have a brick wall line built by such masons as one Bernie Watts, a reasonable facsimile of something terrible, which is no slouch when it comes to the manly art of self-defense.

They held dubious Duke to no score, conducting likewise mayhem to easily-offended Davidson college. Only Clemson, a coming power to be Gaged with the big boys now, has tallied against the 'Pack and then only for a moment. Which goes to prove what soil and sunshine can do for a man.

On the Other Hand

CAROLINA, ON THE HAND, is currently ragging the statistics to the tune of almost 28 points a Saturday and will be out to [illegible] the course for the weekend. With the weather clear and track fast this may be the week for the Tar Heels to let go with everything but the kitchen sink, and then possibly throw in that domestic fixture as a note of finality. The Tar Heels, notoriously not a great road team, are back in their own stamping grounds this week and will take the opportunity to stomp the Wolfpack.

It would be a nice day to commit this act of aggression, as if any afternoon wouldn't be. For this is the day the old grads come back to the old school to relive the old days in old Chapel Hill. It might be nice to give them something new just for the sake of variety. From the looks of things concerning tickets, there won't be anything left come game time, but those two in the tree near the Bell Tower. The Athletic office has been drawing to a full house all week and will probably fill out on the last go round.

Which leaves nothing to do but play the ball game which the bookies and the sports writers have already done. From here on out, the players are on their own. The bookies, for the record, seem to think that State will be better off with 20 points than all that school spirit, but that is a matter of personal taste. The sports writers, for the same record, also like Carolina, figuring if lightning was going to strike, it would have done so by now.

The Big Question

THE BIG QUESTION that comes to mind in the midst of all this folderol is why they ever play this game in the first place. It says here in the small print that both schools are part of a Greater University, but the only practical application of this that comes to mind is the attempt of both units to prove that they are the greater.

The game was resumed last year after an intermission from the previous series possibly to carry out the dead and wounded. Last year there was little doubt which side was determined victor in one of the most decisive decisions since Lee went under at Appomatox. The victory proved little of nothing and there was little left to do but wish the Wolfpack better luck next time and listen to the cries of "Wait until next year" as they rode off into the distance.

Here it is next year and the Tar Heels are still waiting. Like in the song they will be on hand today and will be out to repeat a command performance of last year's game. A rout of State today would help toward ending the series in the near future. It would be [illegible] to see the end to this useless family squable, but abolitionists never been quite popular in the South, have they?

The Other Side

OF COURSE, FROM the State point of view, it might be well for the Tar Heels to likewise crawl in their hole come basketball season. Seems the weakest of memories can afford the pleasures of remembering the Wolfpack's tremendous cage team last year that not only won a lot of national honors. It is here the State college boys [illegible] their Case.

All of which lends a greater motive to the Tar Heel footballers today. They must put in this afternoon for a cold winter when the Dixie-birds warble 'Pack high into the national sporting picture. If there is revenge to be gotten for last year or this, today's the time. It in the wood for those long winter nights ahead.

Which brings one to time for a commercial on how the Tar Heels will [illegible] the Academoo into camp by a meager margin of three [illegible] touchdowns. It would be awful to add it, but after all, who's afraid of the big bad wolf anyhow? The old school tie is all [illegible] up and ready to go, leaving one only to wonder who'll be [illegible] this weekend.

[illegible] to say, the Tar Heels have a healthy fear and respect [illegible] Wolfpack. They are out to instill a similiar feeling in their [illegible] room slightly west of the state capital. It definitely won't [illegible] if someone not crying "Wolf" often enough.

Carolina Soccer Team Upsets Loyola, 3-2

Score all Goals In Third Stanza For First Triumph

By Larry Fox

With the entire eleven playing first class ball, Carolina's soccer crew came through its home debut in grand fashion yesterday afternoon by upsetting the favored Loyola booters, 3-2.

The Tar Heels suffered from a form of stage fright in their first outing before local fans and it wasn't until midway in the second half, with Loyola one goal to the good, that the first Carolina tally was registered.

Vengeance was swift, though, and within eight minutes, the locals had jumped into a 3-1 lead that was to hold up for the remainder of the contest.

First Half Scoreless

Carolina gave some notice of what was to come early in the game when the Allenmen brought the ball deep into Loyola territory time and again, only to be balked at the last minute. Although the first two quarters were scoreless, they produced some of the best soccer ever seen in Fetzer field.

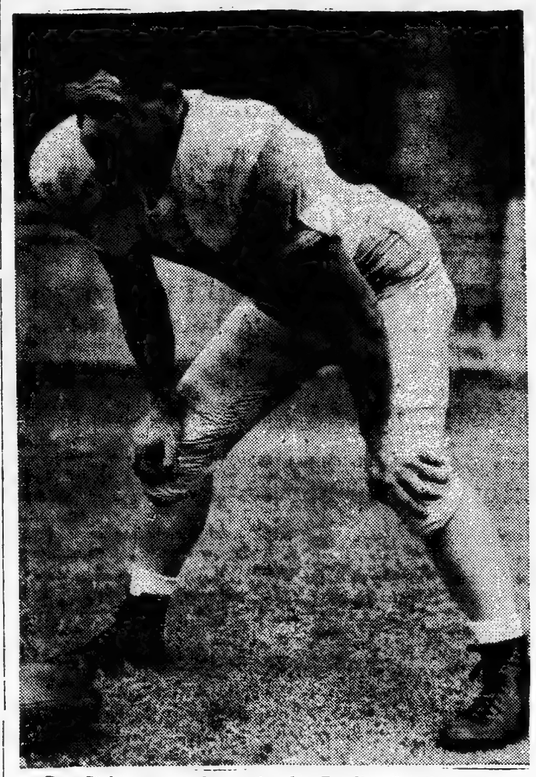
When the first half ended with the tally at 0-0, it appeared as if the breaks would decide the battle and the break seemed to come to Loyola after three minutes had elapsed in the third stanza when Jim Bullington batted in a rebound for the first marker of the contest.

However, little Joe Bach tied the game up at the 11 minute mark when he took a pass in the goal mouth from Tommy Jordan out on the wing. Jordan received the ball from center forward Dave Boak at midfield and drove down into the corner before passing off to Bach, who tied the score.

Carolina just missed going ahead two minutes later when Pete Hexner missed a penalty kick. He redeemed himself by converting a similar attempt a few moments later.

Dave Boak counted the final goal for the Tar Heels with an assist from Jordan.

Loyola's All-America center, Nick Kropfeeder notched the final score of ther afternoon soon after the beginning of the final quarter on a play which aroused the ire of the Carolina bench and many fans, who were of the opinion that the tricky forward had touched the ball with his hands.



The entire Carolina outfit distinguished itself in this contest and looked quite unlike the aggregation which bowed to Navy, 2-0, last week.

Started Slowly

Although a little slow in getting started, the revamped forward line got the goals when they counted. Jordan, a new-comer on the starting lineup, played very well in the left wing spot, having an important part in the scoring of two of the Carolina goals. Boak, who was moved from left wing to the center position, looked very much at home there.

The halfbacks were the men who kept the Tar Heels in the game, though, advancing the ball into Loyola territory where the forwards could pick it up and breaking up Loyola offensives before they got started. Gus Johnston and co-captain Jesse Greenbaum were all over the field during the 88 minutes of play.

Meet Co-Captain Stiegman

Dan Steigman, regular center for Carolina for the past two years, is the new team co-captain along with Hosea Rodgers. Dan's fine work at the pivot post this year is one of the main reason's the Tar Heels are undefeated.

Choo Choo Is Triple-Threat Man; "Our Boy" Runs, Kicks, Passes

By Frank Allston

Charlie Justice, the North Carolina Choo-Choo from Asheville, is a man of many talents. Now, that may sound like a very broad and open statement, but to Tar Heel supporters it is merely routine.

The Choo-Choo has proved consistently that he is the nations's best running back; he has shown that his passing leaves little to be desired and now, is out to prove that he is the nation's top punter.

Charlie, who stands 5 feet 10 inches above the terra firma and tips the Fairbanks at 165 pounds, is one of the nation's best all-around backs, if not the best. A junior, the Choo-Choo is a pretty sure bet for All-American honors this season.

Average

Last year Justice turned in a very fine punting average of 41.6 yards for 61 kicks good enough for a rank of fifth in the nation. This year Charlie is actually doing better than that, handling all of the Tar Heel punting chores and owning an average of 44.3 yards every time he lays his toe to the pigskin.

The Choo-Choo's average is outstanding, enough to give him the second spot in the nation's punting ratings, only nine-tenths of a point behind the leader Paul Stombaugh of Little Furman college.

One of the reasons why Justice has such a phenominal booting average is that he operates behind one of the greatest assemblages of collegiate linemen ever brought together under the Blue and White. Justice, himself, is high on the Tar Heel forwards and he is continually heaping words of praise on the big boys up front.

A New Art

Because of the terrific play turned in by the Carolina forward wall, Justice has had plenty of time to get away long, booming spirals. Justice has developed quick kicking into a new art and through the solidarity of the Carolina wall, Choo-Choo can have confidence when a quick kick is called. He knows that he will be able to kick and have plenty of protection.

Time and again in his three years at Carolina, Justice has sent long punts over the heads of the various contestants playing safety and caught them unprepared. The most outstanding examples of the Justice prowes at the kicking game were the 64-yard quick kick against the mighty Longhorns of Texas and the 74-yard quickie at Wake Forest—both 1943 performances.

With the great play turned in by the Tar Heel team so far this year, Charlie has only been forced to punt fifteen times in the three games. However, those fifteen punts have been things of beauty which have earned him national fame and acclaim.

When boys like Justice make their appearance on the gridiron scene to do the tricks he can with the inflated oval, the word football and the game, take on a new meaning. As one of the state dailies so aptly put it recently, ". . . . nowadays they write it FOOTball."

Here at Carolina they say, "AMEN."

Gantt Injured

Carolina's freshman football squad noted only one injury this week. This unfortunate was Bob Gantt, fullback, who sustained a sprained ankle on the last play of scrimmage Wednesday. Otherwise all players are in tip-top condition.

Yesterday the Tar Babies combined forces with a delegation from the varsity squad and engaged in a heavy scrimmage in preparation for the Virginia game next Friday. Coach Little is still stressing defense in all drills.

Archery Group Plans To Open Play Monday

The newly formed Archery club has started its campus function by announcing that it will sponsor an archery tournament beginning Monday, October 16 and lasting through Thursday, October 21.

All persons who are interested are urged to report to the east end of Fetzer field at 4 o'clock any one of these days and do their shooting.

All the necessary equipment can be checked out at the basketroom of the Gym and this includes such essentials as bow, six arrows, arm guard, finger glove and ground quiver.

Fearless Fraley Selects Winners For Games Today

By Oscar Fraley

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—(UP)—Finally able to concentrate on football after a hectic World Series which left old Fearless just a little less upset than SMU, Ohio State, and Harvard—Fraley's Follies and the weekend gridiron "victors."

National

Northwestern over Michigan—The odds make Michigan a seven-point favorite, mostly because of comparative victories over Purdue. Michigan won by 40-0 and Northwestern by 21-0. But it was Northwestern which broke Purdue hearts irrevocably after the Boilermakers lost by one point to Notre Dame. This game is strictly from flip, with the Big Nine title in the balance. With seven points it's a steal, maybe!

The East

Army over Harvard—Too much, too early for this Army. Missouri over Navy—Your anchor's showing, sonny. Penn over Columbia—And minus brotherly love. Dartmouth over Colgate—by three TD's or more.

Also: Penn State over West Virginia, Brown over Holy Cross, Wake Forest over Duquesne. Cornell over Syracuse, Pitt over Marquette, B. C. over Villanova, B. U. over Temple, and Rutgers over Princeton.

The Midwest

Minnesota over Illinois—Those pore Illini linemen. Purdue over Iowa—If they get their dauber's up. Ohio State over Indiana—The blue plate special. Wisconsin over Yale— And don't tell 'em to go West, young man.

Also: Notre Dame over Nebraska, Iowa State over Colorado, Michigan State over Arizona, and Oklahoma over Kansas State.

The South

North Carolina over N. C. State—A whistle stop for the Choo-Choo. Alabama over Tennessee—Closer than hill billy kinfolk. Georgia over LSU—But it ain't funny, bub. Vanderbilt over Kentucky—And this, either.

Also: Duke over Maryland. Mississippi over Tulane, Georgia Tech over Auburn, Mississippi State over Cincinnati, W. & M. over VPI, and Virginia over W. & L.

The Southwest

Texas over Arkansas—The big bounce. SMU over Rice—Likewise, thank you. TCU over Texas Aggies—And how's your garden, Aggie? Baylor over Texas Tech—Okay, cactus to me.

The West

Oregon over USC—But those Trojans are always tough. California over Oregon State—Attar of Roses. UCLA over Stanford—Or call in the FBI.

Also: Washington over Washington State, Utah over Denver, Montana over Montana State, and Colorado Aggies over Wyoming.

West of the Azores

Duluth over Bemidjii—The "I's" should have it. Gogebic over Eveleth—S'help me. Snow over Dixie—And wait until those Californians hear about that!

Coed Volleyball Competition Scheduled to Begin Tuesday

Girl's Intramural volleyball competition will commence next week with the opening contest to be held Tuesday, October 19 and every Tuesday and Thursday nights thereafter. All games will be in the men's section of Woollen Gym.

At this writing there are 24 teams entered in the competition from both the dormitory and sorority groups. Any managers of the teams that do not have the rules sheet may pick up a copy at the Woman's gym office before Tuesday.

Two of the more important team rules by which the girls must abide are that if an organization has more than one team, an individual may play for only one team. It is also required that each group have two linesmen at each game.

All girl's who are interested in officiating these contests can sign up at the Woman's gym. Intramural points will be given to scorers, timers, linesmen and referees.

The schedule: Tuesday, October 19—7:15, ADPi 1 vs. CHi 0 3; 7:15, ADPi 2 vs. Carr; 8:00, Kenan vs Chi 0 4; 8:00, Pi Phi 1 vs Tri-Delt 2; 8:45, Tri-Delt 1 vs Alpha Gam 2; 8:45, Chi 0 2 vs CiCa.

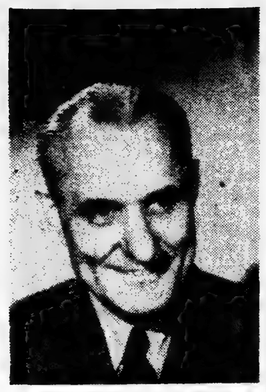
'Young Man From Carolin-a' Gave Berliners 'Wunderbar' Happy 'Time-a'

By Lincoln Kan

Under a glass-topped desk in the rear office of the YMCA there is a colorful scroll with a beautiful watercolor picture of a Bavarian-type house in Germany. The words below the painting are in English complete with swirls and fancy doodlings. They read:



"There was a young man from
Carolin—a
Who brought us to Berlin across the Rin-a so thanks to
Claude C. Shotts
From Reds, Rights & Who Knows-whats
For our wunderbar, fabelhaft time-a."

Surrounding the inscription to the Y secretary are the signatures of young men and women from France, Denmark, Sweden, Finland, Switzerland, Norway, England, the United States, the four German zones of occupation and Berlin.

This is a testamonial of the gratitude the young men and women of other nations gave to Claude Shotts for his part in the International Service seminar held in Berlin this summer.

Shotts represented the University at the seminar with several other United States representatives from Yale, William and Mary and Smith College.

The seminar was a project which came under the Friend's center which was first organized in Berlin soon after the war. Shotts played an important part in its organization and was invited to return to Berlin to help the Friend's program for the summer.

One of the more notable projects of the seminar composed of students from nine different countries was the cleaning up and rehabilitation of a former D. P. camp which was evacuated soon after the Berlin airlift started. They made the former barracks into living quarters for a children's center and converted the yards into playgrounds for the under-privileged youngsters of Berlin.

Shotts did not spend all his time with the seminar group. He went out of his way to meet and talk to Berliners from all of the four occupied zones. He said, "Our jitters over war in America are much worse than in Europe. There they are just apathetic and hopeless about the situation."

He said that the average Berliner thinks this: "Once the United States pulls out of Berlin, we must leave Europe entirely. We can not back down now that we have gained ground at the expense of the Russians who are hated and feared."

In his talks with members of the Russian zone German government who were all Social party Germans, he discovered that even they were hopeful that the democratic ways of election and government would be left to the Germans. "In my conversations with these Germans, they told me that the Russians would cooperate and agree to everything except in the realms of political and economic problems. The Russians are liberal in their sanitation, housing, child welfare and hospital problems. They seem to be teachable, but they become adamant when it comes to ideology," he added.

Just Cordon

That noise you may have heard in the background during Federal Reserve Board Member Marriner Eccles' speech the other night was no noise— that was Norman Cordon.

Cordon's deep bass voice and the University band, making new recordings of University songs in the Hill hall annex, ran Speaker Eccles in Hill hall some stiff competition.

Incidentally, the unfamiliar song being played over and over and over again was a new Carolina adaptation of "Choo Choo Ch'Boogie" and the subject of the verse is—yes, you guessed it.

Chi Psi Chapter Adopts Children

The Chi Psi fraternity recently adopted two European children. The adoption will last for a period of one year at which time the fraternity will have the opportunity of renewing its obligation.

Severn Wallis, president, said each of the sponsored children will be given a complete outfit of clothing including a warm coat and shoes. In the course of a year he will receive periodic supplemental food packages, and in cases like Holland, an equivalent in other necessities such as blankets and textiles, according to the needs of that particular country.

Reports, when they are available, will be sent to the fraternity so that those who are supporting the children may see how their wards are progressing.

As Wallis put it, "It is deeds like this which we are now undertaking which will promote international understanding and friendship. The one cry worth heeding today is that of a child in need."

From tire cords to football pants

Do you know about nylon's other lives?

Here's a surprise for those who think of nylon mainly in terms of stockings and lingerie.

Nowadays, nylon fibers—twice as strong and half as heavy as the same size aluminum wire—are doing a variety of jobs, better than any previously known fiber. Off Labrador, men are harpooning whales with nylon lines. In a New England textile mill, abrasion-resistant nylon ropes now drive big "mule spinners" for periods ten times as long as other commercial materials, without a breakdown. Nylon fabrics are being used in everything from rugged automobile seat covers to delicately woven filter cloths.

In its plastic form, nylon is used to make everything from unbreakable dishes to hypodermic needles. As a monofilament, it goes into a variety of products from brush bristles to surgical sutures.

Nylon cords give giant truck and airplane tires the strength and elasticity to absorb tremendous impact shock without bruising.

Water won't hurt the nylon strings of this racquet. They resist breakage over an extended period of time. No tiny strands to fray.

Nylon football uniforms, as worn by Bobby Jack Stuart, Army back, are not only tough wearing, but much lighter and quicker drying.

Nylon research: O. C. Wetmore, Ph. D. Phys; Ch., New York U. '41; D. A. Smith, B. S. Mech. Eng., Purdue '40; C. O. King, Sc. D.-Ch. E., Mich. '43, charging experimental condensation polymers to a spinning machine.

"Du Pont Company and the College Graduate" is just off the press in a completely revised edition. Fully illustrated—describes opportunities in research, production, sales, and many other fields. Explains the plan of organization whereby individual ability is recognized and rewarded. Write for your copy today. Address: 2521 Nemours Building, Wilmington 98, Del.

Nylon owes its origin to a Du Pont fundamental research project begun in 1928. A group of scientists set out to find out how and why the molecules of certain substances polymerized to form giant chainlike molecules. Hope of obtaining a new commercial fiber was first aroused when, two years later, a polymer was developed which could be drawn out into a thin strand, like taffy candy. The complex problems which followed called for the services of over 200 Du Pont men and women, among whom were some of America's most competent scientists and engineers.

Research—a Major Du Pont Activity

Nylon is an excellent example of modern research at work at Du Pont. Young scientists joining the organization now may share in other discoveries of outstanding importance. They may find opportunities in such challenging fields as finishes, coated fabrics and various fibers; synthetic organic chemicals, including fine chemicals; synthetic rubber; electro and agricultural chemicals; plastics; pigments and photographic film; and high pressure synthesis.

Each of ten manufacturing departments of Du Pont has its own staff and is operated much like a separate company. Within each, research men work in groups small enough to bring quick recognition of individual talent and capabilities.

Year after year, young, inquiring minds come from leading U.S. schools of science and engineering to Du Pont—where individual ambition is matched with opportunity, cooperation and the type of friendly support that brings out the best in each person.

SBI Slows Down Scalping Market

By Herb Nachman

The sunny skies that smiled on football fans yesterday afternoon seemed gloomy for the usual crop of ticket scalpers along the Franklin St. ducat market—the SBI was there.

Plainclothesman from the State Bureau of Investigation made their rounds busily along the crowded sidewalks, and it wasn't long until the scalpers got the word. Business was awful.

Though the SBI agents were thorough, 50-yard-line seats were seen going for $15 a pair. Many other ducats were sold at face value.

But no arrests were made.

The usual gathering places along Chapel Hill's main street were frequented by bargaining groups, concentrated near the Village theater.

The investigators reported that some transactions between scalpers and last-minute purchasers didn't come out too well for the illicit dealers.

"One kid had just handed his tickets to someone when I sidled up behind him," a detective said. "He saw me and just walked off without receiving a cent of money."

An agent explained that no arrests were made because "we just want to see how they operate." He promised "next week we'll get hot after them."

A similar investigation by the SBI and local officers last year fizzled out when the football season ended in the middle of it.

As the morning wore on, sales became more and more difficult for the scalpers everytime a ticket seller looked up, he found an SBI agent staring him in the face. And toward noon, many tickets were going for cost.

By the time 1 o'clock rolled around, the SBI men had moved down to the stadium and the Franklin street crowd was apparantly left holding the bag.

A young ticket-seller who didn't look more than 16 or 17 years old, sat atop an ash can in front of the Carolina Cleaners with a handful of end-zone seats. SBI agents said he was safe since the tickets were not being sold in his case for above the face value.

"In order to make an arrest, we actually have to see the money being passed above the marked price of the ticket," as agent explained out.

As game-time grew closer, sales dwindled fast. Some of the tickets were practically being given away by 1:30. One ticket-holder stood in the middle of the sidewalk with his fist full of tickets shouting, "I buy, sell or swap tickets."

Tulane Wins

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 16.—(UP)—Tulane, as hot on the ground as in the air, trampled unbeaten Mississippi, defending Southeastern conference champions, 20-7 today.

Some 43,000 shouting spectators saw a tough Tulane line and a rampaging backfield reduce the passing combination of Farley Salmon and big Barney Poole to practical impotence.

CHARLIE JUSTICE, Carolina's tailback extraoadinary, is shown returning a State college punt early in yesterday's contest at Kenan stadium which the Tar Heels came back to win. Justice was run out of bounds immediately after the picture was made, by Harry McLeod (88) and an unidentified friend to the rear. The Carolina Player moving to the rescue is Irv Holdash.

Powerful Wolfpack Line Holds Locals For Half

By Dick Jenrette

For more than half the game yesterday, N. C. State college's fighting Wolfpack gave Carolina's Tar Heels a run for their money, but Tar Heel power finally asserted itself late in the third and fourth quarters to score two touchdowns and a 14-0 victory over their old rivals from Raleigh.

Carolina had a rather substantial edge in the satistics, but bad breaks in the first half provided several excellent scoring opportunities for the Wolfpack. The stalwart Tar Heel defensive team stopped State on the one-yard line on one occasion after the Pack had covered a Carolina fumble on the 20.

State's other major scoring chance came on another fumble recovery, this time on the 25. Coach Beattie Feathers' charges drove from this point to the Tar Heel six-inch marker before running out of downs.

In fact, almost the entire first half was played in Carolina territory. The best indication of how critical things were for the locals may be judged from the fact that State ran 57 plays to 16 for Carolina in those first two quarters.

Different Story

Things were different in the second half, and Carolina dominated play rather completely. The hard running of Hosea Rodgers featured the first touchdown march, which covered 50 yards. This score came with only 1:40 remaining in the third quarter.

A long, looping pass from Charlie Justice to Art Weiner accounted for the other Tar Heel touchdown. Justice, standing on his own 40, arched a pass down the left side to Weiner on the 28. Art dashed the rest of the way to the goal after a futile tackle attempt by State's Bob Smith, who was covering on the play. Only three minutes remained in the game after this TD.

Faithful Bob Cox booted the extra points after each score. He now has a record of 13 good kicks in 14 tries.

Always a Prize

A jam packed crowd of 44,000 turned out for the affair, which was homecoming for Carolina alumni. Most of the fans were a bit disappointed that the Tar Heels didn't win by a bigger margin, but a two-touchdown victory over an old rival like State is always a prize. Moreover, the Wolfpack had the nation's best defensive record prior to yesterday.

Most important of all is the fact that Carolina won, and it was the fourth in a row. The triumph extended the two-year record to 11 wins without loss.

The 14-0 victory marked the first time this season that Carolina has blanked its opponent. Texas and Wake Forest each racked up one touchdown against the Tar Heels and Georgia tallied twice.

First Quarter

There was little to cheer about from the Carolina standpoint in the first quarter, for State held possession of the ball on 20 of the 27 plays. The Pack threatened seriously midway in this stanza. Gwynn Fletcher, standing on his own 37, got off a high kick which bounced off Bobby Weant's leg when it came down. Harold Saunders covered the ball for State on the Carolina 20.

Bill Thompson sailed around right end, cut back sharply, and

Blue Devils Hand Terps First Loss By Score of 13-12

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—(UP)—Duke's Blue Devils dealt Maryland's perfect football record a compound fracture today with two precision plays that carried them to a 13-12 victory in a clawing battle before 21,914 fans.

The margin of triumph was supplied by Mike Souchak who kicked the extra point after Duke's first touchdown. Tom McHugh missed both Maryland conversion tries—first on a poor pass from center and then on a blocked kick.

Duke was forced to come from behind to win the thrill-packed battle. It was a blazing 82-yard run by Billy Cox in the third period that brought victory to Duke after Maryland had forged into a 12-7 lead a minute before on an 81-yard 10-play drive.

Field Goal Try

Maryland, fighting desperately to fashion an upset, roared to Duke's nine-yard line in the final period. Then a field goal attempt from the 18-yard line by Jim Goodman went wide.

The Marylanders fought back again, but this "T" drive was spiked by a pass interception on Duke's 32.

Two explosive plays gave Duke its touchdowns. After a 72-yard touchdown run by Fred Folger was nullified through a clipping penalty, Folger passed to Tommy Hughes. Hughes pulled away from Joe Tucker's grasp on Maryland's 40, dropped the ball on the 30, picked it up on the first bounce and raced the rest of the way on a play that covered 61 yards. Souchak then made the vital conversion.

Begin to Roll

Then Maryland's split-T attack, with heady little Vic Turyn doing the quarterbacking, began to roll. With three minutes to go in the second period, Hubert Werner smashed over from the one-yard line to climax an eight-play assault sparked by Turyn.

Maryland roared ahead early in the third period with an 81-yard 10-play drive that ended with Turyn pitching a scoring pass to Stan Karnash in the end zone.

One play after the ensuing kickoff, Cox set sail around his right end and raced 82 yards to the deciding score.

Maryland, using the two platoon system—one team on offense and another on defense—outplayed Duke. But the North Carolinians' line with tackle Lou Allen in the star role—had it when the chips were down.

Dr. Graham To Introduce UWF Speaker

The concluding speaker of the United World Federalists statewide convention which is being held at Greensboro, will be introduced tonight at 7:45 at the West Market street Methodist church by Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of the greater University. The speaker will be Cord Meyer, Jr., president of the United World Federalists.

Members of the faculty of the University who have been attending the convention are Dr. Henry P. Brandis, dean of the law school, and Russell Baldwin, state student chairman of the UWF.

Other speakers who have addressed the convention include Mayne Albright, former gubnatorial candidate, Robert Lee Humber, author on world peace, and Leland Stowe, world wide lecturer.

'Granny' at Game

Mrs. "Granny" English had a wonderful time. She saw the downfall of the greatest defensive team that was out defensed by the No. 1 team of the nation.

When 'Granny' saw the first touchdown, all she could do was cry. She said in a broken voice (caused by loud yelling), "This is the team we have been cheering all year."

Granny is 75 years old, but the University has never had such an ardent fan.

Line Play Praised By Tar Heel Backs After Tough Game

By Buddy Vaden

Carl Snavely's Tar Heels found out how it was to be on the top and have everybody gunning for you yesterday when his slightly less than superhuman gridders were knocked around for three quarters by Beattie Feathers' Wolfpack from West Raleigh.

Everybody was glad it was over late yesterday afternoon and in the dressing room the Tar Heels seemed to have found out that all isn't glorious at the top of the nation's football heap. Charlie Justice, who did well, but didn't quite meet up to past standards, was "glad that we got it out of our systems." He said, "We found out today that we aren't supermen. State outscrapped us for the better part of the ball game today.

Give Line Credit

Continued Justice, "Our defensive line deserves credit for the win. If it hadn't been for their two goal line stands things might have ended up differently."

Coach Snavely, in commenting on the State team, said, "We played a very good team. Beattie Feathers deserves a lot of credit, for State was well coached for this game."

"But we did as much as we could to defeat ourselves," he continued. "The work of our line when it was in tight spots was highly creditable. They saved our lives twice." About the running of Hosea Rodgers, who had a touch of fumbleitis at first, he said, "Hosea did some fine running. He got it when we needed it.

"Many teams might have quit after having such a tough time in the first half, but out team did not! That's what saved us."

State Gets Breaks

It was generally agreed that State got an exceptional number

Tar Heels Sigh, Wolves Cry As Carolina Romps to Victory

By Zane Robbins

Carolina's Tar Heels, held scoreless by a surprisingly strong N. C. State eleven throughout the first half, came battling back with a vengeance in the final two periods yesterday to rock the nation's top defensive team back on its heels. Score, 14-0.

It was a great game between the two male factions of the Greater University of North Carolina with the full sixty minutes crammed from stem to stern with thrills. All the thrills enjoyed by the sellout crowd of 44,000 were not confined to the playing field, however.

One of the first groups to enter Kenan stadium's gates was a half-dozen Statesmen carrying a tattered and torn Confederate flag that exactly typified their rebellious spirit. They were out to whip the big boys, and threw quite a scare into them at that. Soon after finding their seats, the "Rebels" blossomed forth with a creakly but spirited rendition of what they termed the "national anthem," "Dixie."

Parade

And so it was with these merry-makers throughout the game. At the half they paraded up and down the sidelines bearing their banner of defiance and chanting, "Look away Dixie Land."

The Norm Sper-originated card stunts held the spotlight at the half and brought hearty "bravos" from both sides of the field.

An interesting half-time sidelight was the rapid decrease in the odds on the Carolina eleven, which had been rated a 14-point favorite prior to the game. The odds dropped, the betting increased, everybody sweated blood, and the Tar Heels broke loose in the last twenty minutes of the game to live up to their number one rank. Fourteen points were the original odds and 14 points was the margin of victory and against the best defensive team in the Forty-eight, too.

School Tie Clutched

Hosea broke through his own left tackle near the end of the third period to score on an eight-yard jaunt, and heck broke loose in the stands. Carolina men and women jumped to their feet and embraced one another: Daily Tar Heel sports ed Billy Carmichael III grabbed the old school tie, jumped to his feet and shouted, "By gosh, I knew we could do it!"; and the State fans hung their heads low with thoughts of what might have been.

From here on it was a great day for the Tar Heels with Choo Choo Charlie Justice heaving a long distance aerial to Art Weiner for another tally near the end of the final stanza to cap off a perfect second half. And the Carolina beers and State tears flowed like wine. Whatta game! Whatta victory! Whatta relief!

Men's Dormitory Elections Slated to Begin Tomorrow

By Margaret Gaston

Elections for men's dormitory positions begin tomorrow and continue through Wednesday, Pete Gerns, president of the Interdormitory council, said yesterday. Nominations were made during dormitory meetings last week, and Gerns said write-in votes will be permitted.

Voting will take palce in Old East, Old West, Steele, Mangum, Manly, Grimes and Ruffin tomorrow; Miller, Nash, Everett, Aycock, Graham, Stacy and Lewis on Tuesday; Alexander, "A", "B", "C", Battle-Vance-Pettigrew and Whitehead on Wednesday. The voting will be by secret ballot from 9 o'clock in the morning to 9 o'clock that night on the day designated. Names of nominations for Y positions have not been released as yet.

Gerns released the following list of nominees in Monday's election.

Old East: Oliver Beaman, Robert Milks, president; Anies Daye, Joe Putman, vice-president; Bennie Ward, secretary-treasurer, and Ben Setzer, Charles Reece, athletic manager.

Old West: P. J. Transou, Charles Hayes, president; Wallace Thompson, vice-president; Fred Patterson, secretary-treasurer.

Steele: Charlie Philips, Bill Rogers, P. A. Parrish, George Munford, president; Guy McFarland, Walter Lloyd, vice-president, Sid Varney, Frank Hahn, secretary-treasurer.

Mangum: Roy Gunter, Bill Lambert, Henry Reynolds, Steve Rutledge, president; John Haworth, T. L. Martin, Harold Rich, Nat Swann, Shanta Vora, vice-president; Orman Hutcherson, Don Latta, Bernie Sheffield, Bob Williams, secretary-treasurer; Oscar Lovelace, athletic manager.

Manly: Troy Mathis, Bob Birer, Jim Cashion, Joe Romano, president; Clay Brittain, vice-president, Leo Bryant, Lamarr Jones, Joe Boch, secretary-treasurer.

Grimes: Clarence Gilbert, Charles Taylor, president, Perry Henson, vice-president; Zennie Riggs, Talmadge Jordan, Jack Rowland, secretary-treasurer Dortch Warriner, athletic manager.

Ruffin: Bill Price, Ralph Morris, president; Rush Wilson, Bob Brown, Lester Styron, vice-president; Jack Ward, Tom Carriere, secretary-treasurer.

Henderson Club Meets Tomorrow

The Henderson club will meet tomorrow at 7 o'clock in Roland Parker lounge 3 of Graham Memorial.

Opposition

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 16.—(UP)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower firmly opposes federal aid to education "so long as there is one atom of federal control of education."

Eisenhower, president of Columbia university, made his position clear last night at the 82nd convocation of the University of the state of New York. He received an honorary degree of doctor of laws after his introduction to college presidents, the board of regents and local school board members and principals.

"I am an old soldier, but now I, too, am an educator," Eisenhower said. "And I say that here is one educator who will not stand for one penny of federal aid to education, so long as there is one atom of federal control of education."

Student Government Project Set

A questionaire regarding student problems and activities will be sent to all state universities, sponsored by the Campus Affairs committee of the YWCA, in order to make an analysis of university student government.

Full details will be worked out at a meeting tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock in the Y cabinet room, to which all interested students are invited.

Planning Session Slated Tomorrow

Bill Friday, assistant to Dean Weaver, addressed the committee at its first meeting. He pointed out, in an address titled "What Student Government Means to the Student," that participation in student government is one of the most profitable things to do in college.

"Such activites develop the ability to lead," Friday stated. He defined a leader as one whe foresees a problem and works toward a solution with honesty.

James Little of the vocational guidance department, will speak to the Careers committee, headed by Faith Adams, at their meeting tomorrow at 5 o'clock. He will describe tests offered to students without cost aiding them to choose a vocation.

'We Lead'

MACON, Ga., Oct. 16.—(UP)—The grasshopper-eating fad is spreading.

A few days ago, Ann Miller, Mercer college coed, set the pace by eating a grasshopper in a psychology class. The class had been talking about the strange things people do sometimes. A routine assignment.

Benjamin Harrison, Lanier high school student, went the college girl three better. He ate four grasshoppers, without a chaser, before a large crowd of startled witnesses.

Harrison pointed out that his school motto is "We Lead."

Silence Is Golden -- Sometimes

Probably the largest block in the road of progress, aside from the great god, Mars, is that potent, two-syllable word, SILENCE.

Someone once called it the "conspiracy of silence" and he was right, for except in rare instances, silence is not that golden virtue which a misled proverb has made it out to be, but a nothingness that thwarts advancement.

If only we could discover that hidden valley to which all ideas that have been chained by silence dejectedly retreat. If we could bring these ideas which died with their masters to life again, we could undoubtedly add five centuries to the development of civilization.

They say that God gave man mind. He also gave man voice with which to express the thoughts which are created by that mind. And yet, man remains silent—allows his ideas to fester for a while, and then be forgotten. Nothing ever came of an idea which was imprisoned for the span of a human lifetime.

What is it that keeps men silent? Very often it is a lack of confidence, a feeling of personal unworthiness where man asks himself, "Does what I think really make any difference in a world so large and intricate?" Some tend to undervalue their own ideas. Others say to themselves, "It may sound good to me, but what's the use, it's probobly all been said before."

In many cases, the reason for silence in youth particularly in the wall which has been built up by adults who thwart rather than encourage expression of the ideas of the young . . . "Children should be seen . . . etc." Part of the responsibility lies with teachers who feel they have an academic monopoly.

Whatever the reason may be for silence, for the blocking of ideas—that reason should be destroyed, for the benefit of society as a whole and the individual.

No date was ever made by a shy hand on the telephone receiver. No knowledge was ever gained in a silent classroom.

And progress was never made by a silent population.

What's Wrong With Colleges?

Do colleges educate? The colleges themselves admit they don't. They merely try to point the way for an individual to acquire an education for himself, so they say. But do they even do this?

For the first two years of his college life a student is required to take a variety of courses which cover a multitude of subjects so sketchily that the student leaves them more confused than when he entered. These courses are intended to give the student a background, a foundation for future study. They don't. The student is entirely disinterested in most of the required subjects since they will be of little or no use to him in the field in which he plans to work. Consequently he concentrates on those he likes and needs and skims through the rest. The instructors realize most students are in their classes only because the courses are required and present the courses in the manner least painful to themselves and to the students. This develops into a vicious circle. Disinterested students cause disinterested teachers and disinterested teachers cause disinterested students.

The better instructors are saved for the more advanced courses and students first come in contact with graduate students who lack the experience to be good teachers or with inferior instructors who lack the ability to advance to good teaching posts. This breeds indifference on the part of the student and the desire simply to get by in order to get out of the course. Unfortunately many carry on into their major fields this desire to get by. Finally their main object in college becomes the obtaining of a degree rather than the obtaining of an education. This object is further promoted by prospective employers, who simply ask the job-seeker if he has a college degree. They don't ask what field it is in or how he got it—just does he have it.

The chief trouble, we think, is that colleges today are too easy to get into and too easy to stay in. Colleges have entered into the realm of big business. They are attempting to make education available to a larger number of people. They have lowered their standards for instructors in order to accommodate the larger number of students. This in turn has lowered the standards of scholarship.

Odds And Ends

By Rita Adams

LOST MAN. Ray Milland may lose weekends, but Guy Evans seems to have him beat. The boys over in Everett dorm claim he's lost himself. They say that he vamoosed with a most cherished possession after last week's game and just didn't come back.

SHMOOTH! In a recent theme Joe Morton stressed the importance of the shmoo. "It's easy to see why the Scuttlebutt was torn down; we're going to get a bigger and better one made of shmoo-wood," Joe contends. Mr Capp, we're grown-up, college students. You can't do this to us!

THEY CAN'T DO THAT! We keep hearing gripes about the story about Staphorst, Holland, in the September 27 issue of Life. The worst part about the whole deal, it seems is the description of the "Lovers' windows" in every house. When daughter has decided on the THE man, and the courtship begins; he visits her every night—after clambering in through the special window. Whazza matter, boys, allergic to glass?

LOST WEEKEND. There will be more than one of them if and when they (we have absolutely no antecedents for that pronoun—so there, too:) start this Saturday class business. Murmurings of revolt have been heard around Caldwell X, with one vet remarking, "Haven't they heard about Lincoln's proclamation?"

QUICK HENRY, THE FLIT. It was learned around Everett dorm that the flying squirrel caught early Monday evening was entertaining small guest fleas, with the result that the shower was well populated that night.

COULD BE. Webster's definition of "aboretum": "A place where trees and shrubs are cultivated for scientific or educational purposes."

OUT OF THE MOUTHS. Seems that Mrs. Frank Norris, 95 A Trailer court, has been teaching her two year-old daughter, Gloria, nursery rhymes. Gloria then lulls herself to sleep at night by repeating these rhymes. So, doggone, if the other night she didn't start singing herself to sleep and without any coaching from the audience ended with, "All the way Choo Choo!"

CROWDED CONDITIONS. We're certainly glad to hear the Circus room is doing such a bang up business, but things over there must be getting a little too hot and crowded. At least that's the way it sounds when we get reports like the one from quonset hut 27. We hear one of the fellows from there went over to get some apples and came back with apple pie instead.

FALL SPORTS. What about this student who is rumored to be selling bleacher seats out side of Spencer dorm? Spencer has long been famed for its sunbathers; now some enterprising young rascal has taken note of the forgotten window shades and is now capitalizing on the coeds' absentmindedness.

BOTANY EXPERT? John Rosser has done his good deed for the week by explaining to a group of freshmen that the tree in the middle of the North Carolina map on the window downtown is Davie Poplar. Then he proceeded to show the boys where the real McCoy is.

ROLLING THE PRESSES at the Chapel Hill Weeqly this week is yournalism prof, Stuart Sechriest. The amiable facsimile of Carl Snavely is doing a fine job of getting the paper to bed while Louis Graves is on vacation. And while on the subject: If Secriest gobbles up that praise mistaken spectators—they keep thinking he's the Grey Fox—heap on him after the games, will he likewise take the blame if and when we ever lose?

Can You Define Socialism?

By Kenneth B. Cruse

The hardest words to define are always the words that have the most definitions. No two claimants of the title Socialist will agree on a meaning for the word, and each claims that the other does not know what the term applies to. For this reason, neither you nor I can pose a definition and defend that definition. This is a subject on which all interested minds are closed.

There are dozens of theories of government (or lack of government) that want to be known as Socialism. Why the competition no one knows, for there are other words equally as good, and without the traditional stigma which this word has. Perhaps it is partly public eye, but they aren't fooling themselves that exclusive title to the word would give them the other. There were Socialists long before Marx, and they tried experiments all over the world which Marx studied very thoroughly before he ever set pen to paper.

Most of the pre-Marx theories were Utopian Socialism to be brought about by peaceful means. The favorite means was by setting up ideal communities for the rest of the world to emulate. The basic doctrine of these societies. and many later ones, is that if cooperation were substituted for competition as the mainspring of economic activity, most of the evils of the state would disappear.

Marx disagreed as to method. and the followers of Marx have been disagreeing ever since as to what method Marx advocated. He held that the class struggle is inevitable, and that in time there would have to be only one class, that class having beaten the other classes. This is to be the Proletariat, the most numerous class. Now arises another difficulty. Who are the Proletariat? Some Socialists say that only the industrial workers constitute the Proletariat. others that only farmers are the true Proletariat, some that all workers are included. others that anyone who owns no shares in a business, or no stock, or no bonds, or no Buick automobiles. Come the revolution, we'd better decide.

How this struggle is to be resolved is another touchy point. Some say that only by the bloodiest of revolutions can it reach its culmination, others by gradual peaceful reforms, and Huxley seems to think that it will be by a revolt against the apes.

After the revolution, what do we have to govern us? Here again, we can find no meeting ground. Will it be by the complete absense of any rule, or by a transitional dictatorship, by guilds, by cooperate syndicates, by a democracy, or something that will develop out of the revolution itself?

Any definition is hidden in a dense cloud of pretty words and phrases such as utilitarianism, natural-rights, Utopia, freedom, democracy, or what have you, depending on the inclinations of the advocate. Tonight, at the CPU discussion, all the pretty words are sure to be present, but out of the smoke, some definition may be reached.

States Rights

Our Fundamental Rights

By Ben K. Erdman, Jr.

It is a fundamental right of man to choose his friends and associates. We doubt that there is a reader of this column who would willingly forego this precious right which has expressed itself throughout the world and throughout history by the banding together of people who had common similarities, physical as well as intellectual.

Some of these bands of people learned to take greater advantage of their environment and laid a groundwork for the great western civilization that benefits all of the people of our country today. There are few, however, who seem to relish their attack on one's right to decide who shall be his associates and friends even though they enjoy an inheritance that without this right would have been grossly retarded.

It takes little imagination to preceive the distructive effects its loss would have had on those who built the civilization we have today. In the groups thus deprived there certainly would have been antagonisms and misunderstandings between dissimilar individuals with the probable result of violance.

Virtually all progress would have receded to more primitive stages as the group lost its identity, ideals and self respect. Fortunately this is not natural of men to willingly accept anymore than it is natural for one to expect to see the ducks and the crows flying together.

Is it right and natural then, to coerce men into taking on associates whom they do not desire? The narrow minds of those politicians who advocate such misnamed measures as the "Fair Employment Practices commission" seem to have ignored this for their own vain political purposes. They seek to deceive the people with their high-sounding impractical sermons on equality, yet in some careless moments or when their tongues have been loosened by indulgence, the truth will come through a few of them.

They are primarily interested in the Negro vote regardless of whom it hurts, and in the South it would hurt the most. Through the appeasement of such agitators as Walter White they hope to secure the control of the government for themselves. FEPC is such a measure of appeasement under the guise of being "fair."

It is certainly not fair to the employer who would be compelled to hire those who were unlike him in thought as well as in other characteristics and whose presence would be obnoxious to the other employes. One can see the atmosphere created would not be conducive to the satisfaction and efficiency of the employe. The business suffers, but who gains? Only the scheming self-styled "liberal" politician and his stooges, of course!

In the South the effects of such a program would be most severe. The dividing line between the Negro and white is very sharp and also the Negro group constitutes no small minority in the South as it does in the North. In the South the majority of the Negroes occupy jobs that are traditionaly theirs and no amount of legislation can give them the ability to take over jobs they are not accustomed to. If such a program were carried out it could only be fatal to the economy of the southern states.

Must the southern people pay this price for the benefit of those who are attempting to sacrifice them on the political alter? Of course not! The South must not and will not submit to the indescriminate political cultists of opportunity. In the coming election millions of good Americans will voice their disapproval of the attempted infringements of their natural rights and insults to their common sense by voting for the real American ticket — the Thurmond-Wright ticket. Join them!

Propaganda one expects in a Presidential campaign, but there are times when it gets sickening. For instance, when Claude Dunnagan or anyone else repeatedly asserts that "pro-fascists" are responsible for branding Henry Wallace's party as pro-Communist, he is guilty not merely of telling lies but of betraying the principles of his own party as well. Come now, Mr Dunnagan, is it not a major tenet of your platform that it is "Red-baiting" to distinguish between "democratic progressives" and Communists? How are we naive peons to know what is "Red" in your party (for surely even you admit that there are Reds in it) and what is not, if you cannot make that distinction yourselves? It seems to me the Progressive party can stand on its own statements as "pro-Communist", without any help from Westbrook Pegler or George Sokolsky or even from me. And if it is "Red-baiting" to call pro-Red that which is avowedly pro-Red anyway, then let us by all means Red-bait!

Instead of calling everyone "fascist" who does not agree with the Progressive party and its foreign (I use the word "foreign" advisedly) policy, Mr. Dunnagan or one of his cohorts might tell us unenlightened Wall Street Hatchet Men wherein the "Progressives" do disagree with the Communists. Perhaps it is in their concern for welfare of the "pro-fascist" Czechs, the second people to fight Hitler, and now blessed by the "real democracy" which our Red brethren were kind enough to stuff down their throats? Or perhaps it is in the devotion of the true "Progressives" to "real democrats" like Vito Marcantinio? Do tell, Mr. Dunnagan, do tell, how the Progressives have parted from the Reds on fundamental questions of our times!

It is not necessary to "go to considerable lengths to associate" the party of Henry Wallace with the Communist Party. They're quite closely associated as it is, thank you.

A suggestion, Mr. Dunnagan: This is a free country, and we can still do what the "real democrats" of Russia and Czechoslovakia do not allow the people of Russia and Czechoslovakia to do: disagree among ourselves and with our government, and live to tell about it. That we are not perfect is true of course, and as we labor to better our free institutions perhaps you could show us what advantages would come to us in our labors, by following what must seem to many in your party to be the benefits of Communism. Shout forth the Red menace. and then (since you are "true democrats") you will of course let the people choose, freely.

For all your eloquent prose, Mr. Dunnagan, for many of us the Progressive Party and its gleaming promises looks a great deal like a dead mackerel in the moonlight: It shines and stinks.

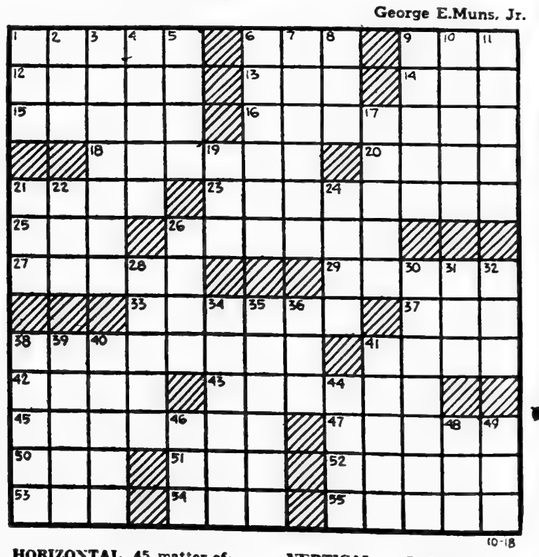
'Frantic Effusion'

Editor:



I happened to notice the other day on the DTH editorial page a frantic effusion by one who calls himself Bill Robertson. The nature and form of his remarks no doubt is affording great satisfaction to the Soviet agency responsible for his indoctrination, for the piece bristles with the standard words "fascist" and "red-baiter" applying to all those whose opinions do not exactly conform to his.

His argument follows the time-honored scheme of presenting only the facts which substantiate his case. As an old "red-baiter" Thomas Babington Macauley, has said of such persons, "They arrive at a theory from looking at some of the phenomena; and the remaining phenomona they strain or curtail to suit the theory."Robertson's Kremlin-bred system of logic reiterates with monotonous sameness the pattern of thinking of so many of the self-styled liberals that always seem to infest large university campuses.

Hysterically adulating their idol, Marxism, and laying all the world's ills in the lap of the NAM, this sorry crew is ripe pickings for trained Soviet Democracy-wreckers, or their front organizations, such as the Wallacecommunists (one word).

However, Wallacecommunism is serving at least two useful purposes. In the first place, since most of Wallace's votes will come from ex-Democrats, the most "liberal" party with any hope of success in the coming election will be deprived of needed votes. Secondly, it affords an outlet for the jangled emotions of those fustrated individuals who would otherwise probably beat their wives or kick the dog.

By BILLY CARMICHAEL III

Copyright 1948, The Daily Tar Heel.

The Black Hole

NORTH CAROLINA'S USUALLY GRACEFUL Tar Heels stumbled into the Black Hole of Cow College at Kenan stadium early yesterday afternoon and almost suffocated some 44,000 lukewarm fans who subsequently held their breaths waiting for the Carolina hopefuls to return from the near dead.

It was like watching a Frankenstein undertaking in the cinema. The Tar Heels were constantly assaulted with all grades of trouble, escaping from one frying pan right back into another. The situation was never favorable to the local cause except towards the last reel when everything came out in the wash including 14 points worth of victory for ye olde Carolina.

Visiting State college made themselves right at home from the start. They displayed a tremendous effort in the early part of the ball game and lived up to, and then far beyond their pregame clippings as the nation's best defensive football team. They lacked but one little prefection—the ability to score touchdowns.

Bared To The World

THEY HAD THE OPPORTUNITIES, too. From the beginning of the ball game until the Tar Heels got a touchdown transfusion late in the third period, State had their hands on the controls. The Feather merchants accomplished this purpose by selfishly hogging the ball, giving it to the Tar Heels only long enough for the latter to kick or fumble it back as they saw fit.

Three times the determined West Raleigh boys moved within the Carolina 10-yard line, only to find that all that glitters was not the Tar Heel goal line. They had to cross another line to reach the hallowed area where all good halfbacks sooner or later go, but this line was not one of chalk or talk.

There, bared to the world, were seven Tar Heels with four more held in reserve that refused all Wolfpack pleas for a single touchdown. Whether it was stubbornness, force of habit, or a persecution complex, Carolina was not to be violated.

The Road Back

THE TAR HEELS, LOOKING in all earnestness, took almost three periods to find themselves. The way they did it delighted most everybody associated with the Blue and White cause, financially or otherwise. It was Hosea Rodgers, who had flunked the pop quizzes of the first half so badly, who came back to pass the final with flying colors.

The Ramrod began tapping the Wolfpack line for regular gains in the third period and wonderfully enough, keeping the ball with him on all occasions. He led a triumph march down the field in a flurry of plays that ended when the big boy himself shot as from a cannon off the Tar Heel left side and plowed through ozone alone into an unguarded end zone. The famous act of Cox and Purcell added the point of prefection.

State, at this point, according to the rules of the game, was supposed to become desperate and filled the air with erratic pigskins. But the Wolfpack continued to remain dreadfully unconventional, hoping to wander into at least a tie on another Tar Heel error. Much as they hated it, the Snavelymen were forced to disappoint their bovine brothers.

For Good Measure

FOR, INSTEAD OF ALLOWING the State college entry back into the ball game, the Tar Heels pushed them further out of it in the final period. The instance was another Tar Heel touchdown which brought scads of joy to the Carolina stands and scads of monetary enjoyment to the pockets of the 13 point bettors.

As the story went, Old Massa Snavely put his Choo Choo back on the track for one last run, but young Justice decided to cross the boys up for the sake of variety. He passed long and well to Art Weiner down the left sidelines for the benefit of Carolina students situated around the State 23.

The Newark night rider gathered the ball in at this point as one Bob Smith of the Wolfpack came up to greet him. Smith evidently meant no harm, for he merely gave the surprised Weiner a goalward push and let six more points go down the previously clogged drain. Messrs Cox and Purcell repeated their clever act of scrupulously splitting the goal posts as the Tar Heel fans tore small chunks of concrete from the stadium.

Another Week, Another Game

ALL THIS BROUGHT the game to a pleasing close, and the exhausted assembleage scurried for their homes. It had been an interesting afternoon highlighted by good, hard, clean play by all concerned. The officating was at a peak, which seemed to be noticeable to both sides since there wasn't a penalty called until right at the end of the first debacle.

Gentlemanly play was displayed by both teams with the boys observing the fine old Southern custom of picking up those whom you have knocked to the turf. State got the majority of the breaks, but were personally the cause for most of them. Carolina had the Godsend of the afternoon when visitor Jim Byler's first-half place kick hit the very center of the cross bar and bounded harmlessly and graciously to the turf.

The game as a whole proved that Carolina will continue to be pointed for like North on a magnetic compass. It is hard to be great without being beaten sooner or later. State may have played the better ball game yesterday, but Carolina scored the most points.

And they continue to pay off on the score on the scoreboard in this day and age of capitalist football.

But how close can lightning come to striking?

Cross Country Team Defeated By Navy

Midshipmen Take Victory by 24-37

ANNAPOLIS, Md., (SPL), Oct. 16—Carolina's cross country track team went down to defeat for the second time this season here today when they bowed to the strong U. S. Naval academy harriers, 37-24. The run was made over a 4.59 mile course around Perry circle.

As in their previous loss to Virginia Tech, the Tar Heels racked up first place honors. Strongman Sam Magill cruised home in 27 minutes and nine seconds to take first place.

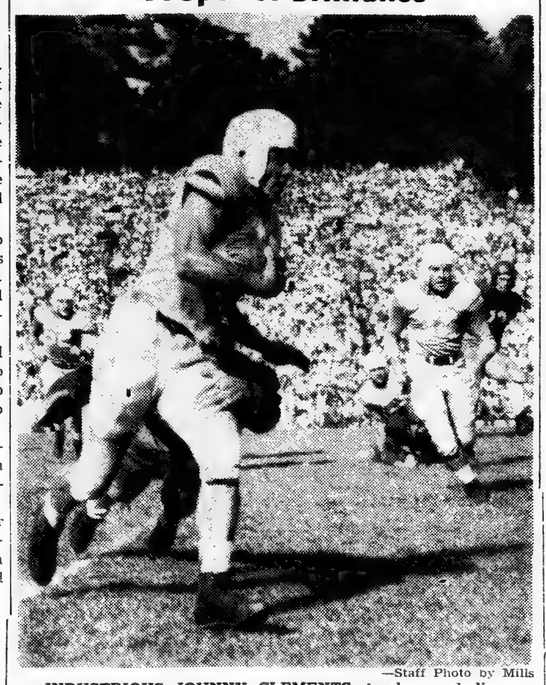
Navy, however, had several early finishers and were able to pick up the necessary points to win. Carolina again appeared to be minus the balance needed.

Frank Hooper, of Carolina, finished third in 27.59, only fifteen seconds behind Navy's second-place Trout.

Carolina's only other finisher in the top ten was Julian MacKenzie, who came in tenth. Smith and Bisselle of Navy rounded out the select five.

Today's loss was only the second for the Tar Heels in their last eighteen outings. The Middies turned in their second win in succession as they had previously edged out Duke in a run made at Durham, N. C.

Summaries of today's meet:



1. Magill (UNC), 2, Trout (Navy), 3. Hooper (UNC), 4. Smith (Navy), 5. Bisselle (Navy), 6. Tademark (Navy), 7. Loomis (Navy), 8. Marsh Navy), 9. Oahowe (Navy), 10. MacKenzie (UNC).

reached the nine before Johnny Clements hit him. With first and goal to go, three running plays by Ogden Smith and one by Thompson carried only to the two, and Carolina took over.

An exchange of kicks gave the Tar Heels the ball on their own 16 later in the first quarter. Justice failed to gain, but Rodgers twisted through tackle to the 25. Here he fumbled, and Clock dived on the pigskin for State. Two runs by Thompson carried to the 12, and a pass to George Blomquist put the ball on the four for a first down.

Goal Line Stand

Then a determined Carolina line rose up in a marvelous goal line stand. Smith and Thompson took turns lugging the ball but succeeded in reaching only to the six-inch line in four downs.

State offered one other threat in the first half, that a field goal attempt by Jim Byler from the Carolina 21. The kick at first appeared woefully weak, but sailed a little farther than expected. It hit the cross bar on the goal, falling back into the end zone.

The second half was a different story, and it was Carolina on the offensive for the majority of the time. Carolina initiated its touchdown drive form the 50, following an out-of-bounds kick by Fletcher. On the first play from midfield, Rodgers bolted through tackle and carried a couple of Wolfpack players with him to the 37 for a first down. Bill Flamisch took a reverse and galloped to the 11 for the second straight first down. Bill carried the ball again on an inside reverse, getting to the nine. Rodgers made the remaining yardage to the goal. He broke through the State forward wall, cut quickly to the left sidelines and raced over diagonally.

That man Bob Cox converted the extra point, with Gus Purcell holding to make the score 7-0 with less than two minutes left in the quarter.

Chagrined Charlie

Late in the fourth quarter, Justice called for a fair catch of a punt by Smith on the State 48. The Wolfpack cheering section immediately burst into the cry of lie was chagrined, for he dropped "Poor Choo Choo". Perhaps Charback on first down, spotted Weiner down the left sidelines and let the ball fly. Weiner, assisted by a shove from State's Bob Smith, hauled in the toss on the 28 and ambled over the goal.

Cox's extra point made it 14-0. Three minutes remained to be played, but neither team could threaten thereafter. The game ended with Carolina in possession of the ball near midfield.

of "breaks" in the first half and Johnny Clements in summing it all up declared, "They were lucky and we got all the bad breaks. If it hadn't been for our line, they would have beat us." And Kenny Powell added, "We're capable of playing better ball. But, at any rate, we got it out of our systems now and can settle down to some real ball playing."

Bill Maceyko, who seems to get better with every game, declared, "I'm glad to be by that one." About the State line that is rated best in the nation on defense he said, "We were back on our heels the first half, but we showed what we could do to the State line in the second half."

But Bob Kennedy, a man of few words, couldn't have said any more than he did when he remarked, "I'm glad we won!"

Here's How Throat Specialists proved
CAMEL MILDNESS
IN DRAMATIC 30-DAY TEST!

1 In this test famous throat specialists examined the throats of hundreds of men and women from coast to coast who smoked Camels exclusively for 30 days—a total of 2470 thorough examinations.

2 These throat specialists examined all these smokers every week and found not one single case of throat irritation due to smoking Camels!

3 PROVE IT YOURSELF in your "T-Zone"—T for Taste, T for Throat. Make the 30-day Camel mildness test with our money-back guarantee. (See below.)

THIS TEST REVEALED
NOT ONE SINGLE CASE OF THROAT IRRITATION DUE TO SMOKING CAMELS!

Money-Back Guarantee!
MAKE THE 30-DAY CAMEL TEST YOURSELF
If, at any time during these 30 days, you are not convinced that Camels are the mildest cigarette you have ever smoked, return the package with the unused Camels and we will refund your full purchase price, plus postage. This offer is good for 90 days from this date.

According to a Nationwide survey:
MORE DOCTORS SMOKE CAMELS THAN ANY OTHER CIGARETTE
Doctors smoke for pleasure, too! And when three leading independent research organizations asked 113,597 doctors what cigarette they smoked, the brand named most was Camel!

Fraternities Begin Week With Rushing

Formal rushing opens tonight at 7:30 for the twenty-two fraternities on campus. Rushees will visit many newly redecorated houses tomorrow and Tuesday nights at organized functions followed by a week and a half of informal gatherings of unspecified times until November 2, official shake-up day. Bids will be extended to prospective pledges on November 4, when "rush week" for some 1500 Carolina men will draw to a close.

Weekend activities for the Kappa Alphas include a Friday night post-pep rally hayride at an informal Saturday night house dance for visiting alumni and State brothers at which the new KA Rose was presented. The Bull City Nighthawks played for the dancers from eight until twelve. Plans for the functions were executed by Ralph Marshall, chapter social chairman.

Pi Kappa Alpha began its social season last Wednesday night by entertaining the Delta Delta Delta sorority and their pledges at a costume. The girls chose a PiKA (just for the evening) by the "beau tie" method; that is by selecting a tie and locating its "beau." Refreshments were served, followed by entertainment consisting of musical comedy numbers by the PiKA's and a melodrama by the Tri Delts. With the singing of the "Dream Girl of PiKA" the evening of festivity was brought to a close.

The Order of the Minataurs met last Monday night to discuss parties for the coming year and to complete plans for the initiation of the new members which took place yesterday at the football game. The club, whose chief purpose is to improve social interfraternity relationships, consists of representatives from Kappa Sigma, Zeta Psi, SAE, Beta, and DKE.

Each year it chooses three sophomores from each of these fraternities as new members. The new initiates are: Harry S. Bateman, Ivan Armstrong, and Jimmy Hardison, Kappa Sigma; Thomas Battle, Jim Ballou, and Dick Hackney, Zeta Psi; William S. Benbou, and John Murchison, SAE; Marshall H. Roberts, Jr., Robert M. Gallant, Sonny Shelton, Beta; and H. Neal Howard, Jr., Shahane R. Taylor, and Richard D. Dixon, Jr., DKE.

Initiations were conducted by the Kappa Sigma and Kappa Alpha fraternities last Wednesday night. New Kappa Sigs are William Oliver Smith, Ernest Jackson, Alex Wade Marsh, Thomas Dorsett Larkin, and John Alexander McCrary. Those who have recently acquired their KA shields are Bob Kelly, Don McLeod, Wayne Willard, and Don Nicholson.

Newly remodeled fraternity houses have been the scenes of several parties during the week. Thursday night ZBT brought their sister sorority, Alpha Epsilon Phi, over from Duke for a "cabaret" party. The Sig Eps finished remodeling their house in time to entertain alumni, parents, and guests over homecoming. An alumni dinner meeting was held before the State game after which the Sig Eps held a buffet supper and open house.

The Sigma Chi's entertained their neighboring State brothers with a buffet supper Saturday night after the game. Entertainment was furnished by the sextet. The Kappa Sigs had a buffet brunch as well as buffet dinner for the alumni and the State chapter of Kappa Sig over this weekend.

The Sigma Nus with seven married men active in the chapter have hit upon a way to organize the energies of the wives. A Sigma Nu Wives Club is the solution which enables the women to take an active part in the entertainment and social activities of the fraternity.

HELEN BOULDIN

UNC Senior Is Selected As Endorsee

Carolina's Helen Bouldin, senior from Clarksdale, Miss., is one of the three college leaders in the country chosen by Montag Bros., Inc, stationery manufacturers, to appear in their fall national advertizing campaigns.

Helen, tapped by the Valkyries last spring for leadership, scholarship, and character, was selected in the spring to appear on Montag's fall advertizing pages. An agent of Montag Bros. came to Carolina's campus at that time and chose Helen as an attractive, outstanding co-ed.

Splendid UNC Record

Carolina's representative was last year the chairman of the Woman's Honor Council and chairman of the woman's Executive Council. A member of the Chi Omega sorority, she is chairman of Women's Orientation and is active in sports.

At Stephens College, which Helen attended for two years, she was the president of Wales Hall and was a member of the legislature for two years. She was one of the Ten Ideals, Stephens highest honor and participated in Ivey Fete, Stephen's May Day program.

Various Church Activities Draw Interest of All

On the Chapel Hill Church Calendar for the week are the following activities.

BAPTIST: Dr. Greer, Executive vice president of the Business Foundation of the University, will speak today at the 11 o'clock Baptist service on "Christian Security."

A triple feature program has been arranged this evening for the BSU. A special movie will be shown at 5:40 this afternoon in the room at the rear of the main auditorium. After the student supper at 6, Claude Shotts, executive Director of the YMCA, who just returned from a summer in Europe, will discuss the crucial Berlin situation.

PRESBYTERIAN: Presbyterian services will be held this morning at 9:45 and 11. Parents may leave their children at the nursery school during both the services.

This evening at Westminster Fellowship at 6, the discussion on "Being a Christian on Campus" will be continued. Speakers on the panel are Iris Bost, Student, and Dr. Warren Ashby, Instructor of Philosophy. Dr. J. P. Harland, professor of Archaeology, will speak to the married group on the Old Testament at 6 o'clock.

About fourteen young people have been in High Point during the last two days attending the annual N. C. Synod conference.

EPISCOPAL: The Rev. Mr. Yates will conduct services at 11 this morning and 8 this evening. The sermon will bear the theme of the observance of Youth Sunday. This evening the service wil consist of evening prayer and a brief address. On Tuesday night the Canerbury Club will continue its study of the Lord's Prayer. This is the third discussion in a series.

The every member canvas of the Episcopalian students on campus which has been underway since October 3 will be completed this week according to Mr. Yates.

CATHOLIC: A special sermon will be delivered in Gerrard Hall at 11 o'clock mass this morning by Rev. Mr. Morrissey. Confessions were made at 7 o'clock last evening.

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN: In preparation for the Community Chest and overseas relief drives, The Rev. Mr. Munger is planning a completely different sermon. He plans to deliver a series of three sermons entitled, "You Matter," "You Are a Debtor," and "You are a Steward."

Mr. Munger will speak Sunday evening on "this Common Mood Discouragement." The student group will meet for supper at six Monday evening and will then attend the third lecture in the series given by Dr. Bernard Anderson.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE: Services will be held at 11 this morning in the Christian Science lecture room in New West.

METHODIST: At the 11 o'clock service the Rev. Mr. Henry Rusark will speak on the "Revelation that brings the Kingdom." Preceding that service at 10, Brooks Patton, Methodist student worker, and Frank Hanft, professor of Law will teach student and young adult Sunday School classes. Mrs. E. H. Ould, Roanoke, Virginia, who is a leading lay woman in the Methodist church will speak on "Christian Homemaking" at Wesley Foundation tonight at 6 o'clock.

QUEEN CHARLEEN GREER REIGNS

YM, YW Entertain At Afternoon Party

The YM and YW will entertain this afternoon in honor of the many foreign students now on campus with a tea in Graham Memorial's main lounge at 4:30.

First of the activities planned for foreign students, the reception is also open to all other students who are interested in meeting people from various parts of the world.

Co-chairmen of the affair are Bill Brown and Ann Carlton, who hope to form a Cosmopolitan club to function throughout the year, with a membership largely of foreign students. The club would orient those young people to American ways—customs, slang, business establishments—and would arrange trips to points of interest near Chapel Hill.

Among the many countries represented on campus this year are Algeria, Argentina, Austria, Bolivia, Brazil, Canada, Canal Zone, Chile, China, Czechoslovakia, Ecuador, Egypt, England, Germany, Greece, Guatamala, Hawaii, Iceland, India, Korea, Mexico, Newfoundland, Philippines, Peru, Sweden, Venezuela, Virgin Islands.

Foreign students who have not received invitations to the affair are asked to come, and to leave their names and campus addresses, so that they may be contacted for future functions of the group.

Administration officials and faculty members will be among this afternoon's guests, in addition to YM and YW cabinet members, and the affair will be quite informal.

Sororities Sparkle With Rings, Banners

Violet LaRue

There'll be some gay times had by the ADPi's this week-end. Sarah Montague, Goldsboro, and Ruth Gay, Jacksonville, are to be here for the homecoming game this week-end. There were many disconsolate girls at the ADPi house this past week when they found out that they were forced by the fraternity rushing program to postpone their gala plans for an open house this Sunday night. The display in front of the ADPi house carried the theme of the beloved merry-go-round. There was a carousal carrying rams chasing wolves—not to mention the merry-go-round music that was played. And to think that the pledges planned it themselves!

The Alpha Gams held an open house after the game for EVERYONE! Real food and hospitality. The State cheerleaders were the guests of honor. That's what we call "friendship". Speaking of the cheerleaders, the display that the Alpha Gams had was really quite the thing. Very "farmy". There was a barn rigged up in the front lawn with a marche-headed cow sticking its neck out of the barn door. A chicken, also of the paper variety, was sitting on a rail above the door. An' that ain't all; Choo Choo (a Carolina Player) was standing by the barn with a pitchfork in one hand. On the other end of the implement there was a State player with a wolfe's head. The slogan went something like: PITCH 'EM BACK TO THE FARM. The gals at Crystal Palace chose Becky Holton, Belmont, and Barbara Thomas, Winston-Salem, as their representatives to the Football Beauty Queen Contest sponsored by the University club.

The Pi Phi pledges will be introduced to the campus Sunday evening at an open house. So all you so-called Carolina gentlemen come on over. Buffet supper will be served, starting at 5:30, an' everybody is welcome! The Pi Phi pledges were honored at a supper party Tuesday, October 19, 1948 given Thursday night by the Chi Phi's. Another Pi Phi pin up is Mary Glen Slater, Wilson, to Harold Jeeter, a Phi Gam.

The Chi O's are sorry that their open house was cancelled for this Sunday night, but the usual open house will be held next Sunday at the regular time. Weddin' bells have been ringing around the Chi O house this week. Last Sunday Sarah Kinsey Chi O pledge, and Robert Wilcox were married. Both are from Charlotte. Friday night Marshall Spears and Young Pulley, both of Rocky Mount, were married. The Chi O homecoming display was a lot of fun to see: Little Red Riding Hood, Choo Choo, and the Wolfe were running quite a race! The Chi O pledges planned and made the whole thing. Congradulations!

Tri-Delts are holding their initation Monday and Tuesday nights for Getsy Horton, Cynthia Cannon, Heath Hertsell and Mintie Cantrell.

Highest Prize Is Captured By Jewelers

Wentworth and Sloan jewelry store won first prize in the Chapel Hill Merchants' association's window display contest which was judged Saturday.

The first prize of $10 was given to Wentworth and Sloan for their original window display featuring the "Choo Choo" train. The miniature engine, representing "Choo Choo Charlie Justice is pulling the Carolina victory train down the field. The train is made up of four cars representing the Carolina games played this season with the score for each posted on its respective car. Beyond the goal posts are three silver bowls; one filled with sugar, another with cotton, and the third with oranges. The window was further decorated with individual pictures of the football team, pennants, and two signs welcoming State and the Carolina grads.

The second place prize of $5 was won by the Carolina Pharmacy for its unique display of a small football field studded with pipe-cleaner ball players. Four of the twenty entrys—the Electric Construction company, the University Florists, Danziger's restaurant, and Huggins' Hardware store—received honorable mention.

Individualism Under Socialism Defined By CPU

Four definitions for Socialism were offered at the regular CPU meeting in Graham Memorial Sunday night.

The first proposal was "Socialism is the social ownership of the means of producing the wealth of the nation, all individuals being equal in relationship to the ownership of the means of production."

The second definition, and least attacked, was "Socialism is an under which the basic sector of the national economy is nationalized, the state power belongs to the working class, and where production is planned in the interests of the majority."

The third definition was the broadest of the four, and the last was a quotation from the American Socialist, Daniel De Leon.

New Music Recital Scheduled Tomorrow

The second in a series of student recitals will be presented by the Music department in Hill hall tomorrow at four o'clock, and the public is cordially invited.

The program is as follows:
"Sonata in B flat major" (Mozart) William Tritt, violin, Barbara [illegible], piano; "Ballade in G minor" (Chopin) Edwin Steed, piano; "Sonata in G minor" (Brahms) David McAdams, violin, Barbara [illegible], piano; "Premier Fantasy" (Marty) Richard Conrad, clarinet, Jeanne Fornoff, piano.

Yack Group Pix Are Available

Composite group pictures and individual snapshots submitted for use in last year's Yack may be picked up by the contributing fraternities and organizations in the Yack office today, Bill Steele, Yack co-ordinator announced yesterday.

Plush

Offical visitors no longer have to tip-toe through first floor South offices of the University Controller and the President.

The floors were formerly an open invitation to home and office insurance agents. The imitation skating-rinks have now been covered with grey carpets which had been on order for over one year and a half.

The scretaries are pleased. High heels can once again be worn without fear for life or limb.

LOUISE LAMONT AS "MAMA," and Julia Johns as "Dagmar" (left and right in the Carolina Playmaker production of John Van Druten's comedy, "I Remember Mama," which will be presented at the Playmaker theater tomorrow through Saturday evenings at 8:30. The play is the first major production of the new Playmaker season.

Tickets Going Fast For Playmaker Show

By Mark Sumner

John W. Parker, business manager of the Carolina Playmakers, announced late yesterday that season ticket holders who have not exchanged their ticket stubs for reserved seats to "I Remember Mama" had better do so at the first opportunity.

"Tickets have sold very rapidly, and Friday and Saturday night's tickets are nearly gone," he said, "but we still have a few good seats for Wednesday and Thursday nights."

"I Remember Mama" is scheduled for presentation tomorrow through Saturday evenings at 8:30 in the Playmaker theater. It is the first major production of the Playmakers' new season.

Assistant technical director Gorden R. Bennett released the names of the various technical crew members who will work on the production. Bennett has supervised the scenery building which includes a 24-foot revolving stage.

The lighting crew, headed by James Byrd, includes Erle Hall, Murray McCain, Dan McIntyre, Charles Morrell, and Marjorie Cameron. Marty Jacobs is stage manager, and John Kirkman is assistant stage manager.

The stage crew includes: Robert Barr, Mac Shaw, Kin Kinney, and Danny Hughes.

Edsel Hughes is general crew chief, and the members of the shop crew are: Hal Shadwell, David Samples, Sidney Shertzer, and members of the dramatic art 65 technical course.

The property crew includes: Frank Echols, Virginia Hamilton, Jean Crouser, and Gwen Finley. The costume assistants are Suzanne Davis, Marty Jacobs, Iantha Smart, Patricia Peteler, and Bradford Fearing. George Levine is house manager.

Visual Lecture To Be Delivered By Dr. Johnson

Jotham Johnson, professor of Latin and head of the Classics department at New York university, will deliver an illustrated lecture, "The Ancient World from the Air," in Gerrard hall at 8:30 tomorrow evening.

Johnson will speak under the auspices of the Archaeological Institute of America. Following the lecture a meeting will be held of all persons interested in the formation of a North Carolina chapter of the institute comprising the universities and colleges in this area.

Student Teachers Should See Clarke

All education students planning to do student teaching in winter or spring quarters in social study, English, mathematics, or science are requested to see C. M. Clarke, 106 Peabody, as soon as possible. Delay in reply to this request may prevent a student's meeting teachers certification requirements before December, 1949.

First Cold Wave of Year Drops Mercury in Nation

CHICAGO, Oct. 18.—(UP)—The year's first cold wave spread over much of the nation today, setting new record low temperatures at some points and bringing overcoats out of mothballs.

The mercury plunged to 20 degrees at Chicago in the early morning for the coldest Oct. 18 on record. The windy city was one of the chilliest spots in the country.

Overcoat weather prevailed in central sections as the polar air mass moved eastward and south. Freezing temperatures were expected on the Atlantic seaboard during the night.

The U.S. weather bureau here said that warmer temperatures were developing in the Northwest, where the cold air mass originated.

Garages reported a heavy rush of business from motorists scrambling to fill their radiators with anti-freeze.

Frost spread over the rich croplands of the Midwest, but experts said little damage would be done.

Chief Meteorologist Paul Miller of the Indianapolis weather bureau said that most crops have matured beyond possibility of damage, and that freshly-planted wheat was not hurt. Indiana had temperatures as low as 24.

The advancing cold front kicked up a sudden storm in the New Orleans area yesterday which trapped fishermen on adjacent waters. The Coast Guard reported that 13 persons had been spotted or rescued, but that four were still missing.

Dixiecrats Slate Meet In Memphis

CHARLOTTE, Oct. 18—(UP)—A Southwide conference will be held in Memphis, Tenn., sometime before the Nov. 2 general election to consider setting up the State's Rights Democrats as a permanent political party, a spokesman said today.

David Clark, Charlotte publisher and co-chairman of the North Carolina State's Rights Democrats, said it is "absolutely silly' to believe that Southerners will return to the Democratic party fold.

In a statement issued at party headqquarters here, he added:

"So vicious and so insulting have been the attacks upon the State's Rights Democrats by officeholders and certain newspapers—including that of Jonathan Daniels, who aspired to Truman's cabinet—that a call has been issued for a Southwide conference at Memphis, at which consideration is to be given to establishing the State's Rights Democrats as a permanent party."

Daniels, editor and publisher of the Raleigh, News and Observer, declined comment. He was a wartime aide to President Roosevelt and has served as an unofficial advisor on Mr. Truman's recent campaign trips.

Clark said most of the voters of the South will transfer their allegiance to the new party if Mr. Truman is elected and congress makes "any effort" to enact the civil rights program.

Clark attacked Army Secretary Kenneth Royall and Sen. Clyde R. Hoey, (D.—N.C.) and said they were among state Democratic leaders who tried to impugn the motives of the State's Righters.

Raleigh Woman Cancels Party For Margaret

RALEIGH, Oct. 18—(UP)—Mrs. Charles Bradshaw, a classmate of Margaret Truman, said today she had called off a cocktail party "by official decree" with she had planned to give tonight for the president's daughter here.

She said state Democratic officials asked her to cancel the cocktail party for Miss Truman, her classmate when both girls attended Gunston Hall in Washington, D. C. She had invited guests to the affair at 10 o'clock tonight in the hotel where the president and his family expected to stay.

Mrs. Bradshaw said the party was "just called the wrong thing."

Duncan Releases Names of Staff For 1949 Yack

Bill Duncan, editor of the 1949 Yackety Yack, released the names of new staff appointments yesterday.

Class editors are: Fred Blain, freshman; Bert Kaplan, sophomore; Lee Gore, junior; Elinor Woltz, senior; Arnold McPeters, proessional school; Nell Evans, pharmacy and Alice Sharpe, organizations.

Molly Blackburn, sororities; Bill Claybrock, fraternities; Fred Fussell, honorary societies; Helen Epps, dance and beauty editor, and Larry Fox, sports editor.

Ted Fussell will also act as advertising and business manager.

States' Rights

The Philanthropic assembly will discuss states' rights at its meeting this evening at 7:30 in Phi hall, New East building.

This evening's bill states that the theory of states' right as set forth in the constitution should be upheld and that the human rights provisions of the Declaration of Independance should be respected.

The bill concludes that civil rights can best be handled under local self government and that the 10th amendment to the constitution "is as important as the 14th."

Rhodes Scholars Set to Compete In Tests Dec. 12

From 15 applications for Rhodes scholarships five candidates were selected to represent the University at the state meeting in Raleigh scheduled for Dec. 12. The candidates are Robert Butman, Washington; William Robert Coulter, Washington; Jess Dedmond, Cliffside; Charles Dennis Dixon, Belmont; and Robert McAllister, Raleigh.

A five-man committee, headed by C. P. Spruill, dean of General college, and including Fred Weaver, Cecil Johnson, and William Wells selected the candidates from applications. These five students will meet in Raleigh Dec. 12, to compete with approximately 15 other applicants for the scholarship. Each candidate will be judged by a 15-man board appointed by trustees of Rhodes scholarship, and will be judged on the basis of records, letters, and personal interviews.

From this group of 20, two will be chosen to represent North Carolina in the final meeting for selecting the winners to be held either in Columbia or Atlanta.

Dedmond Says Plans Laid For Three-School Council

A Greater University of North Carolina student council to discuss and iron out problems of the three schools involved is now in the planning stage, Student Body President Jess Dedmond said yesterday.

To meet three times a year, once in the fall, winter, and spring, the council would discuss and try to iron out mutual difficulties. Different phases of student government would be gone over and ideas would be exchanged.

A meeting Saturday, following a luncheon at the Carolina Inn, arose from an earlier discussion by student leaders from the University and State college on a way to stamp out vandalism and create more good will between the two schools.

Dedmond explained that such a council might to some extent standardize student government proceedings and enhance the social life of the University, State and Woman's college. Plans were also discussed to send representatives to the State Legislature when it convenes.

It was suggested that the meetings should alternate between the three schools, with the chairman for each meeting chosen from the school which is host.

Present at the meeting Saturday were Dedmond, Fred Kemdall, president of the State student body, and Martha Fowler, president of the student body of WCUNC. Other representatives present were Marilyn McCollum, Susan Dawson, Fran Fulcher, and Nell Jones of WCUNC; W. C. English and Preston Andrews, of State; and Page Harris, Bob Kirby, and Bill Mackie of the University.

Yackety Yack Beauties To Have Pictures Made

By Don Maynard

Final entries for the 1949 Yack beauty contest have been turned in and contestants are being notified for their picture appointments, Yack officials said yesterday.

The proofs will be sent to John Robert Powers, New York model agency head, who will act as judge. The queen will be crowned at the Grail dance to be held Nov. 20

In the list of 79 entrants and their 38 sponsoring organizations are: Jenny Trout, Aquinas Club; Barbara Bess, Ann Green and Jean Rankin, Alderman dorm; Eleanor Young, Ann Royster and Grace Blades, ADPi; Svea Ogg, Jean Snyder and Barbara Thomas Alpha Gamma Delta.

Joan Lucas, Judy Nunnally and Norma Jean Dew, Alpha Tau Omega; Anne Bumgardner, Pat Frizell and Mary Louise Powe, Beta Theta Pi; Nan Reid, Carolina Quarterly; Didi Gant, Frances Powe and Jean Frances Caraher, Chi O; Peggy Misenheimer, Louise Horner and June Crokett, Chi Phi.

Wells Announces UVA Quiz Show Slated Tomorrow

The weekly UVA quiz show will be held tomorrow night this week instead of tonight, UVA president Hugh Wells announced yesterday.

The change from Tuesday to Wednesday night is to prevent any disruption of the fraternity rushing schedule, Wells said. Also, Wednesday night's show will be a test to see if students prefer the weekly quiz shows on Wednesdays.

Bob Allison, radio announcer of station WTIK in Durham, will serve a master of ceremonies. All veterans are invited to come and bring guests.

Stacy Freshmen Square Off For Political Shenanigans

By Jim Dickinson

Up-and-coming freshmen of Stacy dormitory brought their know-how in politics along with them when they entered the University this fall.

With the quarter hardly begun the first-year Stacyites have already squared off against each other in one of the rip-roaringest political campaigns that ever whirlwinded its way across campus.

The issue at hand is the election of dorm officers being held during the first three days of this week. Every conceivable vote-hiding stone having been upturned, the men of Stacy are anxiously awaiting the results of today's balloting.

This souped-up political festivity got underway a couple weeks ago with the naming of candidates for the various dorm offices. Almost immediately politics hit fever pitch in Stacy and has gained momentum every day since. Night and day each candidate at Stacy has left no job undone in letting his fellow dorm members know that he is just the man that the affairs of Stacy needs for a productive year to come.

Hottest race over at Stacy is naturally the office of presidency, which office boasts a half-dozen workmanlike aspirants in Rod Nicol, Bobby Shuman, Charles Wolff, George Blackwelder, Buck Small and John Smitherman.

Things got off to a good start when the Stacyites awoke one morning to find tied to every door a shipping tag with a penny sucker attached. The inscription read, "Don't be a sucker—vote for Rod Nicol."

The other candidates asked themselves en masse, "Who is dis guy Nicol to try and make monkeys out of us." Before nightfall political fever had spread like wildfire. Every man in Stacy knew full well it would be nip-and-tuck right down to the finish line.

The trio of Wolff for president, Cuthberson for vice-president and Wilson for secretary-treasurer wasted no time in organizing their S.O.T. (Stacy On Top) party, the main plank of their platform being the insurance of "laundry pickups at a more convenient hour."

After Nicol came back with

Last Vestiges of Displays Torn Up; Kappa Sig, Alpha Gam, Old East Win

"The last vestiges of the homecoming displays are rapidly disappearing from the front lawns of the dormitories, fraternities and sororities," Joe Ward, chairman of the University display committee, said yesterday.

"We want to thank everyone for their cooperation and especially our three judges Dr. W. L. Olsen, Noel Houston and Mrs. L. V. Huggins for a job well done," he continued.

The final tabulations on the display contest are: Fraternity division; first Kappa Sigma, second Pi Kappa Alpha, third (tied) Phi Gamma Delta and Sigma Alpha Epsilon; Woman's division, first Alpha Gamma Delta, second, McIver, third Chi Omega; Men's dormitories: first, Old East and second, Mangum.

Kappa Sigma and Old East are repeaters from last year.

Students in Men's Dorms Will Continue Elections

Students in Miller, Nash, Everett, Aycock, Graham, Stacy, and Lewis dormitories will elect officers of their dormitories today by secret ballot from 9 o'clock this morning to 9 o'clock tonight, Pete Gerns, president of the Interdormitory council announced.

Gerns released the following list of nominees:

Miller: Dick Underwood, Bob Payne, Oliver Sapp, Lee Clark, Ray Weems, president; Joe Lawrence, Ned Kearns, George Kannan, Bill Morris, vice-president; Bob Poole, Ray Weems, Pete Carr, Bill Jones, and Jim Martin, secretary-treasurer.

Nash: Robert Braswell, Wayne Cates, Lee Cannon, Clyde Fisher, president; Henry Everhart, Henry Bowers, Charles Thomson, Carl Bowie, Charles Harbinson, vice-president; Ed Best, Bill Chambers, secretary-treasurer.

Everett: Raymond Sarbaugh, Benjamin Frank Kilpatrick, president; Richard Bowen, Walter Carnes, John Baker, vice-president; Baird Sills, Gibbon McNeely, Morris Moser, Edwin Bolander, secretary-treasurer.

Aycock: Larry McAllister, John Neal, Walter Winius, Bill Payeff, Chic Burroughs, president; George Sibold, Fred McKee, Bill Moon, vice-president; Joe Kumpe, Everett Huffham, secretary-treasurer.

Graham; Ralph Basnight, Love A. Coman, president; Charles Coggin, elected by acclamation for vice-president; Leon Cowan, Theodore Graham, Ed Anthony, G. C. Carpenter, Roy Buckman, secretary-treasurer.

Stacy: Charles Wolff, Rod Nicol, Bob Shuman, Bud Small, Sid Hoots, George Blackwelder, Frank Redding, Johnny Smitherman, president; Mac White, Bill

Pharmacy Seniors Name Hawkins As New President

Hal Hawkins, of Statesville, has been elected president of the senior class in the School of Pharmacy. Other officers elected were Daniel Rhodes, vice-president, and John Rancke, secretary-treasurer.

Junior class officers are Sherwood Parrish, president; Ed Hoyle, vice-president; Robert Scharff, secretary-treasurer, and Gene Sherard, chaplin.

Coffee Klatsch Slated Tonight

The YWCA-sponsored Coffee Klatsch will have Miss Salud Rafols, former student at the University of Manila, as speaker tonight at 7:30 in the Y Building.

Miss Rafols will lead an informal discussion of social, political and educational conditions in Manila. She received her AB in education from the University of Manila and later served as councilor for women students and associate professor of education there.

Miss Rafols is taking courses in health education here and will return to Manila next year to resume her teaching.

Faculty and students are invited to these informal talks each Tuesday night in the Y office. Hostesses for tonight's Coffee Klatsch are Ginny Nash and Teenie Royall.

Newcomers to Hold Meeting Today

The Newcomers club will hold its first meeting of the fall quarter this afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Frank P. Graham. Mrs. Robert B. House will be co-hostess for the meeting.

The club membership is made up of women who are full-time employees of the University, in teaching, research, or administration, or women whose husbands are so employed, and who have not lived in Chapel Hill longer than three years.

Staff Meeting

There will be a meeting of all members of the Daily Tar Heels news, society and feature staffs this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Staff members are required to be present. Staff policy and style rules will be discussed.

Not Very Often

Chances to see Presidents of the United States in North Carolina are few and far between. In fact, Raleigh, the state's capital has been the scene of visits by only four Presidents,—James K. Polk, James Buchanan, Andrew Johnson, and Theodore Roosevelt—and the last visit was 43 years ago.

Today the nation's thirty-third President, Harry S. Truman, will be in Raleigh for the double purpose of dedicating a monument to three North Carolina-born presidents and of opening the 1948 state fair. A third reason, undeclared but obvious, is the one that makes Truman's appearance of special interest. Engaged in a hot fight for the presidency and appearing in an area where traditional Democratic dominance is being challenged, Truman will undoubtedly make a strong bid for Southern votes. Advance information is that the President's speech will be a major political address on the subject of agriculture.

All University students who can will go to Raleigh today to hear Mr. Truman in person, but those who are tied to the Hill may hear a broadcast of his speech between 3 and 3:30 over the National Broadcasting Company network.

Trend Toward Unity

Noticeable on the Hill this year is a trend toward more unity and group interest on the part of dormitory residents. Indicative of this trend were the homecoming displays exhibited by dorms this weekend. The decorations were the best dormitory displays in many years, both in originality of ideas and in effectiveness with which the ideas were carried out. Another indication is the interest being shown in dormitory elections now taking place. Especially in Stacy, an all-freshman dorm, have the politics been running fast and furious under the guidance of dorm manager Monroe Landreth, and from reports of campaign tactics there, freshmen will soon be pushing older campus politicians into the background.

The terrifically increased enrollment and resulting crowded conditions immediately following World War II caused a break-down of dormitory cohesion and loss of fellowship among dormitory residents. The men's dorms became only a place to sleep and to leave one's toothbrush. Only intramural athletics provided a common interest within the dorm groups, and even in this it was often hard to find enough interested men to make up a team.

The return of closer comradeship within dormitories is a good sign for the University, for interest and pride in the smaller units of the University leads to greater interest and pride in the larger unit of the whole University.

Who Is Slipping?

Chapel Hill Communists are overlooking a bet. According to Mary Ann "Butchie" Daniel, president of the Young Women's Christian Association, there is not a single Communist in the YWCA. This is a deplorable situation, because it reflects on the honor of the University. It means either that our Communists are falling down on their job or that our YWCA is not deemed of sufficient worth to attract Communist notice. Either alternative is unthinkable.

That one or the other of the two local organizations is slipping badly is evidenced by the fact that the national YWCA is rotten with Communist infiltrators—at least that's what Joe Kamp, ace American Red-baiter says. And if anybody can spot a Communist, Joe Kamp can. Joe has uncovered more Communists in America than Joe Stalin has been able to find in Russia. Joe could go alone into the middle of the Sahara desert and find more Communists than you could find sand. And Joe says the YWCA is rotten with Communists, so it must be so.

Something has got to be done at the University and done quick. We'd hate to think either our YWCA or our Communists weren't the best in the business.

ON CAMPUS

YOU TELL US. We've wondered and asked questions long enough. Just what is the "OGB"? Everytime an announcement is run about one of its meetings we launch a new campaign of guesses and questions but never get anywhere.

WE DON'T BITE! Maybe we DTH folks impress you as having lost just a few of our marbles at times, but we're really not vicious. If that's what's worrying the Huddle fellow who won last week's football score contest, all he has to do is come up to the sports department for his prize and find out for himself.

LADY LAWYER. We've found a most interesting case over in the law school--a mighty good-looking female student who claims she can be a lawyer first and a lady second. You'll have to meet her. She's Yvonne Stewart from Charlotte.

POLITICIAN'S SPECIAL? We're still waiting for the call to come out from the barber shop in downstairs Graham Memorial that somebody is getting a mudpack. We coeds thought we had priorities on such things; but obviously we've been going around for these many years with mud in our eyes.

PROVES WHAT? The Kappa Sig's seem to have made mighty good use of their time without coeds around the house to get in their way. At least, that's what it looks like after checking over the winners of the homecoming decorations.

STAY IN STACEY. What with all the clever campaigning for dorm offices in Stacey, we expect to hear any day now that they've established their own chamber of commerce. Never have we seen a more energetic and original group of freshmen!

A BEAM IN HIS EYE. Some folks may brag about their dogs—especially on the Hill—others about their pin-ups; but Ollie Beeman has them all beat when it comes to bursting his buttons with pride. He keeps telling us about his sister who has just gotten her double-major degree from WC and already has not just a job, but a position, with two assistants.

TRIPLE WHAMMY. Lucy Whitehead, we hear, is making plans for an underground lab in which she is going to invent a special delux waker-upper that will include a baseball bat, a sprinkler system, and a coo-coo.

GET THE TOMMYHAWKS! For the benefit of any football ticket scalpers who happen still to be snooping around town, we want them to know we students are on the warpath against them and don't intend to take as much as one puff on a peace pipe!

FLIES IN THE OINTMENT of life at Chapel Hill are just that—flies! Don't know exactly what could be done about it, but here's a suggestion. One town down in the Piedmont section of the state solved the problem this summer by spraying DDT from airplanes all over town. Wonder if we couldn't do the same?

A DATE? We won't be happy until we've gotten two people on this campus together for at least a look at each other—Bunny Davis and Bugs Brown—maybe they could talk over things over a crunchy carrot.

IN TOWN:

HE HAS US BEAT. The dog which belongs to the anonymous visitor to the Chapel Hill Weekly could probably beat any student in Spanish. Seems he obeyed commands in Spanish only and completely bumfuzzled the folks down there.

A RAY OF HOPE for any homeless residents of the Hill who are about to give up and go to Durham is the rumor of the new architect in town. Don't know his name or anything about him, but let us hope he does set up business here.

Progressive Program

Stop The Itching Bombs

By Publicity Committee, Progressive Party, Chapel Hill

The Progressive party of Chapel Hill wishes to thank the Daily Tar Heel for this opportunity to present its program to the students and townspeople of our community. It is not often that the press is disposed to listen to our party. The tactic of both press and radio (since the July convention showed America we are a force to be reckoned with) has been one of very tight suppression of Progressive party news; and where suppression was not possible or advisable, distortion and vilification, the tributes which reaction forever pays progress, were freely employed.

Regarding the silent treatment, we should like to ask how many people know that such great men as Einstein and Bernard Shaw enthusiastically support Wallace? And that the other day in Hollywood Thomas Mann, who knows the face of fascism, called upon Americans to vote for Wallace as the only peace candidate? One other example of shameful news suppression is a recent edition of the NY Times which reported a Wallace speech in California and slashed all mention of the size of his audience, having the effrontery nevertheless to make reference to the crowds drawn in the home stadium by Dewey and Truman! Wallace, by the way, drew 24,000 people who paid for admission. Dewey drew 20,000. Truman 14,000. So much for this new method of killing the Wallace movement.

That the Democratic party, as presently constituted, is utterly incapable of any effective move toward peace was vividly shown last week. Truman's attempt to by-pass his military and big business "advisers" by sending Fred M. Vinson to Moscow was squelched. Vinson never even got to the airport. Another attempt to end the cold war was thwarted by the bi-partisan foreign policy of Forrestal and Lovett, representatives of gigantic banking houses, and a shooting war drew closer. As Henry Wallace had already proved this summer with his famous letter to Stalin and the Russian people, it would have been a "dangerous" move toward peace.

On the heels of this move came the effort to achieve complete diplomatic and economic recognition for Hitler's accomplice, Franco, and the inclusion of Spain in the Marshall plan. Certainly this should indicate to everyone the trend of our present foreign policy. As a distinguished labor leader of Mexico declared in New York a few years ago, "If America wants war, Franco will stay; if America wants peace, Franco will go." Today Franco is fast becoming our ally in a war that is "inevitable." The Progressive party will never be a partner to such evil cynicism which suggests that fascism must be supported and that peace is not possible.

In the face of frenzied reaction, in view of political violence which has become a "commonplace," we of the Progressive party call upon all Americans of good will to cast a vote for Wallace and Taylor. Such a vote is the best means for halting the drive to a suicidal atomic war. Each day, the advocates of the feasibility of a "preventative atomic war"—to prevent some 100,000,000 people from living — grow bolder. More and more brazen appear their war plans. Newspapers are filled with M-Day reports of industrial mobilization; certain business men boast openly of our capacity to destroy (they never speak of our capacity to build houses.)

Therefore we state with the deepest conviction that an impressive Progressive vote will be the best means to convince the men of the itching bombs that the American people say "No!" to their war, "No!" to the hysteria which produces a dollar-a-pound steak. A massive vote will demonstrate that the peoples' party cannot be uprooted and that the American people will take the offensive again against their enemies as they did under the banner of Franklin D. Roosevelt!

This Is Carolina

Workers For World Peace

By Bill Buchan
(Guest Columnist)

An organization that was born on the Carolina campus in the summer of 1947 and one which has continued since to work in one of the strongest programs presented here last year is the Collegiate Council for the United Nations.

CCUN is an organization that works for a fuller interpretation and support of the United Nations. The group was started on the Carolina campus with a nucleus of some ten top-ranking students. Since that time, CCUN has expanded to the campuses of some 28 other colleges throughout the state.

Last year the group staged a series of conferences on the United Nations, which were held in Chapel Hill and Statesville. A host of notable dignitaries attended the conferences from Washington and spoke on their countries and problems of the UN. Among the speakers who addressed the conferences were Ambassador Sava Kosanovic of Yugoslavia, Ambassador Oscar Ivannesevich of Argentina, Counsel John Reed of New Zealand, and Minister Stirling of Australia.

On the Carolina campus CCUN is represented by the state headquarters and the local Carolina chapter. Roberta Stirling is state director of the group and counsels all college chapters throughout the state.

Edie Knight, an Alderman coed, is chairman of the Carolina chapter, which is concerned mainly with CCUN activities here. Her group and the state headquarters sponsored the conferences held in Chapel Hill last year which were attended by representatives from various state colleges. Edie has pointed out that the programs for this year will include discussion meetings on United Nations problems and the future of the group.

The Collegiate Council for the United Nations is a straight-forward thinking group of young people who feel that the future of world peace depends on the success of the UN. Through their programs of presenting leading diplomats from various countries in the United Nations, they have given students at Chapel Hill and other colleges an inside view of the affairs of other nations and the problems facing the UN.

Students who are interested in world affairs and in meeting others who wish to learn more about the United Nations can find the answer here in the CCUN.

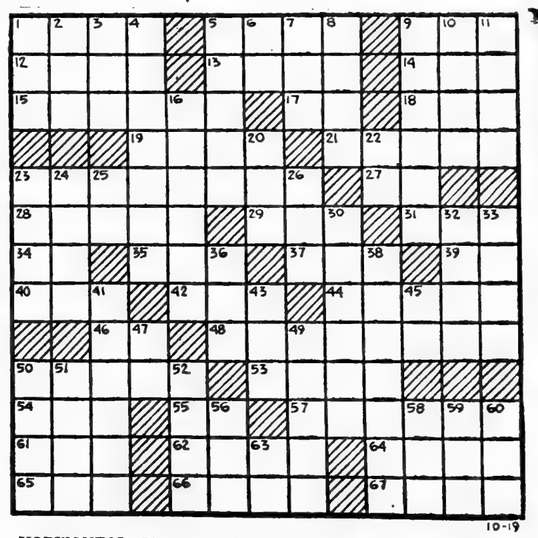
This Changing World

According To Marx

By Bill Robertson

(The circumstances of the world are continually changing, and the opinions of men change also.—Thomas Paine)

The world-outlook of the Marxists is basicaliy an outlook of democratic optimism. Of that there can be no doubt. Events confirm this outlook with each passing day. However, it would be a mistake to conclude from this fact, that the Marxists conceive of the bright future which lies before all mankind as one that will come without conscious effort. On the contrary, it will come because of the conscious actions and activities of hundreds of millions of ordinary people in all parts of the world (and, most especially in our own country) to throw off the cruel and savage oppression of the monopolies, trusts, and cartels to which capitalism has given birth.



As the well-known and highly-successful Marxist, V. I. Lenin, put it: Development is the "struggle" of opposites. Concretely, this means that in America the people will become organized, grow strong, and finally emerge victorious in the course of bitter day-to-day fights with the trusts and monopolies and their lackeys.

Concretely, this means that terror and violence on the part of the dying forces in our society will increase as they sense that they are losing ground. The recent savage knife-murder of Robert New, the head of the Progressive party in Charleston, South Carolina is an outstanding example of this tendency. The recent attempted assassination (it almost succeeded) of Robert Thompson, decorated hero of World War II and prominent Communist party leader, is another example. In both of these cases there was a minimum of publicity in the "free" capitalist newspapers and radios of our country.

It would be foolish for those of us who are liberal and progressive-minded to under-estimate the seriousness of the present situation. It would be foolish for us to make the mistake of the liberals in Germany, who succumbed to the demogogic red-baiting and race-baiting of Adolf Hitler-only to find themselves together with the Communists in the same concentration camps. (In this case it would be the same atomic dust as well.)

It would be foolish for American liberals to reject out of hand an alliance with those who have the strength and organization to preserve and extend American democracy: that is, the industrial workers, the small and tenant-farmers, the small businessmen and the Negro people. These groups have formed a new political party which expresses the basic interests and needs of the overwhelming majority of the American people for peace, security, and abundance. This party is rallying to itself the best and most decent elements in our society.

The struggle against fascism, that is, open terror dictatorship by Big Business, is the major concern of the American people today. It is a struggle that calls for tremendous courage, perseverance and self-sacrifice. It is a struggle that "tries men's souls." But it is a struggle that can and must be won in the dark, crisis-ridden days that lie ahead. Only then will lasting peace and plenty be assured.

Soccer Team Faces High Point; Gridders Drop In AP Rating

By BILLY CARMICHAEL III

Copyright 1948, The Daily Tar Heel.

Some People Are Never

NOTHING THESE DAYS satisfies but Chesterfields. Carolina's undefeated, untied and undaunted football team wins four straight games, holds its own near the top of the nation's football aggregation and still the faithful following complain. Gratitude has found its resting place besides chivalry.

Seems some of the Tar Heel fans aren't sated by the performance of their hopefuls against State college between two and four last Saturday afternoon. They wanted a track meet, but it turned out to be Tar Heels who did the back tracking for the first two periods. The fans eventually got a two touchdown victory tied in pretty blue and white ribbons, but they have been grumbling ever since.

It isn't enough to win anymore; you have to let the fellows in the stands call the plays, the substitutions and the score. The Tar Heel fans expect to give 18 or more points, laugh in the opponents' face and sit back to watch the shackles roll in along with the Carolina touchdowns. The consumption and retainment of one's cake is a long, lost art.

The Rumble of Grumbling

THE CONSENSUS OF THE GRUMBLING amounted to the total comment that the Tar Heels were overconfident, overrated, overtrained, overfavored over and above another long list of failings. The concrete critics felt the Tar Heels were not the same team that had beaten Texas and that something should be done before the roof falls proverbially in.

Yet, according to the program, the locals were the identical outfit that had trampled the Longhorns, and then eased by Georgia and Wake Forest. There were a few missing faces—Don Hartig and Fred Sherman—but the majority was intact, except for the tactics.

The big Carolina offense couldn't get into gear and their usually powerful fluid drive wasn't working either. They made about every mistake in the book, but the Snavelymen retained the one mark of the champion; the ability to get themselves safely out of the holes they dug for themselves.

Many people contend if State had scored early it would have been an atomic end for the Tar Heels. Yet, why not reason that if the Wolfpack had tallied in the first half as Georgia did at Athens, the locals might have had a chance to sally forth from their sunning place in the shadow of their goal post. The State thrusts were oh so time consuming.

No Smoke, No Fire

ACTUALLY, THERE IS NOTHING wrong with the Tar Heel football team. They're maybe a little tired, but who isn't in this day and time. Some people unfortunately are born that way. But realize that they have faced four of the country's better teams in four weeks which will leave the mark of something on most anyone.

All of which brings one to the topic of knocking one's self out each and every Saturday. It is safe to say that Carolina has not extended itself fully on the past three Saturdays except when necessity became the mother of invention. When duty called, they answered and nailed their men like Northwest Mounties. It took time, but they did it.

The football team doesn't perform from the heart on all occasions. The majority of the time it plays on mind and talent with the will to win its only mental incentive towards victory. Once in a while it is stirred to the greatest heights by some added punch: the element of revenge in the Texas game or a tearfilled story to go out and "Win this one for the old Gipper."

Gone Are the Days

THE COLLEGE TRY is a page from the book that is seldom read. In the day of specialized athletics, those at the top must conserve their energies and abilities whenever possible. That extra touchdown that means nothing one week, can be the margin of victory the following Saturday.

The prime principal of football is to win in the manner and form prescribed by the rules. It doesn't say how, when or where, merely to win. The scoreboard is but an incident and ten years from now no one will even remember what the final tally was, only who won.

The Tar Heel footballers have labored in the manner of Atlas for the past few weeks with the football world balanced tediously on their shoulders. It sounds funny, but it's harder to back a winning team than a losing one. Winning is a very graceful art, and comes consistently only to those who will accept the responsibilities that go with it.

This Winning is Hard

IT IS REALLY EASIER to lose than to win. In defeat, you can gripe, grouse, growl and generally enjoy yourself eating others out for mistakes you didn't even have the ability to commit. There is everything to win and nothing to lose. When you're so far down, they don't dig the hole any deeper.

You don't drop as much weight losing, nor tear up the old man's handkerchiefs, but it certainly is dull getting trod in the dirt every weekend. Nothing worth having in life comes easy, it says here in the small print.

Win or lose, the next six weeks will be no easier than the last. The closer the Tar Heels come to the promised land where they separate the men from the boys, the harder the row will become to hoe. Those with weak hearts and soft feelings may now leave the room.

Throw a little rawer meat to our boys, Mister Snavely, and bring on those Tigers.

Carolina Favored To Score Victory In Third Outing

By Larry Fox

Carolina's booters will be High Point bound by noon today with hopes of making the High Point college Panthers their second victims of the young season.

The Tar Heels will be favored this afternoon on the basis of their showing against Loyola last week and their record against the Furniture City eleven last season.

After dropping their first game of the campaign to Navy by a 2-0 count, the Allenmen bounded back to upset the favored Loyola outfit, 3-2. The Tar Heels have hopes of getting above the .500 mark in this afternoon's battle.

Coble Stars

The Panthers have won two straight games this season, their last win coming against a strong Washington and Lee team, 2-0. Captain Red Coble personally accounted for the victory by notching the only two goals of the game in the very first minute of play. Coble drove in alone from almost midfield both times.

Coble came close to making the United States Olympic team this summer and will be the man to stop if the Tar Heels are to return to Chapel Hill victorious.

This will be the third meeting of the two teams since soccer was instituted at the University last year and both previous decisions have gone to the Tar Heels. Carolina took the first contest of the series, 2-0, but was forced to rally to nip the Panthers, 3-2, in the return engagement.

The lineup, which clicked so well against Loyola, will get the nod today and unless it loses some of its sharpness, should be able to hold the Big Purple in check.

Good Rookies

Tommy Jordan, Pete Hexner, Dave Boak, Dave Ferebbe, and Joe Bach will comprise the forward wall against High Point this afternoon. Jordan and Hexner, two new men on the squad, showed up very well against the Baltimore club while the other men lived up to their past records.

Hexner tallied one of the three goals on a penalty kick. Boak and Bach notched the other two, both on passes from Jordan.

Co-captain Jesse Greenbaum, Gus Johnston, and Mac Hagaman will open in the halfback slots with co-captain Frank Nelson and Wally Vreeland at fullbacks. Nelson did well against Loyola in keeping Nick Kropfelder, the Loyolan's All-America center, from doing too much damage. Kropfelder was held to a single goal.

Al Williams will once again protect the Tar Heel nets.

The Blue and White went through a light scrimmage yesterday afternoon with the forwards and halfbacks playing against the fullbacks and goalie. The booters didn't appear too sharp and they can't afford to get lax against High Point with a threat like Coble on the squad.

The Tar Heels will play their next home game on Friday when the University of Virginia eleven comes to the Hill. The freshman team will open its season against Duke Thursday on Fetzer field.

Jenrette Leads

Dick Jenrette assistant sports editor of the Daily Tar Heel, peered deep into his crystal ball last week and came up with twenty correct predictions without an error. Jenrette who was tied with Jeff for first place last week forged to the front when the perennial Chapel Hill grid expert missed six of his predictions for the past week-end. Swami Jenrette now has a record of 59-16 for a percentage of .787.

Jenrette unwound the towel from his head yesterday, looked up and sighed, "Finally broke the tie with that guy!" The two had been tied for first place for the past three weeks.

Jake Wade, Carolina sports publicist, picked 16 games correctly to move into second place with a 54-21 record. Billy Carmichael III and Jeff are tied for third place with records of 53-22, while Publisher Orville Campbell brings up the rear again this week with a record of 48-27.

How long can this go on?

Football Contests Are Day's Feature On Mural Program

The results of yesterday's play in the Fraternity Intramural Football league produced four early pacesetters with enviable records of three victories in as many starts.

The Zeta 2 squad registered their third triumph of the young season when they trampled over the Lambda Chi 2 crew, 18-0. Keeping pace with the Zets, Chi Phi won their third by beating Sig Eps in a 31-0 rout and Pi Kap Phi decisioned DKE 1, 12-0 to keep their slate untainted. Phi Gam 1 became the fourth to enter this charmed circle when they notched a 1-0 forfeit victory over Phi Delt 2.

Chi Psi, the defending campus champions, gained their second win of the campaign after losing their opener by edging SAE 2, 13-0. KA 2 started their game strong and tallied two touchdowns in the first half to take Phi Del Chi 12-0 and KA 1 scored all of their counters in the last half to decisively triumph over Delta Sigma, 18-7.

The largest score of the day occurred in the Dorm competition when Lewis routed a hapless QH 9 crew to the merciless tune of 42-0. The Grads were also impressive in their tussle with Whitehead and came off the gridiron on the long end of 36-0 count. Bob Edwards of the victors scored two touchdowns in this clash.

Bill Skinner also accounted for a pair of scores as he led the Graham Dwellers to a 12-0 decision over Ruffin and Steele, spearheaded by Julian Timberlake's two six pointers, shut out A Dorm, 15-0. In the remaining games of the active afternoon, Mangum scored in the first half to nip Wes Rockets, 6-0; Stanley Steamers capitalized on a fruitful second half to shade AROTC 1, 20-0 and Emerson achieved an easy win over Stacy when the latter failed to field a full team.

Fearless Fraley Presents a Tale Of Our Choo Choo

By Oscar Fraley

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.--(UP)—Fearless Fraley's facts and figures:

Casey Stengel, new manager of the New York Yankees, always has been regarded as one of baseball's top thespians, but old Case is worried about television.

"We didn't have much of it on the West Coast," Stengel said, "and my face don't fit is very well cuz it's hard on the screen. I'll just have to be a better actor, I guess."

Stengel is only kidding. There is going to be little clowning for the guy with the iron gray hair from now on. His philosophy after a long stretch in the minors is that you have to fight your way to the top—and fight to stay there . . . those Yankee players who tried to coast during the past season aren't going to find Casey very humorous . . .

Choo Choo and the Chef

If you ever get to wondering why football stars begin to believe their importance, consider the case of North Carolina's Choo Choo Charlie Justice.

After a recent game, Charlie and his party arrived at a Chapel Hill, N. C., Inn after the kitchen had been closed. The headwaiter rushed into the kitchen and told the chef that North Carolina's most important citizen wanted to eat.

"I wouldn't even open the kitchen for the governor," quoth the irate cook.

"But it's Charlie Justice," he was told.

Choo Choo ate! . . .

Atop the Conference Standings Tar Heels Prepare To Play LSU

By Frank Allston

Carolina, the Daily Tar Heel's choice for the number one team in the nation, began preparations yesterday afternoon for the first meeting with Louisiana State university in the history of the two schools.

After last Saturday's 14-0 win over State, Coach Carl Snavely immediately started to work on a strong defensive alignment for the Bengals and to revamp the Tar Heel offense for this coming Saturday afternoon. Carolina had a tough time overcoming the suddenly offensive minded Wolfpack and the goal line stands put up by the Carolina line were things of beauty to behold.

The Carolina win, coupled with Duke's victory over Maryland, elevated the Tar Heels in the Southern conference's number one position. The local eleven now is the only undefeated team in the circuit sporting two wins. Clemson and South Carolina are both undefeated, but have only won a single game each. Duke has a win and a tie on their record.

Coach Gaynell Tinsley's LSU charges put up a gallant fight last Saturday night, before going down to defeat at the hands of the Georgia Bulldogs, 22-0. The Tigers, in their first four games to date, have compiled a two won and a two lost record. They dropped the opener to Texas, 33-0, and then whipped Rice and Texas A & M on successive Saturdays before last week's game with Georgia.

LSU bases most of its offensive action on three big fullbacks. Two of the big boys are heavyset Zollie Toth, "the Tugboat," and Bill Schroll, "the Steamboat," both known for their line-plunging abilities. Harrell ('Rip') Collins has done some fancy punting in the past and will be counted on to pull the Tigers out of any holes they may fall into.

Hazelwood Wounded

Ted Hezelwood, Tar Heel tackle, met with misfortune yesterday afternoon when he accidently shot himself in the leg with a pistol.

The bullet entered the flesh and then passed out again, leaving a bad surface wound. Hazelwood was immediately moved to the Infirmary where he was treated. Af last reports he was in favorable condition.

Doctors in charge added that the wound was not of a too serious nature, but that Hazelwood would be out of football for possibly a month.

The shooting occurred when the pistol lodged in his pocket, was accidentally discharged by the big lineman on his way to a local target range.

JV, Frosh Teams Beaten by State

North Carolina State captured two cross country events from Carolina distancemen yesterday afternoon on Fetzer field. The State college jayvees walked away with the first meet in the twin bill by a lop-sided 19-52 score. The Wolfpack freshmen outpointed the Tar Babies in the second half of the bargain bill by a 25-30 margin.

Mattox of Carolina romped home in front of the pack in the Javee meet but was an unofficial contestant and not eligible to be counted in the results. Mattox' time was 13:13.2.

Hunter of State was the nominal leader with a time of 13:38.3 Carolina's Burgess posted a time of 13:50 to take second place. Other than Burgess, Gregory was the only Tar Heel runner to finish in the top ten. He placed tenth.

Leonard of State claimed the number one spot in the freshman event with a time of 13:05. Hamrick of Carolina placed second at 13:27.9.

The summary:

Junior Varsity: Hunter (S); Burgess (C); Davenport (S); Bales (S); Orminp (S); Frazier (S); Karriker (S); Gregory (C); Cameron (C); Rhyne (C); Honeycutt (C).

Freshmen: Leonard (S); Hamrick (C); Hudson (S); Wadsworth (S); Conley (C); Thurber (C); Townsend S); Teer (C); Bingham (C); Buie (S). —Zane Robbins

Michigan, Notre Dame Push Locals From Top Position

Carolina tumbled slightly from its No. 1 position in the Associated Press weekly football poll released last week. The Tar Heels dropped to third.

Pushing in front of the locals on the basis of the past weekend's performances were Michigan and Notre Dame. The Wolverines gained their first top-rung position in the three-week-old poll, netting a total of 1.336 points. The Irish were second with 1.218.

The Tar Heels gained the show post with 1.139 points after a none too impressive showing against State college last Saturday.

Michigan replaced Carolina as the leader in the first place vote department also, gaining 74 top spots. The Tar Heels had 32 10-pointers to 23 for the lads from South Bend.

Behind the leaders came California, Army and Georgia Tech. Duke was the only other local team to gain the first twenty, slipping into a tie for 15th place with the University of Nevada.

Wake Forest and State college placed far down in the ranks of those mentioned.

The Tar Heels have now been second, first and third in the poll thus far this year.

House-To-House Canvass Inaugurates Chest Drive

Armstrong Says Drive Reports Ready Tomorrow

The Chapel Hill Community Chest drive got underway Sunday afternoon with workers making a house-to-house canvass under the direction of chairman Roy Armstrong.

Armstrong said yesterday that no reports have yet been turned in by the workers and there probably would be no positive indication of response until tomorrow.

T. A. Rosemond, who is chairman of the canvass for the business district, was ill over the weekend and will begin his coverage tomorrow, Armstrong said.

Yesterday, headquarters for the drive were set up in Strowd Motor company and are under the management of Mrs. Anna Cate. Mrs. Burton Linker who is collector of the drive will also be at the Community Chest headquarters this week. Armstrong requested yesterday that all persons who have not been solicited in the drive should turn in their contributions at headquarters.

Needy organizations that will benefit from the Community Chest are the Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, White Recreation center, Negro Recreation center, Negro Day nursery, League for Crippled children, Children Library association and the Humane society.

In the past Community Chest donations have been made at one time. This year a pledge card system makes it possible to make contributions in monthly payments.

Masquerade Party Planned Friday

Masks, magic, and a masquerade will be the order of the night in the Rendezvous room Friday. So trot out your crepe paper and scissors and get ready for the first Hallowe'en masquerade ball.

Weaving a floor show into his magician's act will be Steve Riggs, junior from Reidsville. Since he first became interested in the business of magic in Nurenburg, Germany, three years ago, he has put on numerous shows in the vicinity of his home town.

Friday night's show will mark Steve's first public appearance in Chapel Hill. In fact, the only time he ever appeared here was in an English class in which he embarrassed the life out of an innocent coed by drawing two silk kerchiefs and an unmentionable from her 'sweater.

Guests at the Rendezvous are asked to wear some type of Hallowe'en regalia, whether it be a 14th century ball costume or just a mask. There is plenty of crepe paper downtown for those who want to be original.

"Get your money's worth, a Nicol (that's all) for president" Candidate Small poetically fanned the flame a little further with. "Come one, come all, get on the ball, let's vote for Small, right down the hall. he's rather tall with a pleasing drawl, so Buck the wall and elect Buck Small."

Of the many other banners bedecking the doorways, walls and bulletin boards of Stacy probably the most fitting for the football season is the effort of candidate Shuman which reads simply "All the way (with) Shu-Shu for president."

Playmaker 'Mama' To Open Tonight

John Van Druten's comedy, "I Remember Mama," will open tonight at 8:30 in the Playmaker theater. It is the first play to be presented during the 1948-49 season by the Carolina Playmakers and will be continued tomorrow, Friday, and Saturday evenings.

The play, designed and directed by Lynn Gault, tells the story of a period in the lives of the Norwegian - American Hansen family in 1900 San Francisco. It is a comedy, presenting both the comic and serious incidents in the family life, and Van Druten, author of the highly popular "Voice of the Turtle," has spiced the play with numerous laughs.

Business manager John W. Parker said last night that both reserved seat tickets and season tickets books would be on sale at the box office during all of the four nights of production. He explained that the best seats still available are for tonight and tomorrow evenings, but that there are tickets for each of the four production nights. Parker said the best selection for Friday and Saturday night seats is at the downtown box office in Ledbetter-Pickard's.

"I would like to remind students who plan to see all the plays this year, that the season ticket sale is limited to 1000 books," Parker said, "and we have nearly reached the limit. There is a 20 percent saving on the season ticket arrangement which was set up primarily for students, but we have had so many out-of-town requests that there may not be enough."

"We are going to place the season books on sale at the theater box office on production nights," he said, "and this will probably be the last chance to obtain them."

James Geiger, AROTC cadet captain, will play his 38th role with the Playmakers tonight, when he appears as the hard-talking "Uncle Chris," who rules the family with an iron hand. "Papa Hansen" will be acted by staff member Harry Davis, and Louise Lamont will play "Mama." Miss Lamont, who played in the Forest theater production of "Hamlet" several years ago, has returned to school after having spent the intervening time in professional theater work.

Edna Dooley, who played in "As You Like It" this summer, protrays the leading character, 17-year-old "Katrin."

The rest of the Hansen family includes: Julie Johns as "Dagmar," Ellen Smith as "Christine," and Charles Williamson as "Nels."

Other major roles are to be played by Estelle Ritchie, Margaret Healy, Josephine Sharkey, Frank Groseclose, William Buckley, Nat White, Paul Valentine, and Louisa Mustin.

Others in the cast include: Martha Pierpont, Carolyn Green, Marty Jacobs, Patricia Peteler, Jantha Smart, John Kirkman, James Byrd, Catherine McDonald, and Georgiana Spelvin.

Dewey Plans Two-Day Trip To New York

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 19.—(UP)—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey kept his final campaign plans under wraps tonight as he worked on accumulated state business preparatory to leaving tomorrow for a two-day stay in New York city.

The Republican presidential nominee spent most of the day at the executive mansion resting from his second campaign trip, answering mail and conferring by telephone with state political leaders.

He talked tonight by telephone with Herbert Brownell, Jr., his campaign manager, who is in New York.

Dewey will leave the capital tomorrow for New York where he has two speeches on schedule. One, the nature of which was not disclosed, will be delivered at the Herald-Tribune forum tomorrow night.

In 1944, he took a similar occasion to talk on foreign affairs. The other speech will be of a non-political nature at a testimonial dinner for the late Alfred E. Smith Thursday night.

Beyond then there was no information available as to the GOP candidate's plans.

Although there was no official comment, Dewey forces were reported to be pleased with the New York state registration figures for the Nov. 2 election.

Official totals released tonight by the secretary of state showed that 7,043,573 persons are eligible to vote—nearly as many as the 1944 election.

Actors, Singers Needed by S&F For New Shows

Actors, singers, dancers, pianists, musicians, comedians, and script writers are needed to take part in Sound and Fury campus touring shows. Auditions will be held from 3 o'clock to 5 in Gerrard hall tomorrow afternoon.

All talented students interested in participating in the variety shows that will be made available to campus groups are urged to audition. The committee will then be able to arrange shows for any organization requesting entertainment. Not only will the entertainment be provided for any group, but it will be provided free of charge.

Any campus organization wishing to secure shows contact the Sound and Fury office in Graham Memorial, however, no guarantees can be made until auditions have been completed.

World Government Meeting Scheduled

A meeting on World Government is scheduled to be held at the Civic center, 220 Church street in Greensboro on Oct. 23 at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

Purpose of the meeting is to plan a state constituent World Government Assembly, to propose a world government constitution to be considered by the National Assembly and the World Constituent Assembly in Geneva in 1950, and to consider steps to implement a state-wide educational program on world government.

Lady Simon

Lady Simon of Wythenshawe, noted English writer and lecturer on education, will speak in 201 Peabody hall tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock on the "Reconstruction of English Education after the War."

Professors and students who are interested are invited to attend the lecture.

FELLOW STUDENTS gather around Louis "Pop" Rich, 85, as he starts his first semester as a freshman at the Bergen junior college, Teaneck, N. J. Retired after running a clothing business for 50 years and putting six sons through college, "Pop" decided it was high time he donned a windbreaker and returned to school again.

Balloting To Continue In Five Dorms Today

Five dormitories will vote for their respective officers today, with "A," "B," "C," Alexander and Whitehead opening their polls from 9 o'clock this morning until 9 o'clock tonight.

The following candidates for this final day of voting were released by Pete Gerns, president of the Interdormitory council:

"A" dorm: Benard Plemmons, Stan Smith, Bill Anderson and Bob White, president; Fred Ogden, Carl Hawn, George Clark and Fred Fussell, vice-president; Bill Wheeler, Charlie Lasseter and Johnny Kenberley, secretary-treasurer.

"B" dorm: John Sloan, president; Hassell Sledd, vice-president; Max Harris and Tom Donnally, secretary-treasurer.

"C" dorm; Harry Aycock, John Carr, Dick McLain and Jack Worsham, president; Ed Lamb, Dick Noonis, Norm Sper and Art Weiner, vice-president; Red Dowd and Bob Payne, secretary-treasurer.

Alexander: Harold Day, Rodney McKnight, Morris Hill, Joe Privett and Al House, president; Jim Reuning, Julian S. Albergotti, Marvin Lovins, Norman Moore and Cecil Milton, vice-president; Moe Huntly, Graham Hollaway, Howard Fogelman and Frank J. Allston, Jr., secretary-treasurer.

Whitehead: Harold Ceedin, Frank Patterson and Carl Hackney, president; Ralph Sullivan and Glenn Moak, vice-president; John Patseavouras, Bob Smith and Charles Overman, secretary-treasurer.

Card Stunt Ushers To Meet Tonight

All card stunt ushers and the University Club committee working on plans for the pep rally Friday night will meet in the Monogram club this evening, Norm Sper announced yesterday.

The card section ushers will meet at 7 o'clock and the pep rally committee at 8:30.

Jenrette Named Top Game Picker By Clean Sweep

Dick Jenrette, associate sports editor of the Daily Tar Heel, made a clean sweep of weekend football predictions when he was announced winner of the Graham Memorial football contest yesterday.

Jenrette, who also led the sports department in picking grid winners, had a perfect score on the predictions, correctly naming the winning team in 20 of the nation's top tilts. Dick's score for the State-Carolina game 35-7 was a little off, however, as were most of those entered in the contest.

Four others, Ray Sarbaugh, William Roth, Norman Jacobson, and F. H. Roberts, narrowly missed having perfect records by one game. To Sue Stokes went the singular honor of missing 15 out of 20 predictions. However the Carolina coed did come closer than any of the winners in naming the homecoming score, with a 21 to 7 guess.

Dance Committee To Meet at GM

The Charlotte-Carolina dance committee will meet in Horace Williams lounge today at 3 o'clock. Newly selected members of the committee are Carter Taylor, George Kenyon, Marion Ward, C. B. Mendenhall, Jord Jordan, Dave Littlejohn, and John Baker.

Archibald Henderson Slates Speech At Sorority Banquet Next Thursday

Dr. Archibald Henderson, official biographer of George Bernard Shaw, will speak at the initiation banquet of Chi Delta Phi on Thursday, Oct. 28, President Sally Woodhull announced yesterday.

Deadline for submission of manuscripts is today, and incoming members will be notified early next week. Initiation services will be held in Graham Memorial Oct. 28 at 4:30, and the banquet will follow at the Ivy room in Durham, with members of the Duke chapter of the coed literary group as guests.

Dr. Henderson, who until his recent retirement served as head of the Mathematics department of the University, is widely known both for his literary and mathematical achievements.

A graduate of the University with the class of 1898, he started his teaching career immediately upon graduation, and received his Ph. D degree from the University of Chicago. He holds five honorary degrees.

In addition to his many books and articles on Shaw, the versatile professor has written histories of the University and of the region. His "Campus of the First State University" is soon to be released by the University press.

Lucas Says GOP to Lose Senate Seats

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—(UP)—Sen. Scott W. Lucas, (D.—Ill.) and the AFL political league today both predicted the Democrats will win control of the Senate in the Nov. 2 election.

Lucas, chairman of the Democratic senatorial campaign committee, claimed his party would wrest seven and perhaps 10 seats from the frankly worried Republicans. He listed Minnesota, Kentucky, Oklahoma, West Virginia, Wyoming, Illinois and Iowa as sure to switch to the Democrats and said the Democrats have a "better than even" chance to capture GOP seats in Idaho, Delaware and Michigan.

George M. Harrison, head of the AFL's political department, said in a final pre-election appraisal that the Democrats are certain of winning at least four GOP-held seats. He listed them as Minnesota, Oklahoma, West Virginia and Wyoming.

In a confidential report to the league's final pre-election meeting, Harrison said the Democrats have a good chance of picking up an additional GOP seat in Iowa.

The league has opened a drive to elect the Democratic candidates in those five states and in 11 others—Colorado, Montana, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Idaho, Delaware, New Mexico, Massachusetts, Illinois, Michigan and New Jersey.

Meanwhile a House subcommittee stepped into the torrid New Mexico Senate race. The group, headed by Rep. Forest A. Harness, (R.—Ind.) ordered an investigation of charges that federal employes are campaigning illegally for former agriculture secretary Clinton P. Anderson, Democratic senatorial candidate.

Anderson is opposed by Republican Patrick J. Hurley, secretary of war in the Hoover administration. A committee counsel said there were many complaints that federal employes were going to New Mexico from Washington and Western states to give Anderson a helping hand.

Jack-Pot Prize Is $45 At UVA

A new heating system has been installed in the University Veterans association clubhouse in preparation for tonight's quiz show, president Hugh Wells announced yesterday.

The jack-pot prize for tonight will be $45. Any person who attends will be eligible to receive the jack-pot if he is selected as a contestant. If a contestant fails to answer correctly, he will still receive a consolation prize.

A large crowd is expected for tonight's show, so all veterans who attend are asked to come early in order to obtain good tables.

Late News Bulletins

Forty Dead

SANTIAGO, CHILE, Oct. 19.—(UP)—At least 40 persons were reported today to have perished as the result of an eruption of Villarica volcano, 400 miles south of here. Latest official figures were 40 dead and 200 missing.

Brush-Off

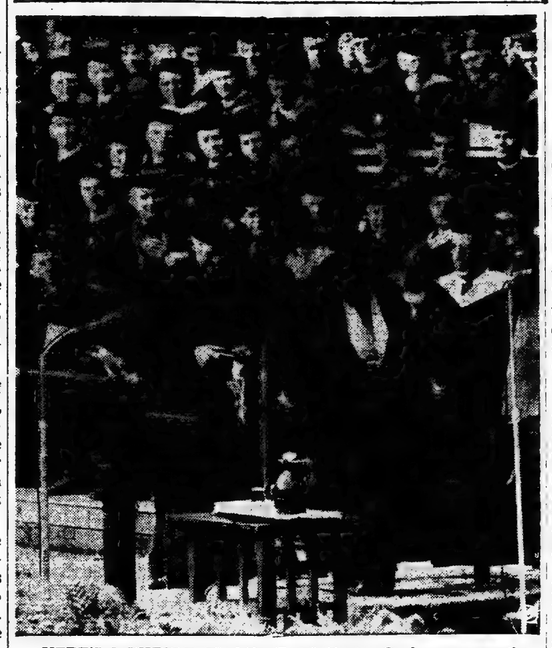
READING, Pa., Oct. 19.—(UP)—Henry A. Wallace today accused Secretary of State George C. Marshall of giving President Truman "A contemptuous brush-off" and said Marshall should be fired.

Last Attempt

PARIS, Oct. 19.—(UP)—Troops and Republican guards stormed into Central France's strike-bound coal mines against fierce Communist-led resistance today in a last-minute attempt to keep the untended pits from being flooded.

Surrounded

BERLIN, Oct. 19.—(UP)—Soviet-controlled German police surrounded Western Berlin today to keep Germans from buying food in the Russian occupation zone.



Cease-Fire

PARIS, Oct. 19.—(UP)—The United Nations Security council ordered Jews and Arabs today to cease-fire immediately in the Negev area of Southern Palestine and proposed a three-point basis for negotiations after the fighting stops.

Tightening

PARIS, Oct. 19.—(UP)—The three Western Allies demanded anew today that the United Nations solve the Berlin crisis, and charged that even as the Security council debated the issue Russia is tightening her blockade of the former German capital.

Votes For Dixiecrats Help GOP, Truman Tells Demos

President Makes Talks at Fair, Capitol Grounds

FAIR GROUNDS, RALEIGH, Oct. 19.—(UP)—President Truman told Southern Democrats today that a vote for the States' Rights ticket can do nothing but help the Republicans.

He appealed to them to drop their rebellion and to stand "shoulder to shoulder" against the risk of another Republican depression such as the country experienced under former President Herbert Hoover in the early 1930's.

Swinging his campaign into North Carolina on the fringe of the States' Rights revolt against his racial rights program, the president made two speeches in a determined bid to save the traditionally Democratic state which went Republican 20 years ago.

He never mentioned the States' Rights rebellion or the Negro rights issue which provoked it. But there were unmistakeable messages for rebellious Southerners in both speeches.

At dedicatory ceremonies on the capitol steps for a monument to North Carolina-born former Presidents Andrew Jackson, James K. Polk and Andrew Johnson, the president said the way to settle differences in democracy was through reason and debate and "never by walking out in a huff."

"To attempt to correct injustice by disunion is to apply a remedy that is worse than the disease," he said.

The second speech was made at the opening of the North Carolina state fair. It was broadcast throughout Dixieland on a 46-station southern leg of the National Broadcasting co. chain.

It was there the president said: "Other parties simply don't stand a chance. . . . you stand with the Democratic party or for all practical purposes you stand with the Republican party."

The Republicans hope, he added, they can "fool enough of the people this time to capture the election by wasted Democratic votes."

SP Politicos Schedule Frosh Rally Tonight

A freshman rally for the purpose of selecting candidates to run for class officers will be held this evening at 7 o'clock in Horace Williams lounge of Graham Memorial, Ed Tenney, Student party chairman, announced yesterday.

"The purpose of the meeting," Tenney said, "is to give freshmen a chance to meet to discuss their problems and select their leaders for the approaching elections. We are especially interested in having any new students who are interested in participating in student government to come and take part in the meeting."

"The selection of candidates will be left entirely up to the freshmen attending the meeting," Tenney continued, "because the Student party feels that the class can be best served by picking their own candidates to run on the SP ticket."

The candidates nominated tonight will be formally nominated by their fellow classmates at a student government sponsored rally to be held in the near future. The SP candidates will then campaign in a race with UP and CP nominees for the various offices.

"It is important," Tenney added, "that every interested freshman attend the meeting tonight, for only through the interest of all freshmen can the new class be assured of a fair election of

Dialectic Senate Schedules Debate On States' Rights

A resolution calling for constitutional and legislative measures to enact uniform laws for the American people, thereby eliminating the doctrine of states rights, will be discussed tonight by members of the Dialectic senate in their weekly meeting at 9 o'clock in the Di hall of New West.

Among the changes which the group will discuss are uniform marriage and divorce laws, incorporation laws, traffic and motor vehicle regulations, and criminal laws.

The bill, reported out of the Di Ways and Means committee headed by Gran Childress, states that "the practice of the doctrine of states rights has been in many respects detrimental to the welfare of the people of the United States," and that "the suspension of this doctrine with respect to certain matters would greatly improve the welfare of the people of the United States."

Dean William Wells of Arts, Sciences Tells Freshmen to Get 'Book-Learning'

By Charles Pritchard

"An educated man is never bored; boredom is a sign of ignorance," William Wells, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, told the freshman class yesterday in Memorial hall.

The speaker said the main job of being a part of the University is "book-learning."

"How do you get a college education?" he asked. "You have to go beyond what you, yourself, want to study. You need more in the form of a background." He explained that the fundamental reason for required work is that the student does not want the required subjects.

He pointed out the advantages of taking courses in each of the divisions of college, saying that an education is not obtained by simply following the requirements.

"You get an education through an attitude of mind. Education depends upon two things: willingness to learn and ability to learn."

Wells urged the students to exhibit "horse sense," a steadiness of purpose, the ability to say "no," and the willingness to stand up to the fear of learning something new.

An education, according to the speaker, will not provide a student with a well-paying job, a happy marriage, nor a substitute for wisdom, but it will give a sweet contentment and a critical point of view to be able to judge wisely.

Bill Miller, orientation chairman, announced at the assembly that plans for another freshman dance at Woman's college are being negotiated for the weekend of the Tennessee game.

Dekes, Kenan Top Drive List Of Memberships

Delta Kappa Epsilon led fraternities and Kenan was at the top of the dormitory list with 100 per cent campus membership in the Symphony society drive which was completed this week.

Under the direction of Dean Katherine Carmichael and Harold Weaver the drive topped all past records.

Memberships, which entitle anyone to hear concerts in Chapel Hill during the spring and all Symphony society-sponsored programs in the state during the season, will be available throughout the year at the Symphony offices.

Benjamin Swalin, director of the symphony, is at present in Mexico where he is rehearsing with the Guadalaja Mexico symphony orchestra which he will conduct in that city later this month.

Conductor Swalin has programmed standard classics for his two concerts in Mexico, but works by George Antheil and other novelties will be included.

Attend Unveiling

President Frank P. Graham and C. E. Teague, business manager of the University, attended the unveiling ceremonies in Raleigh yesterday commemorating the three Tar Heel presidents of the United States.

They also attended the opening of the state fair. Dr. Graham returned late last night after a trip to Greenville.

The Modern Ice Age

Among the great geological face-changers in the dim past of history were the solid sheets of glacial ice that crept forward and drew back again to their polar origins. Land heaved upward and plains were scarred as the ice moved. Increased and lowered pressure wrought cataclysmic destruction which paved the way for the world we know. The earth and the destiny of man were irrevocably shaped by the grinding of the glaciers..

Today man is creating the destruction formerly attributable only to nature. The war of words called the "cold war" is freezing the atmosphere of man's emotions into glacial blocks of fear and distrust—the Russian bloc and the Western bloc. If these two blocs come together and begin to grind, once more the face of the world will be changed. The change will be from the heat generated out of war and destruction which will leave no land or hearth undamaged.

The universal question in our minds is how can we melt these glacial blocks before they come of such proportion that we cannot stop them?

Secretary of State George C. Marshall seems to have found part of the answer, and that is to create such strength in the West that Russia and her satellites cannot but acquiesce to the tremendous power of public opinion and force. For it will be public opinion which will bind the West together, and it will be public force because the people will support their governments.

The next step can and may be an economic sanction of Russia by all members of the United Nations under the articles of the UN. A move such as an economic boycott would prove to Russia that she cannot get along without the rest of the family of nations. The old idea of independency and self-sufficiency no longer can hold true in the world today. —L.K.

Why the Inactivity?

The foreign students' committee (WSSF) has been one of the most notable groups on the campus and its achievments in the past have added greatly to the respect of student leadership on the campus. But this year something seems to be wrong within the committee. Already six weeks have gone by and only one notice has appeared announcing the forthcoming WSSF drive.

Members of the advisory board called together on short notice inform us that in a meeting around the first of October little was done because of "indecision." Evidently lack of leadership was one of the causes of this indecision. And in fairness to the members who were there, it seems that certain powers did not have enough faith in student leaders; therefore, the students made no moves.

We feel that it is time for certain Y bigwheels to learn that this is a campus with student government, and student leadership. We are governed and led by the people not the aristocracy. Whatever the cause of this indecision and hesitation may be, we suggest that the group put away their petty ills and get down to work and live up to the reputation their predecessors left them. Don't let the student body down and most of all don't let the students in the foreign countries down. —L.K.

Fads And Leaders

What starts a college fad? Are they real or are they just the products of publicity?

A few years ago college students were busily engaged in swallowing goldfish — or so the papers said. More recently students at Vanderbilt introduced the mello-reeney Vootian lingo and you couldn't tell a smoe from a shmoo without an interpreter. Now it's grasshopper-eating. A Mercer coed started it as a demonstration in psychology. She only ate one. Then a Macon, Georgia, high school student got into the act. He ate four, pointing to his school motto, "We Lead."

If that's leadership, let's leave it to the high schools.

ON CAMPUS:

REBEL YELL. Allen R. Richards of the political science department explained to one of his classes this week that the States Righters had adopted a new motto, "If at first you don't secede, try, try again.

WISH BOOK. Poor Charlie Loudermilk has been tantalized beyond human endurance by a cook book filled with pictures of lucious, sizzling dishes. Seems he's been on an eggs and milk diet in the infirmary; and the only thing he's had to read is this particular book which Mary Neely heartlessly sent him.

SOMETHING'S MISSING! And we just now figured out what it is. What with all the cards, pom-poms, and striped skirts, we almost forgot to ask about Tarzan this fall. Don't know what happened to him, but we surely would like to see him back on the field again.

LEAP YEAR SPECIAL. Maybe it's on account of because it is leap year; and then maybe it's just because she's that good. Anyway, the girls who have been hearing Mrs. E. A. Ould speak about such things as selecting mates have raved no end as to what a splendid speaker she is. Sounds as if the Baptist church is mighty lucky to have her here.

LUCKY NUMBER SEVEN. So far this season the seven defensive stalwarts up front of Carolina's team have refused to yield a single point to four formidable adversaries. It has been suggested that these seven sturdy gents be adorned with a fancy name commensurate with those of Fordham's "Seven Blocks of Granite" and Duke's "Seven Iron Dukes" of recent years. Carolina's "Seven Anvils" seems to be the most appropriate name so far.

EARLY BIRDS get to see the birdie without sweating out long lines waiting for Yack photographers, we hear. It seems that the best time to put in your mug is early in the morning—anytime after 9 o'clock.

SOB! It is with deep regret and extreme pain that we announce the demise of three of the less familiarly known residents of Carolina—Rachel, Rubin, and Illegitimate—Bill Watson's three gold fish. A Pepsi Cola bottle fell from the window sill on their glass home and ended the lives of the bowl-bound habitants of 2 Old West. Friends of the deceased are planning to hold a party in their honor, using the theme song "Pepsi Cola Hits the Spot."

TRY AGAIN is the only advice we can offer to the unfortunate freshman who wandered up to Spencer last week and meekly inquired if it was all right to come in the dorm if he didn't have a date. Emily Sewell informed him that he would be violating one of Carolina's strictest rules. Before she could explain to the boy that she was only kidding, he took off like greased lightning.

Cranberries And Chicken

By Bill Buchan

"To keep the chicken diet from becoming monotonous, there's nothing like an accompanying dish of cranberry sauce." So reads a section of a letter received this week from the Federation of Cranberry and Chicken Fanciers, of 152 West 42nd Street, New York, 18, New York.

The purpose of the new organization, as one can guess, is to take the cranberry sauce away from turkeys on Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays and give it to the chickens for use throughout the year. The letter states, "this business of reserving the red jellied sauce for the festive Thanksgiving bird exclusively and to stick to that convention is not what made this country. We need pioneers who will boldly and in public order cranberries and chicken."

Emily Post, the "nationally famous etiquette authority" has given her stamp of approval to the cranberry and chicken combination and Truman, Dewey and Wallace, as well as all those running for Congressional and Senatorial offices, are going to be polled as to their stand on this all-important problem. Naturally, the results of the national election will rest shortly on which of the three candidates stabs the turkey in the ——heart and adopts the chicken.

What can we as loyal chicken loving Americans do to help this loyal cause? Simple. Instead of budgeting and adding and buying 50 or 60 cent meals for lunch and supper, we'll start buying $1.10 chicken and we'll demand that Lenoir or the downtown restaurants serve us cranberries to accompany it,——then, we might send an expense account to the Federation of Cranberry and Chicken Fanciers.

(The perfect candidate to endorse the cranberries is Henry Wallace, for after all, the colors go together so well.)

Now, if you want to be downright mean about this thing, you can stop thinking these cranberry-chicken people are crazy and realize that they are probably backed by some people who produce cranberries and aren't selling enough except during the holiday season. However, we can forget about their real purpose and consider other parts of their soulrending letter.

It continues. "Our desire is to enlist millions to blaze this new path and break an old and out-moded convention. We are serious in this fight — and we won't stop until we get every waiter in the country to stop looking aghast at a request for chicken and cranberries."

So the letter concludes, "We thought you might want to do a column on this movement of ours. We know that millions who probably feel the way we do but have been timid about doing anything, will come out in the open and hop on the bandwagon."

Now all you timid souls can order all the cranberries your big fat middle desires and know you are just one of the millions. In case any enterprising character here is interested in forming a "Cranberry society," the address is above.

Yours for more cranberry and chicken.

This Is Carolina

CP--Rebellion And Rise

By Lincoln Kan

In a quiet corner of the old Candlelight room, now the Rendezvous room, a group of determined men met in the early spring of 1946. They were there to line up the policies which they proposed to lay before their party at the next meeting. There was some difference between these men and the old line Student party members. The main bone of contention was the membership of a person whom this secret group disliked and wished to throw out of the party.

A short while later, the Student party met and the issue came up for a showdown. The insurgent group, ably led by Johnny Jones and Chuck Heath, was ready for a fight. The meeting was fully attended by the Jones' men. The complacent regular Student party men were late. The motion to oust the unwelcomed member was made and was about to be passed when Bob Hennessee, a new but determined member of the SP who wanted the party to retain the gentleman in question, rose to do battle. He started a good old fashioned filibuster. Meanwhile the few older members of the SP went hunting for their recalcitrant latecomers and rounded up enough of them to defeat the resolution to oust the person being protected.

Then the insurgents pulled a Gromyko. They simply walked out. In that way the Campus party was born.

The power did not rest long in the hands of the original rebels, because many others realized the SP had lost something and were eager to adhere to any party which could offer them aggressive action. Gradually the authority passed to men of broader vision and less impulsiveness. In 1947 the Campus party made a valiant bid for campus recognition in the elections. They were none too successful.

Then in 1948 the leadership fell to the guiding hands of Jess Dedmond and a few other very capable men. Jess drew up his plans carefully, and the CP became recognized as the up and coming party. There was good leadership and sound political thinking. The party platform became one of service to the student body as a whole as well as to the individuals. In many cases the planks within the CP platform were quite similar to those of the UP and the SP. What the CP had was the new thirsty spirit which builds strong parties.

As Jack Worsham, present chairman of the CP, informed new students in an open letter dated August 2, 1948, "The Campus party is neither a Leftist organization, nor a Rightist organization, but a Middle-of-the-Road party. Fraternity, sorority, non-fraternity and non-sorority members are welcomed equally."

In the first election held in April 1947, the CP got two seats in the student Legislature. The following year, they were able to put both the president and the vice-presidential nominees into office as well as several other men from their party into other important campus positions. There is a note of optimism in the party, not unlike the dewy expectations of the Republicans.

We wish the Campus party luck and hope sincerely that they will toe the line on their promises to keep a non-segregated stand in student politics. We need freshness in an atmosphere grown stale from the hashing and rehashing of old issues.

Presidential Comments

Conduct Rates an A

By Jess Dedmond

The title of "Carolina Gentlemen," to which we have long laid claim here at Chapel Hill, now a more real significance. By all reports to date there were no acts of vandalism arising out of the State game nor was there noisy and unnecessary booing while the game was in process. Possibly this was because of the good will campaign carried on by the Student Governments of both campuses, but more likely it is because both State and Carolina students realized the folly of acts which could do nothing but bring discredit and ill will between the two units of the Greater University. Whatever the reasons, the facts were encouraging.

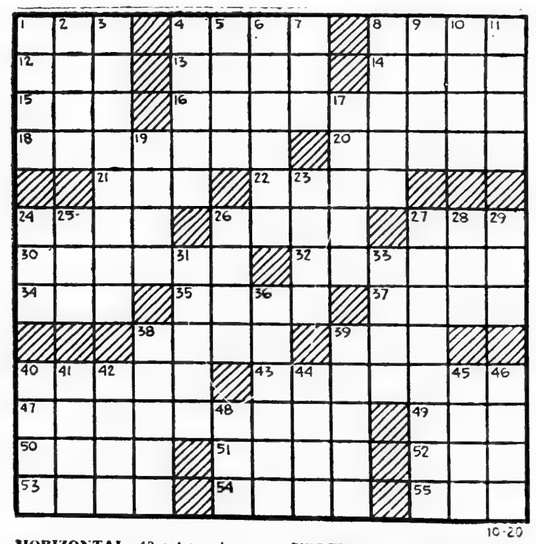
Perhaps the most significant one thing about the conduct of our Carolina student section was its willingness to cheer injured State players in the same spirit that it cheered our own. Many comments were passed about this after the game. Typical of them was: "We really acted as Carolina Gentlemen today." "All we need is to keep up the good spirit." Yes, that's all we need. We should realize that football is a game which once each Saturday focuses our attention and emotions on one thing—School spirit. Our student body should, and can, show itself to have the same great spirit which our team has shown for the last four weeks.

While here in the Spring, Kay Kyser stated that good school spirit is nothing more than a channeling of our natural exuberance and enthusiasm into constructive and wholesome channels. With the cooperation of the student body our cheering squad will handle the channeling. Last Saturday our channeling was right, and we demonstrated that we can be gentlemen. Let's keep up the good work.

Write Away

Rebuttal Beginning

Editor:



May I furtively usurp a few inches more of your editorial space in which to acknowledge Mr. Bob Debardelaben's analysis (Oct. 16) of my three previous letters? I really don't like to do this — I've had my share of space this month. But worst of all, being a hack commercial writer of sorts (and snorts), I customarily sit down at my typewriter with visions of one cent a word dancing merrily in my head. Thus, it irks my Scotch soul no end to be hornswoggled, via blasted idealism and hope for a better America, into writing a letter to defend a previous one when I should be writing for Super Rabbit Comics and earning a few dishonest dollars with which to buy more pinto beans, russian dressing (awk!) and Super Suds.

Mr. Debardelaben has ingloriously exposed me as a member of the Progressive party and a friend of Junius Scales. Further, he has noted that my article states I am a disbeliever in Communism and that I am a true American. Actually, if Mr. D. will check my published letters he will find that nowhere did I say I was a disbeliever in Communism or a true American. To disbelieve in something, I think, implies first an understanding of it and, subsequently, a rejection, or negation, of it. Unlike Mr. D., whose understanding of Communism is apparently equivalent to that of Mr. Capone, at least, I don't claim to understand Communism. On the basis of that lack of understanding, I do not advocate or support Communism. Contrariwise, and on the same basis, I do not advocate the persecution of those who do.

Mr. D. refers to both Al Capone and myself as true Americans. I resent the classification. If Mr. Capone was a true American, then I'm a subversive rat, because that ain't the brand of Americanism I was reared up on.

Claude V. Dunnagan

(Mr. Dunnagan's letter, which ran some 450 words longer than the Write Away limit, will be concluded tomorrow. Contributors to Write Away are hereby requested, directed and ordered to confine their letters to 300 words or less.—Ed.)

Twenty-Two Beautiful Girls

YOU CAN BOWL ME OVER, but they are already playing the first post-season contest of the year. The Powder bowl—they are billing it as—with Carolina's most talented coeds assuming the roles of Femme Footballs for an afternoon of gorgeous grid competition. It looks to be a lassic of the first order.

It seems the University club, rallied from dormancy with a gay prod by ex-humorist Tookie Hodgson, has come up with this greatest idea since paint-on-garters to go with paint-on-stockings. The game is scheduled for Emerson field tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock with a large group of talent scouts, both amateur and professional, expected to be on hand.

According to Mr. Hodgson, the game is shaping up into form as the two opponents continue last minute preparations of polishing up running plays and shiny noses. A wealth of material has been secured to be divided into two evenly matched aggregations. One squad, the Hopeless Hussies, will feature members of AD Pi, Pi Phi, and Alpha Gam, while their foe for the afternoon, and probably most of the evening to follow will be the Last Chance Frightfuls, composed of the Chi Omegas, Tri Deltas, and the CICA.

According to Hoyle

BOTH TEAMS, ACCORDING to the press releases have untarnished records and can be expected to excel in all departments. The game will be a regulation affair with the gals destined to don all the usual equipment. Coaches for the game have not been announced, but Hodgson hopes to sign several big name operatives to handle both teams.

The Hussies have a strong aerial game featured by a pair of All-American ends who can handle even the toughest of passes. They are expected to strike early and stay late. They are strong up front with backs who can really play ball when the chips go down.

On the other side of the fence, the Frightfuls will be concentrating on their famed running game, which has found opponents in full pursuit all season. Their star back, Tri Delt Woo Woo Lucas, has a bad ankle, but expects to see action. The Frightfuls will support their running game with one of the finest lines seen or heard in these parts in many a moon. They won't be a push over for anyone.

Behind the Scene

ALL IN ALL, it promises to be a delightful afternoon of football without the strain and pressure of Saturdays in Kenan stadium. There will be a band of at least three pieces to provide harmony for the whole gathering while the first 52 people in the stands will assist cheerleader Norm Sper in halftime card stunts if a deck of Bicycles can be secured.

The underlying purpose of the proceedings will be an attempt by the University club and Norm Sper together to arouse some fresh spirit into a slightly sluggish student body. Support of the team has been strong, but the cheering isn't what it could be for 7,000 ardent Tar Heels. The goal in sight is to outyell the opponents as well as outplay them.

The Carolina football student body has received several bountiful bouquets in the past weeks—ones of which to be devilishly proud. Conservatives Wilton Garrison of the Charlotte Observer noted pleasure in the conduct of the Tar Heel student body while 400 miles away from school in Athens. And a prominent State rooter readily admitted how much he was impressed when an injured Wolfpack player got a bigger hand from the Tar Heel stands on leaving the game than he did from his own.

Clippings are to be lived up to.

A Meeting Ground

FORMER TAR HEEL Chunk Simmons commented shortly after returning from a third place victory in the London Olympics this summer that the point which impressed him most was the manner in which the different athletes got along. He cited the case of a pair of jumpers—one from Greece and the other from Yugoslavia who competed side by side exchanging helpful hints and tips while at home their countries were on the verge of war.

Athletics are a great meeting ground for people of all races and color. Negro trackmen have played a major part in American victories in the past two Olympiad. Yet, there is little racial agitation in American athletic circles because of sports' strong adherence to custom. Meets in the North are mixed, while those in the South are segregated in following the customs of the different areas.

The South, of course, suffers the lost of any large championship event which must be run where all can compete. If they are willing to pay this price, that is their business. Agitation is a frowned-on practice in the American sporting picture. All the American games—football, baseball and the rest have been improved by a modification, but a slow one that allows for one to become easily accustomed to the changes. Pseudo-sociologists should take note of this.

The Message

ATHLETICS ARE MERELY a personification of life itself. They show man under his greatest synthetic strain and will tend to bring out in him, the best and the worst that is in him. The heat of the engagement is where the false faces crack and what's within, comes without.

Sports in this country are constructed on a higher level than most of the world's undertakings. If we can't keep them there, it is time to fold the tents and softly creep out of our stadiums. The game played right and cheered right is the ideal dream of the true sportsman.

Grantland Rice, one thinks, should be credited for the little verse that has lasted so long it bears repeating from a hazy mind:

For when the One Great Scorer
Goes to mark against your name.
He writes, not that you won or lost
But how you played the game.

May be trite and corny, but there are a lot of people who wish he had written it.

Come From Behind In Fourth Stanza To Catch Panthers

By Larry Fox

HIGH POINT, Oct. 19, 1948—Showing infrequent flashes of the excellent team play that gave them a victory over Loyola last week, Carolina's booters were forced to come from behind in the fourth period to hold a hard-fighting underdog High Point college eleven to a 3-3 deadlock here this afternoon. Two scoreless five-minute overtime periods were played at the conclusion of the regular time.

The Tar Heels showed traces of the form which they displayed last week, but in spite of occasional individual brilliance were outfought throughout most of the contest.

Carolina scored first, but soon after relinquished the lead for good, when Pete Hexner pushed one in during a scramble in the goal mouth after eight minutes had elapsed in the initial stanza.

Red Coble put an end to the Tar Heel lead, however, five minutes later when his free kick fro mabout 20 yards out dribbled through the Tar Heel defense. Cliff Moran put the Purple Panthers ahead in the final minutes of the opening quarter.

That was all the scoring until late in the second period when Dave Boak intercepted a pass-out from the High Point goalie, Bob White, and charged in for the score that deadlocked the count once again.

High Point counted its final tally midway in the fourth on a scoring boot by Ralph Moran.

Tommy Jordan tied the score two minutes later when he hustled in to pounce on the ball after it had escaped from the goalie off to the left of the nets and ram it home.

The two extra sessions provided some fast and furious playing on the part of both clubs, but produced no change in the score.

Although the Panthers outfought the Tar Heels, Carolina was in High Point territory for most of the game. The visitors got many shots at the goal, but were able to convert them into points only three times. Different groups and members of the squad played superlative ball at times, but seldom did they appear able to act as a complete unit.

The Tar Heels will be out to improve on their 1-1-1 record Friday afternoon when they play host to the University of Virginia. The freshman squad opens its season the day before against the Duke yearlings at Fetzer field.

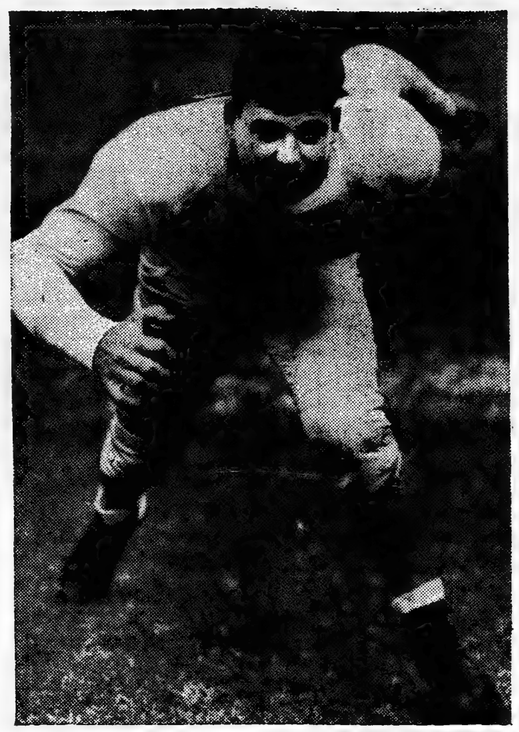
Marv Rickert to Get Part of Series Cash

CINCINNATI, O., Oct. 19—(UP)—The Boston Braves share of the 1948 World Series players' pool will be $153,500.20, Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler announced today.

Chandler said Marvin Rickert, who filled in for the injured Jeff Heath for the Braves in the World Series, would receive $1,523.58.



COED VOLLEYBALL OPENS

Coed volleyball intramurals opened last night when ADPi 1 defeated Chi O 3, 54-14. ADPi 2 won from Carr by forfeit.

In the second set of games Kenan beat Chi O 4, 76-5, and Pi Phi 1 defeated Tri Delt 2, 67-7.

Tri Delt scored a win over Alpha Gam 2, 59-27, in the last game of the evening. Chi O 2 won a forfeit game over CICA when the Independents were unable to floor a team.

Big Man on Defense

BILL WARDLE, veteran guard on Coach Carl Snavely's unbeaten football machine, turned in one of his better games of the year this past weekend as the Tar Heels beat State, 14-0. Wardle received honorable mention on the United Press Lineman of the Week poll.

Gridders Drill for LSU Game; Hazelwood Loss to Hurt Team

The Carolina eleven resumed practice yesterday afternoon after a day's vacation on Monday. The Tar Heels put in about two hours of practice at Navy field yesterday and are scheduled for another dose of the same this afternoon.

Before the locals began their labors yesterday, coach Carl Snavely delivered a little talk to the boys on the evils of lying down on the job. The master's lecture to his charges also included a few words on the LSU game coming up on Saturday afternoon in the Kenan sports arena.

Among the items cleared up by the Tar Heels in their last session down among the pines were passing plays and tackling. Coach Jim Gill had big Hosea Rodgers over in one corner flipping spirals to the offensive ends while the other coaches had groups of players working on varied phases of the game.

The general theme for the coming week will be passing. Both the offensive and defensive aerial set-up of the Tar Heels is in for a minor shake-up.

In preparing for the LSU contest, the scouts have only had the Tiger-Texas game and last week's game with Georgia on which to base their findings. LSU has the reputation of being a passing team, but are minus the brilliant quarterbacking of Y. A Tittle, who worked as the Bengal field general in 1947.

The charges of former All-American Gaynell Tinsley operate out of the T-formation and will be the fourth team the Carolina squad will have watched running from that formation

Tar Babies Drill

Coach Crowell Little's Tar Babies are still drilling for the Virginia game this Friday. Since Virginia has tied the Tar Babies twice in the last two years, the Carolina mentor is anxious to win this one. Working from the T-formation, Virginia will afford a high-powered passing attack, so the team has been working hard on a pass defense.

The guards, coached by Emmett Cheek, have been given a thorough going over on blocking and tackling.

Yesterday the team had a short scrimmage for about ten minutes. Coach Little matched his second string with the third and fourth in order to build up experience.

Little Charlie Pevey is in Tittle's shoes this year working under the center.

Carolina is in fairly good shape this week with only four men sitting on the sideline at the present time. Center Al Bernot is indefinitely out while blocking-back Don Hartig is still thought to be out for the rest of the year. Tackle Ted Hazelwood, who accidentally shot himself on Monday will have to sit on the sidline for another month. Fred Sherman, second team wingback, did not work out with the team yesterday, but is expected back this week end—Frank Allston.

Here's Roundup Of Day's Action In Mural Loops

Carolina's intramural leagues were highlighted by many well played games yesterday as several players turned in some of the season's top individual performances for their respective teams.

Pete Burks led DKE 2 to a 15 to 0 win over ZBT as he accounted for all his team's scoring, with two touchdowns, a safety, and an extra point. Hannau, with three TD's, and Probstein, with a couple of six pointers and a conversion, starred in Oakwood's 45 to 0 route of Miller.

C dormitory stopped Everett 1, and Sigma Nu defeated TEP, both by 1 to 0 scores in overtime clashes. Bill Belle racked up two scores as ATO 1 blanked Lambda Chi, 32 to 0, and Hal Hawkins hit paydirt twice in Kappa Phi's 19 to 0 win over Phi Gam 2. In other fraternity contests, Pi Lamb Phi shut out Kappa Sig 2, 13 to 0, and Beta 1 whitewashed PiKa 2, 12 to 0. SAE 1 gained a 1 to 0 forfeit victory over KA 3.

A number of tight games were played in the dormitory leagues, with Alexander edging Aycock, 6 to 0, on the strength of Dersset's second half touchdown, and the Law school whipping the Termites by the same score on Bob Little's TD. Bill Winslow's tally gave Manley a 7 to 0 decision over the Mud Dobbers in a hard fought contest. The Hut Dwellers rolled to a 12 to 0 win over Nash, and Med School 1 outlasted Old East, 11 to 6.

Steve Snider Rates Choo Choo In His All-American Backfield

By Steve Snider

NEW YORK, Oct. 18—(UP)—Memo No. 5 for the All American football file:

A traffic jam was forming today at the head of the All-American backfield list but still the favorites of the men who cover the games are Doak Walker of Southern Methodist, Charlie (Choo Choo) Justice of North Carolina, Clyde Scott of Arkansas, and Jackie Jensen of California.

Of the four, however, only Walker rated a spot in our backfield of the week. The great Mustang back scored the first two touchdowns in a 33-7 victory over Rice Saturday night and shared the week's peak performances with Halfbacks Darrel Royal of Oklahoma and Leo Kocesski of Michigan and Fullback Gil Stephenson of Army.

Justice, whose record up to last week topped them all, was well handled by North Carolina State defenders but he came through with a touchdown pass that insured a 14-0 victory. Scott rambled 36 yards for an Arkansas touchdown in a losing cause against Texas. Jensen carried the ball only seven times for California as the Bears trampled Oregon State but he averaged 14 yards per try and completed his only two attempted passes for 73 yards.

Best line performances of the week included:

Ends—Dick Rifenburg, Michigan; Jim Martin, Notre Dame, Jim Nolan, Georgia Tech; Joe Connally, Georgia: Dick Wilkins, Oregon.

Tackles: Bert Aton, Army; Don Keller, Missouri; Paul Lea, Tulane; Al Wistert, Michigan; Hank O'Shaughnessy, Columbia; Jim Turner, California.

Guards: Bill Wardle, North Carolina; Jim Fiacco, Syracuse; Marty Wendell, Notre Dame; Jim Hutto, Vanderbilt.

Centers: Charles Bednarik, Pennsylvania; Dan Dworsky, Michigan.

Best line bets so far for the All-American: Rifenburg, Bednarik, and Martin.

UVA Patterns Quiz Program On Radio Giveaway 'Dr. I. Q.'

By J. L. Merritt

Most students recognize the University Veterans Association clubhouse behind Lenoir hall as one of the few places on campus where a student can really have fun.

During the summer months, the UVA held weekly open house parties for the benefit of summer students. Recently, the UVA began a series of quiz shows which have proved to be even more popular than the open house parties.

The quiz shows are modeled after "Doctor I. Q." radio shows, and a $10 prize is offered each week to a student contestant. If no student can answer the questions correctly, the $10 is carried over to the next week and forms a jackpot.

Aside from the part the UVA plays in giving some much needed entertainment to the Carolina students, it has a much more serious purpose.

As outlined by President Hugh Wells, the UVA has a two-fold plan for a better University.

First, the UVA wants to awaken every ex-GI student to his responsibility as a Carolina student, and secondly, to encourage students and veterans alike to take a more personal interest in their school.

The UVA realizes it has asked for preferential treatment for veterans, and is is trying to get every GI to maintain the highest standards he possibly can in regard to his school work.

Also, the UVA urges all students to interest themselves in the affairs of their University in regard to faculty salaries, new buildings, and other improvements, and to contact their home legislators if they are not satisfied.

Women's Athletic Head Calls Off 'Powder Bowl'

Fink Frowns On Publicity For Contest

By Gordon Huffines

There will be no "Powder Bowl" football game today. Joe Ward, temporary chairman of the University club announced yesterday that the proposed grid clash between the Hopeless Hussies and the Last-Chance Frightfuls, scheduled for 3 o'clock this afternoon in Kenan stadium had been called off on the recommendation of Mrs. Ruth W. Fink, women's athletic director.

Mrs. Fink said yesterday that "from the standpoint of the health of the girls and the unfavorable publicity that the game would cause, I don't think it would be a good thing." There was no comment from Dean Katherine Carmichael's office.

Commenting on the cancellation of the proposed coed battle, Ward said, "The University club is sorry that this attempt to arouse campus spirit has been blockaded."

The coed elevens began practice earlier this week. The Hopeless Hussies squad, comprised of girls from the Alpha Delta Pi, Pi Beta Phi and Alpha Gamma Delta sororities, and the Last Chance Frightfuls, featuring the Chi Omegas, Tri-Delts, and CICA members were reported to be in good condition for the grid competition.

Ward stated that the University club was also planning to sponsor a half-time show featuring the crowning of Tar Heel Tackle Chan Highsmith as "Homecoming King." The University band and the cheering squad were also to have participated in the coed grid festival.

This is the second time in the past week that the plans of the University club have been thwarted. A proposed street dance to be held last Friday night was called off because Coach Marvin Allen, chairman of the Faculty Dance committee held that the rules of the Dance committee could not be enforced at the affair.

McDonald Heads Freshman Group

Ted McDonald was elected yesterday as temporary chairman of the YMCA Freshman council organized during the past week. Other officers are Allen Ham, vice-chairman, Allen Milledge, secretary, and Sam Byrd, treasurer.

A committee was named to plan for a dinner-dance with freshmen of the YWCA at the Womans' college Oct. 30. Committee members in each dormitory will have a limited number of tickets on sale at the end of the week for this affair.

The Council is planning to have weekly meetings, with prepared programs of interest to all freshmen. At present, individual members are taking part in the regular YMCA program.

Rushing

Jack Thompson, president of Interfraternity council, and Fred Weaver, dean of students, will discuss fraternity rushing at freshmen assembly this morning at 11 o'clock in Memorial hall.

Thompson will discuss the mechanics of rushing, explaining the system used here at the University, and Dean Weaver will discuss the advisability of joining a fraternity and what to look for in making a choice.

University Employe Injured In Accident

By Herb Nachman

"C" dormitory was quiet yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock until a Negro laborer stepped out between two cars and was struck by a skidding automobile driven by a student.

The laborer was Garland Crump, 52, who works for the University. The car was a Futuramic Oldsmobile convertible driven by Dave Hayworth, 20, freshman from High Point.

Police said that Hayworth was charged with reckless driving, speeding and injuring a person. He was released on a $500 bond at 4:15 yesterday afternoon.

Crump was taken to the infirmary where attendants said he suffered a compound fracture of the left leg and superficial lacerations about the face, arms and legs. He was taken to Lincoln hospital in Durham for further treatment.

One witness who refused to reveal his name said that he estimated the car was going between 35 and 40 miles per hour. Officer R. H. Blackwood of the police department reported that Hayworth skidded about 44 feet.

Crump was crossing the street in front of "C" dormitory. He had been working on Lenoir hall during the afternoon. Some witnesses said that he was struck by the front end of Hayworth's car while others reported that he was hit by the rear fender.

G. R. MacCarthy To Deliver Talk On Arctic Region

Dr. Gerald R. MacCarthy of the Geology department will deliver an address on the "American Arctic" in the New East building at 7:30 this evening. This will be the first in a series of speeches to be given on subjects of recent scientific interest.

Tonight's speech is being sponsored by Sigma Gamma Epsilon, national honorary geologic fraternity which is endeavoring to bring before students and faculty a number of speakers who will relate their experiences in connection with topics of universal interest.

Dr. MacCarthy will discuss the problem of life versus climate in the Arctic region, where he has spent several summers with the United States geological survey. He will illustrate his discussion with color slides.

All members of the student body, faculty, and their friends are invited to attend the lecture.

Debate Meeting Open to Students

Students interested in radio announcing, dramatic reading, poetry reading and oratory are requested to attend a meeting of the Debate council tonight at 7:30 in the Grail room of Graham Memorial by Pete Gerns of the Council. Time and place for tryouts for the varsity debate team will also be set at the meeting.

Press Releases Names of Books To Be Published

The titles of three books already published and four that are to be published in the near future were released by Miss Ruth Kuykendall of the University press yesterday.

All seven books are the products of authors who are connected with the University or who have been connected with it and are part of the 30 to 40 volumes published annually by the University press.

"Aucassin et Nicolete" by Robert Linker of the University was published last spring and is now in use as a textbook for old French here and at the University of Kentucky. "Bold Galilean" by LeGette Blythe, and "Building Atlanta's Future" by John E. Ivoy, Nicholas J. Demarath and Woodrow W. Breland have both been published this fall.

On the list of volumes scheduled to appear this fall are: "The Common Glory" by Paul Green, to appear Oct. 23; "Federal Prose" by James R. Masterson, to be released Nov. 20; and "The Juvenile Courts of North Carolina" by Wiley B. Sanders, professor of social work at the University, to be published Nov. 27.

Volume II of "The Papers of Walter" by Aubrey L. Brooks and Hugh T. Lefler is scheduled for next spring. Dr. Lefler is a professor of history.

Late News Bulletins

Supports Dewey

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—(UP)—Charles Edison, Democratic former governor of New Jersey, said tonight he is supporting Gov. Thomas E. Dewey for the presidency because President Truman has a record of "reliance upon corrupt political machines."

'Imperative'

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—(UP)—The chief of Secretary of State George C. Marshall's policy planning staff said tonight it was "imperative" that Russia join the "peace-loving peoples" of the world in getting on "at last" with the development of the United Nations.

Posse Searches

ANGOLA, La., Oct. 20.—(UP)—A posse and a pack of bloodhounds plunged into a swampland willow forest tonight after a convict-houseboy suspected of murdering and raping Mrs. John H. Spillman while she was making ready to leave for a party in honor of the governor's wife.

Confession Made

BALTIMORE, Oct. 20.—(UP)—Mrs. Leona M. Shefflet, a middle-aged mother, told police today that she kidnaped 10-week-old Jo Ann Mezzanotte because she was having domestic troubles and thought "a new baby in the house might solve them."

Moving In

SEOUL, Korea, Thursday, Oct. 21.—(UP)—Four-thousand rebellious constabulary troops captured several towns in the south Korea coastal area yesterday and were reported moving toward Seoul early today in a Communist uprising aimed at overthrowing the United States-sponsored republic.

Plane Crashes

LONDON, Thursday, Oct. 21.—(UP)—A KLM Dutch air lines constellation with 40 persons aboard crashed in flames one mile from the Prestwick Scotland airport early today, reports from Tarbolton, Scotland, said.

Dorm Runoffs

Manly, Mangum, Steele, Old West, Everett, Lewis, and Stacy dormitories will hold runoff elections from 9 o'clock this morning to 9 o'clock tonight, Pete Gerns, president of the Interdormitory council, announced yesterday.

The advisors of these dorms will be supplied with ballot boxes under the same system used during preliminary elections held earlier this week.

Runoffs in the other dorms are scheduled for Friday.

Extra Show Is Scheduled For Sunday

The Carolina Playmakers' production of "I Remember Mama," which opened in the Playmaker theater last night before a filled house, is to be held over for an extra performance Sunday evening at 8:30, John W. Parker, business manager, said yesterday.

The play was originally scheduled Wednesday through Saturday evenings. The decision to extend the run of "I Remember Mama" came at noon yesterday, when it became apparent that an extra row of chairs in front and extra chairs in the balcony offices would have to be added.

"We plan to add the additional chairs even though we are going ahead with the extra performance," Parker said, "and tickets will still be sold at the box office on performance nights as previously announced."

The tickets for the Sunday evening performance began to sell before they could even be racked in the ticket box yesterday afternoon. The opening performance last night was a complete sell-out, and the play was well received by an enthusiastic audience.

"I Remember Mama," the first major production of the new Playmaker season, was staged and designed by Lynn Gault. Costumes are by Irene Smart, and the intricate lighting for the multi-scened production was handled by graduate assistant James Byrd.

McWaters Denies DeForge Received Bribe From Him

WINSTON-SALEM, Oct. 20—(UP)—Used Car Dealer W. C. McWaters today denied the testimony of a minor league baseball club ex-manager that he was bribed by McWaters to throw a ball game here last spring.

McWaters took the stand today shortly before both sides wound up presentation of evidence in a court airing of the Carolina league's bribery case which caused two men to be banned from organized baseball for life.

The Clover, S. C., used car dealer denied that he ever knew Bernard DeForge, former manager and pitcher of the Reidsville Luckies in the class C Carolina league.

DeForge was ousted form organized baseball permanently last spring.

He is on trial in superior court here with McWaters and Tommy Phillips, another Clover used car dealer, on charges of bribery and conspiracy.

DeForge testified that he met McWaters in Reidsville and agreed to lose the game between Reidsville and Winston-Salem last May 14 to safeguard gambles' bets. He said the late Emanuel Weingarten, former owner of two Carolina league baseball teams, also was at the meeting.

Dozen Students Hurt In Clash Over Fares

HAVANA, Cuba, Oct 20.—(UP)—More than a dozen students were injured and 15 were arrested today in fresh clashes with the police over a bus fare increase.

Several times police fired their pistols to break up student demonstrations that began when fares were raised last week.

University Allocated Money For Atomic Energy Studies

Med School Department Gets $5,000

Dr. H. D. Bruner, head of the Pharmocology department of the University medical school said yesterday that his department had been allocated $5,000 of the $450,000 approved by the U. S. Atomic Energy commission.

The approval for the University project in the use of isotopes in blood flow being conducted by tne Pharmocology department was approved last June.

The research will be conducted by Dr. Bruner's department, and will have the cooperation of the Chemistry, Physics and Medical departments. Remodeling of Phillips X is in progress to house the project. The experiments with radio biology will be concerned mainly with the isotopes.

Since the materials to be used must be manufactured, Dr. Arthur Roe, associate professor in chemistry who is now at the Oak Ridge national laboratories is expected back sometime at the end of this month to synthesize the materials. Dr. Bruner said, "He'll make it, and I'll try to use it."

Yack Deadline For Book Space Set by Fussell

"Absolutely no contracts for organizational space will be signed after tomorrow," Ted Fussell, Yack business manager warned yesterday.

"Those organizations who have not been contacted by the Yack, and those who have neglected to come to the Yack office to sign picture space contracts must do so before 5 o'clock tomorrow afternoon," Fussell said.

Fussell declared that many organizations had been notified by mail last week to sign picture space contracts, but that there were a few new organizations that he was sure would desire picture space. The Yack printing deadline must be met, Fussell emphasized, and all tardy organizations must sign for their space today.

Political Rally Slated For Freshmen Today

A rally for all freshmen will be held at 8 o'clock tonight in Gerrard hall to nominate candidates for the four class officer positions. The University Party will back this slate of nominees, said Thurman Williams, party chairman.

"Because the University party does not know all the freshmen well enough to choose the men best qualified to serve as their officers, we are asking for help in this matter from the only group on campus really capable of selecting them—the members of the freshman class," Williams explained.

Among the speakers at the rally will be Jess Dedmond, student body president; Len Butt, vice-chairman of the party; Charleen Greer, Herb Mitchell, Bob Kirby, and Ferne Hughes.

The UP spokesman continued, "We, as a party, will endorse, publicize, and give our support to the men chosen by this group. Therefore, in order to select the best men, we would like to have all freshmen attend the meeting. Membership in the freshman class is the only requirement for participation. Nominations will be made for the following offices: president, vice-president, secretary-treasurer, and social chairman.

"This meeting is not designed to ask any freshman to join any political party," Williams pointed out. "It is merely an open meeting for freshmen to organize their followers on an independent ticket. It is the opinion of the UP members that new students at the University would not like to associate themselves with any political party until they are more familiar with each party's platform and the theories of the different parties."

Solons to Hear Allocation Bill On Loan Return

A meeting of the Student Legislature in Di hall at 7:30 this evening will consider a bill to appropriate $1,160 to the Entertainment committee for repayment of a loan received form Graham Memorial.

Other bills on the agenda include the establishment of a National Students association chapter on campus and the provision of a permanent office of attorney general.

A bill which would render the Student Legislature authority to transfer funds from one department on campus to another will also be introduced on the floor.

A resolution to cease extracurricular activities one week before final examinations is also expected to be introduced.

Other bills to be considered tonight include an appropriation of $300 to the University club and authorization of Student Legislature to approve loans secured by student organizations.

Alumni Groups Hold Meetings Through State

Meetings last night of the Wayne and Halifax county chapters of the University Alumni association highlighted a full week of activity in observance of University day and Homecoming.

Chancellor R. B. House addresssed the Wayne county group at a dinner meeting in Goldsboro. Others present from Chapel Hill included Robert A. Fetzer, director of athletics; Dr. O. K. Cornwell and J. M. Saunders, alumni secretary.

Halifax alumni gathered in Weldon to hear Bill Friday, assistant dean of students, discuss student life and problems. Representing Chapel Hill were Bill Shuford, assistant alumni secretary, Henry House, physical education professor, and Mary Ann Daniel, president of the YWCA.

Secretary Saunders explained that meetings of the various chapters are called as close to University day as possible. At these sessions there are talks about the University and usually movies of the football games are shown.

Chapter meetings were held earlier this week in Thomasville and Sanford. Recent Carolina conclaves were called in Asheville, Lumberton, Waynesville, Jackson, Oxford, Greensboro, Dallas, Texas, and Birmingham, Ala.

Cunningham Elected Spanish Club Prexy

Tom Cunningham was elected president of the University Spanish club at a meeting Tuesday evening. Other new officers are Alan Wiley and Charles Fowler, vice-presidents, and Alice Sharp, secretary-treasurer.

The club meets every Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock in Caldwell Y. All students interested in Spanish are invited to attend.

16 Schools In County Given Funds

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20—(UP)—The U. S. Atomic Energy commission today allocated $450,000 to finance research projects at 16 private laboratories, hospitals and universities.

The funds will support 19 separate studies in the new and relatively unexplored field of atomic biology and medicine.

The Office of Naval Research will administer the funds.

Typical projects include (1) Experiments with the use of radioactive cobalt for the treatment of cancer; (2) Studies of the effects of exposure to radioactive materials on nerve tissue; and (3) The use of radioisotope 'tracer elements' to gain new knowledge about the human body.

The projects selected for support will be conducted at the University of Colorado, Boulder (2); Northwestern university, Evansville, Ill.; Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Cambridge; Arnold arboretum, Harvard university, Boston; College of Physicians and Surgeons, Columbia university, New York; New York Post Graduate hospital, New York; University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill; Ohio State university, Columbus; Western Reserve university, Cleveland (2); University of Oregon, Eugene; Oregon State college, Corvallis (2); University of Oregon medical school, Portland; Baylor university, Waco, Tex.; University of Texas, Austin; University of Washington medical school, Seattle; and University of Wisconsin medical school, Madison.

Gil Discusses Franco Spain, United Nations

Frederica G. Gil of the Political Science department discussed the situation in Franco Spain, and the problem of its admittance to the United Nations at the Tuesday night meeting of the International Relations club.

After backgrounding the Franco political system, Gil raised the pertinent question of Spain's admittance to the UN. He said the only valid argument for permitting Spain to enter the UN is its strategic position in case of a third world war.

Against Spain's admittance, he said, is the fact that a future war will be fought for democratic ideals. Since Spain's present regime is fascist, having her as an ally would be incongruous, he remarked.

At the meeting John Sanders was elected president and Georgia Fox secretary of the club.

Movie Star

Dr. Frank Graham is appearing in the United Nations film being shown this week at the Carolina theater, Roberta Sterling, state director of the Collegiate Council for United Nations announced yesterday.

The film, entitled "Highlights of the United Nations," is being shown in conjunction with the observance of United Nations Week, Oct. 17-24. It is appearing through the cooperation of J. Carrington Smith, Carolina theater manager.

For the observance of United Nations week, Miss Sterling said churches in Chapel Hill and in localities of other CCUN chapters were asked to base last Sunday's sermons on the work of the United Nations. She said programs for use in the churches were supplied by the state headquarters for CCUN.

Dixiecrat Campaign No Help To Dewey, Thurmond Says

ATHENS, Ga., Oct. 20—(UP)—Presidential Candidate J. Strom Thurmond tonight denied that his campaign was helping the chances of Republican Thomas E. Dewey in the South.

Slashing at critics who have urged that the South stick to the two-party system by voting a major ticket, Thurmond declared that "Nothing could be further from the truth."

We have received thousands upon thousands of pledges of support form persons who would have supported Dewey if our ticket had not been placed in the field," he said at a University of Georgia States' Rights club rally.

"They are happy to support us, because they know that a vote for Dewey is exactly like a vote for Truman, when it comes to the unconstitutional proposals they both have endorsed."

Thurmond said Dewey had "publicly declared himself an enemy of the South" in fighting Southern efforts to gain equalization of freight rates.

"The record of the Republican candidate in opposition to Southern progress is well known," he said. "I do not see how such a man can claim a single vote in the South."

Local Group Shines In Florida

By Leonard Dudley

Reports coming into the campus from the Air ROTC summer camp held at Orlando, Fla., show the University's 27-man aggregation dominating almost every phase of activity.

The camp was made up of air units from 12 colleges and universities throughout the Southeast.

The University unit, with assistance from part of Georgia Tech's group, made up K flight of the 144th squadron, which wound up in second place in the drill competition finals, losing only to the Citadel, four-year military college.

Twelve Schools Are Represented

Cadet Col. Paul J. English, commander of the unit here and a 1st sergeant of World War II, was in command of the flight in the final review. K flight received a special citation for superior drill in the final review.

Other men from the University who served as commanders at the camp were: Grey L. Adams, flight sergeant and special service officer for the various social activities carried on for the camp; James H. Spears, Lester P. Martin, and John D. Green, squad sergeants of K flight.

For his outstanding ability and precision of command, Clyde L. Smithson was chosen to command the 144th Squadron in the final review.

John G. Hough played in the 769th Air Force band which provided music for special occasions.

The intersquadron trophy in athletics was presented to Albert

War Is Not Inevitable

This is United Nations Week commemorating the third year of its existence. We feel the following editorial quite appropriate.

The world today faces the greatest crisis in its history. War, we are told, is inevitable. Some, including many of our prominent and experienced major-domos of military and state service, claim it is imminent. The distressing point, about which there is scant debate, is that sooner or later it will be here.

This attitude is all the more distressing and alarming in that it suggests a feeling of futility and lost hope among not only our leaders but the populus itself. It suggests further that we as a people have lost sight of and confidence in the ways to peace. It suggests that the people of the world are a part of history and not of its determinants.

If this is true, if we are a part of history, then it's time to throw in the towel and put on a uniform. It can be true, tho, only if we believe it is true. If, on the other hand, we choose to believe that we determine history, then it is true that we do.

For God has given us the power to believe as we wish, to think without regard for physical pattern. This is mankind's greatest asset. Unfortunately, it also gives us the power to believe in God, or not to believe in God.

If we believe in God, as most of us claim, then war is not inevitable. For, in giving us this power, He necessarily gave us the corresponding power of acting as we believe. Acting, that is, on our environment. War can not be inevitable.

If we do not believe in God, and some of us do not, then war most certainly may be in the offing. For in such a case, history, nature, the universe, or any other similar force is the determinant.

Let us act then with a belief in God. Let us think of ourselves second only to Him. Let us think of nature as running a poor third. Then we can have peace. We can also have war. We can do as we wish. But we must lean upon Him for support.

It was Benjamin Franklin, speaking at the Constitutional Convention in 1787, who said:

"And if a sparrow cannot fall to the ground without His notice, is it probable that an empire can rise without His aid?" (Reprinted from the Syracuse Daily Orange)

Dangerous For Girls

The "powder bowl" ain't gwine be, according to latest information because tag football is "too dangerous for girls." There, we can stop and contemplate for several hours at least on this subject.

The boys are sorry that the game was called off and doubtlessly the coeds who were going to participate are also. We boys had fifty yard line seats reserved and were all ready to have a roaring time watching the Hopeless Hussies battle the Last Chance Frightfuls.

We suppose the powers that called off the scheduled game in Emerson Stadium had a right to do so but those girls would have been mighty attractive tearing each other apart on the gridiron.

If it could be done, why not have the coeds sign an agreement to play at their own risk, then sponsor the game under the WSSF banner. All the men we know would gladly pay for reserved seats to see their favorite pinups attired in such famous numbers as 22 and 50.—B.B.

The Inquiring Eye

Each day we marvel more at the blessings that Man has been given. In the past great historical events have failed to be recorded unless caught by a painter, but today we have the movies and the still photographer.

A few days ago, Carolina students were able to benefit from the photographer's all seeing eye. The Carolina theater had a feature on the United Nations. Our great president Dr. Frank Porter Graham was seen by his students signing the agreement between the Dutch and the Indonesians when he was serving in the Good Offices committee last year.

E. Carrington Smith, manager of the theater is to be commended for his cooperation with the Collegiate Council for the United Nations which has a state headquarters and a local chapter at the University. Good work CCUN. We need faith now and you can help us find it.—L.K.

Odds And Ends

ON CAMPUS.

EAGER SPOOKS. Folks are still wondering what the score on the Rendezvous Room is. True, they've been knocking themselves out on good programs this fall; but this time they got so far ahead that they had Halloween coming all of a week too early. It was a mistake, but there is going to be a program down there Friday night.

CARRYING THE TORCH for Tommy Thomas, Becky Holton didn't quite set the world on fire with her latest idea. She took off down town and got a beauty of a cigarette lighter, then went over and bought cleaning fluid to pour in it. But it seems that the doggone stuff was non-inflamable.

MEN OF DISTINCTION. At least, that's the self-applied term of the 17 students who are now living in Sutton Heights, "Chapel Hill's classiest neighborhood."

BUSINESS ITEM. Stock quotations on fraternity pins have jumped considerably due to PiKA Ted Wall's latest venture—will these quotes continue to fluctuate in the future?

AND THEY'RE OFF! Believe us, the Dixieland spirit is getting into folks around this town. Ab is flying the dear ol' Stars and Bars in his window: rebel yells resound throughout the halls of Graham Memorial; everybody's wearing gray skirts, pants, and sweaters; and they're calling Carolina the first team in the Confederacy.

HAIR TODAY and gone tomorrow are the way most birthdays go. But how 'bout asking Hot Rod Rodman about the one he had this week. He should be blowing his top about it for the next six weeks.

WE QUOTE. "I say there, has anyone got an extra dollar?" That's the way it was at the KA house this past week-end. About 2 o'clock in the morning, when the hat was passed around to keep the Bull City Night Hawks playing, but who wanted to keep them playing? The KA's wanted to go to bed—especially one hard working soul, namely "Goot". So it goes Carolina life—all fun but no sleep.

YOU NAME HER. Have you noticed the ad that runs as follows? "Do you have nice teeth, a good figure, slender legs, natural colored hair, clear skin, good posture; and do you speak Spanish fluently? Would you like to be an airline hostess? If so, see the representative in 301 A dorm"

ALL WET. The Carolina swimming team should hit the top this year what with extra encouragement from the Mermen who presented Ralph Casey with a whip. They figure that if they give him a whip, he'll take a mile.

SIGN HERE for newest club on campus—the Monotone Club. The line forms to the right two hours and 15 minutes after every football game. Incidentally, the charter members are Ann Carlton (who took the cake as president because she couldn't even speak), Pris Moore Pat McNutt, Emily Baker, Frank Cox, and Bobby Williams. All you gotta' do is get yourself unable to hit more than one note.

MISSED HIS TRAIN. Have you noticed the catastrophe in the Carolina Pharmacy window display that's left over from homecoming? Seems Choo Choo's effigy toppled off the train while the rest of the team is still charging on down the field. Guess he stopped off to block a State man.

RIDING HIGH and mighty happy about the whole situation is Helen Stephenson, proud possessor of a new Dodge. According to Carolina standards, she really should go places now.

UP AND AT 'EM! Those coeds are really knocking themselves out this week to develop muscles—for what purposes, we won't reveal. Anyhoo, their intramurals started Tuesday; and the crowning blow will come with today's Powder Bowl.

Lines on Literature

Melville is Rediscovered

By Roy C. Moose

Like many other great writers Herman Melville has been denied the appreciation and acclaim he deserves from the reading public. Yet he has written what is perhaps the greatest novel ever written by an American. His Moby Dick seems to be the only American novel capable of holding its own when compared with the great novels of the world.

The American public, however, completely forgot Melville and ignored his masterpiece. This might have been due to Melville's own way of living for he shunned the world. At 26 he was unknown. At 32 he had written all the books for which he is known. Then he spent the next 40 years in seclusion. He never stopped writing but just discontinued publishing. During these last years he developed a complete contempt for life. At his death in 1891 he was unknown to the newspapers. Moreover, he was unknown to the reading public and to the colleges. Even his Moby Dick had been denounced by the critics when it was published.

However, in the early twenties he was "rediscovered" and a great revival of Melville's works began. The colleges began to investigate his work. After the flurry of the revival was over, his popularity waned again. But this time a small but determined group kept Melville's works alive, and there has gradually grown a solid appreciation of him.

This realization of Melville's greatness has now culminated in a booming "rediscovery" destined to equal last year's great revival of Henry James. For no less than six books by or about Melville are being published within the next few months and others are in preparation.

Oxford University Press is publishing his Moby Dick (at $3.50) with an introduction and notes by Willard Thorp. Melville's novel is the product of one of the most imaginative minds in literature, for it takes in the whole universe for its province. From a period of great story tellers such as Poe and Hawthorne, Melville has emerged the giant of the group. He wrote his book so that it can be read on three levels: as a sea story (which is the least important); as a comprehensive picture of the whaling industry; and as a tremendous allegory like Gulliver's Travels (the most important level).

The theme of the book is that man takes the whole universe for a vast practical joke, although the joke is at the expense of man. The central figure is Moby Dick the whale, symbolizing the universe, the most prodigious of all whales in magnitude and malignity. Reading and re-reading Moby Dick is a fascinating experience, one that seldom comes from present-day literature. Somerset Maugham has selected it as one of his "10 best" novels, and his cut version of it is due soon.

For the first time his Journal of a Visit to London and the Continent, 1849-1850, edited by Eleanor Melville Metcalf is being published. Due November 10 is Melville's Billy Budd, edited by F. Barron Freeman. The latter is the first publication of his Baby Budd, Sailor together with his last novel Billy Budd.

Farrar, Straus, Co. now has ready volume two of the Complete Works of Herman Melville entitled Piazza Tales. In preparation is a biography of Melville by Newton Arvin for the American Men of Letters series being published by William Sloane. Other critical analyses are being planned which should come out within the coming year.

Moreover, there is hope that the many reprint houses will follow the trend and schedule publication of his sea stories such as Typee, Omoo, and Mardi.

In addition to the interest accorded Melville by publishers there is more and more emphasis being placed on him by the colleges. The result is that Melville is now resting solidly on top of the American novel writers, although it took the public nearly one hundred years to place him there.

She Smiles, Too

This Hippo Can Snuggle

By Claire Cox
(United Press Correspondent)

Rosie, a hippy hippopotamus at the Central Park zoo, is unhappy. Her middle-aged millionaire boy friend who tickles her tonsils at least once a week has been standing her up.

Ever since Rosie came to the zoo 18 years ago, her boy friend has been a regular caller. She likes him because he scratches her throat from the inside. She always greets him with her hippopotamus grin, a small replica of the Mammoth caves. But for a long time now he hasn't been coming and Rosie feels jilted.

The millionaire is the zoo's "angel," but he does not want his identity revealed. He donated Rosie and bought it many other animals.

But Rosie is his favorite. He named her after one of his best friends. When he misses the weekly dates and when he is in Florida for the winter, he telephones often to ask about his two-ton girl.

But Rosie doesn't know that, of course. She snuggles her head coyly against the bars of her cage, waiting for him to come. She opens her big mouth for all spectators, but all she gets is an occasional handful of beets tossed in from a safe distance. She munches the snack slowly, with mouth closed in the best Emily Post manner. Then, with a delicate air she waddles into her bath, her double chins a-tremble.

Head keeper Fred Sandman said there is nothing she likes quite so much as to have her throat rubbed from the inside. Her flabby pink tongue hangs limply out of her mouth, and her bulging brown eyes roll with joy when her millionaire friend's hand, diamond ring and all, plunges between her two big, brown tusks and gets briskly to work.

Rosie, a 22-year-old, pink-cheeked hippo, is one of the tamest animals at the zoo. She has lived alone and liked it since Schlemiel, the mate she took under protest, caught cold and died last year.

The two babies she bore were unwanted and she stomped them to death. Sandman has given up trying to make a match for Rosie now that she is developing the middle-aged spread.

"She had lived so long without a male that she was like an old maid," Sandman said. "It was a shock to her to have a mate. There'll be no more romance for our Rosie, I'm afraid."

Rosie thrives on a daily diet of 55 pounds of cabbage, carrots, potatoes, beets, apples and hay. She is a strict vegetarian and lolls around in her huge bathtub six times a day, often staying in for three hours at a time. When she's happy she blows bubbles.

Sandman said she usually does what she is told and has a remarkable memory, for a hippo.

"She won't forget about her friend, either," he said. "She'll be tickled to death to see him the next time he comes."

Write Away

Rebuttal Continued

(This is a continuation of an overlong letter begun in yesterday's Write Away.)

Editor:

Mr. Debardelaben, with the evident relish of a Junior Commando busting up a shmootonic spy ring, has accurately branded me for what I am—an active member of the Progressive Party. (Bob, you don't know the half of it. I wore out two good pairs of Tom McAn shoes this summer circulating the Wallace petition, not to mention nearly getting my thick skull bashed in when I asked a 220 pound Dixiecrat to sign.) I imagine that most of those who read my letter surmised I was a member of the Progressive Party before Mr. D's typewriter started clacking. Wouldn't it be a bit naive to suppose that a person who writes letters to editors praising Henry Wallace is not a member of the Progressive Party?

As to the reference to my friendship with Junius Scales, let me say that I class him as one of the truly superior individuals of this village. After several years acquaintance, before and after he went to war, I can honestly say that Junius is intelligent (check his scholastic record), cultured, clean, an interesting and pleasant conversationalist, soft-spoken, unobtrusive, considerate of others, impeccably well-mannered, tolerant, intensely humane and human, honest and sincere. It just so happens that those are the traits that command my respect and admiration. Junius' politics are his own business. As anyone who knows him will tell you, you don't have to be a pink or red to like—and be a friend to—Junius Scales. (I am surprised that Bob, who is himself an intelligent and pleasant fellow, should allow himself to be victimized by the old routine of "Yah! Yah! He must be bad on accounta he knows so and so. . ." It sounds more like something that might be written by an eighth grader in a DAR essay contest, not by a University student.) Thus, I believe Junius, or any other American citizen, should have the right to think and speak as his conscience dictates. (Have you forgotten Plymouth Rock? It isn't only a chicken, you know.)

One more thing, Comrade, before I gulp down my vodka and limp to the salt mines: Wendell Phillips, the statesman and orator, worded, for my money, what might well be the golden rule of all hep-cats of Free Speech (or are there any such critters left)? "No matter whose the lips that would speak, they must be free and ungagged. The community which dares not protect its humblest and most hated member in the free utterance of his opinions, no matter how false or hateful, is only a gang of slaves. If there is anything in the Universe that can't stand discussion, let it crack."

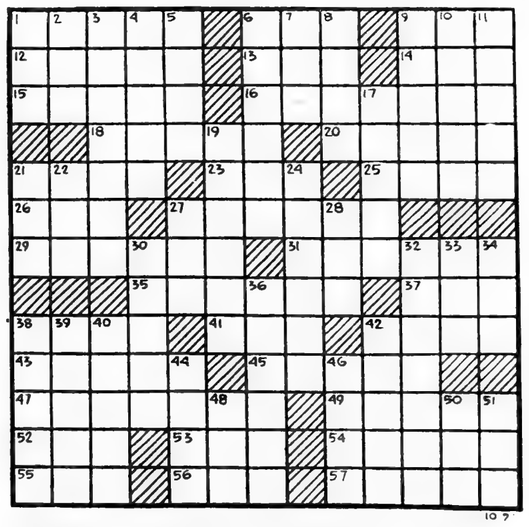
Strange Invitation



Editor:

The other afternoon I happened to be over in Graham Memorial and I was invited by leaders of the University Party to attend a U. P. meeting. Being a student who is sort of interested in student government and related functions, I accepted the invitation.

Imagine my suprise when a short time later after the usual preliminaries of a meeting and a few small matters had been disposed of, I was asked to leave the meeting!

Now, the University Party is entitled to have closed meetings if it wants to, but is it really necessary for them to invite innocent bystanders to their closed meeting that are announced as "opened?"

MONOGRAM MUSINGS

By Bill Pritchard

Big Four Council

THE BIG FOUR MONOGRAM Council—made up of representatives from the Monogram Clubs of the Big Four schools (Duke, State, Wake Forest and NC) ratified its constitution last Monday night at the second meeting of the current school year. It was the first time the constitution had been presented for acceptance.

The constitution itself is brief (slightly over one typewritten page), but it should prove to be flexible enough to meet most of the needs of the Council. I would like to take space here to quote one of the articles from this document that I believe to be of general interest to you as a student. It is Article II on "Purpose."

"It shall be the purpose of this Council to foster better interscholastic relationships between the respective member schools, both on the playing field and off. The Council shall also strive for the improvement and advancement of athletics and sportsmanship; and in general service to the campuses collectively and individually."

From this article, you may draw an idea of the general nature of this organization.

If personnel is at all indicative of an active organization then here is one. Such familiar names as Dick Dickey of N. C. State basketball and All-American fame; Carl Perkinson, center on Duke's football team; Jim Patton, Wake Forest hardwood hero; Johnny Ellsworth, Duke Monogram president and others, in addition to Nemo Nearman, Coy Carson and Joe Bach of local fame, are found on the roster of this neophyte organization. In all, the constitution calls for four representatives from each member school, giving the Council a sixteen-name roll. The men on this roll are there because of two reasons. First, their belief in the Council and its potentialities, and secondly, their interest and willingness in fulfilling these potentialities. Already, plans are being made by these men that will benefit the four schools and their students, so keep your eyes on this youthful organization. It should do okay.

Club Doings

TUESDAY NIGHT FOUND secretary Dan Nyimicz presiding over the meeting as Gus Johnston was kicking something about in High Point, namely a soccer ball. To start the cocket off right the Club voted to back the existing and active move for the reinstatement of lacrosse at Carolina.

This endorsement has more effect than one might think, for the recommendation of the Monogram Club concerning a sport is regarded very highly by the Athletic Council, and this fact will certainly not hinder the chances of the rebirth of lacrosse.

A list of active members in the Club has been drawn up by the secretary and will serve as a guide from now on. The list includes some 75 or more names, but this is still less than half of the total membership. Now, attendance at recent meetings has not been too good with an average of about 35 men per meeting turning out. With all the programs and plans that Gus has on tap, the Club needs more interest and help, so let's get on the ball and start filling the dining room on meeting nights, especially next Tuesday when Yack pictures will be made. All members are asked to be present and wear Monogram sweaters. Cards announcing the meetings will be sent out to active members, so if you don't get a card next week you're inactive but attend anyway. All it takes to reactivate yourself is your presence and willingness to do so.

Odds and Ends

ACCORDING TO SMITH BARRIER, sports editor of the Greensboro Daily News, Carolina has already accepted a bowl bid for December 28, when they will meet the University of Arizona on the hardwoods . . . basketball that is. The scene will be Lafayette, Louisiana, and the occasion—the Camellia Bowl, which will bloom for the first time this year.

A letter from Tenn Mason, popular and beautiful sponsor for the Blue-White game last spring, informs us that she is well on the road to recovery after a severe attack of polio that confined her to an iron lung for several months. This column would like to join her many friends who wish her a complete and rapid recovery. Carolina misses you, Tenn—hurry back!

Last Saturday, for the first time in the history of Kenan Stadium, the Tar Heels were televised—indirectly, that is. Scenes of the game were filmed by a television company and will be released tomorrow along with highlights from other games over 25 nationwide television stations. This is not the first time the locals have been telecast. Last year's Maryland game was given complete coverage by a Washington company.

Next year, the pressmen will have it pretty good along about football season as Kenan stadium is scheduled for a face-lifting before then in the form of a new pressbox.

Choo Choo Fourth in Offense

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—(UP)—Stan Heath of the University of Nevada Wolfpack has been no eat shakes as a ball carrier—if the records prove it—but he still possesses the greatest pitching arm in the collegiate ranks today.

Slingin' Stan, has tossed 106 passes in four games, and completed 63 of them for a total gain of 1,031 yards. This kept him far out front in the latest passing statistics released by the National Collegiate Athletic Bureau.

Heath, meanwhile, has carried the ball five times and netted only 7 yards for what appears to be an all-time low in ground gaining. But he still maintained the lead in total offense.

At his present clip, Heath could easily eclipse the total offense mark of 2,187 yards set by George Frank Sinkwich in 1942. He also looks like a good bet to reach the passing standards.

Bobby Thomason of VMI was runner-up in the passing column with 45 completions for 586 yards. Then came Jim Walthall of West Virginia with 42 completions, and Jim Finks of Tulsa and Mike Boyda of Washington and Lee tied for fourth with 38.

Lindy Berry of TCU regained second place in total offense with 710 yards. More than 300 yards behind Heath. Fred Wendt of Texas Mines was next with 655 yards, amassing 628 yards on the ground to pace the nation's ball carriers.

Charlie (Choo Choo) Justice, ace backfielder with North Carolina's unbeaten Tar Heels, held fourth place in total offense with 648 yards, showing a margin of 15 yards over Andy Davis of George Washington.

Other Southern gridders ranking among the leaders included Clyde Scott of Arkansas, second in the total rushing department with 500 yards and eighth in the total offense column with 603 yards, and Jimmy Southard, Georgia Tech quarterback, who placed sixth among the passers with 37 completions in 58 tries for a total of 627 yards.

Basketball Card Of 26 Games Announced

To Meet Arizona In Camellia Bowl On December 28

A 26-game schedule for the 1948-49 season awaits the North Carolina cage squad which has been drilling daily under Coach Tom Scott. Featured on the bill will be an encounter with Arizona in the Camellia Bowl at Lafayette, Louisiana on December 28; a tilt with New York University in Madison Square Garden; and several contests with Southern conference foes.

The Tar Heels will play a total of thirteen home games, opening on December 2 against Lenoir Rhyne in Chapel Hill. North Carolina State, Southern Conference champs of last year, Maryland, William and Mary, Duke, and Wake Forest will make appearances on the Woollen gymnasium hardwood. The Carolina courtmen expect their stiffest competition to come from the State cagers, who are considered a good bet to repeat their title performance of last season, and the Blue Devils.

Three lettermen, Dan Nyimicz, Nemo Nearman, and Coy Carson are expected to lead the Tar Heel attack along with several veterans of last season's campaign and members who have graduated from the junior varsity. Newcomers Red Bennett, Hugo Kapler, and Howard Deayse will also be counted upon to deliver for the Blue and White.

BASKETBALL SCHEDULE

December 2—Lenoir Rhyne, here; 4—Guilford, here; 6—Elon, here; 9—Catawba, here; 10—Hanes Hosiery, Winston Salem; 28—Arizona (Camellia Bowl), Lafayete, La.

One Sided Scores Feature Murals

Onesided games were the order of the day in intramural tag football competition yesterday, with six of the ten tilts decided by more than two touchdowns.

Only three contests took place in the fraternity leagues, three games having been won by forfeit and one postponed. Phi Kappa Sig turned back Pi Ka 1, 13 to 0, with Don Ward and Jim Rutherford racking up six pointers. Chi Psi ran over Phi Delta Chi, 26 to 0, and Phi Delt stopped Sigma Chi by a 20 to 7 score to round out the frat grid card. Kappa Sig, Zeta 1, and Chi Phi gained forfeit victorys over AEPi, St. Anthony, and Beta 2, their respective opponents. The ATO 2-Sigma Nu 2 tilt was postponed.

Caudle and Robertson scored a touchdown apiece as BVP shut out AROTC 2, 13 to 0. Lee Gore's touchdown and extra point proved to be the winning markers in Y Cabinet's 7 to 0 victory over the Graham dwellers in one of the few close contests of the afternoon. Bill Dunnagan accounted for two TD's and Buck Leinbeck tallied once and made good on two conversion attempts, to lead the Med School 1 gridders to a 28 to 0 decision over Ruffin. The Med School 2 aggregation didn't fare as well as their mates, with Lewis whitewashing them, 32 to 0.

Ike Carr scored a total of 14 points in pacing the powerladen Grads to a 33 to 0 win over the Fireballs. Steele outscored Town, 25 to 7, and Whitehead blanked Quonset hut 9, 36 to 0 in another onesided affair.

CAROLINA-STATE CARD STUNTS

Big Tiger Hunt Is Scheduled For Gridders

Carolina's Tar Heels are scheduled for another session of baiting tiger traps this afternoon in preparation for Saturday's intersectional tilt with colorful LSU.

The big guns of the Tar Heel hunters are being oiled and cleaned and strategic trap locations being mapped out for the big tiger hunt in Kenan sports arena this week end. Coach Carl Snavely has been spending about two hours each afternoon instructing the local eleven in the art of how to handle mischevious cats.

Tough luck hit Carolina camp earlier in the week when Ted (Frank Buck) Hazelwood was mysteriously wounded while on a hunting trip. It has been rumored that the big tackle was looking in the local woods for any stray tigers which may have arrived on the scene ahead of schedule.

Snavely's charges have worked long and hard the last few afternoons and are in hopes of winding up the heavy work today. The Tar Heel passing attack was being sharpened up yesterday for an expected aerial onslaught on the twice-defeated Bengals.

Len Szafaryn is currently slated to take over the tackle position vacated by Hazlewood's injury. Szafaryn will probably start out on Saturday playing both offense and defense.

The Carolina defensive set-up came in for a little work at Navy field yesterday as the Bengals are known for their passing attack.

LSU also reports a host of injuries. The Tigers have two boys definitely out and four more slated for limited service this week.

LSU Draws Stiff Foe This Saturday

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 20—(UP)—Louisiana State will probably draw more sympathy than any other Southeastern Conference team this weekend as they face the biggest order of all SEC elevens.

LSU, 0 to 22 loser to Georgia in the last outing, has drawn North Carolina this Saturday. Before the game and Charlie (Choo-Choo) Justice are out, the Bengals will probably be drawn and quartered.

Col. Byron R. Switzer, commander of the unit, was deputy commander at Orlando.

The summer training ended with a flight to McDill field where all hands took part in range firing of late automatic weapons.

Sneaking Up

The Chapel Hill Police department has a new squad car, a 1949 light green Ford. City Manager Gilbert Ray said yesterday that the car was bought for the police out of the city budget for this year.

One of the local constabulary well pleased with the new car, said, "Now we can really sneak up on 'em."

Baby Sitters Are Asked to Report

All girls who are interested in working with the Baby Sitting group of the YWCA Social Service committee are asked to contact Jane Casstevens, 6271, today, or to call the YW office. The group will meet at 5 o'clock this afternoon at the Y to set up the program for this year and to assign duty times for each girl.

Philippines Are Discussed at Y By Miss Rafols

Miss Salud Rafols, former teacher at the University of Manila, discussed family life and the status of women in public life in the Philippines at the YWCA-sponsored Coffee Klatsch Tuesday night.

"The Filipino home is an affectionate unit, as well as an educational and religious unit. Our women oppose divorce and are slower to marry than in America," she said. "There are strong family ties because children are impressed from infancy with their duty to care for their parents."

"Filipino women are now found in many fields in which one formerly found only men. Women lawyers are working now to have the present property laws amended to give the wife equal control of conjugal property." Miss Rafols added that the husband was still the head of the Filipino family and that the law still protects the right of the husband to tell his wife what she can and cannot do.

A student in the Public Health school here, Miss Rafols will return to Manila next year to resume her teaching.

If you were the President of A&P...

What would you do to make your A&P a better place to shop?

Have you ever said to yourself, "If I were the President of A&P, I know what I'd do"? I think there are many A&P customers who would like the opportunity to express themselves on the subject of their A&P. I really believe that from your side of the counter, you know A&P best. That's why I ask your opinion. You can help to make your A&P an even better place to do all your food buying by sending me your suggestions . . . criticisms . . . opinions. For instance, what about our service? Is it as courteous and helpful as you would like it to be? Is it prompt and efficient, too? Do you always find all items plainly and correctly price-tagged—as they should be? What in your opinion are we doing that we could do even better? Or what are we not doing that you feel we should do?

I INVITE YOU TO WRITE AND TELL ME HOW YOUR A&P MAY SERVE YOU BETTER

We of A&P want to make our stores the finest places of all in which to shop. That is why your suggestions, criticisms and opinions will be gratefully received and acknowledged. You see there are 100,000 employees of A&P from coast to coast jealously guarding the A&P reputation for courteous, honest, and efficient service. They never want to fail you in any way, but if they do, I am sure that they, as well as I, would appreciate your writing me.

Legion Ends Meet; Brown Commander

MIAMI, Fla., Oct. 21—(UP)—An attempt by the youthful veterans of World War II to win the leadership of the American Legion was rebuffed today when the 30th annual convention swept a 56-year-old veteran of both wars into the national commandership.

S. Perry Brown of Beaumont, Tex., tall and greying candidate of the so-called "king makers", defeated two world war candidates for the commandership by a two to one majority on the first ballot.

Brown immediately called on the Legion to "unite."

"I shall resent and fight all attempts to divide our organization," he declared in a brief statement of acceptance.

The defeated candidates—32-year-old James F. Green of Omaha, Neb., and George N. Craig of Brazil, Ind.,—moved immediately that Brown's election be made unanimous. The 9,000 legionnaires jammed into Miami's convention hall voted "aye" in a roaring demonstration.

Four other candidates for national commander had withdrawn in favor of Green to "put the selection of the commander ... in the hands of the delegates themselves and not leave it with any so-called kingmaker group."

But it became apparent as commander James F. O'Neil called the roll of states and territories in the hall that Brown was getting a good share of the World War II votes also. The final count was 2,176 votes for Brown, 1,262 for Green and six for Craig, who threw 130 of his votes to Brown before the count became official.

The election closed the business of a surprisingly placid 30th convention.

An estimated 30,000 legionnaires had poured into Miami which braced for five days of mob rule by the veterans. But the national Legion leadership had plucked the claws from the annual "wildcat" with a warning that unseemingly conduct would be punished by expulsion from the legion. Police reported no incidents of a criminal nature or public nuisance in the Miami area.

The convention's 3,444 delegates adopted a series of resolutions and statements of Legion policy during its final session today, including expected demands for immediate enactment of universal military training legislation.

But most surprising was the Legion's reversal of a 30-year stand against soldier pensions. The convention approved unanimously a proposal urging the federal government to enact laws granting veterans of both world wars old age pensions, regardless of income.

ATTENDING THE MILITARY ORDER of World Wars convention in Miami, Fla., are buddies of the Battle of Bastogne. They are Maj. Gen. Anthony McAuliffe (left), who led the 101st Division at Bastogne, and Col. Robert A. Ballard. McAuliffe won fame when he replied to a German surrender ultimatum with a resounding "Nuts!"

Solons Hear Reports On NSA By Delegates

By Jim Dickinson

A Student Legislature meeting which started a half hour late and in addition was recessed for nearly another half hour in order that a quorum could be attained finally heard reports from Student Body President Jess Dedmond and Al Lowenstein concerning the National Students association meet they attended in Madison, Wis. this summer.

A bill is now under consideration for the establishment of a NSA chapter on campus. Dedmond and Lowenstein gave favorable reports on the principles of the universal organization.

Lowenstein said he considers NSA a valuable organization in that it brings together students from all corners of the United States that they may exchange ideas and try to reach an understanding between themselves on many issues.

Charlie Long spoke on the activities of the Carolina Forum and stated several of the goals the organization hopes to accomplish this year.

Freshmen Hear Thompson, Dean Discuss Rushing

Jack Thompson, Interfraternity council president, and Fred Weaver, dean of students, yesterday spoke to the freshman class at assembly on fraternity rushing, which is currently in progress on campus.

Jess Dedmond, student body president, announced that a dance for freshmen students has been planned for Oct. 30 at Woman's college. Dedmond also read the bill concerning the nomination and election of freshmen officers. He said nomination will be conducted during assembly Nov. 9.

Thompson outlined the rushing rules and explained how rushing lists are obtained.

Dean Weaver pointed out to the students that the fraternity has a definite purpose on the campus. He answered various questions concerning joining fraternities.

Main Building At Miss. State Razed By Fire

STARKVILLE, Miss., Oct. 21.—(UP)—Mississippi State college officials said today it will take $1,000,000 to replace the 45-year-old Lee hall, main administration building, which was swept by fire here yesterday.

Four persons were slightly injured in the blaze and 50 others narrowly escaped death or injury when the front ledge of the four and one-half story building caved in directly in front of them.

More than 100 students were on the first floor of the building when the blaze began but they were quickly evacuated.

Cause of the fire was not definitely known, although one report said it started when a workman's blowtorch was knocked over during repair work on the roof. It was said that a bucket of tar caught fire first and the blaze spread quickly.

Team, Songs Are Scheduled At Pep Rally

Interviews and fight talks by nearly 20 members of the football team and a community sing will be features of the pep rally tonight at Memorial hall. The yell session is scheduled to get underway at 7:30.

Head cheerleader Norm Sper announced yesterday that the members of the team will include co-captains Dan Stiegman and Hosea Rodgers.

The community sing will use slides of all the University fight songs, and will be an addition to the usual songs and cheers.

Sper also said that Vic Huggins, head cheerleader in 1925, who has been aiding in the spirit-boosting at other rallies this year, will be on hand for a repeat performance. Norman Cordon, Metropolitan opera star, who has also been helping at previous meetings, will again be present to help with the singing.

Tentatively on the schedule to appear is Lath "Tarzan" Morris of Farmville. The leather-lunged fan who has been a fixture at University games for many years will aid the cheerleaders in their duties and display his mighty talent.

Music will be furnished by the University band.

Language Majors Asked To Write To Other Lands

In a letter to Dr. Hugo Giduz, Miss G. A. Raymond, publicity director of the United Nations Council of Philadelphia, expressed her hope that University language students might be interested in getting "living first-hand contact with the country and language they are studying."

Miss Raymond stated that, "All we require is the sincere desire to continue a correspondence once started, and a letter describing the writer reasonably fully so that we may choose well the European counterpart."

Students interested in corresponding with citizens of Europe may get more information from Dr. Giduz at his office in 211 Murphey.

Nursery School Being Operated

ARRIVING BY PLANE at Raleigh to open his political invasion of the South, President Truman is met by Gov. R. Gregg Cherry. The President flew to the Tar Heel state from Miami where, in an address to the American Legion convention, he explained his "Vinson mission." He declared that his proposal to send Chief Justice Vinson to Moscow had been dictated solely by a desire to lift the "fog of distrust" which blurs the road to peace in the world.

Local Airport Works Extra On Weekends

By Lincoln Kan

If the weather is clear tomorrow morning, and the ringing call CAVU echoes through the airlanes, the University will really be buzzing.

The buzz will be at the Chapel Hill airport, technically known as the Horace Williams airport. If it is Ceiling Absolute Visibility Unlimited, the buzzers will be ardent football fans from all over the state and perhaps from Louisiana, who just can't get here fast enough by car or train.

Jimmy Williams, University manager of the airport, revealed some surprising statistics yesterday. On the Texas weekend there were over 90 planes on the Chapel Hill field. Of these, there were 35 from Texas, one of them being a DC-3. The rest of the planes ranged from Navions, Stinsons, and Cessnas to modest little Aircoupes. Nearly all of them came in at mid-morning and generally held 4 passengers.

On the State weekend over 50 planes landed on the field. One of them was piloted by a hardy Oklahoman who flew all the way from Tulsa. As the planes landed, the flyers usually grabbed a waiting cab, but on this weekend, several taxi-drivers were disappointed when the pilots took out collapsable motorcycles used by the wartime paratroopers and just rode off to the game.

D. T. Neville, custodian of the airfield said "The days are getting shorter now, so I don't think we will have as many planes coming in for the LSU game as for the others. They usually have a long trip home and with so many fields cross-country without lights it is pretty tough on the smaller planes. He remarked, "I wish the papers will stop calling our field 'little.' Why, we have a bigger airport than Greensboro. We rate a number higher than they do in the CAA manual."

Williams said, "The field is in fine shape. The ground is hard and the grass is growing very well. If we do not have too much rain, we have nothing to worry about."

Since the airport has been open, there has been no accident involving a home field plane. At present there are about a dozen planes in and around the hanger. Many are owned by students, and a Navion is owned by Dr. Fredrick Bernheim who teaches at Duke medical school.

C. L. Martindale supervises the field in the mornings and at night a student watchman, Walter Cruitte, guards the area.

Dr. Baity to Give Lecture on Brazil

Dr. H. G. Baity, professor of sanitary engineering, will give the first series of illustrated lectures on Brazil Thursday night at 8 o'clock in the Medical building.

The lecture, open to the public, will feature kodochrome movies and slides. The School of Public Health is sponsoring the series.

Late News Bulletins

Attacks Soviet

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—(UP)—Thomas E. Dewey tonight proposed a "human rights" program dedicated against discrimination and attacked the Russian "biological punch press" approach to human problems.

The Republican presidential candidate spoke at a dinner honoring the memory of Alfred E. Smith, late governor of New York and unsuccessful 1928 Democratic candidate for president.

Palestine Truce

PARIS, Oct. 21.—(UP)—The United Nations today ordered Egyptians and Jews to halt their battle in the Negev deserts of southern Palestine by 2 p.m. Palestine time (7 a.m. EST) today.

Dr. Ralph Bunche, acting UN mediator in the Holy Land, set that hour as the deadline for the cease-fire which already officially has been approved by both sides.

Airlift Help

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—(UP)—President Truman tonight authorized Gen. Lucius D. Clay, American occupation commander in Germany to request up to 66 additional C-54 transport planes to maintain the Berlin airlift.

Presidential press secretary Eben Ayers said he understood Clay now is using a "little more" than 200 planes to maintain the flow of food and other supplies to the Soviet-blockaded German capital.

Reprimanded

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—(UP)—The State department tonight formally reprimanded assistant visa chief Robert C. Alexander for telling a congressional committee that subversive aleins were entering this country through the United Nations.

Single Survivor

TARBOLTON, Scotland, Oct. 21.—(UP)—Only one of the 40 persons aboard survived the crash early today of New York-bound KLM Royal Dutch airliner which overshot a runway at Prestwick airport and hit a power line.

Officials said tonight that Willem Hendrick Phillippo, a Dutch passenger, was the only survivor. Nine Americans were among the 39 persons killed in the crash.

Plans To Double Book Space Set

By Charles Pritchard

Plans that will approximately double the cubic capacity of the University library are in the final stages, it was revealed yesterday by the offices of the library.

Alfred M. Githens, consulting architect from New York city, and four representatives from the firm of Wiley and Wilson, consulting engineers from Richmond, left yesterday at noon after discussing the new construction plans with library officials.

O. V. Cooke, assistant librarian, said yesterday that since the plans are in the final stages, it is hoped construction bids will be asked soon.

The addition to the library building will extend southward from each of the side entrances for approximately 112 feet, and will encase the present book stack room completely at the back of the building.

In addition to supplementary book stacks, which will be occupied by the books that are now packed in the library corridors, the addition will be used for general reading rooms, special activities, the Southern Historical collection, the North Carolina collection, and staff work space.

"The new construction," Cooke said, "will greatly improve the conditions for study. The present library is terrifically overcrowded from the standpoint of books as well as students."

Work on the enlargement plan was begun approximately two years ago with the last state legislature appropriating $1,215,000.

100,000 Asked For Reserve Under Program

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—(UP)—The Army called today for 100,000 veterans to sign up under the expanded reserve program which defense sources estimate will cost as much as $1,000,000,000 per year.

Brig. Gen. Wendell Westover, Army executive for reserve affairs said, "The enlistment of at least 100,000 war-trained men is urgently needed for expansion of high-priority reserve units."

He said the Army will launch a special recruiting campaign for reserves in the near future, and will ask Congress for additional funds to support the stepped-up program ordered by President Truman.

Other defense sources estimated that an adequate reserve program for the Army and Air Force would cost the nation between $250,000,000 and $1,000,000,000 annually. The money would be used chiefly for armories, equipment and training pay for the reserves.

Mr. Truman last Saturday asked Defense Secretary James Forrestal to submit within 60 days a blueprint for improving the reserves, together with recommendations for any new legislation that may be needed.

Westover said the Army has a specific program for the reserve corps under which some of these units will figure in its "mobilization day" force. Though a few of the reserve units in the M-day force will be combat type, the majority will be service troops working on transport, construction and hospital assignments.

Faculty Group Attending Meet At Lexington

Professors and instructors from the staff of the University Political Science department have gone to the annual meeting of the Southern Political Science association being held in Lexington, Va., Thursday through Saturday.

the department, Dr. Paul W. Wager, Dr. C. B. Robertson, head of the department, Dr. James W. Fesler, Dr. E. J. Woodhouse, Dr. Keener Frazer, Donald F. Whitehead, Alan T. Grimes, Gordon Clevegone to the meeting which will land, and Allan Richards have take the form of a seminar on current governmental problems and discuss plans for better teaching of Political Science.

Dr. William P. Richardson of the School of Public Health attended the recent meeting of a committee surveying nursing and nursing education in this state.

Dr. Richardson, who is attached to the Field Training unit, served as secretary and prepared the agenda for the meeting.

Wadsworth Says New Dorms Ease Housing Problem

"The three new dormitories have greatly eased the housing problem for single men on campus, but for married men the score is still zero," J. E. Wadsworth, housing director, said yesterday. The three dorms, "A," "B," and "C" house 794 students, which is capacity.

Wadsworth observed that the present tendency is for more boys to stay in Nash, Miller, and quonset huts than to live in town. It's a question of economy. Fewer students live in town because food cost has increased.

There are 3.060 residents in men's dorms, and 688 in women's dorms. Last fall 70 students lived in Emerson, compared with 66 now; 25 students are registered in Nash, while last fall there were 76. Miller has 54 residents as compared with 90 last fall. Quonset hut occupants have been reduced from 20 to about 13 in each hut.

Wadsworth's report stated that 352 students live in victory village, 611 in fraternity houses, 71 in sorority houses and about 165 in trailer courts.

Make Reservations Now, Says Agency

Members of the Travel Agency on second floor Graham Memorial are urging students to make their Thanksgiving and Christmas holiday reservations now in order to be assurred of accommodations. In addition to making reservations, the Travel Agency has a store of information concerning schedules and prices.

Activities Compete With Quiz Show

The Carolina Playmakers, fraternity rushing, and dorm elections proved to be too much competition for the University Veterans association quiz show Wednesday night.

Only 25 or 30 people turned out for the quiz show. Cigarettes were passed to the expectant contestants as consolation prizes and they were told to return next week when a larger crowd would be present.

An additional $5 will be added to the $45 jack-pot featured Wednesday night, making a jackpot prize of $50 for next week's quiz show.

Holmes Attends Boston Banquet Honoring Ford

Dr. U. T. Holmes of the University romance languages department will attend a presentation dinner to be held in honor of Dr. J.D.M. Ford, Romance language scholar, at the Odd Volumes club in Boston Saturday.

Dr. Ford is to be presented an honorary volume of which Dr. Holmes and Father Denomy of Toronto, Canada, are co-authors. The volume contains 21 articles, among them a contribution by Dr. W. L. Wiley of the University.

Dr. Susan Grey Akers, Miss Mary Anders and Miss Elaine von Oeson are in Louisville, Ky., where they are attending a conference of the Southeastern Library association through Saturday. Dr. Akers is dean of the School of Library Science.

Lady Simon Says Secondary Education, Teachers Are Needed in Great Britain

Lady Simon of Wythenshawe, eminent English writer and lecturer on education, said here yesterday that "the two main problem to be dealt with in education in England after the recent war are an adequate supply of teachers and provision for secondary education for all the children of that country."

Speaking on "The Reconstruction of English Education After the War" in Peabody hall yesterday morning, Lady Simon said that during the war many teachers joined the forces and the supply of teachers was seriously depleted.

Decision to raise the school-leaving age to 15 and to reduce the size of all classes meant that a great many more teachers would be needed, she explained. "With a new scale of salaries negotiated, and the removal of the differences between salaries of elementary and of secondary teachers, a new emphasis was placed on the education of teachers," she said. "Now, every teacher is paid on the scale according to his qualifications regardless of the kind of school in which he teaches."

Increase of students in the training colleges for teachers and in university training departments has more than doubled and in addition emergency training colleges have been set up, she declared, and candidates for teacher training institutions are carefully selected.

Funeral Services Are Held in Sewanee For Vice-Chancellor Alexander Guerry

SEWANEE, Tenn., Oct. 21.—(UP)—Funeral services were held here today for Dr. Alexander Guerry, vice-chancellor of the University of the South who died in Knoxville Tuesday after a heart attack.

The funeral was held in the Episcopal All Saints chapel here, at 11:30 this morning. The body was to be taken to Chattanooga for burial this afternoon.

The well-known educator was stricken first in the Knoxville railroad station, while waiting for a train to return here after attending a Founders day dinner for Sewanee alumni Monday night. A second attack at a Knoxville hospital resulted in death. Dr. Guerry was 58.

The Right Rev. Frank A. Julian of Jacksonville, Fla., chancellor of the University and bishop of Florida, will officiate at the services here.

Pallbearers at the funeral will be five Sewanee undergraduates, one theological school student and two Sewanne military academy cadets.

At Chattanooga, where Dr. Guerry spent 20 years as headmaster of Baylor school and president of the University of Chattanooga, four students from each institution will act as pallbearers.

Dr. Guerry was a native of Lincolnton, N. C. He had been administrative head of Sewanee since 1938.

Benches Or Fur Coats

The University Administration is relaxing on its laurels and reading the sports pages, as usual. The only action taken in the past week is to send a note of protest to Associated Press. The student body will not sit idly by and watch the Administration foul-off, while the down-trodden scholars slave through their three-hour day. They want action!!!

What action? What about the notorious Arboretum situation? Those in authority should be aware that the young gentlemen of the institution are forced to offer their dates seats on the rather chilly ground, while engaged in resting, during an investigation of the botanical wonders of that area. They have only the highest regard for the young ladies here, and it distresses their innately chivalrous natures to observe their beloved in the throes of pneumonia.

The answer to this serious problem? It must be solved, for sniveling co-eds are a downright curse to romance, and after all, romance must flourish if the University hopes to have students in the years to come. Several solutions offer themselves.

First, the administration could dig deeply into the heavily-laden coffers and place stoves at strategic positions in the area. Secondly, each feminine student could be equipped with a warm and large fur coat. Thirdly, the Aboretum could be declared off-limits to those of the opposite sex. Fourthly, benches could be installed.

The first suggestion must be disregarded, for it would be Spring before the Administration could bring itself to face a suggestion regarding money in large sums. The second would produce a campus where all the young ladies wore fur coats and wits would be tempted to make suggestive remarks. The third suggestion would lead to open revolution and the lynching of everyone with the possible exception of Snavely, who would be reserved until the end of football season.

Now here is the smashing finale! Benches! With all of its varied departments, if the administration looks closely enough it will undoubtedly find that it has, tucked away somewhere, a Department of Bench Making, or a reasonable facsimile. If there is not time enough for an extensive hunt for it the big wheels who control the purse strings could decide to take a wild gamble and purchase them! Revolutionary, we know, but college newspapers are notoriously radical. In one bold stroke we denounce the tradition of damp coed derrieres and cautious, well-considered investment, which is exemplified by the 150 year consideration of whether fluorescent lights should be installed in the Quonset Huts, or whether the candles will suffice.

To arms!! And we aren't kidding!!! —B.L.

Voting Is A Privilege

Tomorrow is the last day for registration for the election to be held on November 2. Registrars report a good turn out of Chapel Hill voters, but the usual last day crowd is expected to rush to the two registering places tomorrow in order that they may cast their vote on November 2.

The Political Science department here insists that voting is a privilege and not a right, which makes it even more important that we as American citizens exercise our privilege in selecting the men or women we wish to serve us through the coming years.

It is important that students here take advantage of their privilege of voting by going down tomorrow morning and registering. University students are under a handicap because as students living in dormitories they cannot establish residence in Chapel Hill. However, there are many students who live in town or in Victory Village who are qualified to register and vote in Chapel Hill because they have lived in Chapel Hill for a year and in their particular precinct for four months.

These students are the ones who should go down and register tomorrow morning if they have not already done so, or if they have not registered somewhere.

Voting is a privilege. However, it is also a duty for all of us if we are interested in maintaining the best in our government. —B.B.

ON CAMPUS:

AWAY, AWAY down that middle arboretum path went four coeds one night this week singing full force—"Dixie" and "Take Me Back to Ole Virginny." They must have thought they could scare the spooks away — anyhoo, it sounded mighty good.

QUIT THAT! The three bulletin boards in front of Graham Memorial are supposed to be enough to take care of all local notices; so how's come the C. P. had to go stick a sign on one of the doors?

IT'S THE UNIFORM! All sorts of goggle eyes have been popping out since the NROTC boys started having their Yack pictures made. But this is what we want to know—just how did the coeds manage to get any studying done when the Navy was stationed here? Why, just take a look at what one of those uniforms does to Dortch Warriner!

TWO BANDS, two ballrooms—a double whammy throughout—So runs the rumor on this year's Charlotte-Carolina Christmas dance. More power to Lem Whitsett and Charlie Burns. We just hope they know how to sell those bids.

WELCOME HOME. We hear Mary Ann Tabor got quite a reception when she got home to Spencer this week. It's not just anybody who can come home and find streamers going all the way to her room in Spencer.

SIGHT OF THE WEEK. Pete Strader, of Sound and Fury renown, seems to have developed aspirations beyond his physical limitations. But that doesn't worry him too much, we hear. Any rush party is that much better with a little cotton and a skirt.

WHAT THE HECK? Just why the very dickens can't we have a Powder Bowl? They tell us girls that we can't play tag football because it's dangerous, and it's bad publicity for the University. Maybe it would interest such authorities to know that we've been climbing trees, beating up brothers, and making home runs on the neighborhood team since we were knee high to ducks. At least, we speak for yours truly and probably hundreds of other healthy American girls.

STRANGE things can happen when a Sunday School class of junior misses hold their meeting in the Y. Last Sunday when the little girls went to their room—one of the lounges in the Y—they found a very sleepy Carolina student in his "skivies" lying on the floor with a pillow and a blanket. It seems that he had given his room — not a dorm one — to an import. Well, haven't you ever slept in a Y?

WHAT'S THE SCORE on the man who was hit by a car down in front of the new dorms this week? We haven't heard what his condition is, but we surely hope he wasn't seriously hurt.

ALUMNI NEWS. Our predecessor, Foo Giduz, is doing a beautiful job of knocking Columbia University off its feet. Next thing we hear, Foo will probably have all of NYC wrapped around his little finger.

LIGHT ON THE SUBJECT. It is just now dawning upon us, or are those quaint lamp posts in front of Spencer new? All they need is gas in them to make us that much earlier American.

IN TOWN:

DOMESTICITY is one more attribute you can add to Porter Cowles' already long list. Besides keeping things clicking down at the University Press, she's found time to buy a new home out on the Airport Road and set up housekeeping there.

HELD OVER. In case any of you have a stuffed-full weekend, remember you can still see "I Remember Mamma" Sunday night.

"I Remember Mama"

New Play "Iss Good"

By A. E. Westover, III

With the opening of the Carolina Playmaker's 31st season John Van Druten's clever adaption of Kathryn Forbes' best-selling novel, MAMA'S BANK ACCOUNT, now known among theatrical circles as "I Remember Mama," could not have served as a better choice for a year of theatre-fare that looks quite promising for Carolina audiences. Mr. Van Druten has taken a holiday in adapting Miss Forbes' book to the stage for "I Remember Mama" is by no means the typical Van Druten menu that the playright usually serves. Sophistication a'la "The Voice of the Turtle" and "There's Always Juliet" have taken a back-seat, and in their stead a play of Norwegian family-life has been whipped up by one of the better known gastronomic geniuses of brilliant repartee.

Mr. Van Druten has flavored his theatrical cuisine with just enough salt and pepper, sugar and cream to not only present a tasty dish to the American theatre of today, but a very easily digestable one as well. The Carolina Playmakers under the expert direction of Lynn Gault have still furthered this master's recipe by topping off a two act bill of fare with one of the finest productions the University Drama Department has turned out during the past two seasons.

In dealing with the lives of the Hansen family, Gault has very cleverly taken "I Remember Mama" and baked it to a golden brown at just the right oven temperature. Never do the characters lapse into a state of sugar and water that could very easily take place in a play of this nature. Good solid meat remains upon the structural framework of Mr. Druten's characters. Spontaneity, life, energy are the ingredients of Chef Gault's "blue-plate special." Not only did he act as director for this production, but scenic designer as well. The vast number of excellent scenic changes along with the intricate lighting of James Byrd and the pleasing costuming of Irene Smart gave just the right sauce for Van Druten's appetizing dish.

In the title role of "Mama," Louise Lamont, has made a return to the Carolina Campus that to the theatre devotee is a most welcome and pleasant one to be sure. Miss Lamont has captured in her portrayal of "Marta Hansen" a sincere, sympathetic, earthy quality that makes one think maybe the world isn't as bad as one supposes. The smoothness and deftness of her characterization is a charm to behold. If only colleges and university groups had more of the skill and artsmanship Miss Lamont possesses, what a talented body of actors would be given to the theatre world today. Scoring acting honors along with Louise Lamont, a rose should be thrown to Miss Edna Dooley who rendered one of the most sensitive and appealing performances that it has been this reviewer's pleasure to witness on the Playmaker stage.

In enacting the role of "Katrin," the eldest daughter of the Hansen family, Miss Dooley proved the maxim that "the proof was in the pudding." Why has the Dramatic Arts Department not utilized to its full advantage such vibrant, fresh personality as Miss Dooley long before this? A standby of the well established Laboratory Theatre of the Carolina Playmakers Edna Dooley "took the bull by the horns" and gave a most realistic and human rendition of "the dramatic one, who first and foremost remembers mama."

Democratic Dicta

Mr. Elusive Wants Unity

By Hugh Wells

The person who does not go to the polls and vote on election day is contributing to bad government. That is an accepted fact in a democracy. But what about the candidate or party who encourages the people to stay away from the polls on election day? What is the contribution made by these people? They are contributing to not only bad government, but also to very selfish government. If they are to gain a government elected by the few instead of the many, then they are probably intending to serve the few rather than the many.

The Republican party and its nominee, Thomas Elusive Dewey, to quote Mr. Ickes, are doing what they can to discourage the people from going to the polls this November. Certainly they are not doing much to encourage a large vote, although they are paying lip service to the principle involved.

To begin with the beginning, no one can deny Mr. Dewey's frank attempt to convince the American people that there isn't much for them to get excited about in the forthcoming election. His tact has been to deal in pretty generalities, to mention, but only mention, the facts of life, and to promise everything to everyone if they'll only vote Dewey come November. He has not even seen fit to say very many mean things about his opposition for fear that he'll be forced to come out into the open about his attitude toward the policies of the Democratic party. He tells the lovable American voting public that they are by far the best and the wisest people on the face of the earth, that they have need of nothing but "unity" and "good government" and that if we just pull together (with Dewey, of course) all will be well and we can all go home and forget about politics for four or more years or perhaps for the rest of our natural lives-while Tom and his bunch of supermen pump the government full of "unity," Republican style.

Then, if we turn to Mr. Thomas Elusive's friends of the press and radio, we find very much of the same thing only served with a more humorous flavor to make it really appealing to the people. The tact taken here is that ole John Q. Citizen just doesn't have the time or inclination to think about all these blah blah boys who call themselves candidates or to think about what they're saying. It's just too much, all this campaigning, speech making, name calling and so forth. This of course, is just right down the Republican party alley. They thrive on light votes, they're happiest when the people don't give a damn, and if there's any way to lull the voting public to sleep then they don't want to miss it. They have plenty of help. The great majority of the American press is lined up against everyone but T. E. and especially against the President because he stands the best chance of whipping our elusive prince charming. This is nothing new to the American political scene - the same situation obtained in 1944 when the overwhelming majority of the press was in opposition to Mr. Roosevelt, who was elected just the same.

The Return Of Wilbur

Bill Buchan

People ain't gonna like it, but my close buddy Wilbur Amberson was back in town Tuesday and after we'd warmed up our friendship down in the Ram's Head, we got to talking about Carolina and politics and student life in general.

Wilbur was a capable student here last year, but due to circumstances beyond his control,—the failing of too many courses to re-enroll for this term if you want get personal—he is staying out a quarter. However, Wilbur was always an interested, if rather cynical, bystander to the world of campus politics and student government and I enjoy discussing recent events with him.

Amberson was most impressed with the news of the freshman assembly that seems to be progressing quite well. He was even more happy about the forthcoming freshman elections which look as if they might be legitimate for a change. Amberson was a ring leader in a pre-election session that some freshmen had in Gerrard Hall last fall and he saw in person the ability of certain groups to take the actually unimportant election out of the hands of the people it most concerns, namely the freshmen.

About politics, I couldn't tell Wilbur much, except that the three political parties seem to be making plenty of plans for the fall elections. They seem to be doing their best to keep their secrets a secret. Two of them have appointed "campaign chairmen" so it looks as though the election scene will be quite active and that the individual students will get a chance to learn first hand the issues that will be fought over. This, we agreed, was a good thing because more students will be interested in voting and consequently the election will be more representative.

Of the new organizations that I told my buddy about, he was especially pleased with the Town Men's Association. Wilbur was a town man himself for many months and he is an agreement with the fifty-five some men who have joined the new group that it is time to give the 2000 men living in town a little representation in campus activities. The meetings, I reported, are well attended and the members are taking an active part in the goings-on. Most of them are men who have never participated in student affairs before which is a good sign for better things to come.

On President Jess Dedmond,—who Wilbur opposed last spring, incidentally,— I was able to give a fine report. Jess is doing an excellent job and is taking an active part in leading the student government towards bigger and better achievements.

The scuttling of the Scuttlebutt was the one thing that marred the otherwise fine campus report that I gave Wilbur in detail. He demanded that we inspect the Circus room and was just as unimpressed with it as a great many other students are. It's a fine place, he agreed, but still it doesn't fill the need of the students living in the upper quad. Neither does it serve drinks to the coeds returning from Gym classes.

Amberson was very pleased with my "state of the campus" report and after listening to myself talk, I agreed that we seem to be in pretty fine shape this year as far as campus activites are concerned. Lots of people are working hard to keep us in that shape and if we continue at the present pace, this year should be an outstanding one for student government and everyone concerned.

Write Away

A Bunch of Bums

Editor:

This is to the summer soldier and sunshine patriots who have been saying that "they" didn't play so hot and the "we" should have won by a bigger score last Saturday.

What a bunch of Bums! Seven thousand part time cheerleaders who haller-holler-holler if Choo Choo runs 98 yards for a touchdown on the first play of the ball game, but wants to know what's the matter with "them" if he doesn't. How come it's "us" when we're winning and "them" if they ain't?

I shouldn't like to sound un-Democratic to the Wallace-for-Stalin crowd, but why not send the frosh out once or twice a week to learn the Carolina cheers? Why not have two less card stunts and let the cheerleaders use that time to arrange to keep the PA system quiet when Norm & co. are trying to do a little yelling? Why not put down the cards when the Big Blue comes back on the field after the half, even if "they" are trailing, O-O, and greet 'em with something besides "Now listen, gang, when I count to three. . ."

Looks to me like the boys and girls who aren't happy with the football here ought to transfer. To Texas, maybe. Or Georgia. Or Wake Forest. Or State.

Carolina's got a team that's supposed to win ball games—3 to 2, 2 to 0, 118 to 117—never mind! Just win ball games, which they have done. Carolina's got a team that ain't been beat, that can't be beat, that won't be beat! Now all we need is a student body of similar inclinations.

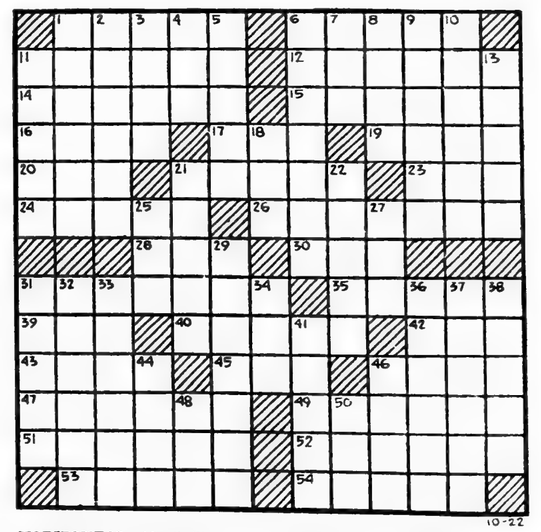
Name withheld by request.

Quoting Thomas Paine

To the Editor:

("The rights of man are the rights of all generations. . . , and cannot be monopolized by any."—Paine)

Any governmental order which forsakes the elasticity in individual freedom and self-assertiveness for the rigid and immutable principles of a "total" state has not my encouragement—nor do I think the support of Tom Paine. He could never have submitted himself to a system which demands that the rights of all men for all times be reduced to an inhuman, mechanical pattern.



Communism, in any form, is just such a system. It is one given over to the promulgation of social (state) entity, individual interest, even as indirectly concerned, is pushed into the background; until finally it ceases to exist as a factor influencing the social order. In such a state, social "interest" becomes personified as the natural entity; and the individual is relegated to the position of a mere automoton within that entity. In short, the individual ceases to have an "interest."

Am I too loose with my criticism? Think of a colony of ants. Here we have an example of what happens when regimentation surplants individual initiative. An adjustive becomes an adjusted society, adjusted in the sense of rigidity and immutability. The free hand is stilled, soon to be replaced by the straited cogwheel. The parts are sacrificed to the whole. Mankind stagnates and with the next great calamity is destroyed!

Our aim is to perpetuate life, human life: and society becomes but a means to that end. It is conceivable that at some far-distant time humanity will need to group itself into a single functioning entity. But neither now nor later will our advancement require a ready-made mechanical equalizer for its preservation. As far as any system can go, Democracy (the system of government to which our own is most akin) more readily lends itself to progress. It is sufficiently flexible to submit to change, to absorb calamity.

One further quotation from Tom Paine—"or what we can foresee, all Europe may form one great republic, and man be free from the whole."

Soccer Team And Frosh Gridders Engage Virginia Today

Local Booters Are Favorites To Win Second

By Frank Allston

Carolina's soccer team will attempt to climb above the .500 mark this afternoon when they meet the University of Virginia booters on Fetzer field at 3 p. m.

The Tar Heel eleven, in three previous contests, has whipped Loyola, lost to Navy and tied High Point. Coach Marv Allen is in hopes of his team capturing their second win.

Last year the Blue and White took a pair of shutouts from the Cavaliers, winning 1-0 and 2-0. Carolina will be favored to win today on the basis of their record to date and their two victories over the Cavaliers last year.

Same Basic Lineup

Coach Allen will start basically the same lineup which worked in the Loyola and High Point games. Lyons and Blankenship, however, will replace Vreeland and Hagaman at the halfback slots.

Joe Bach, Tommy Jordan, Dave Ferebee, Dave Boak and either Pete Hexner or Langley will start in the forward line for the Tar Heels. Hexner, Boak and Bach were the scorers against Loyola while Hexner, Boak and Jordan accounted for the scoring in the High Point contest.

The halfback slots will be handled by co-captain Jess Greenbaum, Gus Johnston and Lyons. Co-captain Frank Nelson will work with Blankenship at the two fullback posts. Blankenship played some in the Loyola game, but was moved up to the first team for his work in the game at High Point.

Goalie duties will once again be handled by Al Williams.

Light Scrimmages

Yesterday afternoon the Blue and White booters put in a session of light scrimmaging. The goalies and halfbacks came in for some specialized instruction and practice. The team appeared sharp and in high hopes of winning this game with the independent Virginia eleven.

This contest will be the last home stand for the charges of coach Allen for almost two weeks. Between today and the Duke game on Nov. 4, the Tar Heels will play a two-game road trip, encountering Washington and Lee and Roanoke.

Tigers Down SC By 13-7 Margin

COLUMBIA, S. C., Oct. 21.—(UP)—The Clemson Tigers, chopped up, battered down and blanked for three periods by South Carolina, ripped back in the closing minutes today to cram a bitter 13-7 beating down the craw of the Gamecocks before about 20,000 spectators.

The Gamecocks forgot the odds that made them underdogs and came into Clemson with a first period touchdown pass from Bo Hagan to end Red Wilson that for a long time looked like the win-

FROSH TICKETS

Students and faculty attending tomorrow's freshman football game with Virginia may enter on their passbooks through gate 6 on the south side.

General admission tickets will be sold for one dollar at gates 2 and 6 for all others.

Mural Frat Division Leagues Wind up Third Week of Play

The torrid Fraternity Tag Football league drew to the close of its third action packed week yesterday and for the first time since play commenced, several of the leagues had undisputed leaders.

In the feature contest of the afternoon, the two remaining unbeaten squads of League 1 met on Fetzer field to do battle and when the smoke cleared, the Zeta 2 crew emerged with a stunning 16-0 shutout of previously undefeated Chi Phi 1. For the powerful Zets, led by Heath Alexander, it was their 4th win and left them at the top of the pile. Immediately below, the Chi Phi boys are now tied with Chi Psi for second place, both with identical records of three up and one down.

In a League 2 clash, Pi Kappa Phi capitalized on Walt Moore's effective passing to rout Delta Sigma, 26-0 and resume first place alone as their rivals for the leadership, Phi Gam 1 succumbed to the surprising onslaught of Sigma Nu 1, 18-7. It was the first loss for Phi Gam 1 and set them back to the runnerup slot.

Kappa Sig Wins

Two League 3 squads are fighting it out for the lead. The potent Kappa Sig 2 rolled to their fourth victory by blanking Pi KA 2, 22-0 and Beta 1 maintained their pace to nip ZBT on scores by Jim Curtis and Nero Day, 12-0. Both nines are deadlocked for first with unblemished slates.

In other Frat tussles, Lambda Chi 2 trounced SAE 2 on second half touchdowns by Ken Lineback and Bill Aldridge, 13-0 and DKE 2 triumphed over Lambda Chi, 22-0. A late six pointer by Dick Daniels produced a hard earned 7-2 decision for ATO 1 over Pi Lambda Phi, and Tracy Lounsbury paced Sig Eps to an easy victory over KA 2, 18-0. KA 1 and TEP advanced also when their scheduled foes failed to appear.

Dormitory contests were limited yesterday but Stanley Steamers exhibited power in swamping Wes Rocks, 26-0 and Emerson nipped Old East in an overtime thriller, 7-6. Dorm A reaped the benefit of a forfeit from the AROTC 1 crew.

Now that the Tag football league is well underway in both results and enthusiasm, the hard working gents of the Intramural Department are already laboring on new forms of diversion for the ambitious Carolina students.

Volleyball Tourney

They are now accepting all entries for the annual volleyball and table tennis tournaments and will continue to do so until the deadline of Friday, October 29. All campus organizations may enter no more than three teams from their group and as was the custom last year, play will be conducted in Fraternity and Dormitory leagues in single elimination style.

SWIMMERS REPORT

Any students interested in managing the varsity or freshman swimming teams are requested to report to Jack Sharp at the pool from 4 to 6 any afternoon.

Captain McKenzie

Julian McKenzie, veteran Carolina tract performer, has been elected captain of the current Tar Heel cross country team.

Coach Dale Ranson, in an effort to whip his squad out of a two-game losing streak, held time trials for his cross country aspirants yesterday. And the results were pleasing to the Carolina mentor. McKenzie, Frank Hooper, Sam Magill, and Jim Hunt each turned in a 22:50 for the four-mile course.

Other times were Warren Barringer, 23:52; John Ross, 24:30; Otis Hunnicutt, 24:50; Dick Gregory, 25:30; Bob Rhyne, 29:00.

Freshmen Victors In Soccer Match With Duke By 1-0

Carolina's freshman soccer squad eked out a thrilling 1-0 victory over the junior squad from Duke on Fetzer filed yesterday. After being held scoreless for the first half, the Tar Babies collected their wits and put on an offensive drive that ended in the Blue Imps' goal.

Inside left Tom Williams, from Rocky Mount, was credited with the lone Tar Baby score which came midway in the third period. After taking the ball down the field from near his own goal, Montie Montgomery passed the ball to Bud Sawyer 20 yards out from the Blue Imps goal. Sawyer in turn, passed to Williams who booted it into the nets from 15 yards out directly in front of the goal.

There were several other brilliant spots in the Tar Babies' playing besides the scoring play. Inside right Eddie Foy and right fullback Bill Rhoades were credited by Coach Marvin Allen with playing an exceptional game.

But the main thing the Tar Babies lacked in this, their first game of the season, was the final scoring punch. Four times in the first half they advanced the ball to the mouth of the opponent's goal, but each time the kick for the point was either wide or deflected by Duke's Goalie Otis Zavertnik.

Carolina's starting lineup:

Tar Babies Seek Second Straight In Kenan Contest

By Dowd Wolfe

The Carolina freshman football squad underwent a major operation this week on the practice field in preparation for the Virginia game this afternoon at 3 o'clock in Kenan stadium.

The line which received much praise from Coaches Crowell Little and Walt Pupa, is made up guard, from Hazelton, Penn., and of such players as Joe Dudeck, Julian King, All-State tackle from Children's Home in Winston-Salem. These boys, along with Bill Kuhn, a six-three, 205-pound tackle, and 240-pound Julian McGee, will be depended on to check Virginia's T-formation passing attack. Center will be Andy Sheveda.

The Tar Babies backfield has such pigskin carriers as Bob Gantt, of Albemarle. Although Bob will see no action in the Virginia game because of a sprained ankle, he is recognized as one of the leading ball handlers.

The Tar Babies with the loss of C. C. White and Gantt will be hurt quite a bit. These boys will have to watch the game from the sidelines.

When asked his views on today's game, Coach Little said, "I was pleased with the offense in the last game, and if it shows up as well in this one I will be happy." Coach Little also added that his team was in better condition than it was for the South Carolina tilt.

Blues Down Whites In Intrasquad Meet

Coach Dale Ranson combined his varsity and freshman squads yesterday on Fetzer field and then separated them into Blue and White teams for the first of a series of intrasquad meets to determine the abilities of next year's track outfit.

The Blue squad captured the win, scoring 138 1-2 points to 112 1-2 for the Whites. Points were awarded for the first six places, thus accounting for such high scores.

Taylor, fleet footed hurdler who won several dual meets last year, completed the 70-yard high hurdle course in 8.9 seconds. And then, as in the meets of last year, he went on to cop the low hurdle event in 13.6.

One of the outstanding freshmen to compete in the intrasquad meet was Frank Scott, who won the 220 in 23 seconds. Another freshman who showed promise in yesterday's meet was Bill Hamrick, a middle distance runner who completed the 3-4 mile in 3:40 for first place.

FROSH CAGE MANAGERS

If anyone is interested in being a freshman manager on the basketball team, report to Jim Hamilton at the Tin Can this afternoon at 4 o'clock.

One-Two Football Punch

ONE OF THE PRINCIPAL REASONS for Carolina's success on the football field is the famed one-two backfield punch of Charlie Justice, left, and Hosea Rodgers. The running and passing of this twosome have led the Tar Heels to four straight victories this fall without defeat.

Snavely Installs New Plays

Pass defense, new plays, and injury worries occupied most of King Carl Snavely's time yesterday afternoon as his Tar Heels began final drills for Saturday's battle with the LSU Tigers.

After hitting the lowest ebb of the season last week, the Tar Heels have been prepping all week with renewed vigor and should be able to give their Louisiana opponents plenty of trouble tomorrow afternoon. Snavely has installed a new set of single-wing plays this week that have gone over well with a minimum of practice.

The new tactics feature Hosea Rodgers on full spinners on each play with varieties of hand-offs and line plunges originating from the spinners. Billy Hayes was alternating with Rodgers at the offensive fullback post in yesterday's drills.

Wardle Joins Injured

Guard Bill Wardle joined the ranks of injured Tar Heels yesterday when he went to the sidelines with a recurrence of an old shoulder injury. He joins center Al Bernot, blockingback Don Hartig, and wingbacks Fred Sherman and Bill Flamisch in the riddled legion. Blockingback Bobby Weant, who has been suffering with a minor leg injury for the past few weeks, may be replaced at the starting quarterback slot by Paul Rizzo. Another shift will see Bill Kennedy, heretofore a fullback, alternating with Johnny Clements at the offensive wingback post.

While the Carolina offensive team went through lengthy drills featuring their new plays, the defensive eleven worked against LSU's T-formation offense. The Bengals will be the fourth team to run the "T" against Carolina this season. State, the only team that hasn't run a strict "T" against the Snavelymen this season, shifted into the deceptive formation for a number of plays last week.

LSU Defense Weak

The Bayou Bengals have been an off-and-on team all year, but the season as a whole has shown the Tigers to be weak on defense and fairly strong on offense. Three big backs power the Louisiana offense which relies mostly on ground tactics. Zollie "Tugboat" Toth, Bill "Steamboat" Schroll, and Harrell "Ripper" Collins are the LSU big guns.

Frosh Swimmers Lack Experience Says Bob Ousley

The Carolina freshmen swimming team is continuing its daily workouts in Bowman-Gray pool. The Tar Babies, according to Coach Bob Ousley, are far from being ready for competition.

This year's freshman team is the first at this school since 1943, and Coach Ousley has had a very limited number of candidates to report. The only three boys with any previous experience are Kirby Ambler, a sprinter, and David Howard and Bob Raskin, both breastoke candidates.

The remainder of the squad is green, with little or no experience. However, some of the boys getting their initial training for competition have shown promise. These are Cecil Milton, Charles Small, and Bill Fulwider.

This indicates that there is a definite need for new men, and Coach Ousley urges that all freshmen interested in coming out

Chapel Hill Plays

Chapel Hill high school's unbeaten football team will meet Siler City this afternoon at 3 o'clock on Emerson field.

The local Wildcats will be in search of their fifth straight win of the season. They now hold wins over Methodist Orphanage of Raleigh, Oxford, Mebane and the Durham county team.

Admission of 50 cents will be charged to high school and college students while general admission will be 75 cents.

Two things every college man should know!

1. This is a philosopher. Spends time trying to prove he doesn't exist. He might as well not, without a "Manhattan" tie.

2. This is a "Manhattan" tie. Rich foulard pattern with solid-color knot and border. Benefits from our philosophy of taking extra pains and care with everything we make.

Entrance Deadline for Mural Debates Moved to Next Friday, Says Buchanan

Entrance deadline for participants in the Debate council-sponsored intramural debate tournament has been moved up to Friday, Oct. 29, Marcellus Buchanan, chairman of the intramural committee of the council, announced yesterday.

All dormitories, sororities, fraternities, and campus organizations are eligible to compete in the tournament. All entries should be turned in to Buchanan at the Chi Phi house. Teams should be composed of four persons, two affirmative and two negative, but Buchanan explained that two-man teams are possible.

The tournament will be run off on Nov. 16-18. Scoring will be done on a point basis and no one is eliminated. A faculty board will judge the forensic battle.

The question for debate will be, "Resolved: That the federal government should adopt a policy of equalizing education in tax-supported schools by means of annual grants."

Winners will be awarded individual medals, a Debate council permanent cup, and a Di-Phi rotating trophy, which was won last year by Whitehead dorm.

Last fall 36 teams debated on the universal military training question.

South vs. North

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 21—(UP)—The "South" apparently has won a minor skirmish from the "North" in presidential politics, but the victory is not complete.

Dyed-in-the-wool Southerners had complained that the Nashville to Knoxville campaign route Saturday of Gov. Strom Thurmond, States Rights presidential candidate, would carry him over a "Yankee route," U. S. Highway 70 "north" instead of 70 "south." Today final announcement was made he will travel "south" most of the way but still will have to go "north part way in order to get to Knoxville."

States Rights party leaders denied any "North-South" battle, though. They said merely that Murfreesboro, on 70 "south," is more populous than Lebanon, on 70 "north."

Goldsboro Man Resigns Post With Dixiecrats

KINSTON, Oct. 21.—(UP)—W. R. Taylor of Goldsboro said today he had resigned as an elector of the States' Rights Democratic party because the States' Righters would not support the entire state and congressional Democratic ticket.

Taylor refused to say whether he would support the Democratic or States' Rights nominees for presidential vice-president.

North Carolina States' Righters, after a pair of conflicting statements, said recently they were opposing some Democrats who had "impugned" the motives of the States' Right group, but supporting Democratic candidates who "confined their activities to their own campaigns."

States' Rights Chairman Philip S. Finn of Hendersonville said he would issue a statement tomorrow summing up his party's stand in North Carolina.

PLANE TO KNOXVILLE

The Travel Agency on second floor Graham Memorial is now prepared to give students detailed information, flight time and prices for a round-trip by air to the Carolina-Tennessee football game Saturday, Oct. 30.

Students are under no obligations to come in the office and get information about this special football plane.

OFFICIALS TO MEET

The Intramural department has announced that there will be a meeting of all tag football officials this afternoon at 3 o'clock in room 302, Woollen gym.

Princess Elizabeth Will Have Boy, She Says; Palace Readied For Event

LONDON, Oct. 21.—(UP)—Princess Elizabeth insisted on having her first baby born in Buckingham palace because she is convinced it will be a boy who someday will be the king, palace sources disclosed today.

She believes the palace he would occupy as ruler is the only suitable birthplace for the future monarch, the sources said.

The princess wants her child to look like Prince Philip, her handsome husband, and has told her intimates she feels sure the baby, expected next month, will be a boy.

If Elizabeth's wish comes true, the royal heir probably will be given the title Prince of Wales, which has been vacant since King Edward VII abdicated to become the Duke of Windsor. The title usually is given to the heir to the throne. It has been withheld from Elizabeth because of the possibility that King George VI still might father a son who would outrank Elizabeth in royal precedence.

The princess is in the best of health. Her doctors are in almost constant attendance. All Britain is waiting for the royal birth.

Yesterday Elizabeth attended the wedding of her secretary, John Colville, and Lady Margaret Egerton, her lady in waiting. It was understood she attended the ceremony despite the objections of her father and mother.

The baby will be born in the hospital room of the palace. Minor operations on members of the royal family have been performed in the room on several occasions.

The hospital room is white-walled and sparsely furnished. It is on the second floor of the palace across the hall from the suit which has been arranged for Elizabeth and her husband.

Medical attendants who will be needed at the delivery table will be stationed in a waiting room adjoining the actual delivery room. Dr. William Gilliatt, Elizabeth's private gynecologist, and Sir John Weir, King George's personal physician, will attend the birth along with at least one other Harley street specialist, and, probably, Mrs. Helen Rowe, a Scottish midwife, and a trained nurse.

Home secretary James Chuter Ede also may stand by in the waiting room to "witness" to royal birth as is required by custom. In practice, the home secretary no longer actually attends the royal birth, but is one of the first persons to see the child afterwards.

report within the next week. It will be necessary for them to report now, because the team has a meet with the jayvees before Thanksgiving. And the coach believes it will take over a month for a candidate to condition himself.

Although the schedule has not been released as yet, the freshmen will have two meets before Christmas with State and a meet early in January with VMI.

Matter of Time

RALEIGH, Oct. 21—(UP)—The Department of Public Instruction said today that L. T. Simmon's six-year-old son can go to school this year. After all, it wasn't his fault that he was born on war time instead of standard time.

North Carolina law holds that a child must be six years old to be admitted to school. Dr. Clyde A. Erwin, state superintendent of public instruction, looked at the youngster's birth certificate which said he was born at 12:05 on the morning of Oct. 2, 1942—five minutes after the deadline.

But Simmons said that Simmons, Jr., was born on war time. Unless there had been a war on, the clock would have shown 11:05 at night, Oct. 1.

Erwin, impressed, agreed.

Survey Service Is Inaugurated By University

A comprehensive survey service for administrative units of the public school system of the state, designed to assist local school administrators and teachers in an examination of various phases of public school operation, has been launched by the University School of Education, Dean Guy B. Phillips announced yesterday.

Described as a cooperative endeavor and organized on a professional basis, the project, to be known as the Bureau of Educational Research and Service of the School of Education, is "a channel through which special professional service is rendered," Dean Phillips said. "Requests received from superintendents throughout the state will be handled through the bureau officials."

A committee of University staff members is in the process of organizing the survey service. Selected personnel in addition to local staff members can be made available upon request, Dean Phillips explained. Representatives of various institutions and of the public school system throughout the state have already agreed to work on survey committees, he said.

Re-Apportionment Settled In Elections Board Meeting

By Herb Nachman

Re-apportionment of student legislators for the coming December elections were announced last night by Al Winn, chairman of the Elections board, after a long and hard session of the group yesterday afternoon.

Winn said that there were too many long-term legislators held over from last spring and that the slate from each district will not be balanced. He also announced that the board had set November 30 for the primary elections and December 7 for the runoffs.

Members of the board explained that it was necessary to set December 7 as runoff day since the last day of classes will be December 10.

Of the 13 voting districts, only two, dorm women's district number I and the town women's district, will not have any vacancies in the Student Legislature to be filled. There will be a total of 27 legislature seats on the ballot. Twenty of the 27 are for 12-month terms and the rest for six-month terms.

The re-apportionments as announced by Winn are as follows:

Dorm men's districts: Dist I—803 voters, a total of five legislators. One 12-month term vacancy. Dist. II—950 voters, six legislators, two 12-month terms vacant. Dist. III—917 voters, six legislators, three 12-month terms and two six-month terms open. Dist. IV—498 voters, three legislators. one 12-month term and one six-month term open. Dist. V — 268 voters, two legislators. one 12-month term and one six-month term open.

Town men's districts: Dist. I—477 voters, three legislators, one 12-month term and two six-month terms open. Dist. II—860 voters. six legislators, two 12-month terms open. Dist. III—871 voters, six legislators, three 12-month terms open. Dist. IV—964 voters, six legislators, three 12-month terms and one six-month term open. Dist. V—133 voters, one legislator, one 12-month term open.

Dorm women's districts: Dist. I—385 voters, two legislators. No vacancies. Dist. II — 255 voters. two legislators. two 12-month terms open.

Town women's district — 275 voters, two legislators, no vacancies.

Red Headquarters Is Local 'Iron Curtain'

By Jack V. Fox

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—(UP)—Walk right into national Communist headquarters. Look around the offices. Talk to the secretaries. Take a peep in the council room where party leaders meet.

Just try it.

I did. I have been trying it for the past three days. There's an "Iron Curtain" right here in New York. It's a steel door with a peephole and it guards the reception room at Communist headquarters.

A slow-moving elevator takes you to the top floor and opens into a small hall. In the hall are three doors, all locked and one with the peephole the size of a small grapefruit. It has a metal shutter which slides over the hole when complete privacy is desired.

I got in the reception room the first day simply because a mild looking man at the inside desk pressed a buzzer to let in a man he recognized. I walked in with him.

A request to look over the place obviously startled the receptionist. He referred me to Joseph North, who handles publicity for the Communist party and also has an office on the floor below, where the newspaper, The Daily Worker, is located.

North said he thought I had a good idea. But he said I should talk to some of the party officials who, unfortunately, were either in conference or out of town. I replied that, while I would like to talk to them, my real idea was just to describe what the place looked like. North said he would try to arrange it for Thursday.

On Thursday, North said that unfortunately all the officials were tied up again. So far as I

Coach, Team Get Support At Wisconsin

MADISON, Wis., Oct. 22. —(UP)—A petition calling for a referendum of student opinion on football coach Harry Stuhldreher still circulated today, but a large portion of the University of Wisconsin student body was solidly behind the coaching staff and the team.

About 2,000 students, led by the university band, paraded to the practice field yesterday to demonstrate its support of Stuhldreher and his squad.

Stuhldreher told the crowd, "I thank you a thousand times," and team captain Clarence Self said "we're going to beat Ohio State Saturday."

The team was scheduled to leave early today by plane for Columbus, O., and tomorrow's game with the Buckeyes. The Badgers were the underdogs.

Snavelymen Seeking Fifth Win Of Season

By Dick Jenrette

Carolina's unbeaten Tar Heels make their bid for victory number five of the grid year today when Louisiana State's Tigers invade Kenan stadium for one of the nation's top intersectional clashes. Kickoff time will be at 2 o'clock before an expected crowd of 43.000.

Coach Carl Snavely's locals have been installed as heavy favorites to subdue their rivals from the Bayou State, and most observers pick the Tar Heels to win by four touchdowns. Carolina will be out to take its 12th consecutive win over a two-year span.

In its last start, LSU dropped a 22-0 decision to Georgia, a team the Tar Heels defeated, 21-14. Other Tiger scores show victories over Rice, 26-13, and Texas A & M, 14-12, and a 33-0 defeat at the hands of the University of Texas Longhorns. Carolina beat Texas, 34-7, in the only other game which might serve as a basis for comparing Carolina and LSU.

Injury Trouble

Comparative scores, however, possibly will prove misleading this week, for no less than seven Carolina players are on the injured list.

Veteran Tackle Ted Hazelwood is the latest addition to this group. Ted received a gun shot in the leg this week while target practicing. The accident occurred when Coach Snavely gave the squad a day off from drills. Bill Wardle, a standout guard, also won't be around to bolter the line. He has a shoulder injury.

Al Bernot is the only other Tar Heel lineman that will miss the game. He has been out all season.

The backfield has been hardest hit by injuries. Don Hartig, Fred Sherman, Bill Flamisch, and Bobby Weant all will miss today's action. Two of these—Flamisch and Sherman—are wingbacks, creating a weakness at this position. In an effort to fill the gap, Snavely has shifted Fullback Bob Kennedy to this post. He will back up starter Johnny Clements.

New Plays

Practice sessions this week in the Tar Heel camp have been rough, generally. Although the team scored a 14-0 victory over N. C. State in its last game, neither the blocking, passing, or kicking were very impressive.

During the week, Coach Snavely has instituted some new plays, but it seems unlikely that they will be used today.

The Louisiana State team arrived yesterday afternoon after a plane trip to North Carolina. They are quartered at the Washington Duke in Durham.

Gaynell Tinsley, an All-American for LSU in 1936 and 1937, is the head football coach of the Tigers. He succeeds the veteran Bernie Moore, who left the Louisiana coaching job last season to become commissioner of the Southeastern conference.

LSU is minus its ace passer of last season, Y. A. Tittle. His place has been taken by Charlie Pevey, a two-year veteran. Pevey will handle the vital quarterback position in the Tiger's T-formation.

Other bag men in the Tiger backfield are Zollie Toth, Rip Collins, and Bill Schroll. Collins and Schroll are both seniors.

The last time a Louisiana State team played in North Carolina was back in 1929, when Duke checked the Bengals, 32-6.

Sper Introduces Football Players At Capacity Rally

By Jim Dickinson

A near-capacity crowd of cheering students descended upon Memorial hall last night in a deafening pep rally which indicates that spirits are reaching fever pitch for the pending clash with the clawing Tiger of LSU this afternoon.

On hand to lead a becoming array of yells and cheers were Head Cheerleader Norm Sper and his blue-and-white clad assistants. The University band gave out with "Thunder and Blazes," followed up by "Dixie" and a number of the Carolina fight songs.

The surprise move of the evening saw Norm Sper call 15 of the defensive - offensive stalwarts who control Tar Heel gridiron destinies to the stage that they might be introduced to the cheering mob.

Sid Varney, the Toy Bulldog who plays guard on offense, demonstrated his showmanship quality by taking over the mike and giving a little individual history on each of his teammates. His descriptions included home towns and jersey numbers of the respective players. He received a good hand from the crowd after having gone through without a mistake.

After co-captain Hosea Rodgers spoke a few words of praise for the great spirit and support being shown the footballers by the student body, co-captain Dan Stiegman took the mike and quoted teammate Varney as having said "we'll tie some knots in that Tiger's tail."

Another highlight of the evening involved short speeches by the president and vice-president of the LSU student body, who graciously came forth upon being called from the audience.

Chest Campaign Will End Today; No Reports Yet

Mrs. Anna Cate, manager of the Community Chest drive headquarters at Strowd Motor Company, said yesterday that no figures on the drive would be released until early next week.

She said the house-to-house drive officially ended yesterday, and today visits will only be made to homes that were missed earlier in the week.

T. A. Rosemond, who is chairman of the canvass for the business district has made no report yet on the progress of his workers.

The goal of the chest this year is $28,000 with eight needy organizations receiving benefits from the donations.

Participating organizations are the Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, White recreation center, Negro recreation center, Negro day nursery, League for Crippled Children, Children Library association and the Humane society.

GI Proposals Could Cost Six Billion

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22—(UP)—The recent American Legion convention's old-age pension proposals eventually could cost the veteran's administration more than $6,000,000,000 a year, estimates showed tonight.

The proposed monthly checks of $60 to all 55-year-old veterans of World War I and II, payment of $75 to those over 65, would add more than $1,000,000 to VA's annual budget at once, a survey showed.

The agency now is spending about $6,500,000,000 a year.

Only rough estimates were available. By 1980 VA statisticians look for 7,682,000 World War II veterans in the age group 55 through 64. In the same year 1,362,000 will have passed age 65.

Unless some restrictions on outside income are included in the pension plans, all these men would be expected to collect their monthly checks. The Legion asked for pensions without income restrictions.

Currently, 1,543,000 veterans of the first world war would be eligible for $60 payments under the Legion proposal. Another 57,000 would get monthly checks of $75.

The World War I eligibles would rise for several years, then start dropping. By 1995 only 3,000 are expected to be alive.

Only 25,000 World War II veterans are in the $60 brackets now, and 4,500 would be eligible for the $75 payments. The total of both groups would reach its peak about 1980. By the year 2,000 an estimated 3,769,000 would still be alive—all, of course, over age 55.

Kind Sergeants, Hot Meals To Be Features of New Army

YORK, Pa., Oct. 22.—(UP)—Veterans won't be able to recognize the new Army.

Gen. Jacob L. Devers, chief of the Army field forces, said tonight that draftees practically will swim in kind sergeants, hot meals, pay advances and sightseeing tours of their posts.

What's more, Devers told the Pennsylvania state convention of American war mothers, billiard-ball haircuts are out. He said the Army will cut each man's hair just the way he wants it.

First of all, Devers said, the draftee will be sent to a post as near home as possible. He will be met at the train "no matter how or when he arrives."

The inductee sits down promptly to a hot meal. Then he gets an advance on his pay and will be issued toilet articles and a raincoat.

"The processing which follows is spread over a week," Devers said. "The draftee's uniform will be individually fitted. He will take a sight-seeing tour of the post."

The boy who heard about tough sergeants will be in for a surprise, Devers said. The men in charge of the draftees will not swear.

"They will set him an example in their personal conduct, manners, morals, speech and military courtesy," Devers added.

And just to make sure that mothers know how their sons are getting along, Devers said the company commander will write to parents, telling them how the boys are doing.

Sessions Says Fiction Staff Is Reading 57 Manuscripts

Editor Bill Sessions of the new Carolina Quarterly disclosed yesterday that the fiction staff of the magazine has received 57 manuscripts from students for possible use in the first issue which is scheduled to appear during the last week in November.

"We are greatly encouraged by the number of scripts turned in for consideration," Sessions said, "but I would like to point out to campus writers that the Oct. 20 deadline was for the first issue of the Quarterly, and that we are continuing to take material for the remaining issues."

According to Sessions, "The larger the number of manuscripts we have to choose from, the better the stories we publish will be."

The stories are being classified by title, and the editors will read and consider the material without knowing the writer's name. The scripts are being judged first by the impact on the reader, and then by a standard list of 30 questions as a double-check.

The fiction board, which will make the selection of material to be used, is composed of Virgie Matson, fiction editor, Sam Hirsch, Bill Koehnline, Allan Smith, Louis Stevens, Anne Wells, John West, Ralph Hyde, Priscilla Moore, and Roy Moose.

Annual Meeting Of Alumni Club Scheduled Today

The annual fall meeting of the officers and directors of the University alumni association will get underway this morning at 10:30 at the Carolina inn, J. M. Saunders, executive secretary, announced yesterday.

Reports for the year ending Sept. 20 will be given and plans for the new year will be outlined. Judge Henry L. Stevens, Jr., Warsaw, president of the association, will preside today.

Other officers include State Senator William L. Medford, first vice president; Robert G. S. Davis, second vice president, and George Watts Hill, treasurer.

The general meeting will be followed by luncheon at the Inn. All 21 members of the board are expected to be present.

Charlotte News Supports Dewey

CHARLOTTE, Oct. 22.—(UP)—The Charlotte News for the first time in its 60-year history bolted the Democratic party yesterday to support Republican Thomas E. Dewey for president.

In an editorial, the News said: "In a very critical period of our history, when this nation needs unity and cohesiveness, Dewey gives promise of being a strong leader in handling the Russian problem. In comparison with his opponent—and this is surely a contest of man against man — Tom Dewey comes forward as a leader of stronger convictions, greater vision and more enlightenment."

The News said that the sooner the deadlock between President Truman and Congress can be broken, the sooner the problems of the home front can be solved.

Late News Bulletins

Truman Orders

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—(UP)—President Truman has ordered Democrats to make no reference during the campaign to Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's lack of military service, Mrs. India Edwards, head of the Democratic National committee's women's division, said today.

Wallace Strikes

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—(UP)—Henry A. Wallace said tonight that the "get tough with Russia" program has failed and that the government now has completed plans for a war that no one can win.

'Big Jim' Again

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 22.—(UP)—Gov. and Mrs. James E. Folsom are expecting a baby, she announced today.

"My physician informs me it will be late next spring," the tiny brunette wife of the towering "Big Jim."

Ku Klux Feud

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 22.—(UP)—Fiery editor Ralph McGill of the Atlanta Constitution and Gov. M. E. Thompson were locked in a bitter, no-holds-barred feud today over Thompson's allegations that the editor had spoken favorably of the Ku Klux Klan.

BRIGHT-EYED BETTY SMITH demonstrates how to handle color cards for this afternoon's game with LSU. The stunt in question is the American flag which will be animated to wave through a flipping action with two separate cards. In picture No. 1, Betty selects her two cards as denoted by her seat instruction card. She places them back to back. On the signal from Cheerleader Sper, Betty goes down (No.2) with her first color turned downward. At the second signal she comes up again (No. 3) with her first card at eye level. On the flip command, Betty turns her cards (No. 4) and assumes the final position (No. 5) with cards again at eye level. The flipping back and forth on commands will wave the flag. Betty is a Tri Delt pledge, but that's a Wake Forest fraternity pin she's wearing.

Adkins To Speak On Public Service

"Testing Problems in the Public Service" will be the topic of an address to be given by Miss Dorothy C. Adkins, professor of psychology in the University, at a meeting of the local chapter of the American Society for Public Administration, Monday evening at 8 o'clock in room 208 Caldwell.

Formerly chief of the test development unit of the U. S. Civil Service Commission. Miss Adkins has been a frequent contributor to professional journals.

A short business meeting will be held for the election of officers after her talk.

Grail Sponsoring Informal Dance

Tonight from 8:30 to 12 o'clock the Grail is sponsoring an informal dance at Woollen gymnasium. The football teams of both L.S.U. and the University are guests of the Grail. Tickets will be sold at the door at $1 for couples or stags.

A Greater Virtue

Dr. Frank P. Graham received a letter yesterday from the president of Louisiana State University sending his regrets that he would be unable to attend the Carolina-LSU game today.

The letter said, "Tell your team that kindness and mercy are great virtues, we are expecting both."

But Justice is a greater virtue.

Informal Rushing Will Still Go On

Ferne Hughes, president of Pan Hellenic council, announced yesterday afternoon after yesterday that signing-up for informal rushing had been discontinued, but that informal rushing would continue throughout the year.

Political Mixup

The actions of the University party Thursday night in sponsoring its freshman rally at the same time as the student legislature would have passed unnoticed if all UP legislators had not been required to attend both meetings at the same time.

The result of their actions was a delay in starting the legislature and finally in a temporary recess while enough UP men could be brought from Gerrard hall to the Di hall to establish a quorum.

Student body vice president Jim Godwin reprimanded the party accusing them of showing an "uncooperative" attitude in the interest of student government in their actions Thursday night.

The solution to the entire mess is probably a simple one. UP members state that an effort was to have been made to postpone the legislature until 9 o'clock in order to prevent a clash between the two assemblies. But this was not done and the other legislators were forced to wait nearly 45 minutes until the meeting could begin with sufficient members.

The entire affair is to be regretted by students on all sides. It was a definite error in planning on the part of some person in the University party. However, the entire UP should not be blamed for it. Officers in the group should be extremely careful in the future, however, that such an occurrence does not happen again. —B.B.

It's About Time

A new and safer highway between Chapel Hill and Durham was discussed yesterday at a meeting in Raleigh between a committee representing Chapel Hill and Carrboro and A. H. Graham, chairman of the state highway commission. We do not yet know the outcome of the discussion, but we do know that it is high time the 12-mile stretch of road between the two communities was replaced or drastically improved. Nowhere in North Carolina east of the mountain area is there a section of highway with so many sharp curves and narrow bridges in such a short distance. Since the road was constructed 27 years ago the amount and rate of travel over it have vastly increased, and with the increase in traffic and speed has come an increase in accidents.

Also discussed at yesterday's meeting was the possibility of building bypass roads to take traffic around instead of through Chapel Hill and Carrboro. In view of the narrow streets and number of resident car owners here, not to mention the football weekend influx of visitors, bypass roads have become almost a necessity.

Both a new Chapel Hill-Durham highway and the bypasses are badly needed. We hope the committee not only brings back a favorable report on both projects but that actual construction work can be started in the near future.

Drive Carefully

Twice this quarter, we have asked our student and faculty drivers to observe the speed laws and the "common sense" laws of our community and University.

Yesterday, our front page reported an accident. It was a case in which an automobile was reported to have been travelling at an excessive rate of speed within the residential district hit a pedestrian. The man who was injured was a University employee. The driver of the car was a student. The investigating officer testified that the skid marks were about 44 feet in length. Witnesses say that the car was going over 35 miles an hour.

Those of us who drive know that 35mph is too fast for residential driving. We also know that in a congested area such as we have there is bound to be a careless pedestrian or two. That careless pedestrian might well be one of us.

We appeal once more to all of you who are drivers of automobiles. Please be careful. Please do not speed. Please do not make unnecessary U-turns in Franklin street. Please watch for the careless pedestrian and let him have the right away. Please don't try to make a last minute rush to the women's dorms. Let's just be sensible about the entire traffic situation. —L.K.
